Sec. 7. After payment of the bonds and interest, or after a sinking fund sufficient for such payment shall have been provided and shall be held for that purpose, the Commission shall deliver deeds or other suitable instruments of conveyance of the interest of the Commission in and to the bridge, that part within Louisiana to the State of Louisiana or any municipality or agency thereof as may be authorized by or pursuant to law to accept the same (hereinafter referred to as the Louisiana interest) and that part within Mississippi to the State of Mississippi or any municipality or agency thereof as may be authorized by or pursuant to law to accept the same (hereinafter referred to as the Mississippi interest) under the condition that the bridge shall thereafter be free of tolls (except the railroad portion of said bridge and except as otherwise herein provided) and be properly maintained, operated, and repaired by the Louisiana interest and the Mississippi interest as may be agreed upon; but if either the Louisiana interest or the Mississippi interest shall not be authorized to accept or shall not accept the same under such conditions, then the bridge shall continue to be owned, maintained, operated, and repaired by the Commission, and the rates of tolls shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund of not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, and operation of the bridge and its approaches under economical management, until such time as both the Louisiana interest and the Mississippi interest shall be authorized to accept and shall accept such conveyance under such conditions. After the conveyance by the Commission to the Louisiana interest and Mississippi interest, the said interests may collect from the railroad or railroads using the bridge reasonable tolls, either under the then existing contract between the Commission and the railroad or railroads, or a new contract to be made by the Mississippi interest and Louisiana interest with the said railroad or railroads. If at the time of such conveyance the Commission or its successors shall not have disposed of such ferry or ferries, the same shall be disposed of by sale as soon as practicable, at such price and upon such terms as the Commission or its successors may determine. Free toll provisions of this act shall not apply to common carriers, transportation companies, bus lines, or anyone transporting passengers or freight for hire unless the Commission or the owning interest shall otherwise specifically provide.

Sec. 8. For the purpose of carrying into effect the objects stated in this act there is hereby created the Louisiana-Vicksburg Bridge Commission, and by that name, style, and title said body shall have perpetual succession; may contract and be contracted with, sue and be sued, implead and be impleaded, complain and defend in all courts of law and equity; may make and have a common seal; may purchase or otherwise acquire and hold or dispose of real estate and other property; may accept and receive donations or gifts of money or other property and apply the same to the purpose of this act; and shall have and possess all powers necessary, convenient, or proper for carrying into effect the objects stated in this act.

The commission shall consist of three persons, two of whom shall be appointed by the Governor of Louisiana and the other by the Governor of Mississippi. Such commission shall be a body corporate and politic. Each member of the commission shall qualify within 30 days after the approval of this act by filing in the office of the Secretary of Agriculture an oath that he will faithfully perform the duties imposed upon him by this act, and each person appointed to fill a vacancy shall qualify in like manner within 30 days after his appointment. Any vacancy occurring in said commission by reason of failure to qualify as above provided, or by reason of death or resignation, shall be filled by the Governor of the State from which the said commissioner was appointed. Before the issuance of bonds as hereinabove provided, each member of the commission shall give such bond as may be fixed by the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads of the Department of Agriculture, conditioned upon the faithful performance of all duties acquired by this act. The commission shall elect a chairman and a vice chairman from its members and may establish rules and regulations for the government of its own business. A majority of the members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

Sec. 9. The commission shall have no capital stock or shares of interest or participation, and all revenue and receipts thereof shall be applied to the purposes specified in this act. The members of the commission shall be entitled to a per diem compensation for their services of $20 per day for each day actually spent in the business of the commission, but the maximum compensation in any year of each member shall not exceed $500. The members of the commission shall also be entitled to receive traveling expense allowance of 10 cents a mile for each mile actually traveled on the business of the commission. The commission may employ a secretary, treasurer, engineers, attorneys, and other such experts, assistants, and employees as they may deem necessary, who shall be entitled to receive such compensation as the commission may determine. All salaries and expenses shall be paid solely from the funds provided under the authority of this act. After all bonds and interest thereon shall have been paid and all other obligations of the commission paid or discharged, or provision for all such payment shall have been made as hereinbefore provided, and after the bridge shall have been conveyed to the Louisiana interest and the Mississippi interest as herein provided, and any ferry or ferries shall have been sold, the commission shall be dissolved and shall cease to have further existence by an order of the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads made upon his own initiative or upon application of the commission or any member or members thereof, but only after public hearings in the cities of Delta, La., and Vicksburg, Miss., notice of the time and place of which hearings and purpose thereof shall have been published once, at least 30 days before the date thereof, in a newspaper published in the city of Vicksburg. At the time of such dissolution all moneys in the hands of or to the credit of the commission shall be divided into two equal parts, one of which shall be paid to said Louisiana interests and the other to said Mississippi interests.

Sec. 10. Notwithstanding any of the provisions of this act, the Commission shall have full power and authority to negotiate and enter into a contract or contracts with the Louisiana State Highway Department and the State Highway Department of Mississippi whereby said highway departments or either of them may operate, and maintain or participate with the Commission in the operation and maintenance of said bridge and approaches.

Sec. 11. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to authorize or permit the Commission or any member thereof to create any obligation or incur any liability other than such obligations and liabilities as are dischargeable solely from funds provided by this act. No obligation created or liability incurred pursuant to this act shall be an obligation or liability of any member or members of the Commission, but shall be chargeable solely to the funds herein provided, nor shall any indebtedness created pursuant to this act be an indebtedness of the United States.

Sec. 12. All provisions of this act may be enforced or the violation thereof prevented by mandamus, injunction, or other appropriate remedy brought by the attorney general for the State of Louisiana, the attorney general for the State of Mississippi, or the United States district attorney for any district in which the bridge may be located in part, in any court having competent jurisdiction of the subject matter and of the parties.

Sec. 13. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 3, line 17, strike out "twenty-five" and insert "twenty."

Page 5, strike out lines 3 to 9, inclusive, and the word "taxation" in line 10.

Page 7, line 16, after the word "adjusted", strike out the remainder of the line and all of lines 17 to 21, inclusive.

Page 9, line 13, after the word "commission", strike out the word "and" and all of lines 14, 15, and 16 and the words "under economical management" in line 17, and insert "as a free bridge."

Page 14, after the period in line 8, insert the following:

"Sec. 13. The maintenance and operation of said bridge shall be in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled 'An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters,' approved March 23, 1906."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

Mr. HOLMES. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

Page 3, line 10, strike out "6" and insert "4½."

Page 3, line 24, after the words "hundred and", strike out the word "five" and insert "two."

Page 4, line 8, after the words "with any", add the words "bank or."

Page 5, line 13, after the words "more than", strike out the figure "6" and insert "4½."

Page 6, line 4, after the words "financing thereof", strike out the period and add the following: "subject to the limitation as is provided in section 13."

Page 12, line 10, after the words "may determine", strike out the period, insert a colon and the following: "Provided, That they are absolutely necessary in the carrying out of the purposes of this act in the acquisition and management of said bridge."

The amendment was agreed to.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HOUSTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD, and to include therein a statement on the Conciliation Service by Mr. Ruben Levin.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD on the question of the Jewish homeland in Palestine, and to include therein copies of resolutions of the Massachusetts Legislature and brief excerpts from public statements made by several Presidents of the United States. I may say that this exceeds two pages, and I wish to call the attention of the House to the fact that the additional request is to be made where the extension of remarks is in excess of two pages. I take this procedure rather than ask permission to address the House for 30 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. CHURCH asked and was given permission to revise and extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an article from yesterday's Washington Post.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Nebraska?

There was no objection.

HOUSE RESOLUTIONS LAID ON TABLE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Committee on Rules had reported House Resolution 241, making in order the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6634) amending previous flood-control acts, and authorizing certain preliminary examinations and surveys for flood control, and for other purposes, and had also reported House Resolution 242, making in order the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6984) to provide a feasible and comprehensive plan for the variable payment of construction charges on United States reclamation projects, to protect the investment of the United States in such projects, and for other purposes.

The bills the consideration of which was made in order by these resolutions were on the Consent Calendar and have been passed. Without objection, the two resolutions will be laid on the table.

There was no objection.

ADJOURNMENT OVER

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether the Speaker can tell us what the program will be for Monday. I can readily understand that the Chair probably cannot tell what the program will be for the rest of the week.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. RAYBURN). On Monday the business of the District of Columbia will be in order.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Does the Chair believe the business of that committee will take the entire day?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. I do.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE] is recognized for 20 minutes.

THE SIOUX INDIANS ARE ENTITLED TO SETTLEMENT OF THEIR CLAIMS

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, today we have heard the Consent Calendar called. And today, as on previous consent days, bill after bill dealing with Indian Affairs was put aside, passed over, or killed by objection.

In the present Congress a stalemate has developed in Indian legislation. We have been in session almost 6 months, during which time more bills with regard to Indians and Indian affairs have been introduced, with less tangible results than in any preceding Congress. This is not the fault of the Committee on Indian Affairs. It is one of the hardest-working committees in the House; meets regularly and considers bills in detail. The blame rests elsewhere.

Had I not consulted the RECORD and the calendars of the two Committees on Indian Affairs I would not make that statement, but the statement is true. There must be a cause for this legislative log jam. I have been curious to know the causes which have drawn Indian matters into the legislative doldrums.

THE COMMITTEES HAVE WORKED

To this end I have made somewhat of a study of the legislative calendars printed for our use by the Committees on Indian Affairs of the two Houses, and it appears that there have been introduced and referred to the House Committee on Indian Affairs 117 bills and joint resolutions, of which 5 have become law. The calendar of the Committee on Indian Affairs of the Senate shows 103 bills and joint resolutions introduced, of which 6 have become law, but 5 of these were identical with House bills. Out of 220 bills and resolutions introduced in the two Houses, only 6 measures have been enacted into law.

It appears on the surface that in the Congress lies the fault. It is not, let me say, my purpose to criticize either House of Congress. I am endeavoring to develop the facts in and the causes of what I regard as an impossible situation and to suggest a possible remedy.

In this body it is well known that there is a group whose good faith and good conscience I do not question, but which group will not permit the enactment by consent of Indian legislation. That is the fact.

ACTION BLOCKED BY OBJECTIONS

Many measures have come before this House on call of the Unanimous Consent Calendar and with the exception of six bills, objections had been made to consideration of every Indian bill in the calendar consulted. I do not intend to transgress the rules of the House by reference to any matter in the other chamber, or the motives of any Member, yet the record of that other body is before the House, and it appears that with the same six exceptions, objections have been made to consideration of all Indian legislation.

It would seem, therefore, from the foregoing that a small number of the representatives of the people in the Congress have for approximately 6 months past barred enactment of legislation affecting the Indian people of the United States and Indian affairs in general. This I say not in criticism but as a statement of the primary facts in the study I have made in an effort to locate the cause of this condition.

THREE AGENCIES HANDLE INDIAN AFFAIRS

Going outside of the Congress in search of facts, I invite attention to the executive branch of the Government and the divisions thereof which have most to do with Indian legislative affairs. In order they are the Bureau of the Budget, the Department of the Interior, and the Department of Justice. The foregoing three instrumentalities each reports on every Indian bill which involves the expenditure or the prospective expenditure of money, or any possible claim against the United States.

The Bureau of the Budget has a stock phrase which has been used now for so many years that any Member conversant with Indian legislation can quote it, and usually does quote it, with a smile. With regard to all bills, almost without exception, coming within the classification I designate, which are introduced by Members on their own initiative, the Bureau of the Budget reports that "the proposed legislation is not in accord with the financial program of the President."

The Department of the Interior is the only division of the Government which has the knowledge of or the files in regard to the history of the relations between the United States and the Indian tribes. It has been the practice of that Department since 1920 to report the historical background, particularly on general jurisdictional bills, and to express an opinion either for or against the proposed measures. On practically all of the general jurisdictional acts covering the period 1920 down to the present time, the Interior Department has expressed at least its acquiescence, and in many cases its definite recommendation in favor of legislation which would give to the Indian tribe in question the right to its day in court.

It should be noted that beginning with the year 1920 a substantial number of general jurisdictional acts were passed by the Congress and that these acts resulted in the filing of claims against the United States, 70 of which are still pending in the Court of Claims.

Throughout the entire period the reports, not only to the Congress, but as part of the Government's evidence in the Court of Claims, made by the Interior Department, have been factual and without prejudice. This is entirely non-political as it runs through several administrations. If it is a compliment, I feel it is deserved, and I do feel that the Department of the Interior has done what it could to secure justice for the Indian tribes.

JUSTICE DEPARTMENT HAS THREE WEAPONS

The third element of the executive departments having to do with Indian affairs is the Department of Justice, and in this Department even the casual observer readily finds a sharp contrast to the record of the Department of the Interior. If this is regarded as criticism, let it be so taken, for it is so intended.

The Department of Justice by the Attorney General, whoever he may be at the time, is charged with the duty of representing the United States as the defendant in Indian tribal claims. This you will find in every jurisdictional bill passed by the Congress. For the period of the past 20 years the record of the Department of Justice has been regarded as good within that Department if Indian tribal claims were defeated, and the record has been regarded as bad if the Indians prevailed. That, however, is only one phase of justice, for the United States itself is guardian of and fiduciary for the Indian tribes. Throughout this long period it should have been the function of the Department of Justice to produce the facts, to set up and insist upon legitimate counterclaims, but nevertheless to expedite the trial of the cases, and it was and is the proper function of the Department of Justice to establish justice for the wards of the United States, but this unfortunately has not been the attitude of that Department.

Three definite defense weapons have been in the hands of the Department of Justice: (1) Delay, (2) fictitious issues and counterclaims, and (3) in the last analysis, legislative action.

THE WEAPON OF DELAY

(1) The weapon of delay has been most potent. The following illustration, I believe, is typical and not exaggerated: In the case of the Sioux Nation against the United States, C-531 (1), in the Court of Claims, the Sioux Tribe filed suit for failure of the United States to deliver educational facilities, consisting of school houses, teachers, books, and other supplies, all of which were guaranteed by the treaty of April 29, 1868 (15 Stat. 635). This action was filed under a general jurisdictional act dated June 3, 1920 (41 Stat. 738).

NOTE.—Had the educational facilities been furnished as guaranteed by the treaty of 1868 and used as the treaty provided, there would be today no Sioux Indian problem. Due to the failure of the United States on this promise more than 16 percent of the Sioux are classed as "illiterate," while only four-tenths of 1 percent of the native-born white people of South Dakota are so classed.

The procedure in the Court of Claims is very much the same as in any court; the plaintiff must file his suit, the defendant must answer, the parties respectively must take testimony; thereafter their briefs must be filed and the case argued and submitted to the court.

In this procedure it is obvious that it becomes the duty of first the plaintiff and then the defendant to move, and therefore it is possible to determine which party took action and at what time.

This record is disclosed by the docket of the Court of Claims, which I have had carefully examined. The particular case to which I refer required 13 years, 10 months, and 17 days to dispose of. That is the elapsed time from the date when the contract with the attorneys was approved to the date the court decided the case. The complete table is as follows:

		Plaintiffs' time used			Defendant's time used
		Yr.	Mo.	Days	Yr.	Mo.	Days
Dec. 22, 1922	Attorneys' contract approved.
May 7, 1923	Plaintiffs' petition filed in Court of Claims.		5	15
July 7, 1923	Defendant's general traverse filed.					2
Sept. —, 1923	Plaintiffs' testimony taken.		7	23
Oct. —, 1923	Plaintiffs' testimony filed.
Mar. 31, 1924	Defendant's testimony filed.				10	6	12
Oct. 12, 1934	C 581 (1) closed.
Feb. 16, 1935	Plaintiffs' brief filed.		4	4
Jan. 18, 1936	Defendant's brief filed.				11		2
Apr. 6, 1936	Plaintiffs' reply brief filed.		2	18
Apr. 13, 1936	Case argued and submitted.
Nov. 9, 1936	Case dismissed.	1	8		11	7	14

Court time..... 7 months 3 days.
Plaintiffs' time (the Indians')..... 1 year 8 months.
Defendant's time (the Government's)..... 11 years 7 months 14 days.

Analyzing the foregoing table, if analysis is necessary, it is appalling to see that out of 13 years 10 months and 17 days the defendant took 11 years 7 months and 14 days to do its work.

In this long period the Comptroller General had his part. The Attorney General called upon the Comptroller General for a complete report covering the instant case, as well as the other cases filed in behalf of the Sioux Nation. The Comptroller began his work July 1, 1925, although he should well have begun that work as soon as the action was filed. The Comptroller finished his report and it is dated April 12, 1932. The Attorney General did not get around to file the report until October 12, 1934.

THE INDIAN HAS BEEN PATIENT

During this long period the patience which is characteristic of the Sioux Indian was tested to the utmost. These Indians, and all other Indians, have the right to believe that reasonably expeditious action will be taken on their tribal claims, once a jurisdictional bill is passed by the Congress.

In July of 1934, some months before the defendant's testimony was filed in the Court of Claims, I attended a council of representative members of the Sioux Tribe at Little Eagle, S. Dak. At this council the representative men, most of them accredited delegates to the meeting, listened again, as they had before, to the story of the delay, and again they were told that their claims were awaiting "action by the Government." I remember well what one of the old men said in reply. He was in fact, very old. He was one of those who knew something of the early relations between his tribe and the United States. He knew of the promises that had been made by the United States and confronted again, as he had been time after time before with the story of delay, delay, delay, by the United States, he said: "What is the Government going to do, wait until we are all dead and then come out here and pour the money in our graves?"

Nothing I could say so well sets out the feeling of the Indian. Nothing could more truly describe the exact condition that exists, than the words of that old man. Apparently delay is the first and great defense weapon of the Department of Justice.

THE WEAPON OF FICTITIOUS ISSUES

(2) Fictitious issues and exaggerated counterclaims: Delay alone may not be sufficient to defeat an action where the plaintiffs are of the durable fiber of the Sioux Indians, so the Department has and uses a second line of defense. It has, wherever possible, set up issues which should not be available to any fiduciary or guardian with respect to the property of a ward.

In no less than four cases tried in the Court of Claims in behalf of the Sioux Nation, the Government's defense has been that the Indians were "hostile." It has been asserted by the Department of Justice that the Sioux Nation was "hostile" and was engaged in war with the United States. No such condition existed except those disturbances occasioned by the invasion of the territory held by the Sioux Nation under a definite grant contained in the treaty of April 29, 1868.

The Sioux Nation never was "hostile" from and after the making of the peace treaty of 1868, unless self-defense is hostility, yet this plea of the "hostility" of the Sioux Nation was urged by the Department of Justice and must have been favorably considered by the Court of Claims, as the Court gave "hostility" as one of the reasons for entering findings adverse to the Sioux Nation.

The counterclaims set up by the Comptroller General and urged by the Department of Justice would indicate that $109,000,000 has been expended by the United States in behalf of the Sioux Nation. I am not asking that the Comptroller General decide matters which should be decided by a court having jurisdiction of the action, but I observe that the Department of Justice takes full advantage of each and every item set up by the Comptroller General. These items include expenses which the United States itself assumed: Salaries of United States officials, expenses of treaty commissions which were negotiating treaties for the benefit of the United States; premiums on the bonds of United States disbursing officers, and countless other corresponding items, even including gifts to individual Indians. All of these items are presented to the Court of Claims and are urged by the Department of Justice as proper counterclaims. In many cases the Court of Claims has found that the counterclaims are so great that even if the claim of the tribe is valid, still there can be no judgment for the plaintiff.

THE WEAPON OF LEGISLATION

(3) Legislative action, the last line of defense. In the last several years some three Indian tribes have carried their claims from the Court of Claims, where they were dissatisfied with the decision, to the Supreme Court of the United States by certiorari. In these cases the Supreme Court has directed the entry of final judgment against the United States. The cases I refer to are: The Creek Nation against the United States, the Klamath Tribe against the United States, and the Shoshone Tribe against the United States.

The foregoing tribal claims have now been settled by appropriation, so it would seem that the defenses heretofore enumerated of (1) delay, (2) fictitious issues and counterclaims, are not sufficient in the event an Indian tribe is granted a writ of certiorari by the Supreme Court of the United States. Several million dollars were required to settle the judgment entered in the three foregoing cases and it must be that the Department of Justice has measured its possible future losses by the defeat in the three cited cases.

H. R. 5843 IS AN UNWORTHY BILL

In the present session of Congress the Department of Justice has asked for legislation which would make impossible the loss of any of the other pending Indian claims. I refer particularly to the pending bill, H. R. 5843, introduced by the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary at the request of the Department of Justice. This bill is so peculiar and so unusual that it should be called to the particular attention of all Members of this House. I call particular attention to page 3, lines 1 to 17, inclusive. This is an attempt to write into the Judicial Code a new section to be known as section 145-B.

The section proposes to establish against Indian tribal claims a restricted rule for just compensation whereunder just compensation for lands or other property taken is the value of the lands or property at the time taken, without increment in any form for the use of the lands or property, contrary to the Constitution as consistently interpreted by the courts. This change of the well-established rule of "just compensation" relates to Indian tribes only, is class legislation, is retroactive, and in effect flouts the fifth and fourteenth amendments to the Constitution.

Page 3, lines 18 to 24, inclusive. In expectation that the foregoing is most likely to be held unconstitutional, it is provided in lines 18 to 24, inclusive, that should any court have the courage or temerity to hold 145-B inoperative or unconstitutional, then by such holding two things automatically occur: The jurisdiction of the court to try matters then before it would be withdrawn, and the jurisdictional act authorizing the suit to be brought, would be repealed.

Page 4, lines 3 to 11, inclusive, is another new section of the Judicial Code, 145-C. This language attempts, by congressional enactment to place in the code, itself, the legislative intent of any Congress, heretofore or hereafter expressed on any Indian jurisdictional act. No matter what the legislative history of a bill might be, the Court of Claims could not take that history as evidence of the intent of Congress. Continuing on page 4, lines 11 to 14, inclusive, is section 145-C. This language strikes down the equity provisions of every jurisdictional act and requires strict proof of every item, gives the Government the advantage of all defenses, particularly of obnoxious defenses, "procedural and technical." This would strike down evidence heretofore relied upon, both as to things done and as to value. It would bar history of the relations between the United States and the Indian tribes and would require a defenseless ward to combat his unscrupulous guardian behind insurmountable defenses set up by that guardian.

Page 4, lines 19 to 24, inclusive, is a further part of the new section 145-C. This language gives the United States the right to do whatever it may see fit with the property of its Indian wards, without being called to account. Disposal of property by the Government upon its statement that the disposal was intended for the benefit of an Indian tribe would be justification for that expenditure, and the expenditure could not be attacked upon any theory of guardianship or trusteeship.

SUCH A BILL IN THE NAME OF JUSTICE

It does not seem possible that a department of the United States Government would propose so indefensible a bill as H. R. 5843, but the Department of Justice has definitely proposed that bill as a statute which would strike down the rights of a minority group of our people. This comes at a time when minorities throughout a large portion of the world are suffering injustices, wrongs, and oppressions.

We, the people of the United States, have held our heads very high and have felt ourselves quite superior to the oppressor abroad, but now we are asked by the Department of Justice—I do not say by the Attorney General, for I doubt he had anything to do with it—to enact legislation that would single out one defenseless minority and divest that minority of the rights which we, the rest of the people, hold most dear.

I do not expect that the Congress will pass any such indefensible measure as H. R. 5843, and if the Attorney General is to maintain the designation which was so courteously given to him in the Washington Evening Star on May 4 last, I doubt he will insist upon the recommendations made by his Department. In the article I refer to, which can be found on page A-11 of the Evening Star of that date, Attorney General Frank Murphy is praised as a great liberal and is referred to as "Frank the Just." Obviously, he cannot long maintain that enviable designation if he poses as a liberal and yet insists upon legislation of the vicious character contained in H. R. 5843. He is more apt to be called "Frank the Just What?"

In all of the foregoing I have presented the facts which now concern us. In the words of a former distinguished President of the United States, "We are confronted by a condition and not a theory."

The condition is that legislation relative to Indians or Indian affairs is blocked in the House and in the Senate; that in the courts, principally the Supreme Court of the United States, a few Indian tribal claims have been won; that the Department of Justice is alarmed, and a little group of fearful men in the Congress feel that the Indian tribes will recover judgments of very large amounts of money. One of our distinguished colleagues indicates this runs into the billions of dollars, and therefore it would definitely seem established that the key log in this log jam I have referred to is the tribal claims now pending in the Court of Claims.

SOUTH DAKOTA LEGISLATURE PROPOSES A SOLUTION

I did not make this analysis to stop at this conclusion. A remedy should be found which will provide decent treatment of the Indian tribes and which will relieve the congressional congestion and thereby permit normal legislation on Indian affairs.

During the last session of the Legislature of the State of South Dakota there was passed a memorial to the Congress, which itself was printed in full in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, and for that reason I shall not here ask that it be reprinted but will merely quote the most pertinent portions.

Whereas Congress did enact into law, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, certain provisions intended to fulfill, and make compliance with, various stipulations and agreements as were provided for in treaties with the several Indian tribes; and

Whereas many claims presented by the Indians, and Indian tribal organizations, over a period of many years, which claims arose from alleged violations of treaty rights and under the provisions of said above-mentioned act of Congress, have not been acted on or finally determined, and such claims are now pending in the courts of the United States, in some cases for many years, and

Whereas other and additional claims under such act and treaties will be filed from time to time, for redress or for benefits claimed to be due to such Indians, and Indian tribes, and according to the present laws with respect to Indian claims must be litigated in the courts with no prospect of final adjudication for many years after the instituting of said actions, and

Whereas the Sioux and other tribes of Indians are, and have been, entitled to a prompt settlement of said claims, and the delay experienced has been to the great loss and inconvenience of said Indians, and

Whereas the Sioux Indians of South Dakota are now in dire need, and that it is imperative for their best interests, and health, that their claims be promptly adjusted, and that in the meantime adequate provisions be made for them as to necessary food, and clothing, and necessities of life, now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That for the best interests of the Sioux Indians of South Dakota, the Congress provide by law for the creation of a special claims commission, with the power and authority and jurisdiction to meet with such Indians or Tribal Councils and their attorneys, promptly after the filing of any claim or claims, and settle, compromise, and adjudicate said claim or claims, be it further

Resolved, That this joint resolution is intended as a petition to the Congress.

THIS SEEMS A SENSIBLE SOLUTION

I believe the foregoing contains an idea, which if adopted by the Congress, would restore us and the Indian tribes to a state of equilibrium desirable to both parties. The proposal, it must be remembered, comes from the legislature of my State, South Dakota, and not from the Sioux Nation, nor does it come from the Department of Justice or the Department of the Interior.

I feel most strongly that the sensible thing to do is for us here in the Congress to accept the idea proposed by the Legislature of South Dakota, and attempt to settle and dispose of all of the matters now in dispute between the United States and the Sioux Nation. I believe this can be done if it is approached by both sides with a full understanding of the situation I have outlined in these remarks.

We are, or we assert that we are, reasonable human beings. This will apply to both the plaintiff and the defendant. There is no reason why differences cannot be composed. There is no reason why a fair settlement for the Sioux Nation should be a raid on the Treasury. There is no reason why the United States should not settle with the Sioux Nation for what it obviously owes to the Sioux people.

I would not propose a method unless that method were fully safeguarded, both as to the United States and to the Sioux Nation. I now propose and will introduce in this House a joint resolution authorizing the appointment of a commission to negotiate a settlement with the Sioux Nation, which settlement shall not be binding on either party until ratified by the Congress and by three-fourths of the adult members of the Sioux Nation, men and women.

My proposed joint resolution will read substantially as follows:

A PROPOSAL FOR A RESOLUTION

Resolved, etc., That the President be and he is hereby authorized to appoint a Commission of five citizens, which Commission is hereby authorized to organize by the election of a chairman and such other officers as the Commission may deem expedient.

The Commission shall be known as the Sioux Settlement Commission and is authorized to negotiate a settlement agreement in the form of a contract, which settlement agreement shall provide a proposal for the settlement and disposition of the claims of the Sioux Tribe of Indians against the United States brought under the act of June 3, 1920 (41 Stat. 738), in the Court of Claims, No. C-531 (1) to (24), inclusive, wherein the Sioux Tribe of Indians, consisting of the Sioux Tribe of the Rosebud Indian Reservation in the State of South Dakota; the Sioux Tribe of the Standing Rock Indian Reservation in the States of North Dakota and South Dakota; the Sioux Tribe of the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in the State of South Dakota; the Sioux Tribe of the Cheyenne River Reservation in the State of South Dakota; the Sioux Tribe of the Crow Creek Indian Reservation in the State of South Dakota; the Sioux Tribe of the Lower Brule Reservation in the State of South Dakota; the Sioux Tribe of the Santee Indian Reservation in the State of Nebraska; and the Sioux Tribe of the Fort Peck Indian Reservation in the State of Montana, are plaintiffs, and any other claims which said Sioux Tribe or anyone or more of the eight divisions of said tribe hereinabove named may have against the United States.

The Commission shall take into consideration all of the aforesaid claims, and all expenditures made by the United States for the benefit of the Sioux Tribe, the report of the Comptroller General in the above designated cases, the pleadings, evidence, and briefs filed in said cases by both parties and, in addition, any paper, correspondence, document, record, or testimony which the Commission may desire to consider.

The said settlement agreement shall state a lump sum in dollars, which in the opinion of the Commission is a fair, just, and equitable settlement of the claims of the Sioux Tribe of Indians, both to the Sioux Tribe of Indians and to the United States of America.

Said settlement agreement shall further provide that the agreement itself shall be of no effect until and unless the agreement is ratified and confirmed as a part of an act of Congress, and until and unless the said settlement agreement is ratified and confirmed in writing by three-quarters of the adult members of the Sioux Tribe of the Reservations hereinbefore enumerated.

The said settlement agreement shall further provide that upon adoption and ratification, as herein provided, and upon the placing to the credit of the Sioux Tribe of the lump sum agreed upon, the agreement itself shall operate as a complete release, discharge, and acquittance of all claims of whatsoever nature, of counter-claims, set-offs, charges, and demands which the Sioux Tribe may have against the United States or which the United States may have against the Sioux Tribe, and that upon such ratification neither the United States nor the Sioux Tribe shall have or assert any claim for any matter which arose prior to the date of final ratification of said settlement agreement.

The Commission shall confer with the Sioux Tribe, above designated, and with the attorneys for said tribe, now under contract, at such times and places and under such regulations as the Commission may prescribe, without regard to any existing organization of said tribe but with the purpose of drafting a settlement agreement which in the opinion of the Commission may be acceptable to the Congress and to the adult members of the Sioux Tribe.

The Commission shall also confer with officials of the several departments of the United States, the Comptroller General, the Governors of the States wherein said plaintiffs reside, and with such other public officials or private citizens as the Commission may desire to consult or hear.

Whenever the Commission has reached a decision in conformity with this resolution it shall report the same to the Senate and the House of Representatives with its full report and recommendation for such action as the Senate and the House of Representatives may then see fit.

Nothing in this resolution, nothing in any action taken or thing done by the Commission, and nothing in the final report of the Commission shall in any wise impair, affect, or delay the tribal claims of the Sioux Tribe or action thereon which said claims are those above enumerated and pending in the Court of Claims and the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims shall not be impaired by anything herein contained in regard to said tribal claims of the Sioux Tribe.

There is hereby authorized to be appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $25,000 for the compensation and expenses of said Commission, which compensation shall be fixed by the President.

The said Commission is hereby directed and required to file its first and final report not later than the opening of the regular session of the Congress next after the session during which this resolution was passed and became law.

LXXXIV—552

THE SIOUX PEOPLE WILL BE FAIR

I have great confidence in the Sioux people who live in my district, in my State, and in the States of Nebraska, North Dakota, and Montana. I believe they are inclined to be fair. I believe they would be willing to settle all disputes with the United States which may have arisen in the past. I believe they would be willing to do this for a consideration which would be acceptable to the Congress.

If the Members of the House will refer to the tabulation setting out Indian tribal claims, which appears in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, at page 2529 and at page 4189, they will observe that should this program now be undertaken and consummated, it would dispose of at least one-half of all of the pending Indian tribal claims. If this result can be accomplished, the remaining tribal claims should not be difficult of disposition. I have not consulted other Members of this House. I have not consulted the members of the Sioux Tribe, but I feel that some one should offer a solution of the present difficulty; a solution based upon justice to and fair dealing by both sides of the controversy. I believe my proposed resolution speaks for itself and therefore I ask the Sioux Nation, the Departments of Justice and Interior, and this House to join in a thoughtful, conscientious effort to settle for all time the tribal claims of the Sioux Nation. [Applause.]

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. I am sure that Members are very much interested in the gentleman's remarks. The gentleman is not only especially familiar with Indian affairs but he has worked diligently in the interest of his Indians. Let me add that I am interested in and sympathetic with the resolution the gentleman expects to introduce. It seems to me that is the only fair way to adjudicate the claims of the Indians. However, there are many other Indians throughout the entire United States, including several tribes in my own State of Oklahoma, that have claims, or at least they feel they have worthy claims against the Government of the United States. So far Congress has refused to give them any consideration. All they have asked is an opportunity to present their cases to the Court of Claims. I am wondering if the gentleman would not feel justified in making his resolution broad enough to include other Indians of other tribes in other States, and have a commission to adjudicate the claims of all Indians who assert that they have claims against the Government of the United States.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. The gentleman from Oklahoma is one of the best-qualified men in this House to speak on Indian problems, because as a member of the subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee for the Department of the Interior he has had an opportunity to study Indian problems here in the Congress. He is qualified from that experience as well as from a personal knowledge of the Indians in Oklahoma. [Applause.]

I may say to the gentleman I have been much interested in the proposals to establish Indian claims commissions and have supported those proposals in the past. The particular resolution I have worked out is especially adapted to meeting the problems of the Sioux Nation, but I would have no objection to working with the gentleman from Oklahoma in preparing a general claims commission bill; and if he or some other Member will introduce such a bill, I assure the gentleman I shall be pleased to support it.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. I thank the gentleman sincerely for his kind and most generous compliment. If the gentleman will permit, I should like to add that I have been interested in the gentleman's able and timely discussion and especially the reasons given by him why it is apparently impossible for the Indians to get a fair and square deal. The gentleman has not touched on one other phase of the question, however, and that is that there are many Members of Congress who live in States where there are no Indians, and many of whom are absolutely uninterested in the welfare of our Indians.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. It is not difficult, politically, for such Members to object to a bill proposing to give the Indian tribes residing in other States an opportunity to go into the Court of Claims, should they desire to do so. It also gives such a Member an opportunity to go home and say, "I saved the country $10,000,000," or "I saved the country $100,000,000," or any other figure that might come to their minds.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Of course, those figures are all imaginative.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. That is true; nevertheless, it shows how difficult it is to get any kind of legislation through Congress to give the Indians a square deal.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Of course, the gentleman knows that in estimating those figures they always take what they imagine may be the possible maximum recovery and do not allow for offsets. If the Government comes into court on any such claim it tries to estimate as offsets every possible item of expenditure, whether involved in any of the treaties or not and whether or not the expenditure was made at the wish of the Indians or because of some high-brow legislation in Congress, with the expense passed along to the Indians.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield further, the fact is that with respect to all legislation enacted by Congress in the past permitting claims of Indian tribes to be heard by the Court of Claims, the Indians have not collected more than 3 percent of the amount asked.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I yield to the gentleman from North Dakota, who is also a man who knows the Indian problems from first-hand.

Mr. BURDICK. Could the gentleman ever see any logic in the attitude of Congress in refusing to allow the Indians to go into the Court of Claims and present a claim, if they have one?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. No; I have not, because it has always seemed to me that that was an indication of weakness in the position of the Government. [Applause.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an editorial.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the previous order of the House, the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. BURDICK] is recognized for 15 minutes.

UNEMPLOYMENT IS NOT A TEMPORARY MATTER

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, I have tried many times to convince this House that the question of unemployment in the United States is not a temporary matter at all, but a permanent situation with which this Congress must deal. I have found little support in this contention. Very few officials have supported this theory. The Honorable Harry Hopkins, Secretary of Commerce, expressed this conviction while directing the W. P. A.; the Honorable KENT KELLER, of Illinois, wrote a book several years ago setting forth this conviction abundantly supported by proof. A few Members see the situation, but not enough.

Let me set forth the reasons why I have repeatedly stated on the floor of this House that the unemployment question is a permanent institution in this country.

First of all, let me say that this situation is not chargeable to any particular party. The situation is due to the failure of both major political parties to understand the results which must naturally and inevitably follow from the growth of "special privilege" in this country. As long ago as 1921, a period of 18 years, President Harding became alarmed over the unemployment situation and appointed a committee on unemployment to study the situation and recommend plans to put the 5,000,000 then unemployed to work. The President appointed one individual from each of the major productions—labor, manufacturing, transportation, and civic groups in the United States. I had the honor of representing agriculture. Samuel Gompers represented labor; Charles Schwab represented the steel industry; Mr. Wooley represented the manufacturing interests; and Ida Tarbell represented the women workers in the United States, and so on down the line. The entire committee, as I recall it, represented 21 different groups. Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, was the permanent chairman of the organization. We met here in Washington and remained in session several days. Mr. Hoover appointed various committees, and some of these committees acted for a year or more.

At that time there were no business restrictions and business taxes to hamper private business; in other words, private business had a free hand. Various recommendations were made, but the principal action taken was to recommend to the various cities the need of putting the idle to work on civic construction and each mayor of the principal cities of the United States pledged his support in contriving and planning some sort of construction work. At that time I addressed the committee and told them that they were directing their efforts at relieving the pain and not the pathological disorder. I explained that the farmer, because of the price he was receiving and the interest he was paying, was gradually going down the road to bankruptcy, and because of it, the buying power in the country was seriously menaced. I pointed out that in normal times the farmers of the United States purchased two-fifths of all the steel output, 42 percent of the output of the leather mills, and 40 percent of the output of the textile mills, and that unless something was done to stabilize the farm prices, we could expect the unemployment army to increase. Now, after a lapse of 18 years, does anyone doubt the logic of my argument? On this committee I was ignored, the farmers were ignored, and when Chairman Hoover got around to naming a committee on agriculture, I was not even a member of it, although the President had appointed me to represent all the farmers in the United States.

There is no doubt but what the work done by this committee did start up civic work in several cities and many were put to work, but that only stopped the pain in places, but the disorder continued.

Hoover became President in 1929 and at that time no one can say that private business was so tied up with restrictions and taxes that they could not employ people. For the next 4 years business as such had a free rein, but the malady of unemployment increased and increased until business could not operate and we had one of the most disastrous business break-ups ever known in our history. When President Roosevelt came into power, banks, insurance companies, railroads, and manufacturing plants were prostrate and those who had any money in banks could not draw it out. I remember the situation vividly. We were near a crisis in the United States. When buying power is gone, when credit is gone, when available funds cannot be drawn, people become panicky and anything can happen.

That is the record of what private business can do when not hampered by high taxes and restrictions imposed by law. It was the personality of Franklin D. Roosevelt that stepped into the breach in the fall of 1932 and gave assurance to the people that the Government was still all right or could be made right. Chaos disappeared and we emerged into another effort to run the Government with confidence in Government restored to the people. No matter how many mistakes the President has made or will make, history will record the fact that he actually saved this Government from a sickening break-down.

Just as soon as confidence was restored, big business came out in the open to complain of taxation and business restrictions, and loudly protested against the Government's engaging in business. They have fought the T. V. A. to a standstill, and yet the finding of the Federal Power Commission shows that measured with reasonable rates, and giving the private power companies credit for taxes paid and free public service, that they are still filching a billion dollars annually from the consumers of the United States. Big business proclaims loudly that if the Government will leave them alone to operate without restrictions and with reduced taxes that they can put the idle to work. Before the Ways and Means Committee of the House the business representatives have already admitted that, with all impeding restrictions withdrawn, not more than 3,000,000 could be put to work. What to do with the other 10,000,000 they do not know.

Will this number of thirteen to fourteen million be increased next year? Certainly—just as surely as the sun will set tomorrow. It is estimated that annually 500,000 students leave our schools for life's work; another 500,000 are being displaced annually by improvements made by science in labor-saving machines. This means we shall have a new crop of 1,000,000 annually to augment the unemployed.

I think this is evidence enough to sustain the proposition that if we continue our present program of Government that the unemployment rolls will increase instead of diminish.

Relief, therefore, must comprehend a long-range program and not an eleventh-hour solution. We have never planned a long-range program; the President has suggested it. Aside from the soil-conservation program, some of the building programs, the historical restoration of the P. W. A., the Youth Administration, the C. C. C., and the Historical Research Division of the W. P. A., our programs have been of a temporary nature. It is all right to put men to work cutting weeds along highways if they are hungry and cannot get anything to eat otherwise, but the weeds will grow again and again. Something more permanent and lasting must be planned. I could suggest many programs of work of this character. To those who believe some foreign country is about to swoop down on us and destroy our liberty, before the banking trust does, I might propose a proper program of national defense that would employ our millions who cannot now get work. We could well afford to build highways across this country from East to West at intervals of 100 miles and from north to south at intervals of the same distance. These roads in time of war, if that time should ever come, would be military roads over which we could move troops and equipment to any section of the country with alarming speed. In the meantime these military roads could remain for the use of the people. Along these military roads could be developed trees and reservoirs for surface waters, fish, and birds. Then the three scourges that visit great areas of the United States would be automatically avoided, floods, droughts, and grasshoppers. The transportation system would be simplified, enlarged, and made available to land-locked communities at conscionable rates. But why enlarge upon this idea? There are many more equally important programs, all of which would bring permanent and lasting benefits to all the people of the United States, and save the millions we are paying out to sustain our people on temporary and unplanned work, millions for flood damage, millions for drought doles, and much money for grasshopper control.

What I wish to show is that permanent work can be planned by the Government and that such work is needed and will add to our national wealth. This makes the argument conclusive, therefore, that the employment of idle people is a new duty of the National Government, and when private industry cannot employ, every citizen will know that he will not have to shift about as a hobo just because private industry will not offer him a job.

These improvements need not burden the people and load them down with debt. We do not have to pay interest on the money used for this work. We can issue money—greenbacks—and do the job without paying a tribute in interest. Three hundred and forty-five million dollars of Lincoln's greenbacks are still in circulation in the United States, and it has cost us nothing since the money was issued. If we will stop issuing bonds and issue money instead, the greatest part of this work program will be accomplished.

Those who are too old to work, crippled, blind, or otherwise afflicted should be guaranteed a decent standard of living through a pension system, and every other person should be guaranteed a job with such a wage as will insure a decent standard of living. We ought not to require these workers to live on a substandard wage.

We cannot stop thought, and we cannot prevent scientific improvement—we ought not to wish to stop it. We should encourage it, and every time a machine is invented that will eliminate the drudgery in human labor we should all welcome it. With these guaranties of a chance for all, the benefits of the improved machine would be distributed to all instead of contributing to the benefit of a handful of men. What they gained in improved methods would come back to the people in taxes to carry on the program of assuring all a fair chance in our economic system.

If private enterprise is to continue in this country, it must be willing to assume the burdens which the operation of the system has cast upon society. No free-born American citizen should ever have to get in a soup line in order to sustain life.

If enough people will realize our present dangerous situation and set about it with unity of action to reach the goal, we would soon get ourselves out of this depression and make another one impossible. If we sit here with our hands folded waiting for private industry to bring back prosperity, we shall wait as we have waited since 1920, and in the final chapter will be written the final overthrow of our private business system and in its place will be a public dictatorship, either of the Nazi, the Fascist, or the Soviet type. You can take your choice of these, but remember they are all military dictatorships. Liberty will be gone as soon as the individualistic system of business operation is ended. Business is on trial now. Business should be supporting public works instead of fighting the very thing that will eventually save business.

I am not afraid of what I have said in this Congress or what I have done here to avert the collapse of this Government, but I am afraid that I have not done enough. While I do not have so many converts to this plan of Government operation, I still think I am right, and while I remain here I will not recede from my position. I believe in this Government—I believe under our Constitution, under the general-welfare clause, we have ample authority to accomplish the release of the people of this country from the bondage of debt, despair, and suffering. Our courts would never overrule those things which must be done to preserve the Government. As Chief Justice Hughes of the Supreme Court so well said at the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of this Government, "the people always get what they want."

Should the Republican Party be entrusted with the administration of the affairs of this Government at the next election, and the attitude of the leaders does not change on the question of this unemployment situation, the party will become discredited—at least as discredited as the Democratic Party will be in 1940.

The great American myth that only two parties are necessary in this country has at last become so entrenched in habit that the people can get nothing from either party. The voters can, and no doubt will, jump from Democratic to Republican. They can and probably will sweep one party out and let another in, but that will not settle fundamental questions of government. The people are already dizzy following the old party system. They are seeing more clearly each day that this old two-party system in Congress works smoothly for special privilege but never for the people who need assistance. This old two-party system works through committees in Congress. The dominant party—now the Democrats—names a majority of the committeemen, but the minority party—the Republican—names the rest of the committeemen. The heads of these two parties usually work in harmony. Both parties believe in letting private interests use the Nation's credit free of charge to sell again to the American people under a system of usury.

I do not know whether the time has arrived yet for the people to take the rein in their own hands—I think the time is about here—but eventually the voters will throw off the shackles of this two-party system and form a party to which all honest men can turn without regard to whether they had formerly been Democrats or Republicans, and turn to the new party with confidence that at least the people had contrived a system of party control that had for its very existence the protection of all the people and not a few. Do not tell me the people of the United States are represented by two great parties; they are not; they are represented by one party and only one, no matter what name is given to the administration. Is there any difference in philosophy between some Members from Virginia and some Members from New York, some Members from Georgia and some Members from Massachusetts? Not in the least. When one of these leaders makes a stand in the House he gets as many votes from the opposite party as he does from his own; the fact is they all belong to one party—a party whose only ambition is to protect the large business interests of the country.

Personally, I would like to see the Republican Party come into power and receive the approval of the American people, but unless the leadership will revise its philosophy and come out flat-footed on a platform to reform the monetary system; to banish from the land all types of special privilege; think of the poor, the distressed, and the weak, and forget banks, the power trust, the steel trust, the machine trust, and every other type of monopolistic privilege, it will be worse for the American people to elect a Republican administration than it will be to continue the Democratic administration, which here and there has attempted to break up private monopolies in the United States.

With little confidence in the hope that the Republican Party can or will turn progressive, I assert that no party since the Civil War has had such a wide-open chance to win the favor of the American people as the Republicans now have. Will the party leadership shut their eyes to the demands all around us for a party to which the average man can turn? A few months more will bring the answer, but any party that shuts its eyes to the unemployment question and seeks to treat it as a temporary matter will meet defeat at the hands of the voters of the United States. [Applause.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD at a point just preceding the passage of the bill (H. R. 6984).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Idaho?

There was no objection.

"INVESTIGATION" OF NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS ACT AND THE WAGE-HOUR ACT

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD at this point and to include therein a few paragraphs from an editorial from the newspaper Labor.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, no one is more eager than I to see the functioning of Government agencies improved and to see constructive amendments passed when they are really needed and will improve the work of those agencies.

No one is more opposed to efforts which, unfortunately, are sometimes made to deliberately discredit the work of various agencies by the simple process of giving a tremendous overemphasis to mistakes and no emphasis at all to the great preponderance of the work which has been well done. As a case in point is the recent W. P. A. investigation.

This Congress has been particularly prone to attack every effort of the Government to protect the rights of the humble people of this country—the unemployed, the wage earners, the farmers, and similar groups.

I hope that this same thing is not going to happen again in the case of the National Labor Relations Act or the Fair Labor Standards Act.

No doubt mistakes have been made by the National Labor Relations Board. It would be strange if this had not been the case, for mistakes are made in every human institution. I myself believe some mistakes have been made in the matter of personnel. But I am convinced that every effort is being made by the Board to pursue a constructive course and to constantly improve administration. The recent appointment of Dr. Leiserson to the Board has certainly met with universal approval.

Therefore, I cannot believe that any good purpose can be served by having the House authorize another effort to make political capital out of a so-called investigation. My own feelings about the matter are well set forth in the following brief paragraphs from the current issue of the newspaper Labor, official organ of the 15 recognized standard railroad labor organizations of America.

Labor says—referring first to the W. P. A. investigating committee:

In a word, the committee played up the mistakes of W. P. A. and suppressed all its good points, thus giving the country and the Congress a grossly distorted picture of the situation.

To repeat that procedure in the case of the National Labor Relations Act and the Wage-Hour Act will, of course, give aid and comfort to sweatshop bosses, but it will produce nothing which will aid serious-minded lawmakers in solving the economic and industrial problems of a sorely harassed nation.

Those Members of the House who believe that American workers are entitled to an American standard of living and that they have a right to join unions of their choice, without coercion or intimidation on the part of employers, will vote against the proposal. The issue is very simple and very clear, and labor hopes that southern workers in particular will watch the roll call.

It is, of course, conceivable that a constructive effort might be made by the House to assist an agency in improving its administration of the law. I am, however, of the opinion that the current resolution is not that kind of an effort.

THE WAGNER LABOR RELATIONS ACT

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, I want to serve notice at the present time that there is to be a resolution presented to this body from the Rules Committee providing a special committee to investigate the Wagner Labor Relations Act.

I serve notice now that I shall not only oppose that, but I shall call all the attention I can broadly to it in this country and to the men who are putting it forward.

Whether conclusively or not it is the first move on the part of those who desire to destroy this Labor Relations Act, the wage and hour law, and to restore to the industrialists the power to control and profit unjustly off of labor as was done before these and other labor laws were enacted.

I appeal to every friend of fair dealing for the men and women who produce the wealth of this country to arise and defeat this attack so thoroughly as to make sure that men who hate labor and deny the rights of laboring men, will not again attempt such a course as this.

Not a single friend of honest labor is for this resolution.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled a bill of the House of the following title, which was thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. R. 3325. An act to extend the time within which the powers relating to the stabilization fund and alteration of the weight of the dollar may be exercised.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee did on this day present to the President, for his approval, bills and a joint resolution of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 2310. An act to provide national flags for the burial of honorably discharged former service men and women;

H. R. 3325. An act to extend the time with the powers relating to the stabilization fund and alteration of the weight of the dollar may be exercised;

H. R. 4674. An act to provide for the establishment of a Coast Guard station at or near the city of Monterey, Calif.;

H. R. 5722. An act for the relief of Evelyn Gurley-Kane; and

H. J. Res. 133. Joint Resolution authorizing the President of the United States of America to proclaim October 11, 1939, General Pulaski's Memorial Day, for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 3 o'clock and 54 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned (according to its previous order) until Monday, July 10, 1939, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

On Friday, July 7, 1939, beginning at 10 a. m., there will be continued a public hearing before the Committee on the Judiciary on the bill (H. R. 6369) to amend the act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto; to create a Railroad Reorganization Board; and for other purposes.

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

There will be a meeting of the miscellaneous railroad subcommittee of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce at 10 a. m. Monday, July 10, 1939. Business to be considered: Continuation of hearing on H. R. 5726, to amend the Interstate Commerce Act by providing that the shipper shall not be liable for charges in certain cases.

COMMITTEE ON MERCHANT MARINE AND FISHERIES

The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries will hold public hearings in room 219, House Office Building, at 10 a. m., on the bills and dates listed below:

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries at 10 a. m., Tuesday, July 11, 1939, for the consideration of H. R. 6881, to implement the provisions of the Shipowners' Liability (sick and injured seamen) Convention, 1936.

The notice of June 27, 1939, advised that public hearings would be held on Tuesday, July 11, 1939, at 10 a. m. on H. R. 6881, a bill to implement the provisions of the Shipowners' Liability (sick and injured seamen) Convention, 1936.

On the same day hearings will be held on H. R. 6726, a bill to amend the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended, to provide compensation for disability or death resulting from injury to officers and members of the crew of vessels under the jurisdiction of the United States, and for other purposes. ## SENATE

FRIDAY, JULY 7, 1939

(Legislative day of Thursday, July 6, 1939)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

The Chaplain, Rev. Z. Barney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Eternal loving Father, whose perfection calls us and whose mercy welcomes us, we lift to Thee our broken cries and turn to Thee our waiting eyes as we ask, not merely for the bestowal of Thy gifts but of Thyself, that we may be bound to Thee with the bond of endless love.

In Thy wisdom, Thou hast seen fit to take unto Thyself the soul of one who, by his devoted service to the welfare of the Nation, endeared himself to all his fellow countrymen. Receive him, dear Lord, into those heavenly habitations where he may go from strength to strength in the life of perfect service in Thy courts above. Enfold in Thy loving arms the dear ones who remain, and grant especially to her, the beloved companion of his life, the peace and comfort which it is Thine alone to give. Come in the stillness to all who are bereft and laden with sorrow, even as the night enwraps the hills and the stars steal into the skies; come in all tenderness, as a shepherd folds his sheep and a mother stills her child, that we may all know the peace that passeth understanding. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

DEATH OF HON. CLAUDE A. SWANSON

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the Senate has been apprised, with profound grief, of the death this morning of the Secretary of the Navy, Hon. Claude A. Swanson.

He was a Member of this body for nearly a quarter of a century. He was a Member of the House of Representatives for many years, and Governor of Virginia. During a long period of years he rendered, in whatever station in public life he occupied, outstanding and distinguished service. He was a patriot of the highest order and quality, devoted to his country and devoted to his State. He was one of the most lovable men who ever served in the Congress of the United States and one of the wisest counselors in public and private affairs it was ever my pleasure to know.

The senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS] in a moment will submit an appropriate resolution with reference to the death of Senator Swanson, as I still love to call him. I may say that I think the resolution will provide that the funeral services shall be held in the Senate Chamber at 1 o'clock p. m. on Monday.

I now yield to the senior Senator from Virginia to present the resolution.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I submit the resolution which I send to the desk and ask to have read, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read.

The resolution (S. Res. 156) was read, considered by unanimous consent, and unanimously agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with profound sorrow and deep regret the announcement of the death of Hon. Claude A. Swanson, late the Secretary of the Navy, and formerly a Senator from the State of Virginia.

Resolved, That a committee of 16 Senators be appointed by the President of the Senate to take order for superintending the funeral of Mr. Swanson, which shall take place in the Senate Chamber on Monday, July 10, 1939, at 1 o'clock p. m., and that the Senate attend the same.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives, transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased, and invite the House of Representatives to attend the funeral in the Senate Chamber and to appoint a committee to act with the committee of the Senate.

Resolved, That invitations be extended to the President of the United States and the members of the Cabinet, the Chief Justice and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, the Diplomatic Corps (through the Secretary of State), the Chief of Staff of the Army, the Chief of Naval Operations of the Navy, the Major General Commandant of the Marine Corps, and the Commandant of the Coast Guard to attend the funeral in the Senate Chamber.

The VICE PRESIDENT, under the second resolving clause of the resolution (S. Res. 156), appointed the following Senators to constitute the Committee to Take Order for Superintending the Funeral of the late Secretary of the Navy:

The senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD], the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS], the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING], the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE], the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR], the Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES], and the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GERRY].

Mr. GLASS. As a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased Secretary of the Navy, I move that the Senate do now adjourn until 12:45 o'clock p. m. on Monday next.

The motion was unanimously agreed to; and (at 12 o'clock and 20 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, July 10, 1939, at 12:45 o'clock p. m.

NOMINATIONS

SENATE

MONDAY, JULY 10, 1939

The Senate met at 12 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. Z. Barney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Breathe on us, breath of God,
Till we are wholly Thine;
Till all this earthly part of us
Glow with Thy fire divine.

Breathe on us, breath of God;
Fill us with life anew,
That we may love what Thou dost love
And do what Thou wouldst do.

Breathe on us, breath of God,
Until our hearts are pure;
Until with Thee we will one will,
To do and to endure.

Breathe on us, breath of God,
So shall we never die,
But live with Thee the perfect life
Of Thine eternity.

Amen.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Calloway, one of its reading clerks, communicated to the Senate the resolutions of the House adopted as a tribute to the memory of Hon. Claude A. Swanson, late the Secretary of the Navy and formerly a Senator and Representative in Congress from the State of Virginia.

The message also communicated the intelligence that the House of Representatives accepted the invitation of the Senate to attend the funeral services of the late Secretary Swanson in the Senate Chamber at 1 o'clock p. m. today, and that the Speaker pro tempore had appointed a committee of 16 Members on the part of the House of Representatives to join with the committee of the Senate appointed to take order for superintending the funeral of the deceased Secretary of the Navy and former Senator and Representative from the State of Virginia.

CONSTRUCTION AND FINANCING OF SELF-LIQUIDATING PROJECTS

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I desire to introduce a bill to provide for the construction and financing of self-liquidating projects, and for other purposes, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD, together with a summary by sections thereof, and an accompanying statement.

There being no objection, the bill (S. 2759) to provide for the construction and financing of self-liquidating projects, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency, and, together with the summary and statement, was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the "Self-liquidating Projects Act of 1939."

AUTHORIZATION OF BONDS

Sec. 2. In order to provide a sound method of financing which, without burdening the national taxing power, will make it possible to increase employment through a self-liquidating improvement program, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation (herein called the Corporation), upon the direction of the President, shall issue from time to time notes, debentures, bonds, or other obligations to enable the Department of Agriculture, the Public Roads Administration, the Public Works Administration, the Rural Electrification Administration, and the Corporation to carry out their respective functions as hereinafter provided.

PROVISIONS CONCERNING BONDS

Sec. 3. The provisions contained in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, approved January 22, 1932, as amended, shall apply to the notes, debentures, bonds, or other obligations issued to carry out the provisions of this act, except that—directed to be issued by the President, not to exceed $2,560,000,000, plus an amount equal to the amount of unobligated balances of appropriations transferred under sections 10 and 12 of this act.

(a) Such notes, debentures, bonds, or other obligations may mature at such time or times, not exceeding 40 years from their date, and contain and be subject to such terms, covenants, and conditions as the Corporation, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may prescribe; and

(b) The amount of notes, debentures, bonds, or other obligations which the Corporation may issue and have outstanding at any one time under existing law is hereby increased by the amount thereof

DISPOSITION OF BOND PROCEEDS

Sec. 4. The Corporation is hereby authorized and directed to deposit all proceeds realized from the sale of notes, debentures, bonds, and other obligations issued for the purpose of carrying out this act, with the Treasurer of the United States to the credit of the Corporation. The Treasurer of the United States is hereby authorized and directed to receive such moneys and hold the same in a special account or accounts to the credit of the Corporation, and to transfer from time to time such amounts as the Corporation, upon the direction of the President, shall order to such special disbursing accounts with said Treasurer as the Secretary of the Treasury shall designate, in order to provide funds for the following departments, administrations, and agencies of the Government in not to exceed the following amounts for the following purposes, in addition to sums available for such purposes from tolls and charges collected from the repayments of the interest on and principal of loans made, and from the sale of securities acquired, under this act:

(1) To the Public Roads Administration: The sum of $750,000,000 for post roads, highways, parkways (in cooperation with the National Park Service of the Department of the Interior), grade-crossings, underpasses, overpasses, viaducts, bridges, and tunnels, including crossings over or under navigable waters, and other transportation facilities, including works, undertakings, or projects incidental thereto or to encourage the use thereof, and all or any part of any of such facilities and appurtenances thereto, such as lands, rights in lands, rights of access, easements, buildings, equipment, and machinery (herein called "highway improvements"), as provided in section 5 of this act and property acquired for investment purposes as provided in said section;

(2) To the Public Works Administration: The sum of $350,000,000 for projects of the character heretofore financed by loan or grant or both by the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works under title II of the National Industrial Recovery Act, the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935, the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1936, the Public Works Administration Extension Act of 1937, and the Public Works Administration Appropriation Act of 1938 (herein called the non-Federal public works), as provided in section 7 of this act;

(3) To the Corporation: The sum of $500,000,000 for engines, locomotives, tenders, freight and passenger cars of all types and classes, and parts thereof and appurtenances thereto and other rolling stock and railway shop equipment (herein called "railroad equipment"), as provided in section 8 of this act;

(4) To the Rural Electrification Administration: $500,000,000 for projects of the character heretofore financed or authorized to be financed or carried on by the Rural Electrification Administration under the Rural Electrification Act of 1936 (herein called "rural electrification projects"), as provided in section 9 of this act; and

(5) To the Department of Agriculture: $600,000,000 for facilities for farm tenants, farm laborers, sharecroppers, and other individuals who obtain, or who have in the past obtained, the major portion of their income from farm operations, including rural rehabilitation loans, projects for the provision of additional water facilities and farm tenant loans as provided for in title I of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, approved July 22, 1937 (herein called "rural security projects"), as provided in section 11 of this act.

HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENTS

Sec. 5. Subject to the provisions of this act, and using in such connection States, municipalities, and other public bodies to the fullest extent consistent with sound administration and economical management, the Public Roads Administration shall have power:

(a) To construct, reconstruct, alter, extend, enlarge, improve, repair, and acquire highway improvements with a view to promoting interstate commerce, aiding in the national defense, facilitating the use of the mails, or promoting the general welfare;

(b) To maintain and operate highway improvements;

(c) With the approval of the Corporation, to fix, maintain, and collect tolls, and other charges for the use of highway improvements which shall be sufficient (after making reasonable allowances for operation and maintenance expenses for depreciation to the extent not provided for by amortization, and contingencies) to amortize the cost of such highway improvements with interest as hereinafter provided;

(d) To use for further highway improvements the revenues derived from such collections to the extent not needed in the judgment of the Corporation to meet reasonable allowances for operation and maintenance expenses or for the amortization of the cost of highway improvements with interest as hereinafter provided, or for depreciation to the extent not provided for by amortization, and contingencies;

(e) To acquire in the name of the United States by gift, purchase, exchange, or by the exercise of the power of eminent domain or otherwise, and to hold, lease (as lessor with or without the option to purchase or as lessee), use, sell, exchange, or otherwise dispose of real property necessary or convenient for carrying out any of its functions hereunder in connection with highway improvements or in connection with any construction undertaken in accordance with the Federal Highway Act, as amended and supplemented;

(f) In connection with any sale or lease to any State, municipality, or other public body, to enter into such contracts and agreements as the Commissioner of Public Roads may deem desirable, which contracts and agreements may include provisions for deducting from the unpaid portion of the sale price, rental payments, or loans an amount equal to any profit which the Corporation may determine to have been realized from the sale of adjacent property acquired pursuant to subsection (g) of this section;

(g) To acquire by purchase, but not by condemnation for investment purposes, any real property in the vicinity of any highway improvements or Federal-aid construction if, in the opinion of the Commissioner of Public Roads and the Corporation, the price at which such real property may be purchased is such as to make it probable that the United States will, as a result of appreciation in land values resulting from any highway improvement or Federal-aid construction, be able to dispose of such property within 20 years at such a price as to result in a profit; and to sell any such real property at public sale after advertisement and competitive bidding and upon such other terms and conditions as the Commissioner of Public Roads and the Corporation may in their judgment deem in the public interest;

(h) To expend moneys for the purpose for which any real property has been purchased, or possession thereof has been taken during the course of condemnation proceedings and in advance of final judgment thereon, in demolishing existing structures thereon, in improving such real property in any way, or in constructing any highway improvement thereon, notwithstanding the provisions of section 355 of the Revised Statutes or any other law restricting the expenditure of public moneys upon real property, the title to which has been acquired by the United States;

(i) To prescribe and publish such rules and regulations for the proper government and protection of, and maintenance of good order on, highway improvements or adjacent real property of the Authority, willful violation of which shall be punishable by a fine of not more than $500 or imprisonment for not more than 3 months, or both; and to authorize employees of any department of the Government, with the consent of the head of such department, to make arrests for the violation of such rules and regulations, and any person so arrested shall be taken before the nearest United States Commissioner within whose jurisdiction the highway improvement is located for trial; and upon sworn information by any competent person any United States Commissioner in the proper jurisdiction shall issue process for the arrest of any person charged with violation of such rules and regulations; but nothing herein contained shall be construed as preventing the arrest by an officer, agent, or employee of any public body, with or without process, of any person for the violation of any State or local law, ordinance, or regulation for the government and protection of and maintenance of good order on highway improvements, and any person so arrested shall be tried and punished according to the laws of said State;

(j) To institute and carry on, under the direction of the Attorney General, condemnation proceedings for the purpose of taking any real property (which term includes for purposes of this act property devoted to another public use, lands under water, water rights, incorporeal hereditaments, chattels real, and all rights and interests in land, whether fees simple, absolute, or any lesser interest) in the manner or mode of procedure provided by an act entitled "An act to authorize condemnation of land for sites of public buildings, and for other purposes," approved August 1, 1883, as amended, or of an act entitled "An act to expedite the construction of public buildings and works outside of the District of Columbia by enabling possession and title of sites to be taken in advance of final judgment in proceedings for the acquisition thereof under the power of eminent domain," approved February 26, 1931, as amended;

(k) To enter on any real property for the purpose of making surveys, borings, tests, and examinations;

(l) To pay all expenses in connection with the acquisition of real property, including all fees for abstracts, official certifications, evidences of title, and recordation, notwithstanding the proviso in section 1 of the act of March 2, 1899, relating to the payment of such expenses and fees.

CROSSINGS ON NAVIGABLE WATERS

SEC. 6. The consent of Congress to the construction, reconstruction, or acquisition by the Public Roads Administration of any bridge, tunnel, or other crossing over, under, or across any navigable waters of the United States, under this act, shall be deemed to have been obtained and affirmatively authorized by virtue of this act within the meaning of sections 9, 10, and 11 of the act of March 3, 1899, as amended, whether or not such structures cross rivers and other waterways the navigable portions of which lie wholly within the limits of a single State; but no such structure shall be constructed, reconstructed, or maintained under this act unless and until all the limitations, restrictions, and other provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906, as amended, except the provisions of section 6 thereof, shall have been complied with by said Administration.

NON-FEDERAL PUBLIC WORKS

SEC. 7. Subject to the provisions of this act, the Public Works Administration shall have power:

(a) To make loans to finance or aid in financing the construction, reconstruction, extension, or improvement of non-Federal public works; and for the temporary operation of any such non-Federal public works for such period as the Commissioner of Public Works shall deem necessary;

(b) To purchase securities to evidence loans for non-Federal public works, and to exchange such securities for other securities if the Commissioner of Public Works shall determine that such exchange is advisable to assure repayment of any loan made hereunder or interest thereon;

(c) To use the sums realized from repayments of the interest on and principal of loans made by it under this section and the proceeds realized from the sale of any securities acquired by it hereunder for the making of further loans for non-Federal public works to the extent such proceeds are not needed, in the judgment of the Corporation, to maintain the loans for non-Federal public works on a self-liquidating basis;

(d) To organize under the laws of the District of Columbia or of any State or Territory a corporation or corporations to aid the Public Works Administration in carrying out its functions hereunder, and to make loans and advances to any such corporation.

RAILROAD EQUIPMENT

SEC. 8. Subject to the provisions of this act, and without regard to the limitations and restrictions of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, approved January 22, 1932, as amended and supplemented, the Corporation shall have power:

(a) To prepare plans and designs for the construction, rebuilding, or repair of railroad equipment;

(b) To enter into contracts for the construction, rebuilding, repair, or scrapping of any railroad equipment upon such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon pursuant to public bidding or private negotiations;

(c) To lease, with or without the option to purchase, or to sell or rent upon such terms and conditions as it shall prescribe, any railroad equipment so acquired;

(d) To enter into contracts for the purchase of old railroad equipment for the purpose of lease or resale in its existing state or for the purpose of rebuilding, repairing, or scrapping the same for lease or resale;

(e) To use the proceeds realized from any leases, sales, or other contracts with regard to railroad equipment for carrying on further operations under this section to the extent such proceeds are not needed, in the judgment of the Corporation, to maintain its operation as to railroad equipment on a self-liquidating basis.

(f) To organize under the laws of the District of Columbia or of any State or Territory a corporation or corporations to aid the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in carrying out its functions hereunder, and to make loans and advances to any such corporation.

RURAL ELECTRIFICATION PROJECTS

SEC. 9. Subject to the provisions of this act, the Rural Electrification Administration shall have power:

(a) To make loans to finance or aid in financing rural electrification projects;

(b) To purchase securities to evidence loans made by it, and use the sums realized from repayments of the interest on and principal of loans made by it under this section and the proceeds realized from the sale of any securities acquired by it hereunder for the making of further loans for rural electrification projects to the extent such proceeds are not needed, in the judgment of the Corporation, to maintain the loans for rural electrification on a self-liquidating basis;

(c) To exercise the powers granted by this section without regard to the provisions of subdivisions (b), (c), and (d) of section 3 and the last sentence of section 5 but subject to the requirements of section 2 of the Rural Electrification Act of 1936.

TRANSFER TO RURAL ELECTRIFICATION ADMINISTRATION

SEC. 10. The Secretary of the Treasury shall pay over and transfer to such special disbursing account or accounts with the Treasurer of the United States as shall be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury under section 4 of this act all or any part of any unobligated balances of such sums heretofore appropriated or available to the Rural Electrification Administration to enable it to carry out the provisions of the Rural Electrification Administration Act of 1936, and such funds shall thereupon be available to the Rural Electrification Administration for financing or aiding in financing rural electrification projects under this act, in addition to all other moneys available or to be available for such purpose under this act.

RURAL SECURITY PROJECTS

SEC. 11. Subject to the provisions of this act, the Secretary of Agriculture shall have power:

(a) To undertake and make loans for rural security projects.

(b) To purchase securities to evidence such loans, and use the sums realized from repayments of the interest on and principal of loans made under this section and the proceeds realized from the sale of any securities acquired by it hereunder for the making of further loans for rural security projects to the extent such proceeds are not needed, in the judgment of the Corporation, to maintain such loans on a self-liquidating basis.

TRANSFER TO SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE

SEC. 12. The Secretary of the Treasury shall pay over and transfer to such special disbursing account or accounts with the Treasurer of the United States as shall be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury under section 4 of this act all or any part of any unobligated balances of sums heretofore appropriated or available to the Secretary of Agriculture to enable him to carry out the provisions of title I of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938, the Work Relief and Public Works Appropriation Act of 1939, and such funds shall thereupon be available to the Secretary of Agriculture for financing or aiding in financing rural security projects under this act, in addition to all other moneys available or to be available for such purposes under this act.

DISPOSITION OF PROJECT REVENUES

SEC. 13. The Department of Agriculture, the Public Roads Administration, the Public Works Administration, the Rural Electrification Administration, and the Corporation shall deposit all revenues and receipts derived from the works, projects, or undertakings constructed, leased, rented, or sold, or repayments of the interest on, or principal of, all loans made to aid in financing works, projects, or undertakings, in carrying out their respective functions under this act in a special account or accounts with the Treasurer of the United States to the credit of the Corporation, and all such revenues and receipts shall be used by the Corporation exclusively for the payment of interest on its notes, debentures, bonds, or other obligations issued for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act, as such interest shall become due and payable, and for the purchase, retirement, or redemption of such notes, debentures, bonds, or other obligations, except to the extent that the Corporation makes such revenues and receipts available for the construction and financing of further works, projects, or undertakings as provided in this act.

SALE OF SECURITIES

SEC. 14. The Corporation shall have the power, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury as to the time of any such sale, to sell or otherwise dispose of any securities acquired by any department, administration, or agency in carrying out its functions under this act, and in connection with any such sale to make such contracts and agreements as seem to the Corporation advisable; and all sums realized from the sale of such securities shall be deposited by the Corporation in a special account or accounts with the Treasurer of the United States and shall be used exclusively for the payment of interest on notes, debentures, bonds, or other obligations issued for the purpose of carrying out this act, as such interest shall become due and payable, and for the purchase, retirement, or redemption of such notes, debentures, bonds, or other obligations, except to the extent that the Corporation makes the proceeds of such sales available for the making of further loans as provided in this act.

AVAILABILITY AND AUDIT OF FUNDS

SEC. 15. The departments, administrations, and agencies for which funds shall be provided by the Corporation pursuant to this act may use such funds for the purpose of carrying out their respective functions under this act without further appropriation, and such funds shall be continuously available for such purposes. Except as to the expenditures of the Corporation which shall be governed by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, approved January 22, 1932, as amended and supplemented, all such expenditures shall be accounted for and audited in accordance with the terms and provisions of the Budget and Accounting Act of 1921, as amended, the same as if an appropriate appropriation account had been established therefor pursuant to an appropriation warrant or a covering warrant.

APPRAISAL OF PROGRAM

SEC. 16. The Secretary of the Treasury and the Federal Loan Administrator shall cause an examination to be made annually of the status of the self-liquidating improvement program for the financing of which notes, debentures, bonds, or other obligations of the Corporation shall have been issued under this act. Such examination shall be made as of the last day of December in each year, beginning with December 31, 1940. The Secretary of the Treasury and the Federal Loan Administrator shall submit a report of such examination to the President and to the Congress. If such examination discloses that the probable recovery of the cost of all works, projects, or undertakings carried out under this act, and of all loans made to aid in the financing of the same, together with the cash on hand in the special account or accounts of the Corporation provided for by section 4 of this act, is less than the principal amount of all notes, debentures, bonds, or other obligations issued pursuant to this act, and interest thereon, the Secretary of the Treasury on behalf of the United States shall pay to the Corporation a sum equal to the amount of such difference. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated annually, commencing with the fiscal year 1941, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, a sum equal to the amount needed to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to make such payment. Whenever such examination shall disclose a surplus, the Corporation shall reimburse the Treasury to the extent of such surplus for the amounts, if any, previously paid under this section.

DUTY OF FEDERAL AGENCIES

SEC. 17. The Department of Agriculture, the Public Roads Administration, the Public Works Administration, the Rural Electrification Administration, and the Corporation shall exercise their powers under this act with a view to recovering the cost of the works, projects, or undertakings carried out under this act, or loans made to aid in financing the same, with interest to be fixed by the Corporation on the date of enactment of this act and the first day of each calendar quarter thereafter, at a rate or rates which may reasonably be expected to reimburse the Corporation for the cost to it of the capital required for its operations under this act, having due regard to the yield on obligations of the United States of comparable maturity or maturities to that of such loans and the rate and period of amortization of the cost of such works, projects, or undertakings, but not to exceed the multiple of one-eighth of 1 percent next higher than the highest yield to maturity (based on market prices) on the longest term outstanding issue of obligations of the United States, direct or indirect. For the purposes of this section, the yield on any callable obligation selling above par shall be computed to its earliest callable date, and said date shall be deemed to be the maturity thereof. Nothing herein shall be construed to require the alteration or readjustment of any rate once the interest has been fixed for any such works, projects, undertakings, or loans.

ASSISTANCE BY GOVERNMENTAL AGENCIES

SEC. 18. Any department, administration, or agency authorized to perform any function under this act shall have power to utilize the services of Federal, State, and local agencies and their employees and, notwithstanding any other provision of law, to reimburse such agencies and their employees for services rendered for such purposes.

EXCLUSIVE FEDERAL JURISDICTION NOT REQUIRED

SEC. 19. Notwithstanding the provisions of any other law, the obtaining of exclusive jurisdiction in the United States over real property to be acquired under this act shall not be required; but the Attorney General may, in such cases and at such times as he may deem desirable, secure from the State in which such real property is situated, such jurisdiction, exclusive or partial, over any such real property as the Attorney General may deem desirable and accept such jurisdiction on behalf of the United States by filing a notice of such acceptance with the Governor of such State or in such other manner as may be prescribed by the laws of the State within the borders of which such real property is situated. Unless and until acceptance of such jurisdiction on behalf of the United States has been made as aforesaid, it shall be conclusively presumed that no such jurisdiction has been accepted.

ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES FOR THE FISCAL YEAR 1940

SEC. 20. Administrative expenses of the departments, administrations, agencies of the Government, and amounts required to reimburse States, municipalities, and other public bodies and employees thereof for services rendered in carrying out the purpose of this act shall be paid for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, from such amounts as may, with the approval of the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, be reserved from the proceeds realized from the sale of notes, debentures, bonds, or other obligations of the Corporation for the payment thereof, in addition to the unobligated balances of sums heretofore appropriated or authorized to be used for such administrative expenses, any provision in this or any other law to the contrary notwithstanding.

SAVING CLAUSE

SEC. 21. The powers conferred by this act are in addition and supplemental to the powers conferred by, and shall not be affected by the limitations in, any other law; and nothing in this act shall be construed to limit or in any way curtail the existing powers of any department, administration, or agency of the Government, or the powers conferred upon the President by the Reorganization Act of 1939, approved April 3, 1939, or any reorganization plan heretofore or hereafter transmitted by the President to the Congress which has heretofore taken effect or which may hereafter take effect pursuant thereto; and the administration of the provisions of this act shall be subject to the provisions of such reorganization plans.

APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 22. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated from time to time such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

EXPORT-IMPORT BANK OF WASHINGTON

SEC. 23. Section 9 of the act approved January 31, 1935 (49 Stat. 4), as amended, is hereby further amended, by striking from the proviso at the end of the last sentence thereof "$100,000,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$200,000,000."

SUMMARY BY SECTIONS OF THE DRAFT OF BILL TO CARRY OUT THE SELF-LIQUIDATING PROGRAM

Section 1 provides that, when enacted the bill may be cited as the "Self-Liquidating Projects Act of 1939."

Section 2 provides that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation shall issue its notes or other obligations upon the direction of the President to finance the self-liquidating improvement program to be carried on by the Department of Agriculture, the Public Roads Administration, the Public Works Administration, the Rural Electrification Administration, as well as by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation itself.

Section 3 provides that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act shall apply to such notes or other obligations, except that the maturity may be 40 years, and increases the amount which may be outstanding under existing law to $2,560,000,000, plus unobligated balances of present appropriations available to the Department of Agriculture and to the Rural Electrification Administration. The purpose of this latter provision is to avoid duplication of the program.

Section 4 provides for the proceeds of such notes and other obligations to be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States and disbursed to the agencies carrying out the program in amounts indicated by the President's letter to Senator BYRNES of June 21, 1939.

Section 5 authorizes the Public Roads Administration, in cooperation with State agencies, to carry out a program of highway improvements, including toll roads, bridges, tunnels, express bypasses, and the acquisition of adjacent land for investment purposes. This section also confers powers essential to the prompt and effective execution of the program contemplated in the report of the Bureau of Public Roads dated April 27, 1939, and published as House Document No. 272, Seventy-sixth Congress, first session. Provision is made for the Attorney General to handle all condemnation proceedings under the General Condemnation Act or under the 1931 act permitting possession to be taken by the Government upon filing of a declaration of taking.

Section 6 provides that no further consent of Congress need be required before bridges or tunnels may be built across navigable waters, notwithstanding that such waters may not be wholly within a single State, but requires that the approval of the Secretary of War to the plans and specifications be obtained in accordance with the General Bridge Act.

Section 7 authorizes the Public Works Administration to make loans for projects of the character which it has heretofore financed and contains powers deemed desirable in the light of the experience of that Administration.

Section 8 authorizes the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to enter into contracts for the construction of rolling stock and shop equipment for railroads and selling or leasing the same with or without the option to purchase. Provision is also made for the purchase of old rolling stock and equipment for scrapping or rebuilding.

Section 9 authorizes the Rural Electrification Administration to make loans to finance projects of the character it is authorized to finance under the Rural Electrification Act of 1936 and eliminates restrictive provisions in that act which would militate against an effective program. This section preserves, however, the prohibition in the Rural Electrification Act against the financing of competitive facilities.

Section 10 relates to the $40,000,000 appropriation made at this session of Congress for Rural Electrification projects for the fiscal year 1940, and authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to transfer the unobligated balances of appropriations previously made to the Rural Electrification Administration. This section makes an equal amount available to the Administration for financing projects under the bill.

Section 11 authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to make loans to farm tenants, sharecroppers, and migratory farmers for the purposes provided in the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act.

Section 12 authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to transfer the unobligated balance of appropriations previously made to the Secretary of Agriculture to carry out the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act and supplemental legislation. This section makes available to the Secretary of Agriculture an equal amount for loans under the bill. This section relates to an estimated balance of $100,000,000 presently available for loans for such purposes by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Section 13 provides that all revenues of the agencies charged with administering the bill which are derived from projects constructed or financed under the bill shall be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States to the credit of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and requires the Corporation to use such revenues to pay the notes and other obligations issued to finance the program, together with interest thereon, except to the extent that the Corporation makes part of such revenues available as a revolving fund for further projects if there is any surplus available for such purpose.

Section 14 authorizes the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to sell securities acquired as evidence of loans made by any agency under the bill and to use such proceeds as a revolving fund for further loans after providing for the payment of the interest on and principal of its notes and other obligations issued under the bill.

Section 15 makes available funds provided by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the agencies charged with carrying out the self-liquidating program without any further appropriation for expenditures under the bill and requires that all such expenditures shall be accounted for and audited by the General Accounting Office.

Section 16 provides that the Secretary of the Treasury and the Federal Loan Administrator shall make an annual examination of the status of the program and report the results to the President and to the Congress. This section also provides to the extent that it appears that the program may not be on a self-liquidating basis the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay the Reconstruction Finance Corporation any estimated deficiency, an appropriation for which is authorized.

Section 17 imposes a duty upon every agency constructing or financing projects under the program to undertake projects and make loans with a view to recovering the amount invested with interest sufficient to reimburse the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for the cost to it of the capital required for its operations under the bill. This section also places a ceiling on the interest rate at the highest yield on the longest term, direct or indirect, obligation of the United States which is outstanding.

Section 18 provides that the services of Federal, State, and local agencies may be utilized and that reimbursement may be made for such services.

Section 19 dispenses as to real property acquired under the bill with the requirement of existing law that the United States must acquire exclusive jurisdiction over real property and empowers the Attorney General to determine how much jurisdiction is desirable.

Section 20 provides that administrative expenses for the fiscal year 1940 shall be paid from the proceeds of notes and other obligations issued by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in amounts to be fixed by the Director of the Bureau of the Budget.

Section 21 provides that the act confers only cumulative powers and that nothing in it shall be construed to affect the operation of any reorganization plan promulgated pursuant to the Reorganization Act.

Section 22 contains the usual provision authorizing appropriations of such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of the bill. Unless an impairment should be found after the annual appraisal required by section 16, none will be required except for administrative expenses.

Section 23 increases the amount of loans for financing and facilitating exports which the Export-Import Bank of Washington is authorized to have outstanding at any one time from $100,000,000 to $200,000,000.

The Barkley-Steagall Self-Liquidating Projects Act of 1939, introduced today, would make available the following sums for the following purposes: Non-Federal public works of a character which will return to the Federal Government its investment in them, $350,000,000; self-liquidating express post roads and highway improvements, $750,000,000; rolling stock and shop equipment for lease to railroads, $500,000,000; rural electrification loans, $460,000,000, plus $40,000,000 already appropriated; self-liquidating farm tenancy loans, $500,000,000, plus not more than $100,000,000 of funds already appropriated; loans through the Export-Import Bank, $100,000,000. Of the sums made available for the first time by this act, the President has estimated that the following amounts would be spent in the current fiscal year: Non-Federal public works, $150,000,000; express post roads, $150,000,000; railroad equipment, $100,000,000; rural electrification, $20,000,000; farm tenancy loans, $250,000,000. Probably all of the $100,000,000 to finance foreign trade would be obligated if not disbursed during the current fiscal year. The purposes for which the money could be spent are set forth in more detail in section 4.

The bill would not create any new agency or disturb any existing authority. The money made available for non-Federal public works would be handled by the Commissioner of Public Works, the money for express post roads and other highway improvements would be made available to the Commissioner of Public Roads, money for railroad equipment would be handled by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Rural Electrification Administration would receive the money for enlargement of their program, the Department of Agriculture would handle funds for the farm-tenancy program, and the money for loans to facilitate exports would be made available to the Export-Import Bank.

All disbursements would be for projects which are self-liquidating in character. The bill specifically imposes upon each operating agency the duty to undertake projects and to make loans with the aim of recovering for the Federal Government the full amount invested plus interest sufficient to reimburse the Government for the cost of the borrowing. The maximum interest rate which may be charged by any operating agency on loans under this program would be limited, however, to the highest yield on the longest term direct or indirect obligation of the United States which is then outstanding. At present this would be approximately 2.3 percent. The expectation is that all money paid out will be recouped by the Federal Government through repayment of public works, rural electrification, farm tenancy, and foreign-trade loans, through toll and other highway revenues and through rental of railroad equipment.

The self-liquidating character of the program permits it to be financed through a mechanism which also is provided in the bill introduced today. Because the obligations incurred under the program will be liquidated by the income from the program itself, these obligations may properly be segregated from other public-debt obligations which are in large part dependent upon the Federal taxing power for their ultimate repayment. This principle of segregating self-liquidating obligations of the Federal Government was established in the creation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in 1932.

Therefore, to provide the funds for the program the amount of obligations which the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is authorized to have outstanding at any one time would be increased by $2,700,000,000. This authorization would cover the $2,560,000,000 made available for the first time by this bill plus not more than $100,000,000 of the money already appropriated for farm-tenancy loans and the $40,000,000 already appropriated for rural electrification advances. These latter two appropriations, already made, would be financed through the new mechanism to avoid any artificial division between the sources of money available for these two programs.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation also would be authorized to issue obligations having maturities up to 40 years, so that the securities issued to finance the program may bear a proper relation to the life and amortization period of the improvements being financed. At present the Reconstruction Finance Corporation cannot issue obligations having a maturity of more than 5 years.

All revenues and loan repayments collected under the program are required by the bill to be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States for the account of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The Corporation can use this money to redeem the obligations which it has issued or it can use the repayments as a revolving fund to finance additional projects.

To make doubly sure that the program will be continually solvent the Secretary of the Treasury and the Federal Loan Administrator would be instructed by the act to appraise annually the assets acquired by the various operating agencies. To the extent, if any, that this examination indicates that the program will not be self-liquidating, the Secretary of the Treasury must secure from Congress an appropriation for the account of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Thus, if any losses accrue, they will be charged off currently, and the Corporation will at all times have cash, current revenues, and prospective income sufficient to service the indebtedness incurred for the program and to retire that indebtedness as it matures. Conversely, if there is any surplus, it will be used to reimburse the Treasury for any advances the Treasury has made.

FUNERAL OF SECRETARY OF THE NAVY SWANSON

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the proclamation issued by the Secretary of State on July 7, 1939, announcing the death of the late Secretary of the Navy Swanson.

There being no objection, the proclamation was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

To the people of the United States:

Claude Augustus Swanson, Secretary of the Navy, died at his camp on the Rapidan River, in the Shenandoah National Forest, on the morning of Friday, July 7, 1939, at 6 minutes after 8 o'clock.

Greatly loved by those who were privileged to know him, and widely honored for his many years of faithful public service, this distinguished member of the President's Cabinet will be mourned throughout the Nation.

Born and educated in the Old Dominion, he represented Virginia in Congress from 1893 until he resigned to become Governor in 1906. Four years later he became a Member of the United States Senate, where he continued to serve until he was appointed Secretary of the Navy by President Roosevelt in 1933. It was a career which exemplified the finest traditions of American public life.

As an expression of national mourning, the President directs that the flag of the United States be displayed at half mast until sunset of the day of interment on all public buildings and at all military posts and naval stations and on all vessels of the United States.

By direction of the President.

CORDELL HULL,
Secretary of State.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, July 7, 1939.

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the services today, as a mark of further respect to the memory of the deceased Secretary of the Navy, the Senate stand in recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The casket containing the body of the deceased Secretary of the Navy had been previously brought into the Senate Chamber and placed in the area in front of the desk, surrounded by many floral tributes.

A guard of honor was stationed in front of the casket.

The committee appointed by the Vice President, on the part of the Senate, to take order for superintending the funeral of the deceased Secretary, consisting of Senators GLASS, BYRD, BARKLEY, McNARY, PITTMAN, SHEPPARD, NORRIS, HALE, KING, McKELLAR, JOHNSON, HARRISON, WALSH, TYDINGS, BYRNES, and GERRY, were seated to the right of the Vice President.

The committee appointed by the Speaker of the House to attend the funeral of the deceased Secretary, consisting of Messrs. BLAND, DARDEN, SATTERFIELD, DREWRY, BURCH, WOODRUM of Virginia, ROBERTSON, SMITH of Virginia, FLANNAGAN, VINSON of Georgia, SCHUETZ, SUTPHIN, SHANNON, MAAS, CHURCH, and MOTT, entered the Chamber and were seated to the left of the Vice President.

The honorary pall bearers designated by the Navy Department, consisting of Hon. Charles Edison, Acting Secretary of the Navy; Admiral William D. Leahy, Chief of Naval Operations; Maj. Gen. Commandant T. Holcomb, United States Marine Corps; Rear Admiral C. W. Nimitz, Chief of Bureau of Navigation; Rear Admiral W. R. Furlong, Chief of Bureau of Ordnance; Rear Admiral W. B. Woodson, Judge Advocate General; Rear Admiral W. G. DuBose (CC), Chief, Bureau of Construction and Repair; Rear Admiral H. G. Bowen, Chief, Bureau of Engineering; Rear Admiral R. T. McIntire (MC), Chief, Bureau of Medicine and Surgery; Rear Admiral Ben Moreell (CEC), Chief, Bureau of Yards and Docks; Rear Admiral J. H. Towers, Chief, Bureau of Aeronautics; and Rear Admiral Ray Spears (SC), Chief, Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, entered the Chamber and were seated to the left of the Vice President's desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The invited guests of the Senate will be escorted to the places assigned them.

The Members of the House of Representatives, preceded by the Sergeant at Arms and the Doorkeeper and by the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. RAYBURN], entered the Senate Chamber. The Speaker pro tempore was escorted to a seat on the right of the Vice President, and Members of the House were given the seats provided for them.

The members of the diplomatic corps and the naval attachés of foreign embassies and legations entered the Chamber and were seated to the left of the Vice President's desk.

Mr. Justice McReynolds and Mr. Justice Black, representing the Supreme Court of the United States, accompanied by the deputy clerk, entered the Chamber and were seated in the area to the left of the Vice President's desk.

The Chief of Staff of the Army and the Commandant of the Coast Guard entered the Chamber and were seated in the area to the left of the Vice President's desk.

Mrs. Swanson and relatives and friends of the deceased Secretary entered the Chamber and were seated in the area below and to the left of the Vice President's desk.

Rev. Zeb Barney T. Phillips, D. D., Chaplain of the Senate, and Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., Chaplain of the House of Representatives, took their places at the Secretary's desk.

The President of the United States, accompanied by his military and naval aides, and the members of his Cabinet, preceded by the Sergeant at Arms of the Senate, entered the Chamber and were seated in the area in front and to the right of the Vice President's desk.

Mrs. Majorie Stringfellow sang the following three verses from the hymn Abide With Me:

Abide with me! Fast falls the eventide;
The darkness deepens: Lord, with me abide!
When other helpers fail, and comforts flee,
Help of the helpless, O abide with me!

Swift to its close ebbs out life's little day;
Earth's joys grow dim, its glories pass away,
Change and decay in all around I see;
O Thou who changest not, abide with me.

Hold Thou Thy cross before my closing eyes;
Shine through the gloom, and point me to the skies:
Heaven's morning breaks, and earth's vain shadows flee:
In life and death, O Lord, abide with me!

The Chaplain of the House of Representatives recited from the Methodist Episcopal burial service as follows:

I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth on me, though he die, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth on me shall never die.

For we know that if the earthly house of our tabernacle be dissolved, we have a building from God, a house not made with hands, eternal, in the heavens.

And I saw no temple therein: for the Lord God the Almighty, and the Lamb, are the temple thereof. And the city hath no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine upon it: for the glory of God did lighten it, and the lamp thereof is the Lamb.

Lord, Thou has been our dwelling place in all generations. Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever Thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting, Thou art God. For a thousand years in Thy sight are but as yesterday when it is past, and as a watch in the night. Thou carriest them away as with a flood; they are as a sleep: in the morning they are like grass which groweth up. In the morning it flourisheth, and groweth up; in the evening it is cut down, and withereth. So teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom. O satisfy us early with Thy mercy; that we may rejoice and be glad all our days. Let Thy work appear unto Thy servants, and Thy glory unto their children. And let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us: and establish Thou the work of our hands upon us; yea, the work of our hands establish Thou it.

The Chaplain of the Senate recited from the Episcopal burial service as follows:

(St. John 14: 1)

Jesus said, Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in Me. In My Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also. And whither I go ye know, and the way ye know. Thomas saith unto Him, Lord, we know not whither Thou goest; and how can we know the way? Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by Me.

(Romans 8: 14)

As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father. The Spirit himself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God: and if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with Him, that we may be also glorified together. For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us. For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestations of the sons of God. We know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose. What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us? He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things? Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us. Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through Him that loved us. For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

Here endeth the lesson.

Mrs. Marjorie Stringfellow sang "Lead, Kindly Light":

Lead, Kindly Light, amid the encircling gloom,
Lead Thou me on!
The night is dark, and I am far from home—
Lead Thou me on!
Keep Thou my feet; I do not ask to see
The distant scene—one step enough for me.
I was not ever thus, nor prayed that Thou
Shouldst lead me on.
I loved to choose and see my path; but now
Lead Thou me on!
I loved the garish day, and, spite of fears,
Pride ruled my will; remember not past year.
So long Thy power hath blessed me, sure it still Will lead me on,
O'er moor and fen, o'er crag and torrent, till
The night is gone;
And with the morn those angel faces smile
Which I have loved long since, and lost awhile.

The Chaplain of the Senate recited further from the Episcopal burial service, as follows:

Man that is born of a woman hath but a short time to live, and is full of misery. He cometh up, and is cut down, like a flower; he fleeth as it were a shadow, and never continueth in one stay.

In the midst of life we are in death; of whom may we seek for succor, but of Thee, O Lord, who for our sins art justly displeased?

Yet, O Lord God most holy, O Lord most mighty, O holy and most merciful Saviour, Thou most worthy Judge eternal, suffer us not, at our last hour, for any pains of death, to fall from Thee.

I heard a voice from heaven, saying unto me, Write, from henceforth blessed are the dead who die in the Lord: even so saith the Spirit; for they rest from their labors and their works do follow them.

Let us pray.

O merciful God and Heavenly Father, who hast taught us in Thy holy word that Thou dost not willingly afflict or grieve the children of men, look with Thy tender, loving mercy upon the sorrows of these dear ones for whom especially our prayers are offered. In Thy wisdom Thou hast seen fit that trouble and anguish and distress of spirit should come upon them. Remember them, O Lord, in mercy; comfort them with a sense of Thine indwelling; lift up the light of Thy countenance upon them and give them that peace which the world can neither give nor take away—the peace that passeth all understanding. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Almighty God, who hast been pleased to take unto Thyself the soul of this Thy servant, grant unto us who are still in our pilgrimage, and who walk as yet by faith, that, having served Thee with constancy on earth, we may be joined hereafter with Thy blessed saints in glory everlasting. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

O Almighty God, who hast knit together Thine elect in one communion and fellowship, in the mystical body of Thy Son, Christ our Lord, grant us grace so to follow Thy blessed saints in all virtuous and godly living, that we may come to those unspeakable joys which Thou hast prepared for those who unfeignedly love Thee. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Almighty God, with whom do live the spirits of those who depart hence in the Lord, and with whom the souls of the faithful, after they are delivered from the burden of the flesh, are in joy and felicity, we give Thee hearty thanks for the noble and gracious example of our beloved friend, Thy servant, who hath but yesterday fallen on sleep. Grant that we, with all those who are departed in the true faith of Thy holy name, may have our perfect consummation and bliss in Thy eternal and everlasting glory. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

We seem to give him back to Thee, dear God, who gavest him to us. Yet as Thou didst not lose him in giving, so we have not lost him by his return. Not as the world giveth, givest Thou, O Lover of Souls! What Thou givest, Thou takest not away. For what is Thine is ours always, if we are Thine. And life is eternal; and love is immortal; and death is only a horizon; and a horizon is nothing save the limit of our sight. Lift us up, strong Son of God, that we may see further; cleanse our eyes that we may see more clearly; draw us closer to Thyself that we may know ourselves nearer to our beloved who are with Thee. And while Thou dost prepare a place for us, prepare us for that happy place, that where they are, and Thou art, we too may be. Amen.

O God, the God of the spirits of all flesh, in whose embrace all creatures live in whatsoever world or condition they be, we beseech Thee for him, Thy blessed child, whose name and dwelling place and every need Thou only knowest. Lord, vouchsafe him light and rest, peace and refreshment, joy and consolation in paradise, in the companionship of saints and loved ones, in the presence of Christ, in the ample folds of Thy great love. Grant that his life, so wonderful here, so full of love and tenderness, may yet unfold itself in Thy sight and find sweet employment in the spacious fields of eternity.

If in aught we can minister to his peace, be pleased of Thy love to let this be; and so keep us from every act which may deprive us of the sight of him as soon as our trial time is over or mar the fullness of our joy when the end of the day hath come.

Pardon, O gracious Lord and Father, whatever is amiss in this our prayer, and let Thy will be done, for our will is blind and erring, but Thine is able to do exceedingly abundantly above all that we ask or think; and we only ask in the name and for the sake of Jesus Christ our Lord and Saviour. Amen.

And now, Lord, support us all the day long of this troublous life until the shadows lengthen and the evening comes and the busy world is hushed and the fever of life is over and our work is done. Then in Thy mercy grant us a safe lodging, a holy rest, and peace at the last. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Father, in Thy holy keeping Leave we now Thy servant sleeping.

The Chaplain of the House of Representatives pronounced the benediction, as follows:

Now unto Him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of His glory with exceeding joy, to the only wise God, our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen.

At 1 o'clock and 25 minutes p. m., the funeral ceremonies having been concluded, Mrs. Swanson and relatives and friends of the deceased Secretary of the Navy, the committee of arrangements of the two Houses, the honorary pallbearers, and the invited guests retired from the Chamber.

RECESS

Mr. BARKLEY. Under the order previously entered, I move that the Senate now stand in recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was unanimously agreed to; and (at 1 o'clock and 28 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Tuesday, July 11, 1939, at 12 o'clock m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

MONDAY, JULY 10, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. RABURN].

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Thou who art our Father's God and everlasting friend, incline Thine ear to us and grant us Thy peace. Thou who wert born of the very life of God and hast given voice to the dumb centuries of the past, give us the bread of human life and take the dimness of our souls away. We pray Thee to impart to blind mortal eyes the loveliness that is immortal, the contentment that is assuredly restful, and make men aware that however dark the night, the shadow-draped hills but conceal the promise of the dawn. Almighty One, open unto us the font of Thy unsearchable riches; stoop to our lowliness and make our souls more capacious for those high spiritual tones wrought in unjarring harmonies. The Lord is righteous in all His ways and holy in all His works. The Lord is high unto all them that call upon Him in truth. We praise Thee that our assured triumph is in the marvelous deliverance of the blessed, holy name of our Saviour. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Thursday, July 6, 1939, was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate had adopted the following resolution:

Senate Resolution 156

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES,

July 7 (legislative day, July 6), 1939.

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with profound sorrow and deep regret the announcement of the death of Hon. Claude A. Swanson, late the Secretary of the Navy, and formerly a Senator from the State of Virginia.

Resolved, That a committee of 16 Senators be appointed by the President of the Senate to take order for superintending the funeral of Mr. Swanson, which shall take place in the Senate Chamber on Monday, July 10, 1939, at 1 o'clock post meridian, and that the Senate attend the same.

SALE OF SECURITIES IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE

Mr. SABATH, from the Committee on Rules, reported the following resolution (H. Res. 248, Rept. No. 1049), for printing under the rule:

House Resolution 248

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of S. 2065, an act to provide for the regulation of the sale of certain securities in interstate and foreign commerce and through the mails, and the regulation of the trust indentures under which the same are issued, and for other purposes. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill, and shall continue not to exceed 2 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, the bill shall be read for amendments under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

WORLD WAR VETERANS AND THEIR DEPENDENTS

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 5452) to provide certain benefits for World War veterans and their dependents, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Mississippi calls up the bill, H. R. 5452, with a Senate amendment thereto, and asks unanimous consent that the House concur in the Senate amendment. The Clerk will report the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"That section 1 of Public Law No. 484, Seventy-third Congress, June 28, 1934, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 1. (a) The surviving widow, child, or children of any deceased person who served in the World War before November 12, 1918, or if the person was serving with the United States military forces in Russia before April 2, 1920, who, while receiving or entitled to receive compensation, pension, or retirement pay for 10 percent disability or more presumptively or directly incurred in or aggravated by service in the World War, dies or has died from a disease or disability not service connected shall, upon filing application and such proofs in the Veterans' Administration as the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs may prescribe, be entitled to receive compensation as provided by this act.

"(b) The surviving widow, child, or children of any deceased person who served in the World War before November 12, 1918, or if the person was serving with the United States military forces in Russia before April 2, 1920, and who was honorably discharged after having served 90 days or more (or who, having served less than 90 days, was discharged for disability incurred in the service in line of duty), who dies or has died from a disease or disability not service connected and at the time of death had a disability directly or presumptively incurred in or aggravated by service in the World War for which compensation would be payable at 10 percent or more in degree, shall, upon filing application and such proofs in the Veterans' Administration as the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs may prescribe, be entitled to receive compensation as provided by this act.

"(c) Payment of compensation under the provisions of this act shall not be made to any widow without child, or a child, whose annual income exceeds $1,000, or to a widow with a child or children whose annual income exceeds $2,500. In determining annual income, payments of war-risk term insurance, United States Government life (converted) insurance, and payments under the World War Adjusted Compensation Act, as amended (U. S. C., title 38, ch. 11), and the Adjusted Compensation Payment Act, 1936, as amended, shall not be considered. Except as provided in section 6 of Public Law No. 304, Seventy-fifth Congress, August 16, 1937 (U. S. C., title 38, sec. 472d), compensation authorized by this act shall not be payable effective prior to the receipt of application therefor in the Veterans' Administration; and in no event shall compensation herein authorized be effective prior to the date of enactment of this act."

"Sec. 2. Section 2 of Public Law No. 484, Seventy-third Congress, as amended (U. S. C., title 38, sec. 504), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 2. (a) The monthly rates of compensation shall be as follows: Widow but no child, $30; widow with one child, $38 (with $4 for each additional child); no widow but one child, $15; no widow but two children, $22 (equally divided); no widow but three children, $30 (equally divided) (with $3 for each additional child; total amount to be equally divided).

"(b) The total compensation payable under this section shall not exceed $64. Where such benefits would otherwise exceed $64, the amount of $64 may be apportioned as the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs may prescribe."

"Sec. 3. Section 4 of Public Law No. 484, Seventy-third Congress, June 28, 1934, as amended (U. S. C., title 38, sec. 506), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 4. For the purpose of awarding compensation under the provisions of this act, as amended, service connection of a disability at the date of death, and degree thereof where required, may be determined in any case where a claim has been or is filed by the widow, child, or children of a deceased World War veteran. Proof of disability at the date of death, and degree thereof where required, and evidence as to service connection, may be filed at any time after the date of enactment of this act or the date of death. Evidence required in connection with any claim must be submitted in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs."

"Sec. 4. In the administration of laws pertaining to veterans, retired officers, and enlisted men of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard, who served honorably during a war period as recognized by the Veterans' Administration, shall be, and are, entitled to hospitalization and domiciliary care in Veterans' Administration facilities on parity with other war veterans and subject to those provisions of paragraph VI (A) of Veterans Regulation No. 6 (c), which provide for reduction of monetary benefits to veterans having neither wife, child, nor dependent parent while being furnished hospital treatment, institutional, or domiciliary care."

"Sec. 5. Effective on the 1st day of the month next following the date of enactment of this act, the rates of death compensation payable under the provisions of existing laws or veterans regulations to a surviving widow, child, or children, and/or dependent mother or father now on the rolls or hereafter to be placed on the rolls as the surviving widow, child, or children, and/or dependent mother or father of any World War veteran who died as the result of injury or disease incurred in or aggravated by active military or naval service in the World War, shall be as follows:

"Widow, age under 50 years, $38; widow, age 50 years or over, $45; widow with one child, $10 additional for such child up to 10 years of age, increased to $15 from age 10 (with $8 for each additional child up to 10 years of age, increased to $13 from age 10) (subject to apportionment regulations); no widow but one child, $20; no widow but two children, $33 (equally divided); no widow but three children, $46 (equally divided) (with $8 for each additional child, total amount to be equally divided); dependent mother or father, $45 (or both) $25 each. As to the widow, child, or children, the total compensation payable under this section shall not exceed $33. The amount of compensation herein authorized shall be paid in the event the monthly payment of compensation under Veterans Regulation No. 1 (g) and the monthly payment of yearly renewable term or automatic insurance does not aggregate or exceed the amount of compensation herein authorized."

"As to the surviving widow, child, or children, and/or dependent mother or father on the rolls on the date of enactment of this act, any increased award herein authorized shall be effective from the date of enactment of this act and in all other cases, except as provided in section 6 of Public Law No. 304, Seventy-fifth Congress, approved August 16, 1937, effective dates of awards shall be governed by the provisions of veterans regulations promulgated under Public Law No. 2, Seventy-third Congress, March 20, 1933."

"Sec. 6. Subparagraph (k) of paragraph II, part I, of Veterans Regulation No. 1 (a), promulgated under Public Law No. 2, Seventy-third Congress, March 20, 1933, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(k) If the disabled person, as the result of service-incurred disability, has suffered the anatomical loss or the loss of the use of only one foot, or one hand, or one eye, the rate of pension provided in part I, paragraph II (a) to (j), shall be increased by $35 per month."

"Sec. 7. On and after the date of enactment of this act, the rate of interest charged on any loan secured by a lien on United States Government life (converted) insurance shall not exceed 5 percent per annum."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object.

Mr. Speaker, I ask the gentleman from Mississippi why he believes we should not send this bill to conference? Many of the extremely helpful provisions of the House bill have been stricken out by the Senate, which I consider most deplorable, and I should like very much to know why the gentleman feels that the Senate amendment should be agreed to at this time. I should also like to know from the gentleman when the Congress is going to adjourn. If we are to be here all summer, we certainly will have time to send this bill to conference, and there will be no danger of not passing it over a Presidential veto. Personally, I feel we should stay in session all summer for many reasons.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I shall answer as many of the questions the gentleman from Massachusetts has asked as I can. As to when Congress will adjourn, I am entirely unable to state.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Has the gentleman asked the leaders?

Mr. RANKIN. I have not consulted the leaders as to when Congress will adjourn, because I have found in my years of service here that a guess on the part of the leaders is not worth much more than a guess on the part of the average Member at this stage of the game, so I think they would not know when we are going to adjourn any more than any one of the rest of us.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If the gentleman will permit an interruption, we have another matter that might take some minutes, and if this matter is going to consume some time, the Chair thinks it would be advisable to defer it for a while. The Chair will put the question. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a statement with reference to this adjournment, but I shall extend in the RECORD a statement showing just the changes that have been made, if it is desired.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. I think the gentleman should tell the House what changes the Senate has made. We are all interested in it.

Mr. RANKIN. Very well. In the first place, in the House bill we provided certain benefits for veterans who have service-connected disabilities of less than 10 percent, and also provided for taking care of their widows and orphans.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. That is the House provision?

Mr. RANKIN. Yes. The Senate struck out a part of that provision as it applied to veterans, but did not strike out the provision with reference to taking care of the widows and orphans of these men. So really we gained a large portion of the objective in that respect. We also provided for taking care of certain dependent parents. That was taken out. But since Congress is still in session and will be in session again in January, we thought it would be best to concur in the Senate amendments, and take those provisions up later.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Why is not the suggestion of the lady from Massachusetts [Mrs. ROGERS] a good one, that you send it to conference now?

Mr. RANKIN. To be frank with you, I discussed this matter with Members at the other end of the Capitol, and I doubt if we could get any changes made if we went to conference, and the Congress might adjourn and leave the bill hanging in conference. I would like to get it passed to the other end of the Avenue as soon as possible.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. The gentleman does not think Congress would adjourn and leave such an important piece of legislation as that hanging in the air?

Mr. RANKIN. They have done so.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I will not object, under the circumstances, Mr. Speaker, because at least we can surely secure some greatly needed legislation if we accept the conference report.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I will object. We have plenty of time to send the bill to conference.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

Mr. RANKIN. I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk H. R. 2296 and agree to the Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair suggests that the gentleman let that go over for the time being.

Mr. RANKIN. Very well, Mr. Speaker.

BRIDGE ACROSS OHIO RIVER NEAR SHAWNEETOWN, GALLATIN COUNTY, ILL.

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 4499) authorizing the county of Gallatin, State of Illinois, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Ohio River at or near the city of Shawneetown, Gallatin County, Ill., with a Senate amendment, and agree to the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the title of the bill and the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill and the Senate amendment, as follows:

Page 3, line 16, strike out "reasonable interest and", and insert "interest at a rate of not to exceed 5 percent and reasonable."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman from Illinois just what the change is?

Mr. PARSONS. The change made in the Senate was that a limitation was put upon the interest that the bonds might bear. The Senate put on a limitation of 5 percent. The House bill contained "reasonable interest."

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PARSONS. I yield.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, under reservation of objection, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair cannot recognize the gentleman for that purpose. A unanimous-consent request is pending.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Reserving the right to object—

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The regular order is demanded. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PARSONS]?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will not recognize any other Member to call up any bill until he recognizes the gentleman from Virginia to call up a resolution. The Chair will recognize Members for unanimous-consent requests that will not take any time.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and include therein a statement by William T. Faulkner in reference to the Binderup-Voorhis monetary-control bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a statement by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. McLEOD].

The Speaker pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.
There was no objection.

AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ADMINISTRATION

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The Speaker pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.
There was no objection.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I have just submitted a resolution to investigate certain phases of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

In submitting this resolution for a special committee to investigate the political or other activities of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration I am impelled to this action by the publication of evidence showing that in some instances county agents have been engaged in extra-official activities, such as membership campaigns for specific farm organizations.

The Daily News, published in Washington, D. C., disclosed that in Perry County, Ala., a county farm agent through whose office some $254,000 in benefit payments is currently being distributed had mailed to the farmers in his county, in franked envelopes of the United States Agricultural Department, letters pointing out that since 1933 a total of $1,523,780 in Agricultural Adjustment Administration payments had been distributed in Perry County, and adding:

There is only one way to continue to receive these payments; it is through membership in an organization which is strong enough to tell Congress what you want.

There followed in this letter aggressive and pointed suggestions that each of those receiving farm benefits join a particular farm organization.

There can be but one meaning attached to the paragraph I have just quoted from this letter, and that is to build up a pressure group by means of funds voted by this Congress for the benefit of the farmers, a pressure group sufficiently strong to bring additional pressure to bear on this Congress to exact still further funds.

Not only was this done in Perry County, Ala., but it later developed that a similar letter was sent out, also in franked envelopes of the United States Department of Agriculture, by a county agent in Mississippi, pointedly suggesting to agricultural beneficiaries the desirability of their joining a specifically named farm organization.

Although reprimand was promised by the officials of the Agriculture Department, it was pointed out by the Secretary of Agriculture that he had no power to hire or dismiss these county agents, and comparatively little interest has been shown in these disclosures beyond the statement that the officials superior to the Alabama county agent were sure that these agents would not repeat the offense.

We are without any information, Mr. Speaker, as to whether or not the use of franked envelopes for this purpose was penalized, although the Post Office Department was reported as saying that the county agent involved would have to pay the postage for these letters. Whether the county agent did so pay, or whether, if 3-cent postage was paid, it was paid out of his own pocket or out of Government-State funds, is also undisclosed.

These two are not the only instances of activities within the Agricultural Adjustment Administration which indicate dangerous extra-official activities being carried on with Government funds.

In a form—which I am told is very difficult to secure—there is disclosed another angle of this situation.

The form I refer to is entitled "Form RR 13, Field Copy. Michigan Rural Rehabilitation Corporation. Farm Management Plan." On page 12 of that application is a paragraph in which the recipient agrees not to waive his rights or in any other manner give title to any livestock, tool, or any other properties furnished, rented, sold, or leased to him by the Michigan Rural Rehabilitation Corporation. After the usual provisions in the paragraph to protect the property covered by the mortgage, there occurs this final sentence:

I agree that at any time prior to the final liquidation of my loan from the Michigan Rural Rehabilitation Corporation to do nothing that is in opposition to the A. A. A. program.

[Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, it is reasonable to presume that these specific instances are merely indicative of what may be a widespread condition and activity. To remedy these isolated instances is merely to treat symptoms—symptoms of a condition wholly dangerous to free government, to personal liberty, and to the proper disposition of the taxpayers' money appropriated by this Congress for specific purposes.

I am convinced that this whole situation requires, in the public interest, a thorough and unprejudiced investigation not only in order that Congress may be advised how extensive such extra-official or political activities are and how long they have been going on, but also in order that Congress may in the most intelligent and efficient way possible adopt such remedial measures as may be found wise and necessary in the premise.

PERMISSION TO FILE MINORITY VIEWS

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I and other members of the Committee on Military Affairs may be permitted to file minority views on the bill (H. R. 4723) to correct the military record of Oberlin M. Carter, formerly captain, Corps of Engineers, United States Army, to show that the judgment of court martial in his case is unlawful and invalid.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it. Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Is it the purpose of the Chair to recognize Members to address the House for 1 minute upon our return from the Senate?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Yes; that is correct.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CARLSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a speech on the John Ericson Memorial.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. THORKELOSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I did not hear the gentleman's request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Montana asked unanimous consent to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. SABATH. Are they his own remarks?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair must take the word of Members, and that is what the gentleman asks.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I do not want to object to anything the gentleman may wish to put in as his own remarks, but I have it on good authority that he is cluttering up the RECORD with things that have been furnished to him and are being furnished to him by others; things that are unfit and unjustified to be printed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLAND].

THE LATE HON. CLAUDE A. SWANSON

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, it is my painful duty to inform the House of the death on July 7, 1939, at Rapidan Camp, Va., of the Honorable Claude A. Swanson, Secretary of the Navy in the Cabinet of President Roosevelt.

From March 4, 1893, until his resignation, effective January 30, 1906, to assume his duties as Governor of Virginia, to which he had been elected in November 1905, Secretary Swanson was a distinguished Member of this House, and occupied a leading place in its councils. He served as Governor of Virginia from the beginning of his term in February 1906 until the expiration of that term in 1910.

Under the Constitution of Virginia, the Governor cannot succeed himself; but soon after his term expired, the death of Virginia's senior Senator, Hon. John W. Daniel, of Lynchburg, Va., left a vacancy and Mr. Swanson was appointed on August 1, 1910, to fill out the unexpired term of Senator Daniel, which expired March 3, 1911. He was again appointed February 28, 1911, and subsequently elected to succeed Senator Daniel.

Senator Swanson served in the Senate of the United States until March 4, 1933.

From December 6, 1910, to March 4, 1933, Senator Swanson served in the Senate, and from March 4, 1933, until his death he served as Secretary of the Navy.

For 46 years and 4 months, with but slight intermission, Secretary Swanson was in public life. No man in public life was more beloved than he. His State felt for him a devotion it is impossible to express. His intelligence, zeal, fidelity, devotion, cordiality, and charm endeared him to every citizen of the Commonwealth until his name was a household word, and he was always welcome as a personal friend at every public gathering, in every home, and at every fireside.

The Nation learned to love him as did his native State, and the news that he has passed away causes universal and inexpressible grief.

As Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Swanson brought to the performance of his duties expert knowledge gathered from his service in the Senate, an intimate acquaintance with those with whom he was called to work, an intense patriotism based upon an unfaltering conviction that the safety of the Nation rested primarily in the Navy, and a sincere love of peace for the United States which he believed could be best assured by a strong navy. A summary of that service will appear in the RECORD later.

The Nation and Virginia have lost an illustrious patriot, a zealous, devoted, and efficient servant, and a statesman of the first order.

Secretary Swanson's life was filled with great service for his State and Nation, and he will ever rank as one of the ablest of the Secretaries of the Navy the Nation has ever had, and one of the most useful Senators who has ever represented the State of Virginia in the Halls of Congress.

Every member of the Virginia delegation feels a personal loss. I mourn the passing of a devoted personal friend.

Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution, and pending that I yield to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. DREWRY].

Mr. DREWRY. Mr. Speaker, the House has just received the sad announcement of the passing of a former able, distinguished, and beloved Member of this body, Hon. Claude A. Swanson. I appreciate your willingness to halt long enough in your daily labor to permit me to take this occasion to briefly refer to his labors in behalf of his country.

Starting his career as a farmer boy in his native State, Virginia, he rose successively, by hard work and ability, to become a Member of the House of Representatives, Governor of Virginia, a Member of the Senate of the United States, and Secretary of the Navy—12 years as a Member of this body, one term of 4 years as Governor of Virginia, 23 years in the United States Senate, and 6 years as Secretary of the United States Navy. He entered the House at the age of 31 and he lived to be 77—46 years in the service of his State and Nation.

Not many men in the history of our country have had such a long continuous period of service and few men can point to a record of greater constructive achievement. In his first term in the House he became a member of the Ways and Means Committee and was one of the leaders of his party. As Governor of Virginia, his foresight, good judgment, and ability pushed forward the development of the State in a remarkable series of financial, educational, and social progressive measures. As Senator his work and long experience gave him a prominent place in the shaping of legislative policies for which he is still remembered. It seems rather strange, however, that in all his legislative activities this farmer boy, born in the rolling hills of the Piedmont section, far from the sea, should have as his great desire the upbuilding of the United States Navy. Some hereditary influence, probably, which caused him to bend his energies to the greater development of the Naval Establishment. His long activity in the Senate in behalf of the Navy and his work as Secretary of the Navy, if he had done nothing else in life, would have memorialized him as a great American. Today when the troubled waters of the world presage a storm, the Nation is in a position of greater security because the Navy—the first line of defense—is ready for any eventuality. For his service to his country the people of the Nation honor him; for his unswerving integrity in his public trusts they admire and respect him; for his great-heartedness and many acts of loving kindness to his fellow beings he is beloved. We, who knew Claude Swanson, loved him, and we know that the world is better for his having lived in it. He has gone, but we feel that what may seem to us to be but sad funeral tapers are in reality "heaven's distant lamps."

Sophocles said:

There is an ancient saying, famous among men, that thou shouldst not judge fully a man's life before he dieth, whether it should be called blest or wretched.

He is dead. The people of his country have read the scroll of his life as it unrolled before them. It is their verdict that the life of Claude Swanson should be called "blest." In that verdict, as the Nation goes on to its destiny, those who come after us will the more agree and his name will be recorded on the Nation's tablets along with other great Virginians who have helped to make this country blessed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 246

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow and deep regret the announcement of the death of Hon. Claude A. Swanson, late the Secretary of the Navy, and formerly a Senator and Representative in Congress from the State of Virginia.

Resolved, That a committee of 16 Members be appointed on the part of the House to join with the committee appointed on the part of the Senate to attend the funeral.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

The resolution was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair appoints as members of the committee on the part of the House to join the committee appointed on the part of the Senate to attend the funeral the following Members of the House: Mr. BLAND, Mr. DREWRY, Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia, Mr. BURCH, Mr. FLANNAGAN, Mr. SMITH of Virginia, Mr. ROBERTSON, Mr. DARDEN, Mr. SATTERFIELD, Mr. VINSON of Georgia, Mr. SCHUETZ, Mr. SUTPHIN, Mr. SHANNON, Mr. MAAS, Mr. CHURCH, and Mr. MOTT.

Mr. DREWRY. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

House Resolution 247

Resolved, That the House of Representatives accepts the invitation of the Senate to attend the funeral services of the late Hon. Claude A. Swanson to be held in the Senate Chamber Monday, July 10, 1939, at 1 o'clock p. m., and that the committee appointed by the Speaker of the House to attend the funeral shall act in conjunction with the committee of the Senate to make the necessary arrangements.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate.

The resolution was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The House will stand in recess until 12:45 p. m., and then the Members will proceed to the Senate Chamber.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Do I understand the District of Columbia calendar will be called following the funeral services in the Senate?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is correct.

The House will stand in recess until 12:45 p. m., at which time the Members will proceed to the Senate Chamber.

Accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 35 minutes p. m.) the House stood in recess until 12:45 p. m.

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore at 12:45 p. m.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to resolution previously adopted, the Chair will take his place at the head of the column, preceded by the Sergeant at Arms and the committee, and proceed to the Senate Chamber.

Thereupon the Members of the House, preceded by the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. RAYBURN], proceeded to the Senate Chamber.

At 1:36 p. m. the Members of the House returned to their Chamber and were called to order by the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. RAYBURN].

FELICITATIONS FROM THE CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES OF CHILE

The Chair laid before the House the following communication, which was read:

SANTIAGO, July 4, 1939.

To the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States of North America, Washington, D. C.:

The Chamber of Deputies of Chile, on the anniversary of the Declaration of the Independence of the United States of North America, resolved to send salutations to the House of Representatives of that country and hope for the rapprochement and solidarity of the countries of the American continent. In transmitting this message I beg to express my sincere wishes for your personal happiness.

GREGORIO AMUNATEGUI, Speaker.
JUAN VILLAMIL, Clerk.

THE LATE GEN. EDWARD L. LOGAN

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House briefly.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK]?

There was no objection.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, the Members of the House of Representatives have just joined with the Members of the United States Senate in attending the funeral services and in paying our respect to a great American, one of our outstanding statesmen and citizens, the late Secretary of the Navy, Hon. Claude A. Swanson.

Today, in the city of Boston, another great American, Gen. Edward L. Logan, has been laid to rest. His death is a great loss to the Nation and the Commonwealth that he so loved and served, as well as to his family and to his many friends and admirers. To me his death is a personal loss.

General Logan was a courageous soldier, an outstanding legislator, and a brilliant and kind jurist.

As a soldier, as a young man he served with honor and distinction in the Spanish-American War with the famous Ninth Massachusetts Regiment, serving under the leadership of his late father, Gen. Lawrence J. Logan, who was also a famous soldier and an outstanding citizen.

At the time of his enlistment for service in the Spanish-American War he was a student at Harvard College, returning to Harvard College to complete his law studies upon the termination of the Spanish-American War.

In 1916 General Logan commanded the old Ninth Massachusetts Regiment on the Mexican Border, and when the United States entered the World War he became the first colonel of the famous One Hundred and First Infantry Regiment of the Twenty-sixth Division—Yankee Division—serving in the campaign of the Marne, Aisne-Marne, St. Mihiel, Meuse-Argonne, receiving the Silver Star citation and other citations for his brilliant and gallant leadership. He was one of the outstanding soldiers and officers of the World War.

Upon the reorganization of the Massachusetts National Guard in 1920 he was again made colonel of the One Hundred and First Infantry Regiment and was later appointed by the late President Calvin Coolidge—then Governor of Massachusetts—as brigadier general of the Fifty-first Infantry Brigade. Two years later he was commissioned a major general.

On March 21, 1928, after having had 31 years' service in the National Guard of Massachusetts, General Logan was retired with the rank of lieutenant general, the first man in the National Guard history to hold that high rank. At that time, upon his retirement with the rank of lieutenant general, he declined, with his usual modesty, the rank of a full general.

Everyone who served with and under General Logan entertain for him the greatest feeling of confidence, of respect, and of devotion. Always exacting discipline and devotion to duty from his men, he received their unreserved cooperation because those who served under him knew he would always see that they "got a square deal." Fighting for the welfare of his men was a pleasure to General Logan which some of the Regular Army officers did not like but which received for General Logan the support, the approval, and the commendation of the American public. When General Logan was recommended for gallantry, his answer was "the real credit is due to the men who served under me."

In 1899, while a student at Harvard Law School, General Logan was elected to the legislative body of the city of Boston, and was reelected in 1900. In 1901 and 1902 he served as a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives. He then retired from politics to practice law, but in 1905 he was again urged to reenter politics, which he did, resulting in an overwhelming election to the Massachusetts State Senate, in which body he served during a part of 1906. During that year a vacancy occurred, by death, in the Governor's Executive Council, and General Logan was elected by his colleagues of the Massachusetts Senate to fill that vacancy.

In his elective positions, General Logan performed his duties in an outstanding manner.

In 1907 he was appointed associate justice of the South Boston municipal court, and 7 years later he was named presiding justice of the same court by Gov. David I. Walsh, now United States Senator, serving in that important position until the time of his death.

General Logan loved the people of South Boston, his judicial district, in which he was born and which he served so faithfully as a legislator and as a jurist, refusing other judicial appointments and to aspire, as urged frequently, to become a candidate for high public office, due to his belief, which he often expressed to me, that he "could render greater public service in the position of presiding judge of the South Boston municipal court than in any other position."

His career as a jurist is outstanding in his humane consideration of the problems of those who came before him to have the facts of their cases judged and determined.

On May 7, 1919, General Logan was mustered out of active World War service. Shortly thereafter he took a leading part in the organization of the American Legion, and at the first Massachusetts State convention, he was the unanimous choice for the first commander of the Massachusetts department. His interest in Legion and veteran affairs ceased only with his death.

In 1923 he was elected president of the National Guard Association of the United States.

In addition to his active military, legislative, and judicial career, General Logan gave untiringly of his capacity and time to other public activities, serving upon many unpaid commissions, and at the time of his death he was serving upon an unpaid commission, created by the Massachusetts Legislature, to study the solution of the street-railway problem of the city of Boston. In addition, he always responded for service in charitable and other fields of private and public activity, to relieve human suffering and distress.

His life has been a remarkable one. It is an example for all Americans to follow. In time of war and in time of peace, he was always at the beck and call of his country and his Commonwealth.

One of the Boston newspapers recently summarized his great career in a few words:

Lieutenant General Logan, in addition to being one of the great soldiers of the World War as commander of the One Hundred and First Regiment of the Yankee Division, was also possessor of a record of public service unsurpassed in Boston and the State.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentlewoman from Massachusetts.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. General Logan was admired and beloved by everyone in the State of Massachusetts and by those all over the country who knew him during the World War. He was a very fine, brilliant soldier, as well as an able jurist. No one could have had a better friend.

Mr. McCORMACK. I thank the gentlewoman from Massachusetts. I know the late General Logan entertained the finest feeling and friendship for the gentlewoman from Massachusetts.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, in the passing of Lt. Gen. Edward L. Logan, wartime colonel of the One Hundred and First Infantry, Twenty-sixth Division, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts has lost a great soldier, an able jurist, and a splendid citizen.

His military record was most outstanding. He was the son of a famous soldier; his father, Gen. Laurence J. Logan, having been colonel of the "Fighting Ninth," which later became the One Hundred and First Infantry. While a student at Harvard University, the son left his studies temporarily to serve with his father's regiment in the Spanish-American War. He was mustered out of this service as sergeant major November 26, 1898. He returned to the regiment in 1901 as a second lieutenant and received promotions to first lieutenant, captain, and major, until he was placed in command as colonel while in the Mexican border service in 1916.

When war with Germany was declared by the United States he became colonel of the One Hundred and First Infantry, Twenty-sixth Division, and saw active front-line service in the Champagne-Marne defensive, the Chateau-Thierry offensive, the Toul sector, the St. Mihiel offensive, and the Battle of the Argonne. For gallantry in action he was awarded a Silver Star citation on July 25, 1918. After the war the Massachusetts National Guard was reorganized and he again became colonel of the One Hundred and First Infantry. Later he was commissioned brigadier general of the Fifty-first Infantry Brigade, and was promoted to major general in command of the Twenty-sixth Division, Massachusetts National Guard. He was retired on March 21, 1928, with the rank of lieutenant general.

To his men he was always "Colonel Eddie." He was the sort of commanding officer who had the full loyalty and devotion of those serving under him. The greater portion of his regiment during the World War came from Boston and the surrounding towns and was made up of men whom he had seen grow up from childhood. Their comfort and their safety was his personal interest. The late "Billy" Connery served under him, as did our colleague, LAWRENCE J. CONNERY. They have told me of the great human qualities General Logan had, qualities which created a personal bond between him and his men.

The city of Boston and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts had good reason to be proud of him. He was an outstanding citizen, not only in military life but in his civil duties. As a presiding judge of a district court for 25 years he became noted for his fairness and justice in dealing with delinquents. He brought to the bench the same interest and concern which he felt for his men in military life.

Many honors were showered upon him, but he always remained the good friend and loyal comrade which had made him so loved and respected by those with whom he served on the battlefields of France. All who knew him feel sad over his passing. Massachusetts will miss him greatly. To his widow and family goes the deep sympathy of all his friends.

CONSTRUCTION OF BRIDGE ACROSS OHIO RIVER NEAR SHAWNEETOWN, ILL.

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 4499) authorizing the county of Gallatin, State of Illinois, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Ohio River at or near the city of Shawneetown, Gallatin County, Ill., with Senate amendment thereto, and to concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Page 3, line 16, strike out "reasonable interest and" and insert "interest at a rate of not to exceed 5 percent and reasonable."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PARSONS]?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was concurred in, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN]?

There was no objection.

NEW DEAL ADMINISTRATOR SEEKS TO DESTROY OR CONTROL WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS OF THIS COUNTRY

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Speaker, I take this time to call attention to a ruling that has been made by the Wage and Hour Division of the Federal Government. In an attempt of the New Deal to secure control of or to destroy the free press in this country, the Wage-Hour Administrator has issued a ruling which takes away the exemption from more than 8,000 weekly country newspapers that were exempted in the wage-hour law passed by the Congress last year.

The Wage-Hour Administrator has ruled that if any of these small weekly country newspapers with a circulation of 3,000 or less engage in job printing, a part of which may go into interstate commerce, the exemption will not apply. This means that every weekly newspaper in the country, numbering from eight to ten thousand, will lose their exemption under this ruling.

It is an outrage that we have an administration in Washington seeking to destroy the press and seeking to set aside the intent of Congress, which definitely had in mind complete exemption for all country weekly newspapers in this class, in every respect. Something should be done about it by this Congress in the way of amending the wage and hour law to take away the authority of the Administrator to destroy the rights of the American people. [Applause.]

This ruling of the Wage and Hour Administrator comes without notice or hearing. For him to deliberately set aside a clear and definite legislative intent on the part of Congress may be plainly termed as a bureaucratic "steal" of the rawest character.

Congress clearly intended, and so stated in the law, that weekly newspapers having a circulation of less than 3,000 subscribers were to be exempt from the provisions of the Wage and Hour Act. Members of Congress realized the low and limited income of country-weekly newspapers and therefore provided the exemption for the weekly newspaper plant as a complete printing unit, so that this type of American free press might continue in its historic function of building a better America for the preservation of our traditional democracy.

If the Wage and Hour Administrator does not rescind his ruling, a large percentage of the country-weekly press will be forced out of business because of inability to meet the additional financial obligations. The inevitable result will be closing down of printing plants, throwing thousands of faithful employees out of work and the taking away from hundreds of small American cities and villages their community builder—the country-weekly newspaper.

Does Administrator Andrews intend to "crack down" on all country-weekly newspapers? They are all in the same class—getting out a weekly paper and doing job printing. Or does he intend to only punish and penalize the weekly newspapers which are now opposed to the policies of the New Deal? Can it be possible that he now wants to use his arbitrary authority by making an illegal and unfounded ruling in order to whip eight or ten thousand weekly newspapers into line for future political purposes? Does he intend, by his ruling, to control or destroy the country press? His agents are now "cracking down" on a small weekly newspaper in Minnesota. Will you be the next, Mr. Editor?

Interpretations of laws should be made according to the intent of Congress and not according to the ideas of a Washington bureaucrat whose sole aim may be to secure more power.

The ruling of the Administrator as to country weeklies should be rescinded immediately; and if this is not done, Congress should act at once to take away from him all discretionary power to make interpretations of any law placed under his jurisdiction.

It is not my purpose at this time to argue the merits of the wage and hour law or any other social or economic act. I do, however, feel it my duty to call to the attention of Congress the attempt now being made by the Administrator to control or destroy the weekly press of this country by bureaucratic ruling contrary to the intent of Congress. [Applause.]

AMENDMENT OF BANKRUPTCY ACT

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 5407) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and without objection, appoints the following conferees: Mr. CHANDLER, Mr. McLAUGHLIN, and Mr. MICHENER.

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, on the front page of a recent issue of the Christian Science Monitor there appears an article written from Llanelly, Wales, which shows that the youth of that little country agree with the youth of our great country in their opposition to war. Just recently 5,000 of them from all parts of their country assembled in their annual Eisteddfod to engage in literary, musical, and kindred cultural contests. At the close of their 3-day session they broadcast the following message to the youth of the world:

This is Wales calling! The boys and girls of Wales are calling the boys and girls of all the world!

We rejoice to think that, above the tumult, on this one day of the year, we can greet each other as members of one great family, the family of the nations of the future.

The world is full of suffering, cruelty, and strife, and we are told civilization may perish. Let us tell the world that civilization shall not perish.

More than ever the world needs what we alone can give—the confidence and comradeship of youth.

May we then, on this good-will day, dedicate ourselves afresh to the services of our fellows in ever-widening circles, to the services of our home, of our neighborhood, of our country, so that our country may better serve the world to which we all belong?

So shall we, millions of us, grow up to be the friends of all and the enemies of none.

[Applause.]

THE LATE NEWTON W. GILBERT

Mr. GILLIE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. GILLIE. Mr. Speaker, Indiana—mother of authors, patriots, and statesmen—has taken unto her fertile soil another distinguished Hoosier, the Honorable Newton W. Gilbert, former Member of Congress from the old Twelfth Indiana District and one time acting Governor General of the Philippine Islands.

As Congressman from the district in northeastern Indiana which Mr. Gilbert so ably represented some 25 years ago, I rise to recount in my humble way and in a few words something of the life and service of this beloved Hoosier.

Mr. Gilbert departed this life in Orange, Calif., on July 5, 1939, at the age of 77 years, leaving behind him a host of friends and political acquaintances. He was tenderly laid to rest today in Angola, Ind., scene of his earlier political triumphs.

Newton W. Gilbert was an adopted son of Indiana. He was born in Worthington, Ohio, attended my alma mater, the Ohio State University, and began the practice of law in 1895 and in 1896 was elected to the Indiana State Senate, where he served for 4 years. Two years later he won appointment as Steuben County surveyor.

In 1904 he was a candidate for Lieutenant Governor on the Republican ticket headed by the late Winfield T. Durbin. He was elected in the second McKinley triumph and was second ranking officer of the State until 1905.

In 1904 he was elected to the Fifty-ninth Congress from the Twelfth Indiana District in the heart of the lumberlost country, which since has become the Fourth District. He served in this august body until 1906, when he resigned to become judge of the Court of First Instance in Manila, P. I.

From 1906 until 1913 Mr. Gilbert remained in the Philippines, serving at various times as a member of the Philippine Commission, secretary of public instruction, and president of the board of regents of Philippine University.

In 1909 he began a term as Vice Governor of the Philippines, and in 1912 and 1913 he was Acting Governor General of the islands.

After turning over the executive functions to his successor, Governor Gilbert took three trips around the world, and in 1916 he established himself in the practice of law in New York City.

Such was the remarkable career of this man who became Steuben County's most distinguished political figure and who brought honor and glory to the great Hoosier State.

Distinguished by devotion to duty, mastery of details, a friendly manner, and the respect in which he was held by political friend and foe alike, Newton W. Gilbert belongs to that company of outstanding Hoosiers who have risen to posts of prestige and power.

Mr. Speaker, it can well be said of him that he was a—

Statesman, yet a friend of truth. Of soul sincere,
In action faithful, and in honor clear;
Who broke no promise, served no private ends.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that at the close of the legislative program of today I may be permitted to address the House for 20 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and include therein a very brief editorial.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and include certain excerpts.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend the remarks I made with reference to the late General Logan, of Massachusetts.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.
Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I was present on the day the present occupant of the chair made a certain request, and we adopted tentatively a rule with regard to extending remarks in the Record. I have received a good many requests to explain this rule, but I am not able to explain definitely just what we did at that time. Would it be appropriate for the Chair to give me at this time a brief explanation of that rule? I may say specifically that I hold in my hand a brief article that I should like to start to read after getting permission to address the House for 1 minute, but I am not sure that it would be appropriate to do so. If it is not appropriate, of course, I shall wish to ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Record of June 10, at pages 6949 and 6950 covers this matter fully. I believe the conclusion reached by all on that day was approximately this, that if 1-minute speeches are made before the legislative program of the day is taken up, and permission is given to revise and extend those remarks, such speeches are to go in the Appendix of the Record. However, if during the consideration of a bill a Member should speak for 1 minute or 5 minutes, and if his extension of remarks is germane to the matter under consideration his remarks would go in the Record at that point.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Further, my understanding is that if a Member should receive permission to extend remarks made during the consideration of a bill and the remarks so extended were not germane, it would not be proper for him to extend his remarks at that point.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is correct, and that was the conclusion that I believe was reached by all in the colloquy we had on June 10.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I believe such a rule is entirely proper.

Mr. Speaker, I now ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. IGLESIAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record with reference to legislation pertaining to Puerto Rico.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Commissioner from Puerto Rico?

There was no objection.

ANNUAL AND SICK LEAVE WITH PAY TO SUBSTITUTES IN THE POSTAL SERVICE

Mr. ROMJUE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 5479) granting annual and sick leave with pay to substitutes in the Postal Service, with Senate amendments thereto, and concur in the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

After line 10, insert:

"Sec. 2. No substitute shall be entitled to sick leave for an illness or disability incurred while such substitute is not on active duty or on annual leave."

After line 10, insert:

"Sec. 3. In no event shall a substitute employee be granted more than 15 days' annual and 10 days' sick leave allowed by existing law to regular employees."

After line 10, insert:

"Sec. 4. No substitute shall be entitled to the benefits of this act until he has served 2,448 hours."

Line 11, strike out "2" and insert "5."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, as I understand, this is a bill that is supposed to take care of a worthy group of employees who have been rather neglected in the past.

Mr. ROMJUE. That is correct.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. How do these Senate amendments affect the legislation?

Mr. ROMJUE. The first two Senate amendments are merely clarifying amendments. I believe the bill really covered those matters before. However, the last amendment requires the substitute to work a full year before being entitled to this benefit in the way of sick leave.

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. SWEENEY. May I say to the gentleman that the bill came out of the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads by a unanimous vote. These amendments strengthen the bill. Most of the great postal organizations want this correction made because a large group of men who have been working for years have been deprived of annual and sick leave. To obtain the benefits under this bill these men have to qualify and put in 2,448 hours.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. This is a progressive step for a group of postal employees?

Mr. SWEENEY. This is a progressive move for those employees.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendments were concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that after the disposition of matters on the Speaker's desk and the legislative program of the day, I may address the House for 20 minutes on next Thursday.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA DAY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. This is District of Columbia day. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. RANDOLPH].

REGISTRATION OF MOTOR VEHICLES IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (S. 1575) to provide that the annual registration of motor vehicles in the District of Columbia shall be for the period from April 1 in each year to March 31 in the succeeding year, and ask unanimous consent that it may be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That paragraph (c) of section 2 of title IV of the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(c) Every registration made under this title shall expire at midnight on the last day of the registration year for which the registration was made, unless the time be extended by the Commissioners. Any such registration may be renewed for the ensuing registration year upon application made by the owner during the months of February and March, and upon payment of the fees required by law. During the month of March it shall be lawful to operate a motor vehicle registered for the ensuing registration year. For the purposes of this title, a registration year shall be deemed to begin on April 1 and end on March 31: Provided, That motor vehicles that may have been registered for the period ending February 29, 1940, shall be deemed to be registered for the registration year ending March 31, 1940."

Sec. 2. Paragraph (c) of section 3 of such title, as amended, is amended by striking out "September" and inserting in lieu thereof "October."

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. RANDOLPH: On page 1, after the word "vehicles" in line 1 of the title, insert the following: "and the annual licensing of certain public vehicles."

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, the amendment would make the license period of public vehicles conform with the registration period that is proposed, and I may say in this connection that the measure changes the date for registration of motor vehicles in the District of Columbia from March 1 to April 1, so that it will conform with the laws in effect in the adjoining States and avoid a certain amount of confusion.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANDOLPH. I yield.

Mr. CARTER. At what time does this measure become effective?

Mr. RANDOLPH. Next year.

Mr. CARTER. Does it become effective on the first of the year or on the first of April? What are you going to do with respect to the period from the first of the year to the first of April?

Mr. RANDOLPH. Does the gentleman mean from the 1st of March to the 1st of April?

Mr. CARTER. Does it provide for a year from the first of April to the last of March?

Mr. RANDOLPH. That is right.

Mr. CARTER. I am wondering what the people of the District who own automobiles are going to do in January of next year.

Mr. RANDOLPH. The month is March, and not January, I may say. And the automobiles now registered shall be deemed to be registered for the year ending March 31, 1940.

Mr. CARTER. Their present licenses expire in January, do they not?

Mr. RANDOLPH. No; on March 1.

Mr. CARTER. Just what does this bill do?

Mr. RANDOLPH. It extends it from March to April to coincide with the practice in the adjoining States.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I offer a further amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. RANDOLPH: Page 2, line 11, after section 2, insert the following:

"Sec. 3. That subparagraphs (c) and (d) of paragraph 31 and paragraph 33 of an act entitled 'An act to amend section 7 of an act entitled "An act making appropriations to provide for the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, and for other purposes," approved July 1, 1902, and other purposes,' approved July 1, 1932, are amended to read as follows:

"(c) Owners of passenger vehicles for hire having a seating capacity of eight passengers or more, in addition to the driver or operator, other than those licensed in the preceding subparagraph, shall pay a license tax of $100 per annum for each vehicle used. No such vehicle shall be operated unless there shall be conspicuously displayed therein a license issued under the terms of this subparagraph. Licenses issued under this subparagraph shall date from April 1 of each year, but may be issued on or after March 15 of such year: Provided, however, That all licenses issued for a period prior to April 1, 1940, shall expire on March 31, 1940, and the license fee therefor shall be prorated accordingly.

"(d) Owners of passenger vehicles for hire, whether operated from a private establishment or from public space, other than those licensed in the two preceding subparagraphs, shall pay a license tax of $25 per annum for each such vehicle used in the conduct of their business. Stands for such vehicles upon public space, adjacent to hotels or otherwise, may be established in the manner provided in section 6 (e) of the act entitled "An act to amend the acts approved March 3, 1925, and July 3, 1926, known as the District of Columbia Traffic Acts, and so forth." The Public Utilities Commission is hereby authorized to make and enforce all such reasonable and usual police regulations as it may deem necessary for the proper conduct, control, and regulation of all vehicles described in this and the preceding subparagraphs and paragraph 33 hereof. Licenses issued under this subparagraph shall date from April 1 of each year, but may be issued on or after March 15 of such year: Provided, however, That all licenses issued for a period prior to April 1, 1940, shall expire on March 31, 1940, and the license fee therefor shall be prorated accordingly.

"Par. 33. Owners of vehicles for hire used in hauling goods, wares, or merchandise, and operating from public space, shall pay a license tax of $25 per annum for each vehicle. Stands for such vehicles upon public space may be established in the manner provided in section 6 (e) of the act entitled "An act to amend the acts approved March 3, 1925, and July 3, 1926, known as the District of Columbia Traffic Acts, and so forth." Licenses issued under this subparagraph shall date from April 1 of each year, but may be issued on or after March 15 of such year: Provided, however, That all licenses issued for a period prior to April 1, 1940, shall expire on March 31, 1940, and the license fee therefor shall be prorated accordingly.

"Sec. 4. That an act entitled 'An act to amend paragraphs 31 and 33 of an act entitled 'An act to amend section 7 of an act entitled 'An act making appropriations to provide for the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, and for other purposes,' approved July 1, 1902, and for other purposes,' approved July 1, 1932' (Public, No. 24, 76th Cong.), approved April 5, 1939, is hereby repealed."

The amendment was agreed to.

The previous question was ordered.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

REGULATING THE PRACTICE OF OPTOMETRY, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H. R. 5238) to regulate the practice of optometry in the District of Columbia and ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from West Virginia calls up the bill H. R. 5238 and asks unanimous consent that it be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. Evidently there is not a quorum present.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 121]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Three hundred and twenty-five Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5238) to regulate the practice of optometry in the District of Columbia. Pending that motion, I ask unanimous consent that the time for general debate be limited to 30 minutes, 15 minutes on a side, one-half to be controlled by myself and one-half by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from West Virginia moves that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 5238. Pending that, he asks unanimous consent that general debate be limited to 30 minutes, 15 minutes on a side, one half to be controlled by himself and the other half by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN]. In there objection?

Mr. LANHAM. I object.

Mr. RUTHERFORD. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from West Virginia that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 5238.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Minnesota demands the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 101, nays 207, not voting 121, as follows:

LIMITING NUMBER OF PUBLIC VEHICLES IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H. R. 6477) to authorize and empower the Public Utility Commission of the District of Columbia to limit the number of public vehicles to be licensed and operated as taxicabs in the District of Columbia, and to limit the number of taxicab drivers' licenses to be issued; and I ask unanimous consent that the same be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House—

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state the point of order.

Mr. PATMAN. I make the point of order, Mr. Speaker, that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Two hundred and thirty Members are present, a quorum.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 6477, and, pending that motion, I ask unanimous consent that the time for debate be limited to 30 minutes, 15 minutes to be controlled by myself and 15 minutes by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I hope the gentleman will let me have about 15 minutes. I am opposed to the bill. At one time I was a member of this committee, and I believe I know what the object is in getting this bill passed. I would like to oppose it. I would like some time in which to do it.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I would modify the request to make it 40 minutes, 20 minutes on each side, the time to be equally controlled by the gentleman from Illinois and myself?

Mr. PATMAN. How much time would I have?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I could not tell—

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. The regular order, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from West Virginia that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 6477.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. PATMAN) there were—ayes 36, noes 80.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that there is no quorum present, and I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Two hundred and twenty-three Members are present, a quorum.

So the motion was rejected.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair thinks he should recognize the gentleman from West Virginia, chairman of the committee, as this is District Day and the gentleman is in charge of the bills from that committee.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, this concludes the business on the District of Columbia calendar for today.

I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my unanimous-consent request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. RANDOLPH] asks unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, I am sure that none of you would envy an individual who serves as a member of the District of Columbia Committee of the House of Representatives. Ours is not an easy task, as we listen to the pleas of voteless citizens of the District of Columbia, study the problems here, and attempt to propose legislation for the city of Washington.

I want to pay tribute this afternoon to the members of that committee, men who give much time, a certain amount of that time naturally taken from other important duties in this body, to the consideration of legislation which that committee desires to bring to the floor of this House.

I am sure there is no Member of this body who is easier to get along with than myself. I believe that in my 7 years here, that statement is predicated upon fact. What I shall say now is in no respect a criticism of the House but simply a statement of my very deep feeling about the legislative situation for the District, a feeling which is accentuated by what has just taken place this afternoon.

Certain bills were considered by subcommittees of the House District of Columbia Committee, with hearings held upon the measures running not 1 or 2 hours but going through days and days. Yet we did not consider these measures today. Some 150 witnesses were heard, and the hearings consumed weeks of time. Now, I am sure that no member of the District Committee, at least myself, would have any argument with any Member of this body if, after a discussion of the bills upon this floor on District day, he would, after considered judgment, vote down the proposals. I do believe, however, that this House—and I say this now in a very kindly way, and I am certain my remarks are temperate and spoken in good spirit—I believe this House fails to play fair with its own Committee on the District of Columbia when the membership will not allow that committee to bring measures upon this floor and have them either passed or defeated after debate and consideration. I believe this is the regular procedure that should be followed in this body, not alone from the standpoint of bills from the District Committee but from all legislative committees. Certainly, we would have no quarrel if you would vote the bill down or if you would vote the bill up, but we feel it should be considered on its merits.

I hold no feeling against any Member who, as I understand it, failed today in his obligation to allow orderly procedure here in the House on District legislation. I do, however, feel very strongly as chairman of the House District Committee about the manner in which the bills were disposed of this afternoon. We do not bring in so many measures that are controversial. We try very hard to iron out controversies in the committee. I feel we do pretty well on that score. In the consideration of approximately 50 measures for the District of Columbia this session there has been only one or two which were controversial and about which you as Members have heard back home from your constituency. We have held up the consideration of certain measures trying to iron out the difficulties in the District of Columbia Committee before bringing those bills to the floor.

In presenting the bill which would have regulated, and we believe improved, the practice of optometry in the District of Columbia, doing away with certain evil practices in connection with advertisements in the newspapers, and in bringing before you the taxicab-limitation bill, knowing that in the District of Columbia the number of taxicabs far exceeds the number in New York City or Chicago, and that a real traffic and safety problem exists here, we of the District Committee would like to have had the opportunity of having this House consider these proposals upon their merits and vote them up or down. I trust now that you will forgive me as chairman for having taken this time in defense of the committee, and that in the future there may be perhaps a little more kindly attitude on the part of the membership of the House in the consideration of District of Columbia legislation about which there is controversy. [Applause.]

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, the Members have a responsibility that they probably are not responsible for; but under the law as it now exists, or under our procedure in this body and the body at the other end of the Capitol, governing the District of Columbia, when you assumed your oath of office, as a part of that oath you agreed to take your portion of the responsibility of carrying on orderly government in the District of Columbia. By a vote of this House this afternoon you just refused to do that thing which you said in your oath you would do. I agree, of course, with the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. RANDOLPH]; no one would quarrel with you about your vote as to whether you voted for or against a bill, but here is a city of approximately 700,000 population. You do not like them. Why? Because you are mad at the newspapers? Yes; and I cannot say that I blame you for that, but your responsibility is to consider at least laws for the District of Columbia—a voteless District of Columbia, I might add. The only way under the shining sun that they can get a law is for you to give it to them. Now, if you are going to refuse to consider legislation for the District, then, in the name of common sense, let us not continue to embarrass a standing committee of this House; let us do it some other way; let us abolish the District of Columbia Committee. I do not enjoy the long hours of work I put in on that committee; it is not very popular back home even; but somebody has got to assume the responsibility, a portion of which is yours, to do something for this District of Columbia down here with 700,000 people in it without a vote, and I think it is a rather sad commentary that this House of Representatives would refuse even to consider two pieces of legislation, whether they are important or not. I venture the assertion that there is but a very, very, very small percentage of the membership of the House that has even seen the outside cover of either one of the bills they refused to consider, or know the contents of either.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. I do not wish the gentleman to make the statement of me that I am mad at the people of the District of Columbia for any purpose; in fact, I like them. I voted "no" on both these propositions because I did not believe in either bill. [Applause.]

Mr. NICHOLS. That is fine.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Does not the gentleman recall that not only once but on several occasions this House heretofore has by an overwhelming vote refused to pass at least one of the very two bills that it refused to consider this afternoon?

Mr. NICHOLS. My friend from Oklahoma is entirely wrong. In the last session of Congress a bill came before the House to limit the number of taxicabs in the District of Columbia, and I led the fight against the bill, but it has not been here this session, and this is an entirely different bill from the bill that was here last year. The bill to regulate the practice of optometry in the District of Columbia was before the House for the first time this afternoon, the first time at any session since I have been here and been a member of the District of Columbia Committee.

I have no feeling in this matter, but I just think that we are not playing the game, fellows. These folks are dependent upon us. They cannot get anything that we do not give them, and I think that we ought in the future, surely, to at least consider the legislation that a standing committee of this House has worked hard enough on to get to the floor in the shape of a bill. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, the only bill that was presented by the Committee on the District of Columbia this afternoon for what purported to be your consideration but which turned out to be not for your consideration, presents a rather curious legislative enigma to me in my service on the District of Columbia Committee. It was a bill to regulate the practice of optometry in the District of Columbia. I am quite sensitive of the fact that most every Member of the House has received a letter from the county and State optometric associations of their respective States protesting against and urging opposition to the bill.

That presents a rather curious problem to us. Being quite mindful of human frailties and of the political implications of bills presented here in the interest of the District of Columbia but which have certain repercussions back home, I can understand the general attitude of the House, because my own attitude has been precisely that on some occasions. So I suggest this query to you this afternoon: If, for instance, we are seeking to pass a bill to better regulate optometry in the District of Columbia, set up certain standards to regulate the practice of optometry, license those who are to practice here, and effectuate certain reciprocity with other States, then every optometric association in the 48 States of the Union objects. What ought to be our attitude? We are not legislating for Illinois or Wisconsin; we are not legislating for Massachusetts or Vermont; we are not legislating for New York, California, or Kentucky. The bill that must govern that practice at home is going to be determined by our respective legislatures.

We bring in a bill fashioned after considerable hearings and deliberation which is acceptable to the executive authority of the District of Columbia, namely, the District of Columbia Commissioners; it is acceptable to the optometrists in the District of Columbia; it is acceptable to most of those who came and testified before the subcommittee. There are some weaknesses in the bill. I had fashioned three amendments which I was going to offer before the bill came on for final passage. Put yourselves in our position. What are we going to do about it?

Personally, I believe there ought to be certain improved regulations, but I have no stomach for offering another bill in view of the action of the House this afternoon. It occurs to me this bill should have been considered. Of course, it will not be considered now, and I suppose it will be some time before the District of Columbia will have the benefit of a statute for the better regulation of optometrists. Right behind the House Office Building we caught a fellow last year who was peddling all kinds of eyeglasses, some heavily ground, some lightly ground, but certainly those who were going to use the glasses would have ruined their eyes. In the interest of the ocular health of the District of Columbia I thought there was some merit to the bill. Now it goes by the board.

The same statement can be made about taxicabs. I have opposed certain taxicab limitations in the District, because I did not like the basis or principle upon which the bill was set up; however, under the general rules of the House, the bill could have been perfected. There are those who believe that there exists a traffic hazard in Washington as a result of cruising taxicabs at all hours of the day and night. But in the wisdom of the House, the bill was not considered, and I assume it will go by the board also.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to my genial friend from Kentucky.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. The gentleman has stated that the optometrists of the various States are opposed to this bill?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Why are they opposed to the bill?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I assume, from what I have heard, that they are afraid this might become a so-called model measure which may be adopted by the different States of the Union, but who am I, as a Member of Congress and as a member of the District of Columbia Committee, to say in what manner the 48 legislatures of the 48 States shall legislate on this matter? I do not intend to impose my will or judgment upon them. That is a matter for the people back home to decide. But shall we impale the District of Columbia simply because somebody from back home makes the statement they do not like a certain measure for fear, a remote fear, at best, that it may become a model bill?

A year or two ago there was pending a bill dealing with real estate in the District of Columbia, a bill which I believe I had introduced. I received a letter from the secretary of a building managers' association in my State protesting against the bill. When the session was over and I got back home, he being a good friend of mine, I asked him what prompted the sending of that telegram? He said, "Oh, you know we meet these various people at the convention and one of them sent me a telegram to wire my Member of Congress that we were opposed to the bill." He said, "We had no interest in it." I fancy also that many of the State optometrical associations have no abiding interest in this bill, as such, but somebody has suggested, in the interest, shall I say, of legislative integrity, that they send a letter to their Congressman for fear this might become a model bill for the 48 States of the Union, and thus the House refuses to consider the bill by a very substantial vote. The action of the House today furnishes a most interesting commentary upon the tortuous course of legislation for the District of Columbia, a District with whose legislative responsibilities the Congress is specifically charged by the Constitution of the United States.

POLITICAL ACTIVITIES

Mr. DEMPSEY, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following privileged resolution (Rept. No. 1079), which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed:

House Resolution 251

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of S. 1871, an act to prevent pernicious political activities. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed 2 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary, the bill shall be read for amendments under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

CERTAIN BENEFITS FOR WORLD WAR VETERANS AND THEIR DEPENDENTS

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 5452) to provide certain benefits for World War veterans and their dependents, and for other purposes, with Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"That section 1 of Public Law No. 484, Seventy-third Congress, June 28, 1934, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SECTION 1. (a) The surviving widow, child, or children of any deceased person who served in the World War before November 12, 1918, or if the person was serving with the United States military forces in Russia before April 2, 1920, who, while receiving or entitled to receive compensation, pension, or retirement pay for 10 percent disability or more presumptively or directly incurred in or aggravated by service in the World War, dies or has died from a disease or disability not service connected shall, upon filing application and such proofs in the Veterans' Administration as the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs may prescribe, be entitled to receive compensation as provided by this act.

"(b) The surviving widow, child, or children of any deceased person who served in the World War before November 12, 1918, or if the person was serving with the United States military forces in Russia before April 2, 1920, and who was honorably discharged after having served 90 days or more (or who, having served less than 90 days, was discharged for disability incurred in the service in line of duty), who dies or has died from a disease or disability not service connected and at the time of death had a disability directly or presumptively incurred in or aggravated by service in the World War for which compensation would be payable if 10 percent or more in degree, shall, upon filing application and such proofs in the Veterans' Administration as the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs may prescribe, be entitled to receive compensation as provided by this act.

"(c) Payment of compensation under the provisions of this act shall not be made to any widow without child, or a child, whose annual income exceeds $1,000, or to a widow with a child or children whose annual income exceeds $2,500. In determining annual income, payments of war risk term insurance, United States Government life (converted) insurance, and payments under the World War Adjusted Compensation Act, as amended (U. S. C., title 38, ch. 11), and the Adjusted Compensation Payment Act, 1936, as amended, shall not be considered. Except as provided in section 6 of Public Law No. 304, Seventy-fifth Congress, August 16, 1937 (U. S. C., title 38, sec. 472d), compensation authorized by this act shall not be payable effective prior to the receipt of application therefor in the Veterans' Administration; and in no event shall compensation herein authorized by effective prior to the date of enactment of this act."

"Sec. 2. Section 2 of Public Law No. 484, Seventy-third Congress, as amended (U. S. C., title 38, sec. 504), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 2. (a) The monthly rates of compensation shall be as follows: Widow but no child, $30; widow with one child, $38 (with $4 for each additional child); no widow but one child, $15; no widow but two children, $22 (equally divided); no widow but three children, $30 (equally divided) (with $3 for each additional child; total amount to be equally divided).

"(b) The total compensation payable under this section shall not exceed $64. Where such benefits would otherwise exceed $64, the amount of $64 may be apportioned as the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs may prescribe."

"Sec. 3. Section 4 of Public Law No. 484, Seventy-third Congress, June 28, 1934, as amended (U. S. C., title 38, sec. 506), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 4. For the purpose of awarding compensation under the provisions of this act, as amended, service connection of a disability at the date of death, and degree thereof where required, may be determined in any case where a claim has been or is filed by the widow, child, or children of a deceased World War veteran. Proof of disability at the date of death, and degree thereof where required, and evidence as to service connection, may be filed at any time after the date of enactment of this act or the date of death. Evidence required in connection with any claim must be submitted in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs."

"Sec. 4. In the administration of laws pertaining to veterans, retired officers, and enlisted men of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard, who served honorably during a war period as recognized by the Veterans' Administration, shall be, and are, entitled to hospitalization and domiciliary care in Veterans' Administration facilities on parity with other war veterans and subject to those provisions of paragraph VI (A) of Veterans' Regulation No. 6 (c), which provide for reduction of monetary benefits to veterans having neither wife, child, nor dependent parent while being furnished hospital treatment, institutional, or domiciliary care."

"Sec. 5. Effective on the 1st day of the month next following the date of enactment of this act, the rates of death compensation payable under the provisions of existing laws or veterans regulations to a surviving widow, child, or children, and/or dependent mother or father now on the rolls or hereafter to be placed on the rolls as the surviving widow, child, or children, and/or dependent mother or father of any World War veteran who died as the result of injury or disease incurred in or aggravated by active military or naval service in the World War, shall be as follows:

"Widow, age under 50 years, $38; widow age 50 years or over, $45; widow with one child, $10 additional for such child up to 10 years of age, increased to $15 from age 10 (with $3 for each additional child up to 10 years of age, increased to $13 from age 10) (subject to apportionment regulations); no widow but one child, $20; no widow but two children, $33 (equally divided); no widow but three children, $46 (equally divided) (with $3 for each additional child, total amount to be equally divided); dependent mother or father, $45 (or both) $25 each. As to the widow, child, or children, the total compensation payable under this section shall not exceed $83. The amount of compensation herein authorized shall be paid in the event the monthly payment of compensation under Veterans Regulation No. 1 (g) and the monthly payment of yearly renewable term or automatic insurance does not aggregate or exceed the amount of compensation herein authorized."

"As to the surviving widow, child, or children, and/or dependent mother or father on the rolls on the date of enactment of this act, any increased award herein authorized shall be effective from the date of enactment of this act and in all other cases, except as provided in section 6 of Public Law No. 304, Seventy-fifth Congress, approved August 16, 1937, effective dates of awards shall be governed by the provisions of veterans regulations promulgated under Public Law No. 2, Seventy-third Congress, March 20, 1933."

"Sec. 6. Subparagraph (k) of paragraph II, part I, of Veterans Regulation No. 1 (a), promulgated under Public Law No. 2, Seventy-third Congress, March 20, 1933, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(k) If the disabled person, as the result of service-incurred disability, has suffered the anatomical loss or the loss of the use of only one foot, or one hand, or one eye, the rate of pension provided in part I, paragraph II (a) to (j), shall be increased by $35 per month."

"Sec. 7. On and after the date of enactment of this act, the rate of interest charged on any loan secured by a lien on United States Government life (converted) insurance shall not exceed 5 percent per annum."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN]?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I reserve the right to object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. RANKIN. I presume the lady wants a statement as to what changes have been made?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I know the House will want such a statement.

Mr. RANKIN. If the House will bear with me for just a minute I will be pleased to give it.

I have gone over the report carefully, and also the bill. I have a statement analyzing it that was compiled by Capt. Tom Kirby, of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War. In as few words as possible I shall give you the changes made by the Senate.

Permit me to say that I much prefer the House bill. We worked for months, we held hearings for I suppose 2 months, and finally when the bill was passed it was sent to the Senate and got through the Senate only a day or two ago with some limiting amendments. We are now drawing near the end of the session and we would like to get this bill through before Congress adjourns.

The first thing this bill would do as passed by the Senate would be to provide that if a man died from a nonservice-connected disability and had a service-connected disability of any degree, even less than 10 percent, his widow and dependents would be eligible for benefits just as though his percentage was 10 or more. One of the main objects in inserting that provision in the bill was to take care of the veterans' widows and orphans in case he should pass away. The Senate struck out the provision as it applied to the veteran, because the disability was so small, but left the provision as to the widow and orphans in the bill. So I make this statement advisedly: Under this bill, if a veteran who has a minor gunshot wound or other service-connected disability that does not disable him up to 10 percent should die and leave a widow and orphans, they are to be cared for. The ones whose disabilities amount to 10 percent or more are already cared for.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield for a question.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman agree to call the committee together at once in order to report that provision and other good provisions that the Senate has stricken from the bill, out separately?

Mr. RANKIN. I cannot commit myself on that point, but I will do the best I can. I am not going to make that commitment on the floor of the House, and I do not think it ought to be made.

Second, the bill will provide an increase from $22 to $30 a month for the widow of a service-connected veteran who under present law is compensable, and who dies from any cause. If there is a widow and one child the amount is $38, with the present rate of $4 a month for each additional child.

Third, the law will be amended so as to make the changes conform with other sections of the amended bill.

It is estimated that 2,900 new cases would be brought in under amendments 1, 2, and 3, at an annual cost of $1,268,000, and that there would be increases to 14,850 widows already on the rolls, at an annual cost of $1,426,000.

Fourth, as to hospital and domiciliary care, retired officers and enlisted men of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps, and the Coast Guard who served during a war period are placed on a parity with other veterans.

This provision was put in by the Senate, being one of the Senate amendments.

Fifth, the bill would raise the death compensation to dependents of World War veterans whose death is due to service as follows: The compensation for a widow under 50 years of age is raised from $37.50 to $38 a month, which is an increase of 50 cents, and a widow over 50 would receive $45. This would be an increase over Public, 304, of $8 per month for a widow under 50 years of age and $7.50 for widows up to 65 years of age.

The bill would effectuate no change in the rates payable for children or dependent parents. The total amount of compensation which would be payable to widows or children is changed from $75 as it appeared before in Public Law No. 304 to $83. The House bill provided for $82.50. Such increases conform with the increase in rates to widows.

The section further would change the limitation contained in Public Law No. 304, with reference to receipt of insurance payments to eliminate United States Government life—converted—insurance from the limitation. It is estimated that these increases would affect 27,800 widows at an annual cost of $2,628,000.

The bill, as it now stands, would raise the present statutory award for anatomical loss or the loss of use of one hand or one foot or one eye from $25 to $35 a month. That is a material change, made by the Senate. We provided that an amputation case who was drawing under $100 a month should be raised to $100 a month. The Senate sought to change that, and instead of agreeing to the provision they struck it out and added this increase of $10 a month for amputation cases. It is estimated that this would affect 9,000 World War veterans and 240 Spanish War veterans, at an annual cost of $1,113,000.

It would reduce interest charges on loans secured by liens on Government insurance from 6 to 5 percent.

There is one thing in this bill that I do not like. It left out in some instances dependent parents. However, Congress is still in session, and we will be back here in another session on the 3d of next January. Those changes can be made later. However, I feel that with the benefits to be derived from this bill it would be a mistake not to agree to the Senate amendments and let the bill become a law at once.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield to the gentlewoman from Massachusetts.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. A great hardship is worked on the amputation cases by their not receiving the increase to $100 a month as was provided in the House bill. I know the gentleman feels very badly about that. It is a very great disappointment to me.

Mr. RANKIN. From my viewpoint, I would rather that the House provision had prevailed.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I know the gentleman must regret exceedingly, just as I do, the Senate's elimination of the payment of compensation to veterans who are deemed less than 10 percent disabled as in the bill he will not get any compensation at all unless he has a 10-percent disability. I know the Members have had a very difficult time in securing compensation for many men because the Veterans' Administration has ruled so frequently that a veteran's disability was less than 10 percent in order to prevent compensation from being paid to him.

Mr. RANKIN. I will say to the gentlewoman from Massachusetts that the greatest hardship in that connection has fallen on the widows and orphans of these men who passed away and under the Senate bill they are taken care of.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. They are given something, but not the men.

Mr. RANKIN. But in doing that they carried out a great portion of the objective to which we were driving.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, the World War Veterans' Committee spent many months considering all phases of the veterans' problem before reporting H. R. 5452, which was later on adopted by this House with the overwhelming vote of 360 to 1. Today we have before us what is left of the bill after the Senate just about tore it to pieces by deleting from it the two most important House provisions. One which established a minimum compensation of $100 per month for amputation cases and another providing a statutory award of 10 percent to all battle casualties.

The Senate, by emasculating this important veteran measure, jeopardizes the entire veteran program for this session. Here is the position in which the veteran supporters in the House find themselves. If this House does not concur in the Senate amendments, the bill faces a pocket veto by reason of the fact Congress may adjourn before action could be taken on same by the President. In the event of a veto by the President with the Congress in adjournment, we would be denied the privilege of overriding his veto, as has been done in the past and which I am certain this body will do again in simple justice to the deserving veteran and his dependents affected by this important measure.

In view of the precarious position of this measure as the results of the Senate action I feel, as do other members of the World War Veterans' Committee, that it is with a great deal of restraint that we reluctantly go along with the recommendations of the committee chairman by concurring in the Senate amendments in order that the bill will reach the White House at the earliest possible moment. This action is being taken with the hope that something will be salvaged from a difficult situation or, in other words, "a half a loaf is better than none."

Mr. RANKIN. Let me say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that I cannot speak with respect to a pocket veto.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. What I have in mind is the President's former vetoes of several important veteran measures and the subsequent action of the Congress.

Mr. RANKIN. I took this proposition up with the representatives of the three principal veterans' organizations, whom we have always consulted, and I also consulted the minority members of the committee, including the gentleman from Pennsylvania, the gentlewoman from Massachusetts, and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. ENGEL], who has been on the committee for many years, and we thought that under the circumstances it would be better to go ahead and concur in the Senate amendments, and then, if we are not satisfied, we can change the law later.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I will say to the gentleman that I feel it is a very cruel thing to have the bill taken up at this hour. I, personally, would like to stay in session, and already I have introduced a concurrent resolution that we stay in continuous session, in order to take up this measure and this important matter, but if there is danger of Congress adjourning, and danger of a pocket veto, as has been hinted, I do not feel that I, perhaps, ought to object. So I withdraw my objection, although I hate to do so, because I feel it is giving the veterans very short shrift. The House passed veterans' legislation weeks ago, and I blame the administration severely for the delay in bringing these bills from the other body at this late date. I believe that if there were time to send this bill to conference that we could prevail upon the Senate to agree to our House bill and if it were vetoed by the President then we could pass it over his veto.

Mr. RANKIN. I will say to the gentlewoman from Massachusetts that there is nothing cruel about it, for the simple reason that I am thoroughly convinced the only thing we could do now would be to go to conference and, probably, we would have to go to the Rules Committee to get a rule to send the bill to conference and we might lose the entire bill, as a result of the delay.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object because I want to get some information. As I understand the bill that the House passed, it gave to each veteran who had a wound due to service a 10-percent disability rating.

Mr. RANKIN. That is right.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. And upon his death, or if he died before this date, it would give his widow—

Mr. RANKIN. His widow and orphans.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. It would give his widow and orphans compensation.

Mr. RANKIN. Yes.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. As I understand, that has been stricken out and in its place has been written a provision that will give the widow and children compensation for any veteran that had any service-connected disability before his death, even though it was not 10 percent. Am I correct about that?

Mr. RANKIN. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. But it will not give that to the veteran.

Mr. RANKIN. No.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Does not the gentleman think if we should pass the liberal bill that the House voted out, in the event the President vetoes it, we could pass it over his veto?

Mr. RANKIN. You mean this bill?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Yes.

Mr. RANKIN. I think this bill will pass all right, and I believe the President will sign it.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. DOWELL. The gentleman just stated that the House bill is preferable to the Senate amendments.

Mr. RANKIN. Yes; I think it is.

Mr. DOWELL. Then is it not possible to get a conference with the Senate?

Mr. RANKIN. That is exactly the thing we do not want and I have consulted not only with the members of the committee, but with the veterans' organizations. One man can object and send this bill to conference and, probably, kill it; and that is what we do not want.

Mr. DOWELL. No one wants to kill it, but if it should go to conference—

Mr. RANKIN. We have no assurance that the Senate would recede and we are afraid we might kill it by such action. We might become tied up and leave this bill hanging in that way until Congress adjourns.

Mr. DOWELL. And this is the best bill that we can get? If the House bill is better, I think it unfortunate we cannot get it, but if this is the best bill we can get under the circumstances there seems nothing else to do.

Mr. RANKIN. I think it is the best we can get under the circumstances.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on concurring in the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was concurred in.

BENEFITS TO WORLD WAR VETERANS SUFFERING FROM PARALYSIS, ETC.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 2296) to restore certain benefits to World War veterans suffering with paralysis, paresis, or blindness, or who are helpless or bedridden, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto, and concur in the Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Mississippi calls up the bill H. R. 2296, with Senate amendments thereto, and ask unanimous consent to concur in the Senate amendments. The Clerk will report the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 1, line 6, after "disability", insert "and who was in receipt of compensation therefor on March 19, 1933."

Page 2, line 2, strike out "1934" and insert "1934, as amended by section 5 of Public Law No. 304, Seventy-fifth Congress, August 16, 1937."

Page 2, line 6, strike out all after "further", down to and including "parents" in line 18, and insert: "That where a World War veteran dies or has died from disease or injury, service connection of which is or would have been reestablished under the provisions of this act, his surviving widow, child, or children, if otherwise eligible thereto, shall be awarded death compensation under Public Law No. 484, Seventy-third Congress, as amended."

Page 3, line 2, after "act", insert "and payments to widows or children shall be effective the date of enactment of this act."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object in order to ask the gentleman to explain the purposes of the Senate amendments.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, as is well known, somewhere back in the beginning of World War veterans' legislation a provision was written into the law which denied a veteran compensation where his disability was attributable to his misconduct. That does not apply to any other veteran in any war that we had ever had. It does not apply to Civil War veterans, and it does not apply to Spanish War veterans. It is cruel and unjust.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. Yes.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. It did apply to the Spanish War veterans, but in 1930 we had it taken out of the law.

Mr. RANKIN. But it does not apply to them now.

A large number of these men, 1,100 or 1,200, are, some of them paralyzed, some blind, some bedridden, and we agreed to an amendment that will take care of them. The Senate changed it to some extent. According to the Senate bill it would restore to the compensation rolls veterans who were on the rolls on March 19, 1933, suffering from paralysis, paresis, blindness, or who were helpless or bedridden. That was the economy bill that struck these men from the rolls. As in the case of service-connected cases, under statutory presumption, compensation of these misconduct cases would be rated at 75 percent of what is paid in directly service-connected cases.

Widows and children in misconduct cases in which veterans have died since the Economy Act or in cases of alleged misconduct cases in which the veteran dies in the future would be granted the same allowances as go to widows and children of compensable veterans who die from causes other than those for which compensated. It is estimated that 1,100 veterans would be restored to the rolls under this bill at a cost of $1,198,000.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. Yes.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. Is there any provision here to keep the Veterans' Administration from finding after almost 20 years that a man was guilty of misconduct, after he has drawn compensation for all of these years, as in cases that have come to my observation in the last couple of years?

Mr. RANKIN. Even if they did find it now he would be taken care of under this law.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. I am very glad of that.

Mr. RANKIN. I have tried for years and years to get that provision taken out of the law. It has been penalizing some of the best soldiers we ever had. It has disgraced them for life, and has visited that disgrace upon the widows and children after they have died. This bill comes as near doing justice to these men as anything that we have ever been able to get through both Houses. I hope that no one will object to this request and that the President will sign it and that it will soon become law.

Mr. GEYER of California. The gentleman says that the Senate did something to this bill?

Mr. RANKIN. The Senate made some slight changes.

Mr. GEYER of California. And the gentleman has just read them?

Mr. RANKIN. Yes.

Mr. GEYER of California. I misunderstood the gentleman.

Mr. RANKIN. My recollection of the way we passed the bill, we put these presumptive cases all at 100 percent. The Senate put them back to 75 percent, because the presumptive cases now who are not charged with misconduct draw only 75 percent as much as a man not charged with misconduct.

Mr. GEYER of California. Of course, it is deplorable that the Senate would do that, but I suppose it is the best we can do.

Mr. RANKIN. Do not blame the Senate, because this original provision did not originate in the Senate. It originated in the House of Representatives 20 years ago.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. It restores all who went out under the Economy Act, does it not?

Mr. RANKIN. I think it does. I think it just about restores those men who were stricken out as a result of the so-called Economy Act and takes care of their widows and orphans.

Mr. IZAC. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield.

Mr. IZAC. I notice it covers only paresis and similar ailments. How about insanity and the neuropsychiatric cases?

Mr. RANKIN. I think you will find that it covers them. Not only that, but they are all hospitalized.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. I congratulate the gentleman on bringing in a report of this kind, even though it is not altogether satisfactory. This remedial legislation should have been enacted several years ago. I know the gentleman from Mississippi, the distinguished chairman of the Veterans' Committee, has been earnestly advocating this amendment for several years. This is a long delayed justice to many needy, deserving World War veterans who have been discriminated against.

Mr. RANKIN. I thank the gentleman from Oklahoma, who is himself an overseas veteran and a real friend of the veterans.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I shall not object. The same situation exists here that exists in the other veterans' bill under discussion today, and that is fear of a pocket veto, and the House must make sure of as much as possible for the veterans.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, the House passed this bill some time ago unanimously?

Mr. RANKIN. I think there was one dissenting vote.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Not on this particular bill.

Mr. RANKIN. No; I believe not on this bill.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Is it not true that this bill is a step in the direction of removing the misconduct clause from all existing World War legislation?

Mr. RANKIN. That is right. It is belated justice.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Reserving the right to object, can the gentleman state whether or not these cases will be automatically reviewed if this bill becomes law, or will it be necessary to have new applications made?

Mr. RANKIN. I do not know whether they will be automatically reviewed or not, but they will go back on the rolls, or be entitled to go back on. They may have to make new applications.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield.

Mr. GREEN. I hope the gentleman's committee will give favorable consideration to bringing out a special pension bill for the World War veterans.

Mr. RANKIN. That is what the gentleman was asking about a while ago. That will be taken up later.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Of course, in mental cases it will be very difficult to file new applications.

Mr. RANKIN. Oh, yes; those cases are all taken care of. I hope no one will object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendments were agreed to.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to extend their remarks on these two bills, if they so desire.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on tomorrow, following the legislative program and any other special orders that may be made, the gentleman from California [Mr. LELAND M. FORD] be allowed to address the House for 25 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

BONNEVILLE POWER

Mr. PIERCE of Oregon. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. PIERCE of Oregon. Mr. Speaker, there appeared recently in one of the daily papers in Portland, Oreg., an article, Why Hasn't Bonneville Power Been Sold? A reply to this brilliantly written article has been written by an Oregonian in Washington. This answer, in the shape of a letter, is a clear and concise statement showing the forces which seem likely to prevent the people of the Northwest from enjoying the benefits which will come from the cheap electric energy developed on the Columbia River. That there is great danger that the objectives of the T. V. A. and the Columbia River projects may be thwarted by privileged private interests, there can be no doubt. The Pacific Northwest can be made by Columbia River power and navigation projects into a new world, provided those in control are faithful to the trust imposed upon them.

I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and to include therein the letter heretofore mentioned, written by Cornelia Marvin Pierce.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon?

There was no objection.

The letter referred to is as follows:

SELLING BONNEVILLE POWER THROUGH "FIRST CITIZENS"

To the "Lesser Citizens" of Oregon:

Why hasn't Bonneville power been sold? This question is emblazoned across the top of a page of a Portland paper for July 2, 1939. The subhead is, "Opposing factions bicker over distribution of current while big generators whirl uselessly."

As a matter of fact, Bonneville power is being sold. The contracts may soon be signed, selling all available Bonneville power, so the Acting Administrator announces in the Portland paper just received. He predicts capacity power contracts within 6 months and forecasts immediate use for all which will be generated when the new installations are completed. This means that the private utilities are ready and will get most of the power, except for legal reservations. This July 10, 1939, is a day which the Pacific Northwest will long remember. It is less than a week since July 4, the Independence Day of our forefathers. Today Bonneville power seems likely to be absorbed by the private utilities and Bonneville navigation benefits are endangered, if not destroyed, by a transportation bill introduced into the House by its Commerce Committee, similar to Senator WHEELER's bill which has already passed the Senate. We shall later get a special name for this day.

FARM BENEFITS SEEM DOOMED

We frequently heard, in the early Bonneville days, that the great dam which spans the Columbia was a dual-purpose dam. It was for power which would offer a new opportunity to the toilers of the Northwest, and for navigation which was to mean so much to the wheat farmers, enhancing land values and reducing freight rates to Portland. That, too, appears to have been just a rosy dream. Transportation rates on gas went down under competition a few weeks ago, but the Government soon put a stop to that. When we came to Washington in 1933 it cost 21½ cents to carry our 23-cent wheat 300 miles to Portland and put it in the warehouse. It hardly seemed worth while to grow wheat.

Now with public power and navigation benefits endangered, what is left of Bonneville benefits for the average citizen? The Portland Chamber of Commerce representative told the farmers plainly that their sole part in Bonneville was to be the production of food for the workers massed in Bonneville industries. They knew that kilowatts don't eat. They left the farmers to find that out after the power was sold to "first citizens." Possibly the farmers may still feed some tourists who come to look at the dam, but there are two other benefits still left which may trickle down to the common people, the "lesser citizens" of Oregon, if they will just hold out their little tin cups to catch the trickles. There are two Pierce bills which might still help. One bill extends 1 year, to January 1, 1942, the time for reservation of half of Bonneville power for the use of publicly owned distributing systems. The other would provide for the use of Bonneville power for Government manufacture of sodium chlorate, the much needed weed killer, thus cheapening its price.

It is necessary to get a public-utility district all finished before the Government may contract to sell it power, but a private-utility bankruptcy must just be filed in order to make the company available for contracts. So the "lesser citizens" of Oregon and Washington who have seen the power and navigation benefits of Bonneville monopolized by its "first citizens" may still hold out their little tin cups in the hope that some "first citizen" passing by might be moved by pity to toss a privilege into the cup of the "lesser citizen." But there is quite a story in connection with the sale of Bonneville power, and that is the first story which I want to tell my friends among the "lesser citizens" of Oregon, and I shall set about it with the promise that the other stories, particularly about primary elections, etc., shall be told later. (I still think it was the intention of the President that Bonneville should benefit the people of the Northwest. These things cannot be done in a flash. It requires sustained effort and a tremendous fight. Those who have the vision cannot always carry the burden of the struggle.)

PUBLIC-POWER MARKETS DELAYED

Why has Bonneville power not been sold? That is a very pertinent question to be asked by the people of the Pacific Northwest, but to whom shall it be directed? My speculation turns in other directions from those taken by the scintillating author of the Sunday Magazine Section. From my observation post in a different location I offer a reply, in several sections. There might be many more, but these very naturally occur to anyone who has been interested in Bonneville power and who has moved, as have the obstructionists, from coast to coast, from the battlefield in Oregon to the battlefield in Washington, D. C. These reasons have not been advanced by the other observer. The theme of the obstructionists has always been that there is no market for Bonneville power except through the private utilities. The plan has been to destroy the market which might be afforded by publicly owned municipal plants, public-utility district, and Rural Electrification Administration power projects. This could be done by routing transmission lines away from municipal projects and by keeping others from organizing. The idea of the opponents of public power was to delay until only private utilities were ready, and then hurry to sell all the power before the public utilities could get ready.

The Bonneville Act reserves 50 percent of the power for such public organizations until January 1, 1941. Delay was therefore the very apparently advantageous strategy for the private-utility companies, which will undoubtedly oppose extension of this period.

The utilities apparently realized, as Mr. Pierce has often pointed out, that they could not distribute Bonneville power at low rates, passing on the benefits, because of the impediment of their great debt burden. Naturally one asks how this debt was accumulated during such prosperous times for the utilities, and during their great expansion period. The answer is that it was because of manipulation by which the profits were taken by financial holding companies instead of being honestly used to pay investors and amortizing the debt.

The author of the interesting newspaper article is in error when he says that the public power advocates planned Bonneville power project. It was actually planned from the start by certain people that it should be used for the benefit of the private utilities and private industry. I myself heard the official representative of the Portland Chamber of Commerce state this before 200 or more people gathered in Washington to celebrate Oregon's seventy-fifth anniversary. The orator said that the sole purpose of Bonneville power was to provide power for industry at tidewater; that it was not to be used to reduce the rates of private consumers, nor to take electricity to farmers. This was the plan of the Portland Chamber of Commerce from the beginning. This is why representatives of the private utilities have so bitterly fought transmission-line appropriations by Congress.

THE WASHINGTON WATER POWER CO. TAKES CHARGE

The first reply to the question, "Why is Bonneville power not sold?" must always be an explanation, yet to be made by the Government, of the reason for refusing to use the great quantities of Bonneville power in Government construction at Coulee Dam. This would have solved the problem of early use. This would have taken a part of the idle power until the public power districts had been organized, if the private utilities had allowed them to start. It was the original plan.

With these facts in mind, I shall now launch out on a sort of "farewell to Bonneville" for which words and music will undoubtedly be composed as time goes on, as it is destined to become the folksong of Oregon.

First, I would mention the glamorous Mr. Robinson, president of the Washington Water Power Co., of Spokane, ruling a far-flung empire extending from Spokane and Grand Coulee by a somewhat devious route through Portland, eastern Oregon, and Idaho, to Washington, D. C., and New York City. I mention New York because it is the home of the parent company to which agency alone Mr. Robinson yields supremacy—the Electric Bond & Share Co.

For brevity's sake I will use the term exhibit A as a short appellation for Mr. Robinson, president of the Washington Water Power Co., of Spokane, a subsidiary of the Electric Bond & Share Co. of New York.

I do not see the Spokane papers, but I just take it for granted that Mr. Robinson must have been elected "first citizen" by the publicity organizations of that compliant city.

And speaking of parents, I might just as well clear relationships and give a few genealogical items right here, because those who watch the summer struggle in Spokane will find them interesting. The Washington Water Power Co. is actually the child of the American Power & Light, which is papa; the Electric Bond & Share is grandpa, and the Chase National Bank of New York is great-grandpa. How greedy these parents and grandparents are in relation to the earnings of their progeny. It takes a lot of money to support Wall Street relatives. Grandpa being in debt has claimed practically all the earnings of his offspring; nothing was left for "investors" of the far West. Actually they were not investors, as it amounted to taking up a collection for grandpa in New York.

Incidentally, I might mention that this parent company wrote up and wrote down about a half-billion dollars of electric securities of companies such as Mr. Robinson operates, and is now in arrears about $92,000,000 on dividends due its stockholders. Evidently the Portland author had not followed the career of this busy and successful agent of the private power companies. There if, of course, much I do not know. My knowledge is very sketchy but, pieced together, these little items make a patchwork quilt which should take honorable mention, if not the blue ribbon, in the exhibit of the private utilities' successful manipulations against public power, especially in relation to Bonneville, Grand Coulee, and Rural Electrification Administration projects in the Pacific Northwest. Patches might even be found in eastern Oregon and Idaho irrigation districts where the first tottering steps of the brilliant child were taken.

Those interested to account for delays might get a side light by looking about that region of eastern Washington and pondering the facts on the Government's rural electrification projects as touched in the same section by the same exhibit A. These projects also were potential users of Bonneville and Coulee power. It is generally reported in Washington that while Mr. Robinson, exhibit A, was the Senate committee's chosen adviser and Coulee's chosen heir, he was also the chief obstructionist to Government progress on rural electrification plans to consummate projects begun in that section.

For factual material, let us turn first to Washington during this session of Congress. The Bonneville transmission line appropriation was before the Senate Appropriations Committee after having passed the House. Exhibit A (I will use this term as a short appellation and plans. It was a closed session of the Senate committee, and he was the only person privileged to discuss the Bonneville appropriation for the information of members of that committee. His feeble argument on markets, which seemed so strong when coupled with his magic presence, was, perforce, filed officially and is available for study by those of us who are vitally interested in preserving Bonneville for public benefit, but were excluded from the Senate session.

WHY SHOULD SPOKANE PREFER PRIVATE POWER?

To show the power of exhibit A, let us turn quickly, as does Mr. Robinson, to Spokane, the city in the shadow of Coulee, and so immensely benefited by it. Through its municipal council this city has just agreed to renew for 25 years the light and power franchise granted the company of exhibit A, though the present franchise had still 5 years to run, and the city charter forbids granting renewals within 3 years of the expiration date of the present franchise. The new franchise, which would be granted for this generation and the next, would give to a private company the exclusive right to furnish power and light to that western city largely maintained by a Federal Government pay roll. To be entirely accurate, and to continue my genealogical data, I should say that the new franchise is actually granted to the Central Heating Co., the offspring and a subsidiary of the Washington Water Power, which now becomes "papa" in its own right. Just watch it soak Spokane for its "sonny boy."

Fortunately there are in Spokane some sensitive persons who are not willing to be bought and sold even through the mechanizations of the brilliant Mr. Robinson, who has such keen foresight. Spokane's "lesser citizens" were outraged. The referendum has been called, and this summer there will be an election held to determine whether Spokane shall benefit from Grand Coulee power or shall turn the benefits over to the defaulting Electric Bond & Share Co., of New York, through exhibit A.

Incidentally, I should mention that when Grand Coulee appropriations are under consideration in Washington, the city of Spokane bawls loudest for the full amount. Evidently its "first citizens" on the local council understand something of the advantages of private utilities. They must have been well schooled by Mr. Robinson before they agreed to forego all the power advantages of mammoth Grand Coulee Dam.

BONNEVILLE POWER FOR COULEE CONTRACTS

I have described Mr. Robinson's activities because they are typical of those working to destroy public power development. Really of most significance as related to Bonneville delays is the fact that the electric power needed in Grand Coulee construction is to be furnished for the next 5 years by this same Washington Water Power Co. Spokane's brilliant "First Citizen" managed to overcome the reluctance which businesslike contractors must have felt when they decided to forego the opportunity of cheaper Bonneville power and to tie themselves up for 5 years to the power furnished from Spokane by the Washington Water Power Co. The late J. D. Ross planned that Grand Coulee should buy the first great block of Bonneville power, and that the necessities of the Grand Coulee construction would furnish an immediate and continuing income for Bonneville, taking great lots of power until the public power districts could be formed in Washington and Oregon. Mr. Ross was a man of vision and had great and sometimes misplaced confidence in his fellow men. He naturally assumed that the Government of the United States, which was constructing both Bonneville and Grand Coulee with public funds, would be interested to help secure a customer for Bonneville through the Reclamation Service of its Interior Department, under which Coulee is being constructed. But Bonneville's best potential customer was lost. The transmission lines to Coulee were of first importance in the Ross plan. They were pushed as a first project of Bonneville. Now only the eastern Oregon and Washington deserts are left as sole beneficiaries of this example of Mr. Ross' vision and foresight.

Mr. Ross knew that the process of forming public-utility districts for the utilization of Bonneville power would be slow, but how slow it might be made, no one unacquainted with the skill of "first citizens" could possibly foretell. It is strange enough that the United States Government, through its Interior Department and Reclamation Service did not come to the aid of those who should have carried out the plans entrusted to them for Bonneville distribution for public benefit. Surely the public will be amazed and chagrined to learn that the contractors, and the Government with which they contracted, have not been impressed with the advantages of cheap Bonneville power. Surely it is an amazing thing that the interests of both projects, Grand Coulee and Bonneville, were sacrificed for exhibit A.

I speak frequently of "government." Government is not wise nor all-seeing. It consists of a few individuals in high places who have so many responsibilities and duties they must delegate most of them, so the decisions on matters like Bonneville must often be made without adequate investigation or delegated—to whom? "First citizens?" They are so handy, always on the spot, always well-informed, and always resourceful. The best intention is often perverted to something really destructive, and the official is frequently unaware of the significance of an act.

A PORTLAND UTILITY SETS THE PACE

Let us turn now from Spokane and the blinding glitter of exhibit A to the "first citizen" of Portland, Ore. Now, I do read the Portland papers, and I know that exhibit B, Mr. Franklin T. Griffith, of Portland, was chosen officially by the publicity agencies of Portland as its "first citizen." Just what do you imagine the Portland Electric Power Co.'s thousands of defrauded stockholders must think of the secondary and "lesser citizens" of Portland when they learn that the man who lured their savings as an "investment" is its "first citizen"? I have just heard from an Oregon visitor here in Washington the story of two old people losing $10,000—their total old-age and burial funds, through Pepco's second reorganization or bankruptcy escapade in a very few years, a bankruptcy so costly to those humble people, who are something less than "first citizens." Yes; the burial funds of practically all the thrifty people in the Willamette Valley will be paying for receivership of Pepco, just as they have paid for the delays in the selling of Bonneville power. The burial-fund victims must be entirely familiar with the obstructionist tactics of Portland's "first citizen" and Pepco's president, who has spent so much of the investors' savings to defeat in the Oregon Legislature the bills necessary to enable Oregon to benefit from Bonneville.

Do you ask whether the Federal Government should contract with a company undergoing two bankruptcies or organizations within a few of utilities' most prosperous years? What happened to all those earnings? Might the Federal Government also lose its burial funds if it contracted with "first citizens" who manage private power companies? Is it safe for the Government to contract with companies which have shown little regard for even group-insurance contracts? Yes; it takes some time to get bankruptcies through the court. Why should there not be delay in the sale of Bonneville power until these important matters are concluded?

Then what great blocks of burial funds have been spent to obstruct the organization of public power districts in Oregon, which were preparing to use enormous quantities of Bonneville power. If it had not been for the activities of Portland's "first citizen," with the funds procured from the "lesser citizens" of Oregon, the 50-percent reservation of Bonneville power for publicly operated districts might be pretty well pledged by this time.

DELAY HAS BEEN THE PROGRAM

Delay has been the program, and delay will continue to be the program, laid out by the private utilities. The "lesser citizens" of Oregon and Washington may not fully realize the potency of their "first citizens" in State and National capitals, in chambers of commerce, and other places where "first citizens" congregate. "First citizens" are welcome guests in committee rooms and offices of the air-cooled buildings of Washington, D. C., where they become the advisors and helpmates of those who rule over us and over Bonneville. Whether on Capitol Hill or in the buildings below the hill which the tourists view with such awe, wherever the symbol of government is installed there will be found the "first citizens" or their henchmen who can open offices in Washington to do their bidding in a minor way when the "first citizens" are occupied with legislatures and bankruptcies at home.

I shall not continue to enumerate all the reasons why Bonneville power has not been sold. But I would like to say that I noticed that the magazine section article casually mentioned the chief reason: Delay. Delay has been the order of the day; it has, as I said, been the program, and it may continue to be the program in Washington, D. C., in Washington State, and in Oregon. Delay, even if not calculated, nevertheless, has been the chief factor in obstruction of the opportunities giving Bonneville power for public use. These delays, even if not calculated, have been almost fatal to the success of Bonneville as a public power project. First, the illness of Mr. Ross and months with no plan and no substitute. The long delay in appointing a successor as Administrator. Finally, this problem unsolved and an Acting Administrator selected, with the future still uncertain. Naturally, the delay in appointment of Administrator is most satisfactory to the private companies, even though the Acting Administrator is a man of great ability and integrity. In the interval, exhibit A, the meteoric Mr. Robinson, and exhibit B, "first citizen" Griffith, are busy and effective on both fronts, the Pacific coast and the Atlantic coast—with Washington officialdom and otherwise. They flit here and there, visiting important officers, planning still further delay and strategic moves, which will turn Bonneville power to the only market they have permitted to exist—the private utilities. Bonneville still has no permanent head and no permanent staff. If a public-ownership man should be made Administrator, he would fall heir to a permanent organization which he might have difficulty in molding to that purpose.

GOVERNMENT REFUSES AID TO PUBLIC POWER

The Bonneville Act, giving it an Administrator and setting forth his powers and duties, originally contained a provision requiring the Administrator to help the groups trying to make organizations for the use of Bonneville power through public power districts and municipalities. That provision was stricken from the original bill by the careful planning of the utilities, so now the burden of initiating and financing movements for power districts rests upon the "lesser citizens," who are busy with their own affairs, and who have paid so much tribute to the private power companies that it is difficult for them to finance these expensive undertakings. It does not appear that the "lesser citizens" who have so courageously undertaken the organization of power districts have fully appreciated the advantages enjoyed on both coasts and in State and Federal legislative bodies and other halls by "first citizens." It is the T. V. A. policy to help the people in their unequal struggle for the right to use the power generated at a Government project.

For further detail, we might ask the citizens of Forest Grove and McMinnville just how they feel toward those who are reported to have deprived them of Bonneville benefits, which they were promised they might enjoy, through the construction of secondary and feeder Bonneville lines to their successful municipal plants.

Delayed industrial development is given in the article as another cause of the failure to sell Bonneville power; also, the Pierce weed bill. This is all another story; the details of these stories might be followed in Washington and Oregon Legislatures and municipal chambers, but they are too complex to be included here. It is, however, pertinent to raise the question as to whether "first citizens" will also be allowed to punish farmers by denying Bonneville power to make them cheap sodium chlorate in a Government plant. This weed exterminator is now so expensive and so essential in the great weed-control campaign that "first citizens" are determined that the Government shall not manufacture it, but that exclusive rights to Bonneville power for that purpose shall be granted "first citizens" of another section who have so successfully monopolized Niagara power. Yes; if "first citizens," some chambers of commerce, and legislatures have their way, the farmers also will be penalized, but that fight is not yet over.

The rushing waters of the Columbia have been stilled for miles, not for the benefits which the public might have enjoyed but apparently only to murmur endlessly a slow dirge over the saddest lost opportunity in the history of the Pacific Northwest.

PUBLIC POWER WILL WIN

I say to the public-ownership friends in Oregon that this fight, carried on in Washington so long by Oregon's Representative from the Second District, must be carried to the end. We may lose another round just as we have lost others, but we must come back and continue the struggle. Keep your eye on contracts, privileges, and transmission lines. Pay no heed to idle rumor; insist upon the facts; study budgets and congressional hearings. It will be shameful to betray such a cause. Select your own "first citizens," and have a care when you do it. All who cry "public power" are not free from the control and money taint of the privately owned utilities, which have fought to be the sole beneficiaries of power generated on Federal projects. Public-ownership advocates have demanded only a 50-percent reservation. The private utilities have schemed in order to secure the whole benefit.

Bonneville, Coulee, and the irrigation dams which had valuable power rights given away by governmental agencies, have taught us expensive but valuable lessons. "Lesser citizens," you must determine that you, also, shall benefit from our natural resources, and you must work, sacrifice, study, and demand your rights when you know what they are.

Delay! Why hasn't Bonneville power been sold? What is the cause of the delay? It takes time to get bankruptcies through the courts; it takes time to squeeze out obligations to "lesser citizens"; it takes time to kill public-utility district bills in legislatures; it takes time to kill P. U. D. elections by organizing taxpayers' leagues. Why was Bonneville power not sold more quickly? Why did public power districts not take it? Ask the "first citizens."

Yours for public power,

CORNELIA MARVIN PIERCE.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and include a radio address I made last night.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. CLEVENGER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and include therein a memorial from the General Assembly of the State of Ohio regarding the Anthony Wayne Memorial Parkway.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. STEARNS of New Hampshire. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and include therein an editorial from the Concord (N. H.) Monitor, on the question of neutrality.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and include an article from the Philippine-American Advocate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend and revise the remarks I made today, and also to extend my remarks and include therein a statement of the members of the membership committee for the preservation of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. IZAC. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and include therein a resolution of the Bar Association of Illinois.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under special order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. VOORHIS] is recognized for 20 minutes.

PROGRAM OF EMPLOYMENT

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, the reason I have asked for this time this afternoon is not so much to discuss the immediate details of legislation as to ask the House to bear with me for a short time to consider the big problem that America faces.

I want to begin by pointing out that up to date in this Congress we have made provision for a very much smaller program of employment resulting from governmental expenditures than was done last year. The W. P. A. can be only two-thirds as big in the coming year as it was last year and keep within the appropriation. Last year, furthermore, we had $965,000,000 available for P. W. A. loans and grants; this year so far nothing. The President has made his proposal for a program of self-liquidating loans and Government investment apparently as a substitution for P. W. A.; but unless we get action on that program it will be of paramount importance that P. W. A. be extended, and if that is not done, or if W. P. A. is left in the shape it is in now, I am going to predict that we are going to be called back into special session in the fall of the year because of the necessity of doing something to further stimulate employment.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I yield.

Mr. COCHRAN. I understand that the chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency introduced a bill today that the President recommended.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I thank the gentleman. I am very glad indeed to know that. I believe that if we can pass that bill in good shape it will be of very great assistance.

The main point I am making is that it is most important for us to do something of the sort before we adjourn.

Mr. COCHRAN. When the chairman of an important committee himself introduces a bill it looks as though we would get action on it.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. The gentleman is undoubtedly correct. I thank the gentleman for the information.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I yield gladly to my distinguished and able friend from Mississippi.

Mr. RANKIN. It looks to me as if we were going to get a settlement of the T. V. A. controversy. I do not know whether the gentleman from California is familiar with what is going on or not.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I am very much interested in it.

Mr. RANKIN. I know the gentleman is interested, but I did not know whether he was familiar with what is going on. It looks as if we might get a settlement within a very few days now.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I believe it would be one of the finest things that could happen to the United States of America at this time.

Mr. RANKIN. I am in agreement with the gentleman from California.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. The main point I want to bring to your consideration this afternoon is the fact that whenever there has been a considerable increase in Government employment and public works, there has been a corresponding betterment in general conditions throughout the country. At the same time there has taken place an increase in the public debt, and more and more we hear from the esteemed gentlemen in the House, notably the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH], speeches about the problem of that national debt and the amount of "red ink" we are up against. Presumably their point of view is that we should at once balance the Budget by curtailment of these governmental expenditures. I take it that, generally, is the position of the Republican Party. What I want to say most of all this afternoon is that you cannot save the situation by that kind of method, and my reasons I will try to explain.

If we try to proceed to balance our Budget by the curtailment of employment on W. P. A., reduced farm-security loans, and cutting down similar enterprises, here is what would happen inevitably: You might, it is true, have a burst of sudden enthusiasm on the part of some of the people of money who would pour some of their funds into Wall Street, and there might be a flurry of activity, but it could not last; and the reason it could not last is because at the bottom of our problem is a problem of lack of balance between the capacity of the industries in this country to produce wealth on the one hand and the people's ability to buy the goods they produce upon the other. Just as surely as we get away from this conception we are going to run into bypaths where we will not find the answer to our problem.

IS EVER-MOUNTING DEBT INEVITABLE?

An attempt to balance the Budget by the curtailment of these expenditures would mean a deflation of serious consequences, it would mean an increase in the value of the dollar and a corresponding decrease in the value of all goods produced, including agricultural commodities. It would mean an increase in the real debt burden and in foreclosures and bankruptcies, and it would bring about a situation far worse than any we have seen yet. As we weigh these questions, shall we therefore conclude that the only answer to our problem is that we must necessarily have an ever-mounting public debt? I think that is not the answer to the problem, and for the following reasons:

REASON FOR INCREASE IN PUBLIC DEBT

The real reasons for the increase in public debt recently are these: Up until 1929 private enterprise was borrowing at a very considerable volume in order to finance additional production and expansion. Furthermore, consumers in the Nation had contracted by 1929 a total indebtedness of $11,000,000,000—largely by buying on the installment plan. They were really trying to purchase more goods than they could pay for out of their current incomes. They were postponing the depression. Furthermore, up until the year 1933 local governmental bodies were borrowing on the average of $1,000,000,000 per year. Since that year their total indebtedness has not increased. The increase of the Federal public debt since that time has not been an over-all addition to the total indebtedness of the country, but most of it has, rather, been a substitution for the indebtedness formerly contracted by private industry and local governmental bodies. The next point in this connection is a very simple one.

AMERICA'S DEBT MONEY

America transacts 95 percent of all her business transactions by means of what I call check-book money, which is to say that the medium of exchange that we use is not cash but mostly bank credit. Now, additional bank credit is brought into circulation only when people borrow at the banks and when the banks create deposits for the borrowers against the borrowers' security, if any. The commercial banking system of the Nation can expand in this way up to about five times the amount of the reserves that they hold with the Federal Reserve System.

Therefore, it is evidently the case, and the most singular factor in the whole picture, that the contraction of additional debt by the Government is principally for the purpose of inducing the banks to create a medium of exchange. In other words we are presenting them with Government bonds to induce them to create some more of this peculiar type of money that we depend upon today.

HOW TO GET RID OF THE "RED INK" WITHOUT CAUSING WORSE DEPRESSION

If we remember, then, that if private borrowers do not borrow, the Government must, and that America is dependent for a medium of exchange on bank credit, I believe we will then see what is evidently the case, that the way you can get rid of this "red ink" we are worried about is to take the very reasonable position that when the people of the United States increase through their industry and enterprise the capacity of this country to produce wealth, they thereby earn the right to have their sovereign Government exercise its sovereign right to bring into circulation an additional volume of money in order to prevent a deflation in the value of goods and services produced, and to prevent an increase in the value of the dollar with the consequent increase of the real debt burden.

All I am contending for is governmental action in the exercise of its sovereign right to have the sole power in this Nation to bring money or credit originally into circulation and the exercise of that right upon the principle of maintaining always a stable value in the dollar. We find today that in order to maintain a steady growth of prosperity in the country and increase our productive capacity we must increase the public debt; but under a rational system such as I am talking about, an increase in productive capacity and wealth would automatically lead to an increase in the amount of funds available with which to discharge their public debt. This is the difference between darkness and light, it seems to me.

Mr. LEAVY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. LEAVY. I am in full accord with the statement the gentleman is making. He shows a profound understanding of the subject.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. LEAVY. But to accomplish this purpose, would it not be necessary that the Federal Government either own a central banking system or own the 12 Federal Reserve banks and likewise require a 100-percent reserve for demand deposits?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I thank the gentleman. I sincerely believe the gentleman is exactly correct. Indeed, I have introduced a bill to do both of those things—H. R. 4931. I believe the bank of issue of the Nation should certainly be a bank belonging to the National Government.

And that situation would be brought about if we spent $132,000,000 to buy the capital stock of the now privately owned Federal Reserve. And the reason I believe a 100-percent reserve system is necessary is because otherwise when the Government puts new money into circulation it may form additional reserves in the banks, and without a 100-percent reserve it may lead to an uncontrolled inflation of bank credit.

Mr. LEAVY. Is that not exactly what has been happening in the last 5 or 6 years?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Yes. Excess reserves have been piling up, but they are reserves upon which credit could be extended if banks and borrowers could get together. They do not represent actual money directly available to the people for expenditure. And another thing: Every time a proposal has been made that the Government issue money instead of increasing the public debt, the objection about increasing idle reserves has been the one that has defeated the suggestion. At the moment we are confronted with the possibility of utilizing some $3,000,000,000 of absolutely unobligated gold and silver which belongs to our Treasury as a credit base for the proposed lending program, and we could do that as well as we could issue bonds. It is exactly what any private bank would do if it had that gold and silver. But I am not sure but what that objection about increasing reserves may be raised when it is proposed. Therefore, I am especially grateful to my fine colleague from Washington [Mr. LEAVY] for bringing out this matter of 100-percent reserves. On tomorrow I plan to put an extension of remarks in the RECORD dealing with my bill H. R. 4931, to which I have referred, answering the gentleman from Washington. I want to speak a little more generally today in the time that remains.

WHAT THE ECONOMISTS ARE POINTING OUT

For once in the history of the United States we have a reasonable agreement between what I think I am safe in saying are our ablest economists. They have been seeking a cure for the depression; they have been seeking to find the answer to the depression for years. I believe that we could get a pretty general agreement now at least on this point—that the depression is due to the fact that the national income, which equals goods and services produced and equals, therefore, the money paid out by industry and agriculture, is not equaled by the amount of money currently spent to purchase goods produced by industry and agriculture. Thus unsold goods accumulate and unemployment results.

Evidently industry and agriculture must recover at least their cost annually when they sell their goods or else they cannot continue to profitably operate.

Part of the money that is distributed in income to the American people is spent at once for goods. There is no trouble about that. But part of it is not so spent. It is either saved or invested and part is also set aside in depreciation accounts. So that I can state the general problem in four different ways and be right in every instance. I am going to do so, and prevent anyone coming along and saying, "But you did not give the right explanation."

FOUR WAYS TO STATE ONE PROBLEM

The first one runs like this: The general trouble is that not all of the national income received is currently spent for goods purchased on account of the fact that the national income is poorly distributed. That is, some of the people get so little of it and such a large percentage of it goes to a comparatively few people who necessarily do not have to spend it currently for goods, and therefore do not. Undoubtedly this is correct and we shall not solve unemployment until we get a better distribution of income.

The second explanation is that savings are subtracted from the stream of buying power, but not all such savings are promptly invested in new capital goods. This is clearly true but I would add that even if all those savings were currently invested in capital goods, the people who were foolish enough to make such investments would find they had embarked upon a venture which could only end in a kind of loss that was experienced in 1929. And the reason would be—once again—lack of a sufficient volume of consumer buying power to buy the goods produced by the new investment.

In 1937 we had a volume of savings equal to $19,000,000,000. I do not know of a single economist in this country who would contend that we have room for annual investment of anything like that amount. Our problem resolves itself into the necessity of reducing the volume of total savings on the one hand, in order that the amount of money available for investment will not be too great, and using those revenues through payment of general old-age retirement pensions or in similar ways in order to stimulate the general level of consuming power of the people of the Nation. And if we mean business about saving democracy we cannot go at this business in any half-hearted way.

The third explanation—that means practically the same thing—is that the volume of active buying power in circulation in the country never keeps up with the volume of production. I am one who believes—and I am not quoting economists now; I am merely speaking personally—that it never can equal the value of goods and services produced until you have the type of monetary system that I was speaking about a few moments ago. The reason I believe this is because it seems to me evident that every new capital investment means both a storing up of a portion of current income for future use and also an increase in future productive capacity. This should lead—but does not now lead—to a direct debt-free increase in the volume of money, and therefore buying power, in active circulation. Only Congress is authorized by the Constitution to bring that additional money into circulation.

The fourth explanation that can be made—and I am certain it is sound—is that this trouble is due to the fact of monopoly control over many of our industries, which monopoly control is largely traceable to large financial houses. Monopoly, therefore, is in a position to hold its prices up artificially, to secure for itself too much of the total national expenditures, to pile up surpluses either in individual or corporate hands, and thus to deprive competitive industries, such as agriculture, for example, of their just share of the national income.

Under these circumstances, if we are going to start in working in earnest on this problem, we evidently are confronted—and I revert to something I said in the beginning of my speech—with the fact that new borrowing has to equal the amount of current income which is not currently spent for goods, and unless new borrowing does equal, therefore, the amount of money set aside, saved, hoarded, or whatever you want to call it, you have a depression. To prevent that result, and at the same time prevent constant increase in the national debt, is our problem. To solve it will require, first, a constitutional monetary system; second, a tax-pension system to give us better distribution of buying power; third, a program to keep monopoly from artificially curtailing production and maintaining prices above fair levels; and, fourth, also a program of public investment and employment to make use of all America's skill and workmanship and to give our people confidence in the fact of threatened unemployment.

INCREASED LIVING STANDARDS ONLY PLACE FOR EXPANSION OF INDUSTRY TODAY

In the past in the United States we had two great things on which we could depend. One of them was increasing population and the other was westward expansion. Both of these forces, together with the discovery of new timber, minerals, fertile lands, and so on, gave everybody an assurance that the money loaned for repayment in the future would be able to be paid back, generally speaking. It also meant that values were going to increase and that new values were constantly going to be created, and that, therefore, it was possible for a larger volume of borrowing and debt always to be absorbed and carried. In those days dependence on bank credit as a medium of exchange was therefore not so serious as now.

As time went on, on account of the fact that our Nation is all settled, its resources exploited and its factories built, that factor no longer is operative. Our population growth is slackening off, too, and before long, we are told, will have ceased to increase at all. We have to look for expansion of our industry to an increased standard of living of the people of this Nation, and that is the only place we can look for it. That means a better distribution of buying power; it means an additional volume of buying power; it means that the people who want a general old-age pension are right, and not wrong; and it means that Government investment has to take place in such things as additional hospital facilities, soil conservation, natural-resource development, and probably a low-cost housing, the things that private industry cannot do profitably but which will raise the standard of living of the people. An increasing percentage of our national income will have to be spent on these things in the future if we are to avoid depression. That is necessary, not just because I want it and not just because the poor people of America would like it, or because they need these things, but for the sake of the health of the economic system of this whole great Nation. That is what it is necessary for. I regret to say, although I do feel I must say it, that there has been all too little consideration of these problems in this session of Congress. I believe the time has come when we are going to be impelled to give consideration to them—when the Congress will have to face its central responsibility.

There are several things we could do right now. I have already made mention of my monetary-control bill. I do not want to speak about that today any further than I already have, but on tomorrow I will put in the Record an extension of my remarks explaining the bill in rather considerable detail and telling about the wide interest in it.

There are several other things I should like to point out. I believe that we are necessarily focusing our attention upon the evident necessity of bringing about a balance between the capacity of the Nation to consume, on the one hand, and its power to produce, on the other, and can readily see the importance of three or four things. In the first place, let me mention a tax structure falling, I would say, not so heavily on active small business or on consumption, but falling sufficiently heavily upon individual incomes and inheritances to reduce the volume of those surplus savings and to provide revenue to be utilized for various types of payment to those groups of people in the Nation who cannot in the nature of the case and ought not in the nature of the case to be employed. I refer to dependent children, people beyond the age where they can expect employment, disabled people, and people like that. I believe that kind of system is necessary and essential, and I hope it is going to come true.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from South Dakota.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. How would the gentleman be able to reduce this tax on individual business and at the same time engage in increased Government borrowing?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. In the first place, I am not talking about increased borrowing, I will say. But in the second place, I am not at all sure how much revenue would be lost by a decrease of the taxes on small competing businesses. In the third place, I am perfectly ready to stand the gaff now or at any other time for a substantial increase in the rates on individual personal incomes and inheritances and other similar types of taxation. That is the way I would try to do it. I have no objection, either, to a general tax falling on practically everybody in the Nation, if it is not too burdensome, providing that the money is all to be used for some such general purpose as the payment of a general pension. The essential thing, however, is increased national income, which will mean increased tax revenues. Increased national income, however, must mean increased consumer buying power as the central thing. We have, I believe, to attack unemployment and to solve it. I believe we will be compelled by events to do this soon. I want us to take considered action before we are forced to take precipitous action. I have only had time to suggest today some of the things I believe we must do. Above all, my appeal is for a positive consecration on the part of the Congress to this task.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include therein a brief editorial.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COOPER). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein a table from official sources.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

BIRTHDAY OF HON. FRANK CROWTHER

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I was very much surprised earlier in the session this afternoon to have a young man step up to me and say, "Congratulate me, it is my birthday." He is a typical, outstanding example of a sound mind in a sound body. I prefer the English version to the old Latin version that I learned a good many years ago. I know the former version is correct and I would not be quite certain in quoting the Latin, and I am not sure our distinguished stenographer would get it just right if I did. So let it go at that—a sound mind in a sound body.

To have a sound mind a man must have, in my opinion, a sound body. When a man can get up at daylight in the morning and go out and shoot a 35 on a golf course and keep that up day in and day out in the temperature that Washington has been enduring in the last few weeks, he must have a sound body.

That this same man has a sound mind, we here in the House of Representatives have known for a long time. He is one of the outstanding Members of this House. He has been a Member of it for 22 years. I have had the pleasure and privilege of sitting next to him on the Ways and Means Committee for probably more than half the length of service he has rendered in the House, and for one I can testify to the sound mind. You Members of the House have heard him on this floor and have measured his mentality by the quality of his remarks, as well as the ease with which he addresses this body, too infrequently, in my opinion. We wish we might hear from him more frequently.

A few days ago we did honor to the oldest Member of the House, the distinguished gentleman from Colorado [Mr. TAYLOR], who on the day I refer to was 81 years old, or rather, I think it would be better to put it, 81 years young—an astonishing man. The man whom I am referring to now is likewise an astonishing man, and, if I am any prognosticator with respect either to mentality or physical power, he will continue his service here until he reaches the age that our good friend TAYLOR already has attained; but today he is quite a ways from that age, and therefore I want particularly at this time, Mr. Speaker, to have the privilege of paying tribute to the service that this man has rendered during the more than 20 years he has been a Member of the House, and refer to the fact that today he is only 69 years young. We all wish him well in a continuation, not alone of his service here but his service to his country.

I refer to the gentleman from New York, the Honorable FRANK CROWTHER. [Applause.]

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, if I had been aware of the fact that this great event, the birthday of my colleague, Hon. FRANK CROWTHER, was to occur today, I would, of course, have come here properly dressed for the occasion. I feel a little too informally attired to discuss such an important subject at this time. [Laughter.] The distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] has referred to the mental vigor of my colleague at the age of 69. You know we have to make comparisons sometimes. Just the other day I learned that an old gentleman down in Kentucky who at the age of 126 married a young woman aged 26, and that in the course of time they had a child. Time went along and after a while the wife passed away. The old gentleman insisted on taking care of the baby, but his father-in-law, who had reached the age of 78 years, thought that his son-in-law, at the age of 127, was hardly fit to take care of a child of such tender age.

When the old gentleman was away from home one day, the father-in-law, aged 78, went over and took the baby to his home. When the pappy at the age of 127 came in and found that the baby was gone and was told that his father-in-law had taken him, he immediately took his Winchester rifle, mounted a mule, and rode over and got the baby. This vigorous old Kentuckian died at the age of 136. So far as I can ascertain, the vigor of our colleague is superior to that of the old gentleman from Kentucky. So, knowing of your long and distinguished service in the House, we wish you all the vitality and longevity displayed by the old gentleman from Kentucky. FRANK, we are proud of your services in this House. You are beloved by every one of your colleagues and we wish for you a long and prosperous life. [Applause.]

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Hook). Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I do not want to let this opportunity pass without at least raising my voice briefly in acquiescence of the remarks made by the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] and the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. REED] with respect to the birthday of our genial friend, highly esteemed, and distinguished colleague, the gentleman from New York, Dr. CROWTHER. It has been my privilege as a majority Member of the House and of the Ways and Means Committee to serve with him for several years and to enjoy his delightful companionship and know something of his outstanding ability and his devotion to duty, and also his great value as a legislator, and on behalf of the majority side of the House, especially the majority members of the Committee on Ways and Means, I offer sincere congratulations and felicitations and wish him many happy returns of the day. [Applause.]

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Hook). Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, there is a great deal that I could say about the gentleman from New York [Mr. CROWTHER], of my pleasure in serving with him and my great admiration for him, but I dwell largely upon his services to the people of the country in his championship of the protective tariff. I believe there is not a worker in the United States today who does not wish Dr. CROWTHER many happy returns of the day. A great believer in and a great fighter for a tariff that will protect the jobs of the people of the United States against foreign imports made by poorly paid labor, he has been responsible for winning many battles for different industries and for labor. I wish him many happy returns of the day, as they do. He has been a tremendous asset to this country, as well as to the House of Representatives. In wishing you many happy returns of the day, Dr. CROWTHER, I wish for the country many more years of your service in Congress. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COOPER). The Chair will be pleased to recognize the gentleman from New York [Mr. CROWTHER], if he desires recognition.

Mr. CROWTHER. Mr. Speaker, certainly I am appreciative of these wondrously kind remarks that have been made in reference to my long service in the House and as a member of the Ways and Means Committee. I am reminded of two Irishmen who went to a funeral and listened to a long dissertation by a Methodist preacher eulogizing their employer who had been a hard taskmaster. On the way home, one looking rather disconsolately at the other said, "Mike, you seem awfully glum." Mike replied, "Yes, I am, but I am feeling better than I was, and I am thinking what a fine thing it would be if every man could only listen to his own funeral sermon." [Laughter.] Once again, I thank you all for the very generous references you have made regarding my service. [Applause.]

EXPLANATION

Mr. CREAL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. CREAL. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, since coming here on April 3 I have missed only one vote; and, as luck usually goes, it was the one vote of all votes that I most disliked to miss.

I represent a farming district of 19 counties. That vote was on the parity-payment program. I merely wanted to get something in the Record to state my position. I have tried at various times on various days since then to get recognition, but each time senior Members having the floor, and always believing in the maxium of not being forward with your superiors, I have been wafted aside and have not had an opportunity.

All my colleagues and my friends know my record for 4 years. I have never voted against any farm bill, if the farmers wanted it. In that case I was paired and the result would be the same. When the buzzer rang I was on my way here and encountered delay on both elevators and I arrived a few seconds late. I would very much have preferred to vote and relieve the gentleman with whom I was paired in order to be on record.

I wanted to state that I was in favor of that measure, and while I was paired and the result was the same, I regret very much not having been recorded. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has expired.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. EATON of California (at the request of Mr. ANDERSON of California), indefinitely, on account of illness.

SENATE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED

Bills and a joint resolution of the Senate of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S. 5. An act to grant certain lands to the Arizona State Elks Association Hospital; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

S. 119. An act for the relief of Helen M. Crowley; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 255. An act authorizing the Secretary of War to convey to the port of Cascade Locks, Oreg., certain lands for municipal purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 577. An act extending civil-service retirement to certain postmasters; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

S. 607. An act to amend section 40 of the act entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes," approved September 7, 1916, as amended; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

S. 753. An act for the relief of the widow and children of Dr. Joe M. Ferguson; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1289. An act for the relief of the city of Leavenworth, Kans.; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1445. An act for the relief of Bruno Arena; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1618. An act granting an annuity to William F. Pack; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

S. 2491. An act for the relief of Edward J. Gebhart; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 2562. An act to facilitate certain construction work for the Army, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 2586. An act to authorize the acquisition of additional land for military purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 2607. An act authorizing the Comptroller General of the United States to settle and adjust the claim of Edith Easton and Alma E. Gates; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 2624. An act to amend the act of August 24, 1912 (37 Stat. 460), as amended, with regard to the limitation of cost upon the construction of buildings in national parks; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

S. 2634. An act to reserve to the United States for the Bonneville project a right-of-way across certain Indian lands in the State of Washington, subject to the consent of the individual allottees and the payment of compensation, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

S. 2639. An act relating to the hours of service of persons employed upon the Government-owned Wiota-Fort Peck Railroad in the State of Montana; to the Committee on Labor.

S. J. Res. 107. Joint resolution authorizing the President of the United States to award a gold medal of appropriate design to Dr. Anita Newcomb McGee; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

- H. R. 733. An act for the relief of S. A. Rourke;
  - H. R. 3537. An act to extend the facilities of the United States Public Health Service to active officers of the Foreign Service of the United States;
  - H. R. 3541. An act for the relief of John Chastain and Mollie Chastain, his wife;
  - H. R. 3576. An act to make effective the provisions of the Officers' Competency Certificates Convention, 1936;
  - H. R. 4370. An act authorizing the city of Chester, Ill., to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Chester, Ill.;
  - H. R. 4497. An act to prescribe rules for the enrollment of Menominee Indian children born to enrolled parents, and for other purposes;
  - H. R. 4511. An act to extend to Sgt. Maj. Edwin O. Swift, United States Marine Corps (retired), the benefits of the act of May 7, 1932, providing highest World War rank to retired enlisted men;
  - H. R. 5288. An act to amend section 691-a of the Code of Law of the District of Columbia, approved March 3, 1901, and of any act or acts amendatory thereof relating to foreign building and loan associations doing business in the District of Columbia;
  - H. R. 5346. An act for the relief of Mrs. A. R. Barnard, Charles A. Stephens, Donald W. Prairie, and dependents of Vern A. Needles; and
  - H. R. 6836. An act to amend the act entitled "An act for the grading and classification of clerks in the Foreign Service of the United States of America, and providing compensation therefor," approved February 23, 1931, as amended.
- The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills and joint resolutions of the Senate of the following titles:
- S. 12. An act for the relief of Dica Perkins;
  - S. 129. An act for the relief of Howard Arthur Beswick;
  - S. 216. An act for the relief of A. C. Williams, administrator of the estate of his wife, Julia F. Williams;
  - S. 221. An act for the relief of Anthony Coniglio;
  - S. 431. An act for the relief of Mrs. Quitman Smith;
  - S. 510. An act to authorize certain officers and enlisted men of the United States Army to accept such medals, orders, and decorations as have been tendered them by foreign governments in appreciation of services rendered;
  - S. 556. An act for the relief of Catherine Humler;
  - S. 633. An act for the relief of Ray Wimmer;
  - S. 661. An act for the relief of Ida A. Deaver;

SENATE

TUESDAY, JULY 11, 1939

(Legislative day of Monday, July 10, 1939)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian on the expiration of the recess.

The Chaplain, Rev. Z. Barney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O God, who hast formed all hearts to love Thee and hast created all desire to be unsatisfied save in Thee, bless, we humbly beseech Thee, the multitudes of men who are confused and sore within, who long for love and friendship but feel that no one cares for them, and who see life only as a tragedy, brackish with the salt of human tears. Take Thou their trembling hands in Thine and lead them through the shadowland into the brightness of Thy light.

Upon Thy servants here bestow Thine especial gifts of wisdom and understanding, that, with pure hearts and minds, they may solve these problems that confront them, with their tangled, changing worth, to the lasting benefit of our own people and to the amelioration of all the troubles of the world, as by faith we feel after Thee, as through love we find the way, and as in hope we bring ourselves to Thee. We ask it for the sake of Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

INDEPENDENCE DAY FELICITATIONS FROM SENATE OF CHILE

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a cablegram dated July 4, 1939, from the Senate of Chile, signed by its president and secretary, unanimously congratulating the Senate of the United States on the occasion of the national anniversary of the independence of the United States, which was ordered to lie on the table.

GRADING AND CLASSIFICATION OF CLERKS IN THE FOREIGN SERVICE

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, which was read and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

To the Congress of the United States of America:

I commend to the favorable consideration of the Congress the enclosed report from the Secretary of State and the accompanying draft of proposed legislation to amend the act entitled "An act for the grading and classification of clerks in the Foreign Service of the United States of America, and providing compensation therefor," approved February 23, 1931.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, July 11, 1939.

[Enclosures: Report of Secretary of State with enclosures as listed.]

INSPECTIONAL FACILITIES AT INTERNATIONAL TOLL BRIDGES AND TUNNELS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to require owners or operators of international toll bridges and tunnels to provide and maintain free and adequate inspectional facilities for Federal agencies stationed at such bridges and tunnels for the purpose of supervising and regulating commerce with foreign nations, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Finance.

LAND AT VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION FACILITY, COATESVILLE, PA.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to authorize the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to transfer by quitclaim deed to the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. for right-of-way purposes a small strip of land at Veterans' Administration facility, Coatesville, Pa., which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Finance.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the petition of the Coconutmen's Association of the Philippines in the Barrio of Pils, Municipality of Lucban, Province of Tayabas, P. I., praying that section 602½ of the Revenue Act of 1934 be amended by authorizing the government of the Philippine Commonwealth to turn over to the copra producers one-half or three-eighths of the fund received as excise tax on coconut oil, etc., which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also laid before the Senate resolutions adopted at the conference of the Western Association of State Game and Fish Commissioners at Del Monte, Calif., requesting that the Bureau of Biological Survey provide sufficient funds to purchase winter feed for migratory water fowl; that funds be provided under the so-called Pittman-Robertson Act for the maintenance of game projects; relative to Regulations G-20-A of the Secretary of Agriculture, and also extending thanks to the Forest Service, the Soil Conservation Service, the Bureau of Biological Survey, and the Bureau of Fisheries for their cooperation, which were referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also laid before the State a resolution adopted at the conference of the Western Association of State Game and Fish Commissioners at Del Monte, Calif., requesting closer cooperation between the Bureau of Fisheries and the Bureau of Reclamation in connection with future reclamation projects, which was referred to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation.

He also laid before the Senate resolutions adopted at the conference of the Western Association of State Game and Fish Commissioners at Del Monte, Calif., requesting that the Secretary of the Interior reconsider his action in ruling that lands leased under the so-called Taylor Grazing Act may be closed to hunting and fishing and to promulgate new regulations insuring shooting privileges to the American public on the public domain; also, a resolution opposing the establishment of any more national parks in the Western States or the extension of existing park areas; and, also, a resolution protesting against the interpretation given to regulations G-22-A and G-22-C of the Forest Service relative to actual owners of game in the Pisgah National Forest, N. C., which were referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted at the conference of the Western Association of State Game and Fish Commissioners at Del Monte, Calif., expressing thanks to the mayor of Monterey, to Ralph O. Marron, and Bill Williams, of Monterey, and particularly to Herbert C. Davis, executive officer of the California Division of Fish and Game, in connection with the nineteenth annual conference of the association, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution of the Commissioners of the City of Wilmington, N. C., with respect to making funds available for continuation of the Housing Authority program and the extension of the public works program by Congress, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. HOLT presented a paper in the nature of a memorial from members of the Auxiliary Unit of American Legion, Belle Post, No. 95, in the State of West Virginia, remonstrating against the enactment of legislation to increase immigration to the United States until needy American people are cared for, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented the petition of members of Unit No. 15, American Legion Auxiliary of Parkersburg, W. Va., favoring the prompt enactment of measures to assist disabled veterans of the World War and their dependents, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented the petitions of Townsend Club, No. 1, of Hendricks; Townsend Club, No. 1, of Dakota; Townsend Club, No. 1, of Hampshire County; and Townsend Club, No. 1, of Wheeling, all in the State of West Virginia, praying for the enactment of the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 145) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States relating to old-age assistance, which were ordered to lie on the table.

NAMING OF AGGRESSOR NATIONS—PETITION

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, although we shall not consider at this session of Congress the so-called neutrality bill passed several days ago by the House in the form of the Bloom bill, I should like to have printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and appropriately referred a petition I have just received from a group of my good friends and fellow citizens of North Carolina, signed by Dr. Frank P. Graham, of Chapel Hill, N. C., and many others, and which is in support of the Thomas amendment to the Neutrality Act. Before presenting it for the RECORD, however, I should like to make clear that the position taken in this petition is contrary to my own position, and that I am against any proposal that would permit the naming of an aggressor. I believe that extension of the power to name an aggressor would inevitably draw us into war, and particularly the suggestion that the aggressor be made uncomfortable and unpopular, presumably by this Nation.

Mr. President, we cannot police the world. We have troubles enough right here at home to keep us busy for many years to come. Let us get those attended to before we tackle anything else.

There being no objection, the petition was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD without all the names attached, as follows:

To North Carolina's Senators and Representatives in the Congress of the United States:

There is one public question which at this time overshadows in importance all others, and that is the question of world peace or world war. This is a question whose determination has the capacity to promote or disastrously to impair the happiness and well-being of our State and Nation. As citizens of North Carolina we desire to present to you a request for consideration of the only course of action which in our judgment can contribute to peace.

Our relation to the present world situation makes clear what our procedure should be. While we are removed from the immediate scenes of international disturbance, we must admit, if we are realistic, that in the event of war against the democracies of the world, the greatest and richest democracy of all will find it difficult to keep out of such a world war. Therefore, the surest and perhaps the only way for us to have peace is to prevent such a world war. Only two methods of prevention have been proposed.

One is to do nothing, to let aggression take its course, to maintain a strict and therefore utterly impotent neutrality, to pursue a policy of unconcerned and irresponsible isolation. This is the method favored by those who believe that we can have peace by merely wishing it, and without doing anything to achieve it. The trouble with this method is that it is neither effective nor ethical.

The other method is the realistic, common-sense method which we use when domestic disorder arises. We locate the aggressor, and we do all we can to render aggression uncomfortable and unpopular. There is no trouble to locate the international aggressor if we accept the formula that whenever a nation refuses to negotiate and resorts to force, that nation is the aggressor. It is not necessary for us to throw bombs at the aggressor when a little well-timed economic mustard gas will be just as effective. We can refuse to associate with or to do business with aggressor nations, and we can give aid and comfort to nations who are the victims of aggression. That is the effective way, and that is the ethical way in a community of nations.

We would respectfully urge you to support a foreign policy which will seek to promote peace by the prevention of aggression. We urge you to support such a policy and such legislation under whatever name appearing, such as the Thomas amendment to the Neutrality Act or other legislation seeking peace by the way of prevention of aggression by any means short of war.

Respectfully submitted.

DR. FRANK P. GRAHAM, Chapel Hill, N. C.

MR. A. W. MCALISTER, Greensboro, N. C.

R. O. BROWNING, Burlington, N. C.

(And others).

MANUFACTURE OF SMALL AMERICAN FLAGS

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, during the recent visit of the King and Queen of England to Washington, when United States flags were very much in evidence, I am informed that small flags of our country made in Japan were being sold for 10 cents, while similar flags made here were being sold for 25 cents. I was reminded of this situation upon receipt of resolutions from the Cambria County Committee of the American Legion. I ask unanimous consent to have these resolutions printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Finance, showing that a thorough search of the shops in the city of Johnstown, Pa., revealed the fact that no small American flags were available except those stamped "Made in Germany" or "Made in Japan."

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the resolutions will be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Finance.

The resolutions are as follows:

Whereas at a recent celebration in the vicinity of the city of Johnstown, Pa., requiring the use of small American flags a thorough search of the shops in the city of Johnstown revealed the fact that no small American flags were available except those stamped "Made in Germany" or "Made in Japan"; and

Whereas the only conclusion to be drawn from such a situation is that our own producers of American flags are not adequately protected: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Cambria County committee of the American Legion, representing all the 17 American Legion Posts of Cambria County, at its regular monthly meeting held in Barnesboro on Tuesday, the 20th of June 1939, go on record as condemning the situation outlined above; and be it further

Resolved, That this committee urge the United States Senators from Pennsylvania and the Representatives in Congress from the Twenty-seventh Congressional District to support measures to correct the aforesaid situation.

I hereby certify the foregoing to be a true and correct copy of the resolution adopted at the regular monthly meeting of the Cambria County committee held at Barnesboro on Tuesday, June 20, 1939.

T. J. RODGERS, Secretary.

POSTPONEMENT OF NEUTRALITY LEGISLATION—RESTRICTION OF CERTAIN EXPORTS

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I feel I should announce to the Senate that at a meeting of the Committee on Foreign Relations held this morning the committee voted to postpone further consideration of the pending bills on neutrality until the next session of Congress.

However, there are two resolutions pending before the committee dealing with exports to signatories of the Nine Power Treaty or Pact. The resolutions propose to place restrictions or to grant the power to place restrictions upon certain exports of war materials to countries that are violating the Nine Power Pact, resulting in death and danger of death to our citizens and the deprivation of the rights of our citizens under that treaty. One of the resolutions was introduced by the Senator from Washington [Mr. SCHWELLENBACH] and the other was introduced by me. The matter was taken up before the committee, and Friday morning at 10:30 o'clock has been set as the time to consider the two resolutions.

I am offering an amendment in the nature of a substitute for the resolution which I have pending before the committee. The resolution which I have pending before the committee is known as Senate Joint Resolution 123. In that resolution very large discretion was proposed to be granted to the President over the control of commerce, both export and import trade. It occurred to me, of course, that in dealing with import trade we would be dealing with a revenue question, and that the initiation of that question rests solely within the jurisdiction of the House of Representatives. So the amendment I am submitting as a substitute deals solely with exports. It names the exports. It names arms, ammunition, and implements of war, as defined in the Neutrality Act, and iron, steel, oil, gasoline, scrap iron, scrap steel, scrap metals containing a combination of iron and steel, and other metals or a combination of metals. In other words, I have limited the articles as nearly as I could to such articles as enter directly into war and are used directly at the present time in the war of Japan against China.

The resolution by its terms expires on May 1, 1940. Of course, any existing offenses or prosecutions arising prior to that time will continue in force.

I ask to have the amendment in the nature of a substitute for the joint resolution printed in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks, so that it may be available to the Senate, and that it be printed in the usual form and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The amendment in the nature of a substitute intended to be proposed by Mr. PITTMAN to the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 123) relative to violation of a treaty, was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed, and printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. PITTMAN in the nature of a substitute to the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 123) relative to violation of a treaty, viz: Strike out all after the resolving clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"That whenever the President shall find that any foreign state which is a party to the treaty known as the Nine Power Pact between the United States, Belgium, the British Empire, China, France,

Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, and Portugal, regarding principles and policies to be followed in matters concerning China, signed at Washington, February 6, 1922, is endangering the lives of citizens of the United States, or depriving such citizens of their legal rights and privileges, through the commission of acts, or the failure to perform required acts, in violation of the express provisions and guaranties in said treaty, the President is authorized by proclamation to restrict or prohibit the export from the United States to such foreign state, and to any other place under the physical or political control thereof, of any of the following articles and materials: 'Arms, ammunition, implements of war,' as defined in the act approved May 1, 1937 (Public Res. No. 27, 75th Cong., 1st sess.), and iron, steel, oil, gasoline, scrap iron, scrap steel, and scrap metal containing a combination of iron or steel and other metals or any combination of metals.

"SEC. 2. (a) Each proclamation issued by the President under section 1 shall definitely enumerate the articles and materials referred to in such section the export of which is to be restricted or prohibited by such proclamation, and shall name the foreign state or states and the places under the physical or political control thereof to which such proclamation is to apply.

"(b) Each such proclamation shall take effect upon the 30th day after the date such proclamation is issued, and shall remain in effect until changed, modified, or revoked as hereinafter provided.

"(c) The President may from time to time by proclamation change, modify, or revoke in whole or in part, any such proclamation, and he is authorized to prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this joint resolution.

"(d) Whenever in the judgment of the President the conditions which caused him to issue any such proclamation have ceased to exist, he shall revoke the proclamation and the provisions of this joint resolution shall thereupon cease to apply with respect to the foreign state or states and the places under the physical or political control thereof named in such proclamation, except with respect to offenses committed, or forfeitures incurred, prior to such revocation.

"SEC. 3. (a) It is hereby declared to be the intent of Congress that the authority granted to the President by this joint resolution shall be exercised only to the extent necessary for the protection of the lives of citizens of the United States and the rights and privileges guaranteed to them under the treaty referred to in section 1, and that such authority shall not be exercised until after the President shall have made every reasonable effort to induce the foreign state or states concerned in any violation of said treaty to comply with the terms of said treaty in order to protect the lives of such citizens and the rights and privileges so guaranteed.

"(b) In carrying out the provisions of this joint resolution there shall be no discrimination between foreign states which are parties to and so violating said treaty.

"SEC. 4. (a) Whoever shall export, or attempt to export, or cause to be exported, from the United States to any foreign state or states or to any place under the physical or political control thereof named in any proclamation issued by the President under section 1, any articles or materials enumerated in such proclamation the export of which is restricted or prohibited, shall be fined not more than $10,000, or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both, and the property, vessel, or vehicle containing the same shall be subject to the provisions of sections 1 to 8, inclusive, title 6, chapter 30, of the act approved June 15, 1917 (40 Stat. 223-225; U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 22, secs. 238-245).

"(b) In the case of the forfeiture of any articles or materials by reason of a violation of any such proclamation, no public or private sale shall be required; but such articles or materials shall be delivered to the Secretary of War for such use or disposal thereof as shall be approved by the President.

"SEC. 5. This joint resolution and all proclamations issued thereunder shall not be effective after May 1, 1940, except with respect to offenses committed, or forfeitures incurred, prior to such date."

Mr. KING. Mr. President, is this joint resolution in the nature of a statute, or does it merely confer upon the President of the United States power to interdict certain exports?

Mr. PITTMAN. It is in the nature of a power to the President. It allows the President to place a quota on exports, we will say, limiting them to normal, or to place a quota on some and an absolute embargo on others, so long as violations of our rights continue. The joint resolution expressly states that it is intended that the President shall make every effort to obtain recognition of our rights before the action is taken, and that he shall give notice 30 days in advance of the taking effect of the proclamation definitely describing the articles the export of which is restricted or embargoed, so that everyone may have notice.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President—

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield the floor.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I should like to ask the Senator from Nevada a question.

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. The Senator stated that I had a resolution upon the same question. Last Friday evening, over the National Broadcasting Co. system, I gave an explanation of my resolution. Would the Senator have any objection to my inserting the address in the RECORD at the conclusion of his remarks?

Mr. PITTMAN. No; I myself should like to have the pleasure of inserting the address. I think it is a very able one.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Nevada?

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

I have no desire to duplicate Orson Welles' fright-producing efforts in his radio drama portraying the conquerors from Mars (H. G. Wells' play, The War of the World). However, in order that you may fully appreciate the situation in the Far East let me present it in this way:

Suppose that tomorrow morning your newspapers should carry the story that your Government had decided to go to war. It had no provocation for this war. In fact, the war would be a direct violation of the treaty to which this Nation had solemnly obligated itself. Suppose that the governmental dispatches stated that it had no intention of declaring war, as required by recognized rules of international law. It was to be a war not of defense but of conquest. However, we were not to partake of any of the conquered territory. We were to ally ourselves with one of the principal aggressor nations of the world and assist in an attack upon one of the most defenseless nations in the world. The nation attacked, incidentally, was to be one which had always been friendly with us and which had relied upon our friendship to such an extent that it was in no measure able to defend itself. Our allies had demonstrated in the past that they were fierce fighters, ruthless and destructive. They never had any regard for even those slight principles of decency which had governed international conduct in times of war. They assured us that their methods in this war were to be the most frightful ever known. However, this was to be a safe war so far as we were concerned. None of our boys would be killed. None of them would be wounded. None of our property was to be destroyed. Our part of the war was to make money out of it. Huge profits were to go to our citizens and our corporations which furnished the necessary supplies for the conduct of the war. All we needed to do was to furnish the supplies and to take the profits.

What would be your reaction to such a news dispatch tomorrow morning? Would you approve of such conduct on the part of our Government? I have no doubt that if these radio airwaves could be reversed from each of you listening to me back into this broadcasting station the reverberations of the "Noes" thundered in answer to that question would drive me out of the station. You individually would disapprove of it; the American people as a whole would disapprove of it; the Nation would disapprove of it.

Yet for all practical purposes the situation I have described unofficially exists today in our relationship with the Japanese conquest of China.

We, more than any other nation in the world, are directly assisting in the continuation of Japan's activities in China. Were it not for the assistance of the United States, Japan's Chinese campaign would probably have collapsed many months ago. Japan is a nation without the necessary materials of war. The whole purpose of her Chinese conquest is to acquire territory from which she may secure resources for further extension of war. We speak of her as having Germany and Italy as her allies. The fact is that we are her most important ally. Japan has no oil with which to operate her airplanes, her tanks, her trucks, her automobiles, or even her battleships. We furnish 65.67 percent of that which she secures from the outside world. She must have scrap iron and steel with which to manufacture her munitions. We furnish 90.39 percent of that. She must have copper for her munitions. We furnish 90.98 percent of that. She must have other metals and alloys, and we furnish 99.33 percent of those. She must have metal-working machinery. Our contribution is 67.9 percent of that. We furnish 64.67 percent of the automobiles and parts which she is using in China. We furnish 76.92 percent of the aircraft and parts with which she bombs the hospitals, schools, and missions in which the Chinese people seek shelter. There never has been in the history of the world—civilized or uncivilized—a more ruthless and frightful campaign of conquest than that which Japan has been waging in China during the last 2 years.

We have been told that the next war will be a war against populations and not between armies. If this is true, Japan is certainly furnishing a hideous sample of what we may expect. The murder of the old and young noncombatants, the destruction of schools and places of worship, the humiliation and ravishment of China's womanhood all paint for us a picture of lustful aggression gone rampant. The experts tell us that Japan has in adequate quantity only 2 of the 26 materials necessary to carry on modern warfare. Of the most important of the other 24 I have given you the figures as to the extent of our participation. If the writers of history in the future actually know how warfare was conducted in 1939 through the use of necessary materials, they will write down a description of China's conquest not by the Japanese but by a Japanese-American alliance—the Japs taking the conquered land and the Americans taking the profits from the sale of our raw materials.

We criticize the Japanese for not making an open declaration of war on China. Perhaps we should pause and wonder whether we are more than slightly less guilty.

To make this situation even more humiliating, it is in direct violation of treaty obligations upon our part toward China. We criticize Germany and Italy for their attitude toward treaties. We criticize England and France for their attitude toward Ethiopia and Czechoslovakia. In the proposals before the Congress that we should name the aggressor nations the distinction which we are urged to accept is upon the basis of treaty violations. Yet we are just as effectively violating a treaty as any of these nations ever have. It is true we send no enlisted American troops. We send only the materials for use by Japanese troops. We provide no drivers of trucks, or tanks, or pilots for airplanes. We just furnish the gasoline which propels these trucks and tanks and airplanes. We don't even take the chances that the Japanese take. All we do is to take the profits that we can make.

What treaty are we violating? In 1921, in an endeavor to reduce naval expenditures among the great powers, the Washington Conference was called. It had the leadership of the then very able Secretary of State and now revered Chief Justice Mr. Charles Evans Hughes. Its chief purpose in the beginning was the limitation of naval armaments. The most important accomplishment of the conference, however, was the adoption and signing of the Nine Power Pact. The purpose of this Nine Power Pact is stated in the treaty as follows:

"To adopt a policy designed to stabilize conditions in the Far East, to safeguard the rights and interests of China, and to promote intercourse between China and the other powers upon the basis of equality of opportunity."

This was not the first contact our Nation had had with China. For 125 years we have been sending over missionaries to open schools, colleges, hospitals, and churches. It might be said that that would create no obligation upon our part. So far as the Chinese were concerned it did create an obligation. The trust which the Chinese people had in American missionaries, doctors, nurses, and teachers was transferred to the American people and the American Nation as a whole. In 1899 we intervened in China and insisted upon the open-door policy. We insisted that our rights in China be recognized and that no other nation could create a sphere of influence there. After the Boxer Rebellion in 1900 we again bound China to us by refusing our indemnities. Such was the feeling of the Chinese people toward our country that in 1911, when the new Government was set up, ours was taken as the example and model. We encouraged such an attitude upon the part of the Chinese people. During the World War, when the rest of the world was busily engaged, Japan made an effort through her 21 demands to destroy the territorial integrity of China. In that she was blocked by Woodrow Wilson. In return for this China readily complied with President Wilson's request and declared war upon the Central Powers shortly after we entered the world conflict. When that war ended, however, China profited not at all. The net result, so far as China was concerned, was that her old rival and enemy—Japan—was given all of the German rights in China in addition to many other rights in Shantung which was China's sacred Province. In retaliation of that, and with disappointment with the way she had been treated by her Allies, the Chinese people commenced their effective blockade against Japanese goods. It was an effective blockade. Its success struck vitally at the economic structure of Japan. It must be remembered that then Japan did not have her diversified foreign trade, her merchant marine had not been built to the strength that it now occupies. To Japan, Chinese trade was of vital importance. By the time of the Washington Conference on Armistice Day, 1921, the Chinese blockade had reached a state of well-nigh perfection. In that conference we asked Japan to agree to a naval program which meant economy for us and also lessened the danger to us in the Pacific. In consideration of Japan's agreement in the naval side of the conference we induced China to discontinue the blockade. In payment for this action on China's part we wrote into article I of the Nine Power Pact the agreement "to respect the sovereignty, the independence, and the territorial and administrative integrity of China."

All nine of the nations agreed to it. So solemn was the declaration on our part that President Coolidge proclaimed:

"To the end that the same and every article and clause thereof may be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States and the citizens thereof."

China, relying entirely upon her trust in us, surrendered her most effective weapon. China believed her sovereignty and independence, administrative and territorial integrity would be respected by the nations of the world. Did she not have the strong arm of her American friend to uphold her? Yet today China suffers and her independence and her territorial and administrative integrity are being destroyed. We, for the filthy profits involved, are aiding, abetting, and cooperating in that destruction.

What right have we to point the finger of scorn at Germany, Italy, France, or England when they regard treaties as scraps of paper? Contemporary historians of these days are striking a saddened note describing this era as one of treaty breakers. Can anyone doubt that our oil and our copper and our scrap steel and iron are the most effective agents in this violation of a treaty that this era has yet seen?

So far as China and Japan are concerned, it isn't a matter of us getting into the war. We already are in the war. We are in the war in violation of a treaty which we signed in order to gain an advantage which we sought. The background of our relations with China should make that treaty the most sacred of any ever written.

The courts of equity place upon the individual who has gained the respect and confidence of another individual a much higher duty for the faithful performance of an agreement than upon one who is dealt with at arm's length. The same rule should apply to nations. So far as we are concerned, it should have particular application in regard to China.

There is another aspect of this problem which we must discuss. It involves the relationship between the Far East and Europe. Japan's conquest of China has a direct bearing upon the possibility of war in Europe. One need only to review the events of the past 2 years to reach this conclusion. Certainly, the events of the last 2 weeks have cinched the conclusion. No person with his eyes open can escape believing that there is a direct relationship between the situation in China and the situation on the continent of Europe. It may be that the Rome-Berlin axis has not been extended in military form to Tokyo; no well-informed person will deny that the Tokyo end of the alliance does directly cooperate with Rome and Berlin. It is no coincidence that every time Mr. Hitler has decided to seize more territory in Europe the attention of those who might oppose him has been distracted by annoyances from Japan. What other explanation can be given to the Tientsin incidents of the past few weeks and of the outbreaks between Japan and Russia upon the Mongolian border? Japan certainly doesn't today desire to add to its opposition. Japan's armies and its resources are fully occupied by the Chinese controversy. Yet deliberately it chooses, from time to time, to provoke unnecessary conflicts with England, France, and Russia. Such conflicts uniformly come simultaneously with threats of further acquisition of territory by Germany and Italy. No more decisive steps could be taken by a nation desiring to prevent war in Europe than those which would prevent Japan from rendering indirect assistance toward furthering of a war in Europe.

We in Congress are in the midst of vigorous debate over what we should do in event war comes to Europe. We have no treaty obligations in Europe. We do have most definite and sacred treaty obligations in Asia. Yet, we almost completely neglect consideration of them even though respect for them would probably materially lessen the chance of the European war we so much fear. In my opinion, every consideration of logic, justice, and responsibility requires that our first step should be to get out of the present war in which we are so effectively participating.

TRANSMISSION OF FRANKABLE MATTER THROUGH THE MAILS

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, several days ago, when the calendar was last under consideration, the Senate passed Senate Joint Resolution 134. It was withheld from the House, however, because I offered the text of the joint resolution as an amendment to the third deficiency bill. The amendment was adopted by the Senate, agreed to by the conferees, and is now a part of the law; so Senate Joint Resolution 134 need no longer receive the attention of the Congress.

I therefore ask unanimous consent that the vote by which the joint resolution was passed by the Senate may be reconsidered, in order that I may move its indefinite postponement.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I should like to have the joint resolution identified. What is its number?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It is the joint resolution providing certain limitations upon the transportation of frankable mail in the mails.

Mr. AUSTIN. Is it on the calendar?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It was passed when the calendar was considered several days ago, and I now desire to have it indefinitely postponed.

Mr. AUSTIN. I do not find it on the calendar.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It is not on the calendar, because it was passed.

Mr. AUSTIN. Very well. I have no objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the vote whereby the joint resolution was passed will be reconsidered.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I now move that Senate Joint Resolution 134 be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

AUTHORIZATION FOR RIVER AND HARBOR WORKS—AMENDMENT RELATIVE TO KODIAK HARBOR, ALASKA

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 6264) authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT—AMENDMENTS

Mr. HAYDEN and Mr. CONNALLY each submitted an amendment, and Mr. WAGNER submitted two amendments intended to be proposed by them, respectively, to the bill (H. R. 6635) to amend the Social Security Act, and for other purposes, which were ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

PENSIONS TO MEMBERS OF THE REGULAR ARMY, NAVY, ETC.—AMENDMENT

Mr. KING submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 522) to provide pensions to members of the Regular Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard who become disabled by reason of their service therein, equivalent to 90 percent of the compensation payable to war veterans for similar service-connected disabilities, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

EXPENSES IN CONNECTION WITH FUNERAL OF THE LATE SECRETARY SWANSON

Mr. GLASS submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 157), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate hereby is authorized and directed to pay from the contingent fund of the Senate the actual and necessary expenses incurred by the committee appointed by the Vice President in arranging for and attending the funeral of Hon. Claude A. Swanson, late Secretary of the Navy and former Senator from the State of Virginia, upon vouchers to be approved by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

INVESTIGATION OF "SHORT SELLING" ON THE CHICAGO BOARD OF TRADE

Mr. NYE submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 158), which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

Senate Resolution 158

Resolved, That the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, or any subcommittee thereof, is authorized and directed to make a full and complete investigation and study with respect to (1) the nature and legality of transactions in commodities involving the speculative sale thereof for future delivery, commonly known as "short selling," as conducted on the Board of Trade of the City of Chicago, a contract market under and subject to the Commodity Exchange Act; (2) the nature and legality of the methods employed by the said Board of Trade of the City of Chicago in connection with trading in commodities for future delivery; (3) the nature and legality of the methods employed by the Secretary of Agriculture and the Commodity Exchange Administration for enforcing and administering the Commodity Exchange Act with respect to trading in commodities for future delivery on the said Board of Trade of the City of Chicago; and (4) the possibility of improving the methods of trading in commodities for future delivery on the said Board of Trade of the City of Chicago in the interest of honesty, economy, and better service to the public and the legitimate grain trade. The committee shall report to the Senate, at the beginning of the next regular session of the Congress, the results of its investigation and study, together with its recommendations, if any, for legislation.

For the purposes of this resolution, the committee is authorized to sit and act, as a whole or by subcommittee, at such times and places in the United States as it deems advisable; to employ and fix the compensation of such counsel, clerical, stenographic, and other assistants; to hold such hearings; to administer such oaths and affirmations; to take testimony; to provide for the attendance of witnesses; to have such printing and binding done; and to make such other expenditures (not exceeding the sum of $25,000) as it deems necessary.

For purposes of conducting such investigation the expenses of the committee shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate on vouchers authorized by such committee or any subcommittee, signed by the chairman of the committee, and approved by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate. The official committee reporters shall be used at all hearings held in the District of Columbia.

THE CRAMP SHIPYARDS

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, in any well-considered plan of national defense it is not possible to exaggerate the importance of economic efficiency. Mass unemployment stands as a national weakness. This foe within is more to be feared than foes without. The workman back of the guardsman is of equal importance, and without his unfailing support all plans of military, naval, or aerial strategy will fail.

It is in this connection that I wish briefly to refer to the need for reopening the Cramp Shipyards in Philadelphia. The necessary adjustments with local tax authorities, I understand, are now being negotiated, and all eyes are being turned to see what action will be taken in Washington on this important matter. I have taken it up with Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, of the Maritime Commission, and hope something constructive will be done in the near future.

The reopening of the Cramp Shipyards in Philadelphia would be a great advantage to our national-defense program. It would give employment within a year to five or six thousand men. It would give employment to skilled workmen, who, without hope of such employment, are destined to lose their skill through lack of use. This in itself would be a national calamity, for it takes two or three generations to produce the skilled worker. If we continue on as now, we are likely to find ourselves as was the case in South Wales a short time ago, when skilled workmen had been idle so long that there was a genuine shortage when the nation was vitally in need of their services.

There is nothing economical or sensible in allowing skill in the hand to be lost through mass unemployment. Our first line of national defense should be jobs for our workers. I believe reopening the Cramp Shipyards would be genuinely helpful in this program.

HEARINGS BEFORE TEMPORARY NATIONAL ECONOMIC COMMITTEE

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I desire to announce that the third part of the hearings of the Temporary National Economic Committee has just been printed by the Government Printing Office. This volume will now be available to Members and to the public generally. It will be found of particular interest by Members at this time, because it deals with certain proposals for the modification of the patent laws. These proposals, which were fully canvassed by the Temporary National Economic Committee, have been framed into bills which I understand are being reported by the Patents Committees in this body and in the House. Not only will the Members of the Senate and the House find the hearings of interest, but I am sure the public likewise will do so.

I desire to say at this time that part 3 of the hearings will be available at the Government Printing Office at 35 cents a copy, part 1 is available at 25 cents, and part 2 at 75 cents.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I inquire of the Senator from Wyoming whether or not his committee has formally recommended the passage of the bills to which he has referred? I did not hear the first part of his statement.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I may say that the committee has formally recommended the passage of the bills, or the adoption of the proposals. The recommendation, however, has not as yet been printed; but I hope it will be available in printed form before the end of the week. I am at liberty to say that the committee has formally made these recommendations.

Mr. BONE. The bills will soon be before the Senate for action, since they have been reported by the Committee on Patents, and they embody the ideas of the Commissioner of Patents. They do not touch the basic patent law but serve to clear up a great many things which, in my judgment, have been very detrimental to the operation of the entire patent law of the country.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The bills to which the Senator refers deal practically exclusively with matters of procedure.

Mr. BONE. That is correct.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. There will be other recommendations. The Senator may be interested in having this volume.

Mr. BONE. They do not touch the substantive law but merely the mechanics of enforcement.

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT—AMENDMENT

Mr. HARRISON obtained the floor.

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a brief unanimous-consent request?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes; I yield for that purpose.

Mr. LEE. I understand that the social-security bill is coming up today. I wish to offer an amendment to the bill which will be here presently, and which I ask to have printed and lie on the table.

The amendment is a substitute for the part of the bill providing for old-age pensions to the needy and State matching. The amendment which I offer provides an outright Federal pension of $40 a month to all persons 60 or more years of age who are not gainfully employed.

I ask unanimous consent to have the amendment printed and lie on the table, to be taken up at the proper time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT OF EMERGENCY RELIEF APPROPRIATION ACT

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President—

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. MURRAY. On my own behalf and on behalf of a group of Senators, I introduce a bill to amend the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939 to provide for the reestablishment of the prevailing rates of pay for persons employed upon work projects. I ask that the bill be referred to the referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I inquire of the Senator from Montana why a bill amending relief legislation should be referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. MURRAY. Because it is a matter of legislation, and the Committee on Education and Labor is the appropriate committee to which to refer the bill.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, all the legislation with reference to the Works Progress Administration has been handled by the Appropriations Committee. The act which it is sought to amend was reported from the Appropriations Committee.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, does an objection lie? If so, I object to the reference of the bill to the Committee on Education and Labor.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Utah objects to the reference of the bill to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, I understand that it is not a matter of unanimous consent, but that I have a right to have the bill referred as I have requested.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let us see if it is a matter of right.

The Chair understands that under the rules of the Senate, when a Senator introduces a bill, it is the duty of the Chair to refer it to the proper committee. If a Senator asks to have a bill referred to a certain committee, the custom is to refer it to that committee; but, as the Chair understands, that does not take away the right of the Chair to refer the bill to the appropriate committee.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, I understand that the appropriate committee is the Committee on Education and Labor.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That is a matter which the Chair will decide, unless the Senate decides otherwise.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I think I have the floor, and I prefer not to have that matter decided at this time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks the Senate ought to determine at this moment to what committee the bill shall be referred. The Senator from Montana contends that as a matter of right he is entitled to have the bill referred to the Committee on Education and Labor. The Chair thinks the Senate ought to decide at this moment whether the bill shall go to that committee or to the Appropriations Committee.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, I move that the bill be referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I move as an amendment that the bill be referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President—

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment is not in order. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Montana.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I should like to discuss the motion.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I had the floor, and I yielded it merely to permit the introduction of a bill. I did not intend to yield the floor in order that Senators might engage in a long discussion. I am very anxious to bring up the social-security bill. I ask the Senator from Montana to withhold for the present his motion with regard to the reference of this bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. A motion is now pending, made by the Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY] to refer the bill to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. BARKLEY. Under the rules of the Senate, notwithstanding any custom with reference to Senators noting on bills the names of the committees to which they wish to have them referred, it is the duty of the Chair to send the bills to the appropriate committees. I thought the Chair was about to rule on the reference of this bill a moment ago when the motion was made. Is it in order, prior to the action of the Chair in deciding where a bill shall go, to move that it be sent to a certain committee?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The motion of the Senator from Montana is in order. The motion is that the bill be referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, it is true that in the past various matters with reference to the Works Progress Administration have been handled by the Committee on Appropriations. I desire, however, to read a statement which was made by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] on June 27, appearing at page 7960 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, at which time he was asking unanimous consent with respect to restrictions on amendments to the joint resolution which was then under consideration.

The Senator from Colorado said:

I ask the Chair whether or not under the rules the relief joint resolution comes under the head of a general appropriation bill? I am hopeful the Chair will so rule. The situation has changed. Heretofore relief measures have been regarded as emergency legislation. Each one was to be the last. However, we have now reached a situation of relief appropriations being an annual event.

That is not all, Mr. President. Under the provisions of the Reorganization Act a definite agency is created for the management of public works and W. P. A. projects. So we now have set up by statute a new agency, which includes the National Youth Administration, which will continue, the National Resources Board, and the Farm Security Administration. These permanent organizations are now being taken care of by annual appropriation bills. I ask the Chair whether or not in that situation a measure to take care of such permanent agencies has now acquired the status of a regular appropriation bill, remembering that the joint resolution will take effect after the 1st of July, after the reorganization plan has gone into effect.

The Vice President, presiding, ruled against the Senator from Colorado. He then made a request for unanimous consent, and it was objected to.

I think the Senator from Colorado in that statement has very accurately described the situation which now exists after the 1st of July. This is the only situation I know of in congressional legislation in which matters of legislation as well as matters of appropriation are handled by the Appropriations Committee.

The War Department comes before the Congress and asks for legislation authorizing appropriations; and the Congress, as a legislative matter, passes upon the question. Every other department of government comes before the Congress and has its legislation presented in a separate bill, which is referred to a separate committee. Then, when the legislative side of the matter has been agreed upon, the Departments go before the Appropriations Committee and ask for appropriations to take care of the legislative requirements.

As the Senator from Colorado pointed out in his statement on June 27, there has been a very definite recognition that we have reached a permanent situation so far as the Works Progress Administration is concerned. We cannot, consistently with every other sort of legislation we have, fail to recognize the changed situation, and fail to recognize the necessity and desirability of having committees of the Senate pass on legislative problems so far as the W. P. A. is concerned. It seems to me it would be absolutely inconsistent with every other action the Senate has taken in the past to continue this subject indefinitely in the Appropriations Committee.

I certainly do not want to cast even the semblance of a reflection upon the Appropriations Committee. So far as I am concerned, I do not know anybody who tries more ardently than does the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] to be fair in his consideration of these problems. Many times I have disagreed with him; but I am always amazed at his fairness, and particularly at the fact that when he takes part in conferences he fights even for things in which he does not believe. But we have now reached the point where this subject no longer has an emergency status. Heretofore, it has always been handled in that way; but we have now reached the point where we must consider it as a regular business, and it should fit into the regular rules and the regular customs of the Senate.

Therefore, I think the motion of the Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY] should prevail.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I merely wish to say that in the House a bill similar to that proposed by the Senator from Montana has, according to my information, already been referred to the Committee on Appropriations. I submit that if the bill introduced by the Senator from Montana should not be referred to the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, there is no other committee to which it should be referred other than the Committee on Unemployment, which by the Senate was instructed to report legislation referring to unemployment. I believe the bill should go to the Committee on Appropriations, because a subcommittee of that committee, and the Committee on Appropriations as a whole, have considered the very legislation which it is sought now to amend.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, as the chairman of the subcommittee which handled the relief bill I wish to say just a word. Very obviously in the request for the reference of the bill there is an implication as to the attitude of the Committee on Appropriations. The Senator from Montana obviously feels that he can secure certain considerations from another committee which could not be secured from the Committee on Appropriations. I call his attention to the fact that he is interested in the establishment of the prevailing wage, provision for which was adopted by the Senate, and the Committee on Appropriations stood by it. The Senator from Montana has no right to cast a reflection upon the Committee on Appropriations by asking for a reference which, in itself, is a reflection upon that committee.

So far as the committee is concerned, I know the members of the committee would be delighted to be spared this burden; it is not a pleasant undertaking. But, speaking for myself, and I think for other members of the committee, we resent the implication that the committee would not carry out its functions as it should.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, I have no desire to cast any reflection upon the able Senator who is the chairman of the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations, or to obtain any advantage whatever.

Mr. ADAMS. The Senator knows I have voted for prevailing wage legislation whenever it has been presented.

Mr. MURRAY. The only purpose I had in mind was to have the bill referred to what I considered to be the appropriate committee. I had only that in mind, and nothing impelled me to attempt to sidetrack it, or short circuit it, as the Senator has stated. I had only a desire to have the bill considered by the committee which is provided by the Senate for the consideration of a legislative matter of this kind.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I have no interest, except from a legislative standpoint, in what committee considers any bill. I think that the Senate ought to have more definite rules with respect to the assignment of bills. As the Chair knows, I have never agreed that the Chair is under any moral or legislative or parliamentary obligation to refer any bill to a committee to which it should not go simply because the introducer puts the name of such a committee on the bill. I think the Senate ought to have a rule about that matter. Failure to observe some form of rule with respect to the propriety of the assignment of bills really interferes with the appropriate consideration of legislation.

I voted for the prevailing-wage provision when the legislation was before us recently, and I have voted for it uniformly. Three or four years ago there was a fight on the floor of the Senate about the prevailing wage, but it was settled by an amendment which the Senate adopted, and which has been in the law ever since.

The Committee on Appropriations has reported the relief bill each time with the prevailing-wage provision in it. It was the House which inserted the language to which objection has been made, and the bill came to the Senate from the House with the so-called security-wage provision in it, and on the floor of the Senate we almost unanimously adopted an amendment substituting what has been in force for 3 or 4 years, the prevailing-wage provision, in lieu of the House language.

I understand that when the bill went to conference the Senate conferees fought for the retention of the Senate amendment as long as they reasonably could. The House conferees were obdurate and would not concede, and in view of the limitation of time under which we were all operating, the Senate conferees were compelled to yield.

I feel that, in view of the record of the Committee on Appropriations with respect to this legislation, not only on the point referred to, but the fact that it has always considered it even when there were legislative provisions in the measures under consideration in addition to the mere appropriation—and there had to be legislative provisions in order to fix the terms of the appropriation—I feel that the bill should be considered by the Committee on Appropriations. The bill has been referred to the Committee on Appropriations in the House and will be considered by that committee, and if we change the rule in the Senate now and refer amendments such as the one now suggested to some other committee, we may create a situation which will cause disharmony between the committees of the two Houses which have heretofore been dealing with the proposed legislation.

For these reasons I feel constrained to vote against the motion to refer the bill to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, before a vote is taken I desire to invite the attention of the Senate to an occurrence in the city of Minneapolis to which reference is made in this morning's press.

It appears that a large number of Works Progress Administration employees, engaged in what is commonly called a strike, and interfered with other Works Progress Administration employees who refused to strike. The striking employees assaulted some persons who continued at work, and killed a patrolman who was attempting to protect those employees who were loyal to their employer—the Government of the United States. The reports in the press state that three patrolmen were beaten; one of them was knocked down and one, Gearty, received injuries from which he died in the general hospital an hour after he was beaten. The newspaper reports state that an armored police car came to the rescue of the persons who were assailed and escorted the patrolman and a Mr. Fisher to the city hall. It is claimed that some 300 pickets immediately stormed into the corridors, threatened the police and Fisher with violence, and Fisher was held in jail for his own protection and later taken to the general hospital. Fisher was a Works Progress Administration worker but a nonstriker.

Senators will draw from the published reports such conclusions as they regard as warranted. If the press has correctly described the incident referred to, then it would seem that the conduct of the strikers cannot be defended.

I ask to have inserted in the RECORD the statement appearing in the Philadelphia Inquirer of this date in order that Senators may be advised of the incident referred to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD as follows:

[From the Philadelphia Inquirer of July 11, 1939]

POLICEMAN DIES AFTER BEATING IN W. P. A. RIOT; A. F. L. THREATENS ENDLESS STRIKES AGAINST LAW—VIOLENCE IS FIRST IN NATION

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., July 10.—Violence that brought death to a policeman climaxed the W. P. A. strike in Minneapolis today. Injured in the riot were two other policemen and a nonstriking W. P. A. worker the three officers were escorting through jeering and threatening crowds of pickets.

The fight that ended fatally for Patrolman John B. Gearty developed in the second disturbance of a day marking the first violence in the Nation-wide strikes.

Dr. G. W. Gallerstrom, who conducted a post mortem tonight, said Gearty died from coronary sclerosis. He was unable to stand the excitement and the beating he was given by angry strikers because of a poor heart condition, the physician said.

VICTIM PUMMELED

His companion, Patrolman Paul Larson, said Gearty was pummeled over the head and shoulders by at least a half dozen men as they tried to put Frank Fischer, 45, the nonstriking W. P. A. worker, on a street car for home.

Gearty died in General Hospital. He had suffered a head injury. Fischer was X-rayed for possible head injuries and released from the hospital. Larson was struck across the neck, but not seriously hurt.

In Minneapolis, the "hot spot" of the W. P. A. strike, little work was done on relief projects. Roving bands of pickets, traveling in cars and visiting all outdoor construction projects every half hour, kept virtually all of the 8,000 workers on construction jobs off the projects.

PICKETS STORM SCHOOL

But white-collar projects, a historical research employing 180 men and women at Trudeau School, and a sewing project employing 200 continued in operation.

This morning 75 to 100 pickets stormed the Trudeau School, shouting to the workers to "Close up! Close up!" Police arrived in time to disperse the pickets after a disturbance that, compared to what came later, was minor. One worker was pummeled and his clothes ripped from his back, but no one was injured seriously.

But at noon, as the sewing-project workers prepared to leave, there was an ominous gathering of pickets. A human barricade of men and women, numbering 300 or more and massed tightly, blocked the entrance to the building at 123 Second Street North.

Approximately 30 policemen, including officers recruited from traffic duty, arrived to escort workers through the lines.

POLICE RESCUE WORKERS

There were jeers and threats, but no violence until Fischer, 45, machinist on the project, tried to leave the building. Pickets leaped on Fischer and pummeled him badly. Patrolmen Larson and Arthur Miller came to Fischer's aid.

They took him through the throng to a streetcar, but the motorman, fearing violence from the dense crowd milling about, refused to open the gates.

A moment later a wild fight broke out. Patrolman Gearty came to the aid of his mates. The three patrolmen were beaten with fists. Larson was knocked down and Gearty was pinned against an automobile. No weapons were used, but fists flew wildly.

An armored police car came to the rescue and escorted the patrolmen and Fischer to the city hall. There some 300 pickets stormed into the corridors, calling names and threatening the police and Fischer with violence. Fischer was held in jail "for his own protection," and later was taken to General Hospital. Chief Frank Forstall ordered the pickets to disperse and a force of 30 or more policemen backed them out of the building.

RAID WORKERS ALLIANCE

Soon afterward Gearty complained of a severe headache. He was taken to General Hospital, where he died an hour later.

This evening a force of 30 policemen raided the headquarters of the Workers Alliance, W. P. A. union, but made no arrests.

Thousands of strikers and a liberal sprinkling of the curious gathered at the Parade, a municipal playground, tonight for a mass meeting sponsored by the Workers Alliance. There speakers from the Alliance, A. F. of L. unions representing skilled building tradesmen involved in the strike, and C. I. O. spokesmen urged a continuance of the strike.

Policemen were on duty, but aside from oral violence, the gathering was peaceful.

UNION DEFIES CHIEF

In anticipation of more trouble tomorrow, Chief Forestal ordered all policemen, detectives, and plainclothesmen from the night and middle shifts to report at the city hall tomorrow morning. He canceled leaves of 100 policemen.

The Workers Alliance late tonight issued a call for a meeting at 5 a. m. as a preliminary to a march on the city hall at 10 a. m.

The police chief said he would not permit the march.

Gearity's was the first death in the wake of street fighting here since the truck strike of 1934, when two special deputies were slain.

THE VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY] to refer the bill introduced by him to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. MURRAY. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk called the roll.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN], the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK], the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HUGHES], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN], the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER], and the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] are absent on important public business.

The Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE], the Senator from Idaho [Mr. CLARK], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHAY], the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MALONEY], and the Senator from Illinois [Mr. SLATTERY] are detained in various Government departments on matters pertaining to their respective States.

The Senator from Illinois [Mr. LUCAS] and the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] are detained in important committee meetings.

The Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE] is paired with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY]. I am advised that the Senator from Washington, if present and voting, would vote "yea" and the Senator from North Carolina would vote "nay."

Mr. AUSTIN. The Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] is detained on official business.

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY] is necessarily absent. He has a general pair with the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER].

Mr. CONNALLY. The senior Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] is absent on account of illness in his family.

The result was announced—yeas 21, nays 52, as follows:

YEAS—21

Bilbo	La Follette	Neely	Thomas, Utah
Borah		Norris	Wagner
Davis	Lundeen	Schwartz	Walsh

So Mr. MURRAY's motion was rejected.

The bill (S. 2765) to amend the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939 to provide for the reestablishment of the prevailing rates of pay for persons employed upon work projects introduced by Mr. MURRAY (for himself and Mr. McCARRAN, Mr. WAGNER, Mr. MEAD, Mr. GUFFEY, Mr. SCHWELLENBACH, Mr. NEELY, Mr. DOWNEY, Mr. DONAHAY, Mr. BILBO, Mr. SMATHERS, Mr. TRUMAN, Mr. SCHWARTZ, Mr. MINTON, Mr. WHEELER, Mr. O'MAHONEY, Mr. BROWN, Mr. GILLETTE, Mr. BORAH, Mr. LA FOLLETTE, Mr. VAN NUYS, and Mr. GREEN), was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER BRIDGE—DUBUQUE AND EAST DUBUQUE

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 955) creating the City of Dubuque Bridge Commission and authorizing said Commission and its successors to purchase and/or construct, maintain, and operate a bridge or bridges across the Mississippi River at or near Dubuque, Iowa, and East Dubuque, Ill., which were, on page 2, line 3, to strike out all after "navigation," down to and including "1906", in line 6; on page 2, lines 8 and 9, after "purchase," to insert "reconstruct,"; on page 2, line 21, after "such," to insert "privately owned"; and on page 3, line 17, after "purchased", to insert a comma and "reconstruct,"; on page 4, line 9, to strike out "their respective dates" and insert "the date of approval of this act"; on page 4, line 21, to strike out "twenty" and insert "thirty"; on page 4, line 22, to strike out "date of the bonds" and insert "approval of this act"; on page 8, line 13, to strike out all after "the" where it appears the second time, down to and including "Agriculture" in line 14, and insert "Public Roads Administration of the Federal Works Agency"; on page 9, line 8, to strike out all after "the" where it appears the first time, down to and including "Agriculture" in line 9, and insert "Commissioner of Public Roads, Federal Works Agency"; on page 11, line 22, after "Commission", to strike out all over to and including "management" in lines 1 and 2 on page 12, and insert "as a free bridge"; on page 12, lines 18 and 19, to strike out "Secretary of Agriculture" and insert "Federal Works Administrator"; on page 13, line 20, to strike out "Secretary of Agriculture" and insert "Federal Works Administrator"; on page 14, line 1, to strike out "Secretary of Agriculture" and insert "Federal Works Administrator"; on page 15, lines 14 and 15, to strike out "Chief of the Bureau" and insert "Commissioner"; on page 18, after line 18, to insert:

SEC. 14. Any bridge or bridges constructed, acquired, or reconstructed under authority of this act shall be constructed, maintained, and operated in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906, notwithstanding any provisions contained herein to the contrary.

And, on page 18, line 19, to strike out "14" and insert "15."

Mr. GILLETTE. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

EGON KARL FREIHERR VON MAUCHENHEIM AND MARGARETE VON MAUCHENHEIM

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Mississippi yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. On Thursday last the Senate agreed to an amendment of the House of Representatives to Senate bill 1384, for the relief of Egon Karl Freiherr von Mauchenheim and Margarete von Mauchenheim.

The State Department advises that there is an error in the House amendment, and that the words "one number" in the following sentence should read "two numbers," viz:

Upon the enactment of this act the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the preference category of the quota during the current year.

I therefore ask unanimous consent that the vote agreeing to the House amendment be reconsidered, that the words "one number" in the House amendment be amended to read "two numbers," and that, as amended, the House amendment be agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the vote by which the House amendment was agreed to is reconsidered, and the amendment to the amendment of the House submitted by the Senator from Kentucky is agreed to, and the House amendment as amended by the Senate is agreed to.

The House amendment to Senate bill 1384, as amended by the Senate, is to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of Labor be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to record the permanent residence of Egon Karl Frieherr von Mauchenheim and Margarete von Mauchenheim as of May 19, 1936, and that the order of deportation be canceled, and Egon Karl Freiherr von Mauchenheim and Margarete von Mauchenheim shall not again be subject to deportation proceedings for the reasons set forth in said warrant, and that by the terms of this act they shall not be permitted to become a naturalized citizen of the United States unless and until they shall leave the United States and reenter in a lawful way in full compliance with the existing law.

Upon the enactment of this act the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct two numbers from the preference category of the quota during the current year.

AMENDMENT OF SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that House bill 6635, to amend the Social Security Act, and for other purposes, be taken up by the Senate for consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, will the Senator from Mississippi yield to me in order that I may propound an inquiry to the majority leader, the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY].

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. NEELY. My inquiry is this: Provided there is no objection to the request of the Senator from Mississippi, may I be assured that at the conclusion of the consideration of House bill 6635 no effort will be made or approved by the majority leader further to displace S. 280, the so-called moving-picture bill, with any other proposed legislation, excepting actual emergency measures?

Mr. BARKLEY. And conference reports?

Mr. NEELY. Certainly; including conference reports and other privileged matters. If I may have this assurance, I shall withhold my objection. Otherwise, I shall be compelled to make it.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. In the first place, let me say that there has been no effort made to sidetrack consideration of Senate bill 280. When it was taken up it was understood by every Member of the Senate that emergency matters, such as the relief bill, the monetary bill, and the social security bill, would be taken up if they came before the Senate. Automatically Senate bill 280, without any motion, is the unfinished business as soon as the bill referred to by the Senator from Mississippi is disposed of. It comes up automatically, as I understand, when it is laid aside temporarily and action has been completed on the matter for which it was laid aside. So far as I am concerned, I have not only no intention but no desire in any way to interfere with the consideration of that bill, because I imagine I am as anxious as are other Members of the Senate to have it disposed of one way or the other at the earliest possible date. I do not know of any emergency matter that would come in unless it is a conference report or something of that sort.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair understands that the Senator from Mississippi asks unanimous consent temporarily to lay aside the unfinished business in order that he may ask for consideration of House bill 6635. Is there objection?

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, in view of the statement of the Senator from Kentucky, which I construe to mean that he will not countenance any effort that may be made further to displace Senate bill 280 and that in the absence of emergency legislation, and privileged matters, we shall proceed to the consideration of this bill just as soon as the social-security bill is out of the way. I withhold my objection.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. CONNALLY. Is it not in order to move to displace the unfinished business and take up the bill proposing to amend the Social Security Act?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Of course, such a motion is in order. The Senator from Mississippi is trying to take the road of least resistance and least friction, as the Chair understands, by asking unanimous consent temporarily to lay aside the unfinished business in order that he may ask for consideration of the social-security measure.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Mississippi a question. It seems to me the conditions imposed by the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY] are so nebulous and uncertain as to extort from the majority leader some promise that if so-and-so happens and if something else happens the movie bill will not be laid aside. It is very unusual for the Senate to regulate its conduct in that way.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me, I will say that under the rules of the Senate, when a bill which is the unfinished business is temporarily laid aside for consideration of some other bill, when that bill is disposed of, then automatically the previous unfinished business comes before the Senate for consideration.

I cannot control the activities of anyone else. Any Senator could move to take up some other bill, and if such a motion should prevail by majority vote the consideration of that bill would displace the unfinished business. I certainly have no intention or desire to do such a thing, and if any other Senator attempts to do it, it will not be done with my consent, unless it is an emergency matter which could not be delayed.

I hope that satisfies the Senator.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON]?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6635) to amend the Social Security Act, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Finance, with amendments.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, now that the social-security measure is before the Senate I am informed by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON] that he wishes to present a conference report on the District of Columbia revenue bill and that it must go before the House at an early date, because it is a very urgent and necessary matter.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Mississippi has asked unanimous consent that the social-security measure be considered. That request has been agreed to, and the measure is now pending before the Senate. Does the Senator from Mississippi wish to have the formal reading of the bill dispensed with and the bill read for amendments?

Mr. HARRISON. I ask unanimous consent that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with, that it be read for amendment, and that the committee amendments be first considered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I wish to accommodate the Senator from Louisiana. I have no objection to the consideration of the conference report, at the conclusion of which I shall explain the details of the social-security measure briefly and answer any questions that may be asked with respect to it.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA TAXES—CONFERENCE REPORT (S. DOC. NO. 92)

Mr. OVERTON submitted the following report, which was ordered to be printed as a Senate document:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6577) to provide revenue for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"TITLE I—FEDERAL PAYMENT

"For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for each fiscal year thereafter, there shall be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, as the annual payment by the United States toward defraying the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia, the sum of $6,500,000.

"APPLICATION OF TITLE

"SECTION 1. The provisions of this title shall apply to the taxable year 1939 and succeeding taxable years, except that in the case of a taxable year beginning in 1938 and ending in 1939 the income taxable under this title shall be that fraction of the income for the entire fiscal year equal to the number of days remaining in the fiscal year after January 1, 1939, divided by three hundred and sixty-five: Provided, however, That if the taxpayer's records properly reflect the income for that part of the fiscal year falling in the calendar year 1939, then the portion of the fiscal year's income taxable hereunder shall be the portion received or accrued during the calendar year 1939.

"IMPOSITION OF TAX

"SEC. 2. (a) Tax on individuals: There is hereby levied for each taxable year upon the taxable income of every individual domiciled in the District of Columbia on the last day of the taxable year a tax at the following rates:

- "One per centum on the first $5,000 of taxable income.
- "One and one-half per centum on the next $5,000 of taxable income.
- "Two per centum on the next $5,000 of taxable income.
- "Two and one-half per centum on the next $5,000 of taxable income.

"Three per centum on the taxable income in excess of $20,000.

"(b) Tax on corporations: There is hereby levied for each taxable year upon the taxable income from District of Columbia sources of every corporation, whether domestic or foreign (except those organizations expressly exempt under paragraph (d) of this section), a tax at the rate of 5 per centum thereof.

"(c) Definition of 'taxable income': As used in this section, the term 'taxable income' means the amount of the net income in excess of the credits against net income provided in section 9 of this title.

"(d) Exemptions from tax: There shall be exempt from taxation under this title the following organizations: Corporations, including any community chest, fund, foundation, cemetery, association, teachers' retirement fund association, church, or club, organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, educational, or social purposes, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual and no substantial part of the activities of which is carrying on propaganda, or otherwise attempting to influence legislation; and labor organizations, trade associations, boards of trade, chambers of commerce, citizens' associations or organizations, not organized for profit and no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual; banks, insurance companies, building and loan associations, and companies, incorporated or otherwise, which guarantee the fidelity of any individual or individuals, such as bonding companies, all of which pay taxes upon gross premiums or earnings under existing laws of the District of Columbia; and voluntary employees' beneficiary associations providing for the payment of life, sick, accident, or other benefits to the members of such associations or their dependents, if (1) no part of their net earnings inures (other than such payments) to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual, and (2) 85 per centum or more of the income consists of amounts collected from members for the sole purpose of making such payments and meeting expenses.

"NET INCOME

"SEC. 3. Definition: The term 'net income' means the gross income of a taxpayer less the deductions allowed by this title.

"GROSS INCOME AND EXCLUSIONS THEREFROM

"SEC. 4. (a) Of individuals: The words 'gross income,' as used in this title, include gains, profits, and income derived from salaries, wages, or compensation for personal services of whatever kind and in whatever form paid, including salaries, wages, and compensation paid by the United States to its officers and employees to the extent the same is not immune from taxation under the Constitution, or income derived from professions, vocations, trades, businesses, commerce, or sales or dealings in property, whether real or personal, growing out of the ownership, or use of, or interest in, such property; also from rent, royalties, interest, dividends, securities, or transactions of any business carried on for gain or profit, or gains or profits, and income derived from any source whatever.

"(b) Of corporations: In the case of any corporation, gross income includes only the gross income from sources within the District of Columbia. The proper apportionment and allocation of income with respect to sources of income within and without the District may be determined by processes or formulas of general apportionment under rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioners.

"(c) Exclusions from gross income: The following items shall not be included in gross income and shall be exempt from taxation under this title:

"(1) Life insurance: Amounts received under a life-insurance contract paid by reason of the death of the insured, whether in a single sum or otherwise (but if such amounts are held by the insurer under an agreement to pay interest thereon, the interest payments shall be included in gross income).

"(2) Annuities, and so forth: Amounts received (other than amounts paid by reason of the death of the insured and interest payments on such amounts and other than amounts received as annuities) under a life-insurance or endowment contract, but if such amounts (when added to amounts received before the taxable year under such contract) exceed the aggregate premiums or consideration paid (whether or not paid during the taxable year) then the excess shall be included in gross income. Amounts received as an annuity under an annuity or endowment contract shall be included in gross income; except that there shall be excluded from gross income the excess of the amount received in the taxable year over an amount equal to 3 per centum of the aggregate premiums or consideration paid for such annuity whether or not paid during such year, until the aggregate amount excluded from gross income under this title in respect to such annuity equals the aggregate premiums or consideration paid for such annuity. In the case of a transfer for a valuable consideration, by assignment or otherwise, of a life-insurance, endowment, or annuity contract, or any interest therein, only the actual value of such consideration and the amount of the premiums and other sums subsequently paid by the transferee shall be exempt from taxation under paragraph (1) or this paragraph.

"(3) Gifts, bequests, and devises: The value of property acquired by gift, bequest, devise, or inheritance (but the income from such property shall be included in gross income).

"(4) Tax-free interest: Interest upon (A) the obligations of a State, Territory, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia; or (B) obligations of a corporation organized under Act of Congress, if such corporation is an instrumentality of the United States; or (C) the obligations of the United States or its possessions.

"(5) Compensation for injuries or sickness: Amounts received, through accident or health insurance or under workmen's compensation acts, as compensation for personal injuries or sickness, plus the amount of any damages received, whether by suit or agreement on account of such injuries or sickness.

"(6) Ministers: The rental value of a dwelling house and appurtenances thereof furnished to a minister of the gospel as part of his compensation.

"(7) Income exempt under treaty: Income of any kind to the extent required by any treaty obligation of the United States.

"(8) Dividends from China Trade Act corporations: In the case of a person, amounts distributed as dividends to or for his benefit by a corporation organized under the China Trade Act, 1922, if, at the time of such distribution, he is a resident of China, and the equitable right to the income of the shares of stock of the corporation is in good faith vested in him.

"(9) Income of foreign governments.

"DEDUCTIONS FROM GROSS INCOME

"Sec. 5. (a) Items of deduction: In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions:

"(1) Expenses: All the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business, including a reasonable allowance for salaries or other compensation for personal services actually rendered; traveling expenses (including the entire amount expended for meals and lodging) while away from home in the pursuit of a trade or business; and rentals or other payments required to be made as a condition to the continued use or possession, for purposes of the trade or business, of property to which the taxpayer has not taken or is not taking title or in which he has no equity.

"(2) Interest: All interest paid or accrued within the taxable year on indebtedness.

"(3) Taxes: Taxes paid or accrued within the taxable year, except—

"(A) income taxes;

"(B) estate, inheritance, legacy, succession, and gift taxes;

"(C) taxes assessed against local benefits of a kind tending to increase the value of the property assessed; but this paragraph shall not exclude the allowance as a deduction of so much of such taxes as is properly allocable to maintenance or interest charges; and

"(D) taxes paid to any State or Territory on property, business, or occupation the income from which is not taxable under this title.

"(4) Losses in trade or business: Losses sustained during the taxable year and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise, if incurred in trade or business, the income from which is subject to taxation under this title.

"(5) Losses in transactions for profit: Losses sustained during the taxable year and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise, if incurred in any transaction entered into for profit would be subject to taxation under this title, though not connected with the trade or business.

"(6) Intercompany dividends: In the case of a corporation, the amount received as dividends from a corporation which is subject to taxation under this title.

"(7) Bad debts: Debts ascertained to be worthless and charged off within the taxable year or, in the discretion of the assessor, a reasonable addition to a reserve for bad debts; and when satisfied that a debt is recoverable only in part, the assessor may allow such debt, in an amount not in excess of the part charged off within the taxable year, as a deduction.

"(8) Insurance premiums: All fire-, tornado-, and casualty-insurance premiums paid during the taxable year in connection with property held for investment or business.

"(9) Depreciation: A reasonable allowance for exhaustion, wear, and tear of property used in the trade or business, including a reasonable allowance for obsolescence; and including in the case of natural resources allowances for depletion as permitted by reasonable rules and regulations which the Commissioners are hereby authorized to promulgate.

"(10) Charitable contributions: Contributions or gifts actually paid within the taxable year to or for the use of any corporation, or trust, or community fund, or foundation, maintaining activities in the District of Columbia and organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, military, or educational purposes, no part of the net income of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual: Provided, That such deductions shall be allowed only in an amount which in all of the above cases combined does not exceed 15 per centum of the taxpayer's net income as computed without the benefit of this subparagraph.

"(11) Wagering losses: Losses from wagering transactions shall be allowed only to the extent of the gains from such transactions.

"(b) Allocation of deductions: In the case of a taxpayer, other than an individual, the deductions allowed in this section shall be allowed only for and to the extent that they are connected with income arising from sources within the District and taxable under this title to a nonresident taxpayer; and the proper apportionment and allocation of the deductions with respect to sources of income within and without the District shall be determined by processes or formulas of general apportionment under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Commissioners. The so-called charitable contribution deduction allowed by subparagraph (10) of paragraph (a) of this section shall be allowed whether or not connected with income from sources within the District.

"(c) Corporations and nonresident individuals to file return of total income: A corporation shall receive the benefits of the deductions allowed to it under this title only by filing or causing to be filed with the assessor a true and accurate return of its total income received from all sources, whether within or without the District.

"GAINS OR LOSSES FROM SALE OF ASSETS

"Sec. 6. (a) Gain or loss in capital assets not recognized: No gain or loss from the sale or exchange of a capital asset shall be recognized in the computation of net income under this title. For the purposes of this title, 'capital assets' means property held by the taxpayer for more than two years (whether or not connected with his trade or business) but does not include stock in trade of the taxpayer or other property of a kind which would properly be included in the inventory of a taxpayer if on hand at the close of the taxable year, or property held by the taxpayer primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of his trade or business.

"(b) Gain or loss in assets other than capital: Gains or losses from the sale or exchange of property other than a capital asset shall be treated in the same manner as other income or deductible losses, and the basis for computing such gain or loss shall be the cost of such property or, if acquired by some means other than purchase, the fair market value thereof at the date of acquisition.

"EXCHANGES

"Sec. 7. Where property is exchanged for other property, the property received in exchange for the purpose of determining the gain or loss shall be treated as the equivalent of cash to the amount of its fair market value; but when in connection with the reorganization, merger, or consolidation of a corporation a taxpayer receives, in place of stock or securities owned by him, new stock or securities of the reorganized, merged, or consolidated corporation, no gain or loss shall be deemed to occur from the exchange until the new stock or securities are sold or realized upon and the gain or loss is definitely ascertained, until which time the new stock or securities received shall be treated as taking the place of the stock and securities exchanged; provided such reorganization, merger, or consolidation is a "reorganization" within the meaning of the term "reorganization" as defined in section 112 (g) of the Federal Revenue Act of 1936.

"DEDUCTIONS NOT ALLOWED

"Sec. 8. (a) General rule: In computing net income no deductions shall be allowed in any case in respect to—

"(1) personal, living, or family expenses;

"(2) any amount paid out for new buildings or for permanent improvements or betterments, made to increase the value of any property or estate;

"(3) any amount expended in restoring property or in making good the exhaustion thereof for which an allowance is or has been made; and

"(4) premiums paid on any life-insurance policy covering the life of any officer or employee or of any person financially interested in any trade or business carried on by the taxpayer when the taxpayer is directly or indirectly a beneficiary under such policy.

"(b) Holders of life or terminable interest: Amounts paid under the laws of any State, Territory, District of Columbia, possession of the United States, or foreign country as income to the holder of a life or terminable interest acquired by gift, bequest, or inheritance shall not be reduced or diminished by any deduction for shrinkage (by whatever name called) in the value of such interest due to the lapse of time, nor by any deduction allowed by this Act (except the deductions provided for in subsections (1) and (m) of section 23 of the Federal Revenue Act of 1926 as amended) for the purpose of computing the net income of an estate or trust but not allowed under the laws of such State, Territory, District of Columbia, possession of the United States, or foreign country for the purpose of computing the income to which such holder is entitled.

"PERSONAL EXEMPTIONS AND CREDIT FOR DEPENDENTS

"Sec. 9. (a) Credits: There shall be allowed to individuals the following credits against net income:

"(1) Personal exemption: In the case of a single person or married person not living with husband or wife, a personal exemption of $1,000; in the case of the head of a family or a married person living with husband or wife, a personal exemption of $2,500; a husband and wife living together shall receive but one personal exemption, the amount of such personal exemption shall be $2,500. If such husband and wife make separate returns the personal exemption may be taken by either or divided between them.

"(2) Credit for dependents: $400 for each person (other than husband or wife) dependent upon and receiving his chief support from the taxpayer if such dependent person is under eighteen years of age or is incapable of self-support because mentally or physically defective.

"(b) Change of status: If the status of the taxpayer, insofar as it affects personal exemption or credit for dependents, changes during the taxable year, the personal exemption and credit shall be apportioned under rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioners, in accordance with the number of months before and after such change. For the purpose of such apportionment a fractional portion of a month shall be disregarded unless it amounts to more than half a month in which case it shall be considered as a month.

"(c) In return for fractional part of year: In the case of a return made for a fractional part of a year, the personal exemption and credit for dependents shall be reduced respectively to amounts which bear the same ratio to the full credits provided as the number of months in the period for which the return is made bears to twelve months.

"ACCOUNTING PERIODS

"Sec. 10. The net income shall be computed upon the basis of the taxpayer's annual accounting period (fiscal year or calendar year, as the case may be) in accordance with the method of accounting regularly employed in keeping the books of such taxpayer; but if no such method of accounting has been so employed, or if the method employed does not clearly reflect the income, the computation shall be made in accordance with such method as in the opinion of the assessor does clearly reflect the income. If the taxpayer's annual accounting period is other than a fiscal year as defined in section 43 or if the taxpayer has no annual accounting period or does not keep books, the net income shall be computed on the basis of the calendar year. If the taxpayer makes a Federal income-tax return, his income shall be computed, for the purposes of this title, on the basis of the same calendar or fiscal year as in such Federal income-tax return.

"PERIOD IN WHICH ITEMS OF GROSS INCOME INCLUDED

"Sec. 11. The amount of all items of gross income shall be included in the gross income for the taxable year in which received by the taxpayer unless, under methods of accounting permitted under section 10, any such amounts are to be properly accounted for as of a different period. In the case of the death of a taxpayer there shall be included, in computing net income for the taxable period in which falls the date of his death, amounts accrued up to the date of his death if not otherwise properly includible in respect to such period or a prior period.

"PERIOD FOR WHICH DEDUCTIONS AND CREDITS TAKEN

"Sec. 12. The deductions and credits provided for in this title shall be taken for the taxable year in which 'paid or accrued' or 'paid or incurred', dependent upon the method of accounting upon the basis of which the net income is computed unless, in order to clearly reflect the income, the deductions or credits should be taken as of a different period. In the case of the death of a taxpayer there shall be allowed as deductions and credits for the taxable period in which falls the date of his death, amounts accrued up to the date of his death if not otherwise properly allowable in respect to such period or a prior period.

"INSTALLMENT BASIS

"Sec. 13. (a) Dealers in personal property: Under regulations prescribed by the Commissioners, a person who regularly sells or otherwise disposes of personal property on the installment plan may return as income therefrom in any taxable year that proportion of the installment payments actually received in that year which the gross profit realized or to be realized when payment is completed bears to the total contract price.

"(b) Sales of realty and casual sales of personal property: In the case of (1) a casual sale or other casual disposition of personal property (other than property of a kind which would properly be included in the inventory of the taxpayer if on hand at the close of the taxable year) for a price exceeding $1,000, or (2) of a sale or other disposition of real property, if in either case the initial payments do not exceed 30 per centum of the selling price, the income may, under regulations prescribed by the Commissioners, be returned on the basis and in the manner above prescribed in this section. As used in this section the term 'initial payments' means the payments received in cash or property other than evidences of indebtedness of the purchaser during the taxable period in which the sale or other disposition is made.

"(d) Gain or loss upon disposition of installment obligations: If an installment obligation is satisfied at other than its face value or distributed, transmitted, sold, or otherwise disposed of, gain or loss shall result to the extent of the difference between the basis of the obligation and (1) in the case of satisfaction at other than face value or a sale or exchange—the amount realized, or (2) in case of a distribution, transmission, or disposition otherwise than by sale or exchange—the fair market value of the obligation at the time of such distribution, transmission, or disposition. Any gain or loss so resulting shall be considered as resulting from the sale or exchange of the property in respect to which the installment obligation was received. The basis of the obligation shall be the excess of the face value of the obligation over an amount equal to the income which would be returnable were the obligation satisfied in full. This paragraph shall not apply to the transmission at death of installment obligations if there is filed with the assessor, at such time as he may by regulation prescribe, a bond in such amount and with such sureties as he may deem necessary, conditioned upon the return as income, by the person receiving any payment in such obligations, of the same proportion of such payment as would be returnable as income by the decedent if he had lived and had received such payment.

"INVENTORIES

"Sec. 14. Whenever in the opinion of the assessor the use of inventories is necessary in order clearly to determine the income of any taxpayer, inventories shall be taken by such taxpayer upon such basis as the assessor may prescribe as conforming as nearly as may be to the best accounting practice in the trade or business and as most clearly reflecting the income.

"INDIVIDUAL RETURNS

"Sec. 15. (a) Requirement: The following individuals shall each make under oath a return stating specifically the items of his gross income and the deductions and credits allowed under this title and such other information for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this title as the Commissioners may by regulations prescribe:

"(1) Every individual having a net income for the taxable year of $1,000 or over, if single, or if married and not living with husband or wife;

"(2) Every individual having a net income for the taxable year of $2,500 or over, if married and living with husband or wife; and

"(3) Every individual having a gross income for the taxable year of $5,000 or over, regardless of the amount of his net income.

"(b) Husband and wife: If a husband and wife living together have an aggregate net income for the taxable year of $2,500 or over, or an aggregate gross income for such year of $5,000 or over—

"(1) Each shall make a return, or

"(2) The income of each shall be included in a single joint return, in which case the tax shall be computed on the aggregate income.

"(c) Persons under disability: If the taxpayer is unable to make his own return, the return shall be made by a duly authorized agent or by the guardian or other person charged with the care of the person or property of such taxpayer.

"(d) Fiduciaries: For returns to be made by fiduciaries, see section 23.

"CORPORATION RETURNS

"Sec. 16. Every corporation not expressly exempt from the tax imposed by this title shall make a return and pay a filing fee of $25 which shall be credited against the tax. Such returns shall state specifically the items of its gross income and the deductions and credits allowed by this title, and such other information for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this title as the Commissioners may by regulations prescribe. The return shall be sworn to by the president, vice president, or other principal officer, and by the treasurer, assistant treasurer, or chief accounting officer. In cases where receivers, trustees in bankruptcy, or assignees are operating the property or business of corporations, such receivers, trustees, or assignees shall make returns for such corporations in the same manner and form as corporations are required to make returns. Any tax due on the basis of such returns made by receivers, trustees, or assignees shall be collected in the same manner as if collected from the corporations of whose business or property they have custody and control.

"TAXPAYER TO MAKE RETURN WHETHER RETURN FORM IS SENT OR NOT"

"SEC. 17. Blank forms of returns for income shall be supplied by the assessor. It shall be the duty of the assessor to obtain an income-tax return from every taxpayer who is liable under the law to file such return; but this duty shall in no manner diminish the obligation of the taxpayer to file a return without being called upon to do so.

"TIME AND PLACE FOR FILING RETURN"

"SEC. 18. All returns of income for the preceding taxable year shall be made to the assessor on or before the 15th day of March in each year, except that such returns, if made on the basis of a fiscal year, shall be made on or before the 15th day of the third month following the close of such fiscal year, unless such fiscal year has expired in the calendar year 1939 prior to the approval of this Act, in which event returns shall be made on or before the 15th day of the third month following the approval of this Act.

"EXTENSION OF TIME FOR FILING RETURNS"

"SEC. 19. The assessor may grant a reasonable extension of time for filing income returns whenever in his judgment good cause exists and shall keep a record of every such extension. Except in case of a taxpayer who is abroad, no such extension shall be granted for more than six months, and in no case for more than one year. In the event time for filing a return is deferred, the taxpayer is hereby required to pay, as a part of the tax, an amount equal to 6 percentum per annum on the tax ultimately assessed from the time the return was due until it is actually filed in the office of the assessor.

"ALLOCATION OF INCOME AND DEDUCTIONS"

"SEC. 20. In any of two or more organizations, trades, or businesses (whether or not incorporated, whether or not organized in the District of Columbia, and whether or not affiliated) owned or controlled directly or indirectly by the same interests, the assessor is authorized to distribute, apportion, or allocate gross income or deductions between or among such organizations, trades, or businesses, if he determines that such distribution, apportionment, or allocation is necessary in order to prevent evasion of taxes or clearly to reflect the income of any of such organizations, trades, or businesses. The provisions of this section shall apply, but shall not be limited in application to any case of a common carrier by railroad subject to the Interstate Commerce Act and jointly owned or controlled directly or indirectly by two or more common carriers by railroad subject to said Act.

"PUBLICITY OF RETURNS"

"SEC. 21. (a) Secrecy of returns: Except to any official of the District, having a right thereto in his official capacity, it shall be unlawful for any officer or employee of the District to divulge or make known in any manner the amount of income or any particulars set forth or disclosed in any report or return under this title.

"(b) When copies may be furnished: Neither the original nor a copy of the return desired for use in litigations in court shall be furnished where the District of Columbia is not interested in the result whether or not the request is contained in an order of the court: Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed to prevent the furnishing to a taxpayer of a copy of his return upon the payment of a fee of $1.

"(c) Reciprocal exchange of information with States: Notwithstanding the provisions of this section, the assessor may permit the proper officer of any State imposing an income tax or his authorized representative to inspect income-tax returns, filed with the assessor or may furnish to such officer or representative a copy of any income-tax return provided such State grants substantially similar privileges to the assessor or his representative or to the proper officer of the District charged with the administration of this title.

"(d) Publication of statistics: Nothing herein shall be construed to prohibit the publication of statistics so classified as to prevent the identification of particular reports and the items thereof, or of the publication of delinquent lists showing the names of taxpayers who have failed to pay their taxes at the time and in the manner provided by law, together with any relevant information which in the opinion of the assessor may assist in the collection of such delinquent taxes.

"(e) Penalties for violation of this section: Any offense against the provisions of this section shall be a misdemeanor and shall be punishable by a fine not exceeding $1,000 or imprisonment for 6 months, or both, in the discretion of the court.

"RETURNS TO BE PRESERVED"

"SEC. 22. Reports and returns received by the assessor under the provisions of this title shall be preserved for 6 years and thereafter until the assessor orders them to be destroyed.

"FIDUCIARY RETURNS"

"SEC. 23. (a) Requirement of return: Every fiduciary (except a receiver appointed by authority of law in possession of part only of the property of an individual) shall make under oath a return for any of the following individuals, estates, or trusts for which he acts, stating specifically the items of gross income thereof and the deductions and credits allowed under this title and such other information for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this title as the Commissioners may by regulations prescribe:

"(1) Every individual having a net income for the taxable year of $1,000 or over, if single, or if married and not living with husband and wife;

"(2) Every individual having a net income for the taxable year of $2,500 or over, if married and living with husband or wife;

"(3) Every individual having a gross income for the taxable year of $5,000 or over, regardless of the amount of his net income;

"(4) Every estate or trust the net income of which for the taxable year is $1,000 or over;

"(5) Every estate or trust the gross income of which for the taxable year is $5,000 or over, regardless of the amount of the net income.

"(b) Joint fiduciaries: Under such regulations as the Commissioners may prescribe, a return by one of two or more joint fiduciaries and filed in the office of the assessor shall be sufficient compliance with the above requirement. Such fiduciary shall make oath (1) that he has sufficient knowledge of the affairs of the individual, estate, or trust for which the return is made, to enable him to make the return, and (2) that the return is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, true and correct.

"(c) Law applicable to fiduciaries: Any fiduciary required to make a return under this title shall be subject to all the provisions of law which apply to individuals.

"ESTATES AND TRUSTS"

"SEC. 24. (a) Application of tax: The taxes imposed by this title upon individuals shall apply to the income of estates or of any kind of property held in trust, including—

"(1) Income accumulated in trust for the benefit of unborn or unascertained person or persons with contingent interests, and income accumulated or held for future distribution under the terms of the will or trust;

"(2) Income which is to be distributed currently by the fiduciary to the beneficiaries, and income collected by a guardian of an infant which is to be held or distributed as the court may direct;

"(3) Income received by estates of deceased persons during the period of administration or settlement of the estate; and

"(4) Income which, in the discretion of the fiduciary, may be either distributed to the beneficiaries or accumulated.

"(b) Computation of tax: The tax shall be computed upon the net income of the estate or trust, and shall be paid by the fiduciary, except as provided in paragraph (e) of this section (relating to revocable trusts) and paragraph (f) of this section (relating to income for benefit of the grantor).

"(c) Net income: The net income of the estate or trust shall be computed in the same manner and on the same basis as in the case of an individual, except that—

"(1) there shall be allowed as an additional deduction in computing the net income of the estate or trust the amount of the income of the estate or trust for its taxable year which is to be distributed currently by the fiduciary to the beneficiaries, and the amount of the income collected by a guardian of an infant which is to be held or distributed as the court may direct, but the amount so allowed as a deduction shall be included in computing the net income of the beneficiaries whether distributed to them or not. Any amount allowed as a deduction under this paragraph shall not be allowed as a deduction under subsection (2) of this section in the same or any succeeding taxable year;

"(2) in the case of income received by estates of deceased persons during the period of administration or settlement of the estate, and in the case of income which, in the discretion of the fiduciary, may be either distributed to the beneficiary or accumulated, there shall be allowed as an additional deduction in computing the net income of the estate or trust the amount of the income of the estate or trust for its taxable year, which is properly paid or credited during such year to any legatee, heir, or beneficiary, but the amount so allowed as a deduction shall be included in computing the net income of the legatee, heir, or beneficiary;

"(3) there shall be allowed as a deduction (in lieu of the deductions for charitable contributions authorized by section 5 (a) (10)) any part of the gross income, without limitation, which pursuant to the terms of the will or deed creating a trust, is during the taxable year paid or permanently set aside for the purposes and in the manner provided in section 5 (a) (10) or is to be used exclusively for the purposes enumerated in section 5 (a) (10).

"(d) Different taxable year: If the taxable year of a beneficiary is different from that of the estate or trust, the amount which he is required, under subparagraph (1) of paragraph (c) of this section, to include in computing his net income, shall be based upon the income of the estate or trust for any taxable year of the estate or trust ending within or with his taxable year.

"(e) Revocable trusts: Where at any time the power to revest in the grantor title to any part of the corpus of the trust is vested—

"(1) in the grantor, either alone or in conjunction with any person not having a substantial adverse interest in the disposition of such part of the corpus or the income therefrom; or

"(2) in any person not having a substantial adverse interest in the disposition of such part of the corpus or the income therefrom, then the income of such part of the trust shall be included in computing the net income of the grantor.

"(f) Income for benefit of grantor: Where any part of the income of a trust—

"(1) is, or in the discretion of the grantor or of any person not having a substantial adverse interest in the disposition of such part of the income may be, held or accumulated for future distribution to the grantor; or

"(2) may, in the discretion of the grantor or of any person not having a substantial adverse interest in the disposition of such part of the income, be distributed to the grantor; or

"(3) is, or in the discretion of the grantor or of any person not having a substantial adverse interest in the disposition of such part of the income may be applied to the payment of premiums upon policies of insurance on the life of the grantor (except policies of insurance irrevocably payable for the purposes and in the manner specified in section 5 (a) (10), relating to the so-called 'charitable contribution' deduction); then such part of the income of the trust shall be included in computing the net income of the grantor.

"(g) Definition of 'in discretion of grantor': As used in this section, the term 'in the discretion of the grantor' means 'in the discretion of the grantor, either alone or in conjunction with any person not having a substantial adverse interest in the disposition of the part of the income in question.'

"(h) Income from intangible personal property held by trust: Income from intangible personal property held by any trust company or by any national bank situated in the District (with or without an individual trustee, resident or nonresident) in trust to pay the income for the time being to, or to accumulate or apply such income for the benefit of any nonresident of the District, shall not be taxable hereunder if—

"(1) such beneficial owner or cestui que trust was at the time of the creation of the trust a nonresident of the District; and

"(2) the testator, settlor, or grantor was also at the time of the creation of the trust a nonresident of the District.

"PARTNERSHIPS

"SEC. 25. (a) Partners only taxable: Individuals carrying on business in partnership shall be liable for income tax only in their individual capacity, and no income tax shall be assessable hereunder upon the net income of any partnership. All such income shall be assessable to the individual partners; it shall be reported by such partners as individuals upon their respective individual income returns; and it shall be taxed to them as individuals along with their other income at the rate and in the manner herein provided for the taxation of income received by individuals. There shall be included in computing the net income of each partner his distributive share, whether distributed or not, of the net income of the partnership for the taxable year; or if his net income for such taxable year is computed upon the basis of a period different from that upon the basis of which the net income of the partnership is computed, then his distributive share of the net income of the partnership for any accounting period of the partnership ending within the taxable year upon the basis of which the partner's net income is computed.

"(b) Partnership return: Every partnership shall make a return for each taxable year stating specifically the items of its gross income and the deductions allowed by this title, and shall include in the return the names and the addresses of the individuals who would be entitled to share in the net income if distributed, and the amount of the distributive share of each individual. The return shall be sworn to by any one of the partners.

"PAYMENT OF TAX

"SEC. 26. (a) Time of payment: The total amount of tax imposed by this title shall be paid on the 15th day of March following the close of the calendar year, or, if the return should be made on the basis of a fiscal year, then on the 15th day of the third month following the close of the fiscal year, except a fiscal year which expired in the calendar year 1939 prior to the approval of this act, in which event the tax shall be paid on the 15th day of the third month following the approval of this act.

"(b) Extension of time for payments: At the request of the taxpayer the assessor may extend the time for payment by the taxpayer of the amount determined as the tax, for a period not to exceed six months from the date prescribed for the payment of the tax or an installment thereof. In such case the amount in respect to which the extension is granted shall be paid on or before the date of the expiration of the period of the extension.

"(c) Voluntary advance payment: A tax imposed by this title, or any installment thereof, may be paid, at the election of the taxpayer, prior to the date prescribed for its payment.

"(d) Fractional part of cent: In the payment of any tax under this title a fractional part of a cent shall be disregarded unless it amounts to one-half cent or more, in which case it shall be increased to 1 cent.

"(e) Payment to collector and receipts: The tax provided under this title shall be collected by the collector and the revenues derived therefrom shall be turned over to the Treasury of the United States for the credit to the District in the same manner as other revenues are turned over to the United States Treasury for the credit to the District. The collector shall, upon written request, give to the person making payment of any income tax a full written or printed receipt therefor.

"TAX A PERSONAL DEBT

"SEC. 27. Every tax imposed by this title, and all increases, interest, and penalties thereof, shall become, from the time it is due and payable, a personal debt, from the person or persons liable to pay the same to the District, and shall be entitled to the same priority as other District taxes; and the taxes levied hereunder and the interest and penalties thereon shall be collected by the collector of taxes in the manner provided by law for the collection of taxes due the District on personal property in force at the time of such collection.

"INFORMATION FROM THE BUREAU OF INTERNAL REVENUE

"SEC. 28. The Bureau of Internal Revenue of the Treasury Department of the United States is authorized and required to supply such information as may be requested by the Commissioners relative to any person subject to the taxes imposed by this title.

"ASSESSOR TO ADMINISTER

"SEC. 29. (a) Duties of assessor: The assessor is hereby required to administer the provisions of this title. The assessor shall prescribe forms identical with those utilized by the Federal Government, except to the extent required by differences between this title and its application and the Federal Act and its application. He shall apply as far as practicable the administrative and judicial interpretations of the Federal income-tax law so that computations of income for purposes of this title shall be, as nearly as practicable, identical with the calculations required for Federal income-tax purposes. As soon as practicable after the return is filed the assessor shall examine it and shall determine the correct amount of the tax.

"(b) Statements and special returns: Every taxpayer liable to any tax imposed by this title shall keep such records, render under oath such statements, make such returns, and comply with such rules and regulations as the Commissioners from time to time may prescribe. Whenever the assessor judges it necessary he may require any taxpayer, by notice served upon him, to make a return, render under oath such statements, or keep such records as he deems sufficient to show whether or not such taxpayer is liable to tax under this title and the extent of such liability.

"(c) Examination of books and witnesses: The assessor, for the purpose of ascertaining the correctness of any return filed hereunder, or for the purpose of making an estimate of the taxable income of any taxpayer, is authorized to examine any books, papers, records, or memoranda of any person bearing upon the matters required to be included in the return and may summon any person to appear and produce books, records, papers, or memoranda bearing upon the matters required to be included in the return, and to give testimony or answer interrogatories under oath respecting the same, and the assessor shall have power to administer oaths to such person or persons. Such summons may be served by any members of the Metropolitan Police Department. If any person having been personally summoned shall neglect or refuse to obey the summons issued as herein provided, then, and in that event, the assessor may report that fact to the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, or one of the Justices thereof, and said court or any Justice thereof hereby is empowered to compel obedience to such summons to the same extent as witnesses may be compelled to obey the subpoenas of that court. Any person in custody or control of any books, papers, records, or memoranda bearing upon the matters required to be included in such returns, who shall refuse to permit the examination by the assessor or any person designated by him of any such books, papers, records, or memoranda, or who shall obstruct or hinder the assessor or any person designated by him in the examination of any books, papers, records, or memoranda, shall upon conviction thereof be fined not more than $300. All prosecutions under this section shall be brought in the police court of the District of Columbia on information by the corporation counsel of the District of Columbia in the name of the District of Columbia.

"(d) Return by assessor: If any person fails to make and file a return at the time prescribed by law or by regulations made under authority of law, or makes, willfully or otherwise, a false or fraudulent return, the assessor shall make the return from his own knowledge and from such information as he can obtain through testimony or otherwise. Any return so made and subscribed by the assessor shall be prima facie good and sufficient for all legal purposes.

"ASSESSMENT AND COLLECTION OF DEFICIENCIES

"SEC. 30. Definition of 'deficiency': As used in this title in respect of a tax imposed by this title 'deficiency' means—

"(1) the amount by which the tax imposed by this title exceeds the amount shown as the tax by the taxpayer upon his return; but the amount so shown on the return shall first be increased by the amounts previously assessed (or collected without assessment) as a deficiency, and decreased by the amounts previously abated, credited, refunded, or otherwise repaid in respect of such tax; or

"(2) if no amount is shown as the tax by the taxpayer upon his return, or if no return is made by the taxpayer, then the amount by which the tax exceeds the amounts previously assessed (or collected without assessment) as a deficiency; but such amounts previously assessed, or collected without assessment, shall first be decreased by the amounts previously abated, credited, refunded, or otherwise repaid in respect of such tax.

"DETERMINATION AND ASSESSMENT OF DEFICIENCY

"SEC. 31. If a deficiency in tax is determined by the assessor, the taxpayer shall be notified thereof and given a period of not less than thirty days, after such notice is sent by registered mail, in which to file a protest and show cause or reason why the deficiency should not be paid. Opportunity for hearing shall be granted by the assessor, and a final decision thereon shall be made as quickly as practicable. Any deficiency in tax then determined to be due shall be assessed and paid, together with any addition to the tax applicable thereto, within ten days after notice and demand by the collector. The taxpayer may appeal from such assessment to the Board of Tax Appeals for the District of Columbia in the same manner and to the same extent as set forth in sections 3, 4, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, and 12 of title VI of an Act to amend the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, and for other purposes, approved May 16, 1938.

"JEOPARDY ASSESSMENT"

"Sec. 32. (a) Authority for making: If the assessor believes that the collection of any tax imposed by this title will be jeopardized by delay, he shall, whether or not the time otherwise prescribed by law for making return and paying such tax has expired, immediately assess such tax (together with all interest and penalties, the assessment of which is provided for by law). Such tax, penalties, and interest shall thereupon become immediately due and payable, and immediate notice and demand shall be made by the collector for the payment thereof. Upon failure or refusal to pay such tax, penalty, and interest, collection thereof by distraint shall be lawful.

"(b) Bond to stay collection: The collection of the whole or any part of the amount of such assessment may be stayed by filing with the collector a bond in such amount, not exceeding double the amount as to which the stay is desired, and with such sureties as the collector deems necessary, conditioned upon the payment of the amount, the collection of which is stayed, at the time at which, but for this section, such amount would be due.

"PERIOD OF LIMITATION UPON ASSESSMENT AND COLLECTION"

"Sec. 33. (a) General rule: Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this section—

"(1) The amount of income taxes imposed by this title shall be assessed within two years after the return is filed, and no proceeding in court without assessment for the collection of such taxes shall be begun after the expiration of such period.

"(2) In the case of income received during the lifetime of a decedent, or by his estate during the period of administration, or by a corporation, the tax shall be assessed, and any proceeding in court without assessment for the collection of such tax shall be begun, within twelve months after written request therefor (filed after the return is made) by the executor, administrator, or other fiduciary representing the estate of such decedent, or by the corporation, but not after the expiration of two years after the return is filed. This subparagraph shall not apply in the case of a corporation unless—

"(A) such written request notifies the assessor that the corporation contemplates dissolution at or before the expiration of such twelve-month period; and

"(B) the dissolution is in good faith begun before the expiration of such twelve-month period; and

"(C) the dissolution is completed.

"(3) If the taxpayer omits from gross income an amount properly includable therein which is in excess of 25 per centum of the amount of gross income stated in the return, the tax may be assessed, or a proceeding in court for the collection of such tax may be begun without assessment, at any time within five years after the return was filed.

"(4) For the purposes of subparagraphs (1), (2), and (3), a return filed before the last day prescribed by law for the filing thereof shall be considered as filed on such last day.

"(b) False return: In the case of a false or fraudulent return with intent to evade tax or of a failure to file a return, the tax may be assessed, or a proceeding in court for the collection of such tax may be begun without assessment, at any time.

"(c) Waiver: Where before the expiration of the time prescribed in paragraph (a) for the assessment of the tax, both the assessor and the taxpayer have consented in writing to its assessment after such time, the tax may be assessed at any time prior to the expiration of the period agreed upon. The period so agreed upon may be extended by subsequent agreements in writing made before the expiration of the period previously agreed upon.

"(d) Collection after assessment: Where the assessment of any income tax imposed by this title has been made within the period of limitation properly applicable thereto, such tax may be collected by distraint or by a proceeding in court, but only if begun (A) within three years after the assessment of the tax or (B) prior to the expiration of any period for collection agreed upon in writing by the assessor and the taxpayer before the expiration of such three-year period. The period so agreed upon may be extended by subsequent agreements in writing made before the expiration of the period previously agreed upon.

"REFUNDS"

"Sec. 34. Except as otherwise provided in section 31 of this title, where there has been an overpayment of any tax imposed by this title, the amount of such overpayment shall be refunded to the taxpayer. No such refund shall be allowed after two years from the time the tax is paid unless before the expiration of such period a claim therefor is filed by the taxpayer. The amount of the refund shall not exceed the portion of the tax paid during the two years immediately preceding the filing of the claim, or, if no claim was filed, then during the two years immediately preceding the allowance of the refund. Every claim for refund must be in writing, under oath; must state the specific grounds upon which the claim is founded, and must be filed with the assessor. If the assessor disallows any part of a claim for refund, he shall send to the taxpayer by registered mail a notice of the part of the claim so disallowed. Within ninety days after the mailing of such notice, the taxpayer may file an appeal with the Board of Tax Appeals for the District of Columbia, in the same manner and to the same extent as set forth in sections 3, 4, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, and 12 of title IX of an Act to amend the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, and for other purposes, approved May 16, 1938. The remedy provided to the taxpayer under this section shall not be deemed to take away from the taxpayer any remedy which he might have under any other provision of law, but no suit by the taxpayer for the recovery of any part of such tax shall be instituted in any court if the taxpayer has elected to file an appeal in accordance with this section.

"CLOSING AGREEMENTS"

"Sec. 35. The assessor is authorized to enter into an agreement with any person relating to the liability of such person (or of the person or estate for whom he acts) in respect of any income tax for any period ending prior to the date of the agreement. If such agreement is approved by the Commissioners within such time as may be stated in such agreement, or later agreed to, such agreement shall be final and conclusive and except upon a showing of fraud or malfeasance, or misrepresentation of a material fact—the case shall not be reopened as to the matters agreed upon or the agreement modified; and in any suit or proceeding relating to the tax liability of the taxpayer such agreement shall not be annulled, modified, set aside, or disregarded.

"COMPROMISES"

"Sec. 36. (a) Authority to make: Whenever in the opinion of the Commissioners there shall arise with respect of any tax imposed under this title any doubt as to the liability of the taxpayer or the collectibility of the tax for any reason whatsoever the Commissioners may compromise such tax.

"(b) Concealment of assets: Any person who, in connection with any compromise under this section or offer of such compromise or in connection with any closing agreement under this title or offer to enter into any such agreement, willfully (1) conceals from any officer or employee of the District of Columbia any property belonging to the estate of the taxpayer or other person liable with respect of the tax, or (2) receives, destroys, mutilates, or falsifies any book, document, or record or makes under oath any false statement relating to the estate or the financial condition of the taxpayer or to the person liable in respect of the tax, shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both.

"(c) Of penalties: The Commissioners shall have the power for cause shown to compromise any penalty arising under this title.

"FAILURE TO FILE RETURN"

"Sec. 37. In case of any failure to make and file a return required by this title, within the time prescribed by law or prescribed by the Commissioners in pursuance of law, 25 per centum of the tax shall be added to the tax, except that when a return is filed after such time and it is shown that the failure to file it was due to reasonable cause and not due to willful neglect, no such addition shall be made to the tax. The amount so added to any tax shall be collected at the same time and in the same manner and as a part of the tax unless the tax has been paid before the discovery of the neglect, in which case the amount so added shall be collected in the same manner as the tax.

"INTEREST ON DEFICIENCIES"

"Sec. 38. Interest upon the amount determined as a deficiency shall be assessed at the same time as the deficiency, shall be paid upon notice and demand from the collector, and shall be collected as a part of the tax, at the rate of 1 per centum per month from the date prescribed for the payment of the tax (or, if the tax is paid in installments, from the date prescribed for the payment of the first installment) to the date the deficiency is assessed.

"ADDITIONS TO THE TAX IN CASE OF DEFICIENCY"

"Sec. 39. (a) Negligence: If any part of any deficiency is due to negligence, or intentional disregard of rules and regulations but without intent to defraud, 5 per centum of the total amount of the deficiency (in addition to such deficiency) shall be assessed, collected, and paid in the same manner as if it were a deficiency.

"(b) Fraud: If any part of any deficiency is due to fraud with intent to evade tax, then 50 per centum of the total amount of the deficiency (in addition to such deficiency) shall be so assessed, collected, and paid.

"ADDITIONS TO THE TAX IN THE CASE OF NONPAYMENT"

"Sec. 40. (a) Tax shown on return.—

"(1) General rule: Where the amount determined by the taxpayer as the tax imposed by this title, or any installment thereof, or any part of such amount or installment, is not paid on or before the date prescribed for its payment, there shall be collected as a part of the tax, interest upon such unpaid amount at the rate of 1 per centum a month from the date prescribed for its payment until it is paid.

"(2) If extension granted: Where an extension of time for payment of the amount so determined as the tax by the taxpayer, or any installment thereof, has been granted, and the amount the time for payment of which has been extended, and the interest thereon determined under section 41 is not paid in full prior to the expiration of the period of the extension, then, in lieu of the interest provided for in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, interest at the rate of 1 per centum a month shall be collected on such unpaid amount from the date of the expiration of the period of the extension until it is paid.

"(b) Deficiency: Where a deficiency, or any interest or additional amounts assessed in connection therewith under section 38, or under section 39, or any addition to the tax in case of delinquency provided for in section 37 is not paid in full within ten days from the date of notice and demand from the collector, there shall be collected, as part of the tax, interest upon the unpaid amount at the rate of 1 per centum a month from the date of such notice and demand until it is paid.

"(c) Fiduciaries: For any period an estate is held by a fiduciary appointed by order of any court of competent jurisdiction or by will, there shall be collected interest at the rate of 1 per centum per month in lieu of the interest provided in subparagraphs (a) and (b) of this section.

"TIME EXTENDED FOR PAYMENT OF TAX SHOWN ON RETURN

"SEC. 41. If the time for payment of the amount determined as the tax by the taxpayer, or any installment thereof, is extended under the authority of section 26 (c), there shall be collected, as a part of such amount, interest thereon at the rate of 1 per centum per month from the date when such payment should have been made if no extension had been granted, until the expiration of the period of the extension.

"PENALTIES

"SEC. 42. (a) Negligence: Any person required under this title to pay or collect any tax, or required by law or regulations made under authority thereof to make a return, keep any records, or supply information, who fails to pay or collect such tax, to make such return, to keep such records, or supply such information, at the time or times required by law or regulations shall, upon conviction thereof (in addition to other penalties provided by law), be fined not more than $300 for each and every such failure, and each and every day that such failure continues shall constitute a separate and distinct offense. All prosecutions under this paragraph shall be brought in the police court of the District of Columbia on information by the corporation counsel or his assistants in the name of the District of Columbia.

"(b) Willful violation: Any person required under this title to pay or collect any tax, or required by law or regulations made under authority thereof to make a return, keep any records, or supply any information, for the purposes of this title, who willfully refuses to pay or collect such tax, to make such returns, to keep such records, or to supply such information, or who willfully attempts in any manner to defeat or evade the tax imposed by this title, shall, in addition to other penalties provided by law, be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both, together with costs of prosecution.

"(c) Definition of 'person': The term 'person' as used in this section includes an officer or employee of a corporation, or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under duty to perform the act in respect to which the violation occurs.

"DEFINITIONS

"SEC. 43. For the purpose of this title and unless otherwise required by the context—

"(1) The word 'person' means an individual, a trust or estate, a partnership, or a corporation.

"(2) The word 'taxpayer' means any person subject to a tax imposed by this title.

"(3) The word 'partnership' includes a syndicate, group, pool, joint adventure, or other unincorporated organization, through or by means of which any business, financial operation, or venture is carried on, and which is not, within the meaning of this title, a trust or estate or a corporation; and the word 'partner' includes a member in such a syndicate, group, pool, joint adventure, or organization.

"(4) The word 'corporation' includes associations, joint-stock companies, and insurance companies.

"(5) The word 'domestic' when applied to a corporation other than an association, means created under the law of United States applicable to the District of Columbia; and when applied to an association or partnership means having the principal office or place of business within the District of Columbia.

"(6) The word 'foreign' when applied to a corporation or partnership means a corporation or partnership which is not domestic.

"(7) The word 'fiduciary' means a guardian, trustee, executor, administrator, receiver, conservator, or any person acting in any fiduciary capacity for any person.

"(8) The word 'individual' means all natural persons, whether married or unmarried; and also all trusts, estates, and fiduciaries acting for other persons; it does not include corporations or partnerships acting for or in their own behalf.

"(9) The words 'taxable year' mean the calendar year or the fiscal year ending during such calendar year upon the basis of which the net income is computed under this title. The term 'taxable year' includes, in the case of a return made for a fractional part of a year under the provisions of this title, the period for which such return is made.

"(10) The words 'fiscal year' mean an accounting period of twelve months and ending on the last day of any month other than December.

"(11) The words 'paid or incurred' and 'paid or accrued' shall be construed according to the method of accounting upon the basis of which the net income is computed under this title.

"(12) The words 'trade or business' include the engaging in or carrying on of any trade, business, profession, vocation or calling, or commercial activity in the District of Columbia; and include the performance of the functions of a public office.

"(13) The word 'stock' includes a share in an association, joint-stock company, or insurance company.

"(14) The word 'shareholder' includes a member in an association, joint-stock company, or insurance company.

"(15) The words 'United States' when used in a geographical sense include only the States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, and the District of Columbia.

"(16) The word 'dividend' means any distribution made by a corporation out of its earnings or profits to its stockholders or members whether such distribution be made in cash, or any other property, other than stock of the same class in the corporation. It includes such portion of the assets of a corporation distributed at the time of dissolution as are in effect a distribution of earnings.

"(17) The word 'include', when used in a definition contained in this title, shall not be deemed to exclude other things otherwise within the meaning of the term defined.

"(18) The word 'Commissioners' means the Commissioners of the District of Columbia or their duly authorized representative or representatives.

"(19) The word 'District' means the District of Columbia.

"(20) The word 'assessor' means the assessor of the District of Columbia.

"(21) The word 'collector' means the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia.

"TITLE III—FEES AND FINES

"On and after July 1, 1939, there shall be credited to the District of Columbia that proportion of the fees and fines collected by the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, including fees and fines collected by the offices of the clerk of that court and of the United States marshal for the District of Columbia, as the amount paid by the District of Columbia toward salaries and expenses of such court and of the offices of the United States district attorney for the District of Columbia and of the United States marshal for the District of Columbia bears to the total amount of such salaries and expenses; and such proportion of the fees and fines, if any, collected by the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, including fees and fines, if any, collected by the office of the clerk of that court, as the amount paid by the District of Columbia toward the salaries and expenses of such court bears to the total amount of such salaries and expenses.

"TITLE IV—AMENDMENTS TO AND REPEAL OF PRIOR ACTS

"INTANGIBLE PERSONAL PROPERTY

"SEC. 1. The tax on intangible personal property imposed by any law relating to the District shall not apply with respect to any year subsequent to the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939.

"TAX ON CERTAIN UTILITIES

"SEC. 2. (a) Paragraph 5 of section 6 of the Act entitled 'An Act making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and three, and for other purposes,' approved July 1, 1902, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"PAR. 5. Each national bank as the trustee for its stockholders, through its president or cashier, and all other incorporated banks and trust companies in the District of Columbia, through their presidents or cashiers, and all gas, electric lighting, and telephone companies, through their proper officers, shall make affidavit to the board of personal-tax appraisers on or before the 1st day of August each year as to the amount of its or their gross earnings or gross receipts, as the case may be, for the preceding year ending the 30th day of June, and each national bank and all other incorporated banks and trust companies respectively shall pay to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia per annum 6 per centum on such gross earnings and each gas company, electric lighting company, and telephone company shall pay to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia per annum 4 per centum on such gross receipts, from the sale of public-utility commodities and services within the District of Columbia. And in addition thereto the real estate owned by each national or other incorporated bank, and each trust, gas, electric-lighting, and telephone company in the District of Columbia shall be taxed as other real estate in said District: Provided, That street-railroad companies shall pay 3 per centum per annum on their gross receipts and other taxes as provided by existing law, and insurance companies shall continue to pay the 2 per centum on premium receipts as provided by existing law. Each gas, electric-lighting, telephone and street railroad company shall pay, in addition to the tax herein mentioned, the corporate income tax imposed by title II of the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1939, and the personal property tax on merchandise stock in trade. So much of the Act approved October 1, 1890, entitled 'An Act to provide for the incorporation of trust, loan, mortgage, and certain other corporations within the District of Columbia' as is inconsistent with the provisions of this section is hereby repealed.

"(b) This section shall not apply to gross earnings or gross receipts for any fiscal year ending the 30th day of June prior to the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940. Taxes shall be levied and collected for the fiscal years preceding the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, under said paragraph 5 of section 6 of said Act of July 1, 1902, as if this title had not been enacted.

"(c) Section 6 of the Act of July 1, 1902 (c. 1352, 32 Stat. 619), is amended by striking out paragraph 8, so that the corporate excess tax therein provided shall become inoperative.

"TAX ON REAL PROPERTY

"Sec. 3. Title VII of the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, as amended, is amended to read as follows: 'For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, the rate of taxation imposed on real and tangible personal property in the District of Columbia shall be 1.75 per centum of the assessed value of such property.'

"TAXABLE STATUS OF MOTOR VEHICLES AS TANGIBLE PERSONAL PROPERTY

"Sec. 4. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the tangible personal-property tax on motor vehicles, except when consisting of stock in trade of merchants, shall be prorated according to the number of months such property has a situs within the District; and all such motor vehicles shall be assessed at their value as of April 1 each year: Provided, however, That where a motor vehicle shall be registered in the District of Columbia for the first time on a date between April 1 of one year and April 1 of the succeeding year, such motor vehicle shall be assessed, for taxation for the period ending with the succeeding April 1, at its value as of date of application for such first registration.

"TAX APPEALS

"Sec. 5. (a) The first sentence of the second paragraph of section 2 of title IX of the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, as amended by the Act approved May 16, 1938, is amended to read as follows: 'The salary of such person so appointed shall be $8,000 per annum.' This amendment shall be effective on and after July 1, 1939.

"(b) Section 3 of title IX of the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, as amended, is amended as follows:

"Sec. 3. Any person aggrieved by any assessment by the District against him of any personal-property, inheritance, estate, business-privilege, gross-receipts, gross-earnings, insurance-premiums, or motor-vehicle-fuel tax or taxes, or penalties thereon, may, within ninety days after notice of such assessment, appeal from such assessment to the Board, provided such person shall first pay such tax, together with penalties and interest due thereon, to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia under protest in writing. The mailing to the taxpayer of a statement of taxes due shall be considered notice of assessment with respect of such taxes. The Board shall hear and determine all questions arising on said appeal and shall make separate findings of fact and conclusions of law, and shall render its decision thereon in writing. The Board may affirm, cancel, reduce, or increase such assessment.'

"(b) Subsections (a), (b), and (c) of section 5 of title IX of the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, as amended, are amended to read as follows:

"(a) The assessor and deputy assessor of the District and the board of all of the assistant assessors, with the assessor as chairman, shall compose a Board of Equalization and Review, and as such Board of Equalization and Review they shall convene in a room to be provided for them by the Commissioners, on the first Monday of January of each year, and shall remain in session until the first Monday in April of each year, after which date no complaint as to valuation as herein provided shall be received or considered by such Board of Equalization and Review. Public notice of the time and place of such session shall be given by publication for two successive days in two daily newspapers in the District not more than two weeks or less than ten days before the beginning of said session. It shall be the duty of said Board of Equalization and Review to fairly and impartially equalize the value of real property made by the board of assistant assessors as the basis for assessment. Any five of said Board of Equalization and Review shall constitute a quorum for business, and, in the absence of the Assessor, a temporary chairman may be selected. They shall immediately proceed to equalize the valuations made by the board of assistant assessors so that each lot and tract and improvements thereon shall be entered upon the tax list at their value in money; and for this purpose they shall hear such complaints as may be made in respect of said assessments, and in determining them they may raise the valuation of such tracts or lots as in their opinion may have been returned below their value and reduce the valuation of such as they may believe to have been returned above their value to such sum as in their opinion may be the value thereof. The valuation of the real property made and equalized as aforesaid shall be completed not later than the first Monday of May annually. The valuation of said real property made and equalized as aforesaid shall be approved by the Commissioners not later than July 1 annually, and when approved by the Commissioners shall constitute the basis of taxation for the next succeeding year and until another valuation is made according to law, except as hereinafter provided. Any person aggrieved by any assessment, equalization, or valuation made, may, within ninety days after October 1 of the year in which such assessment, equalization, or valuation is made, appeal from such assessment, equalization, or valuation in the same manner and to the same extent as provided in sections 3 and 4 of this title: Provided, however, That such person shall have first made his complaint to the Board of Equalization and Review respecting such assessment as herein provided.

"(b) Annually, on or prior to July 1 of each year, the board of assistant assessors shall make a list of all real estate which shall have become subject to taxation and which is not then on the tax list, and affix a value thereon, according to the rules prescribed by law for assessing real estate; shall make return of all new structures erected or roofed, and additions to or improvements of old structures which shall not have been theretofore assessed, specifying the tract or lot of land on which each of such structures has been erected, and the value of such structure, and they shall add such valuation to the assessment made on such tract or lot. When the improvements on any lot or tract of land shall become damaged or be destroyed from any cause, the said board of assistant assessors shall reduce the assessment on said property to the extent of such damage: Provided, That the Board of Equalization and Review shall hear such complaints as may be made in respect of said assessments between September 1 and September 30 and determine the same not later than October 15 of the same year. Any person aggrieved by any assessment or valuation made in pursuance of this paragraph may, within ninety days after October 15 of the year in which said valuation or assessment is made, appeal from such assessment or valuation in the same manner and to the same extent as provided in sections 3 and 4 of this title: Provided, however, That such person shall have first made his complaint to the Board of Equalization and Review respecting such assessment as herein provided.

"(c) In addition to the annual assessment of all real estate made on or prior to July 1 of each year there shall be added a list of all new buildings erected or under proof prior to January 1 of each year, in the same manner as provided by law for all annual additions; and the amounts thereof shall be added as assessment for the second half of the then current year payable in the month of March. When the improvements on any lot or tract of land shall become damaged or be destroyed from any cause prior to January 1 of each year the said board of assistant assessors shall reduce the assessment on said property to the extent of said damage for the second half of the then current year payable in the month of March. The Board of Equalization and Review shall hear such complaints as may be made in respect of said assessments for the second half of said year between March 1 and March 31 and determine said complaints not later than April 15 of the same year. Any person aggrieved by any assessment made in pursuance of this paragraph may, within ninety days after April 15 of the year in which such assessment is made, appeal from such assessment in the same manner and to the same extent as provided in sections 3 and 4 of this title: Provided, however, That such person shall have first made his complaint to the Board of Equalization and Review respecting such assessment as herein provided.'

"Sec. 13. In any matter affecting taxation, the determination of which is by law left to the discretion of the Commissioners, the Commissioners may, if they so elect, refer such matter to the Board to make findings of fact and submit recommendations, such findings of fact and recommendations, if any, to be advisory only and not binding on the Commissioners, and shall be without prejudice to the Commissioners to make such further and other inquiry and investigation concerning such matter as they in their discretion shall consider necessary or advisable.'

"TANGIBLE PERSONAL PROPERTY STORED IN TRANSIT

"Sec. 6. Nothing in this act contained, nor shall any prior act of Congress relating to the District of Columbia be deemed to impose upon any person, firm, association, company, or corporation a tax based upon tangible personal property owned and stored by such person in a public warehouse in the District of Columbia for a period of time no longer than is necessary for the convenience or exigencies of reshipment and transportation to its destination without the District of Columbia.

"TITLE V—INHERITANCE AND ESTATE TAXES

"Title V of the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, as amended by an act entitled 'An act to amend the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, and for other purposes,' approved May 16, 1938, is amended to read as follows:

"Taxes shall be imposed in relation to estates of decedents, the shares of beneficiaries of such estates, and gifts as hereinafter provided:

"ARTICLE I—INHERITANCE TAX

"Sec. 1. (a) All real property and tangible and intangible personal property, or any interest therein, having its taxable situs in the District of Columbia, transferred from any person who may die seized or possessed thereof, either by will or by law, or by right of survivorship, and all such property, or interest therein, transferred by deed, grant, bargain, gift, or sale (except in cases of a bona fide purchase for full consideration in money or money's worth), made or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment after the death of the decedent, or made in contemplation of death, to or for the use of, in trust or otherwise (including property of which the decedent has retained for his life or for any period not ascertainable without reference to his death or for any period which does not in fact end before his death (1) the possession or enjoyment of, or the right to the income from such property or (2) the right, either alone or in conjunction with any person, to designate the persons who shall possess or enjoy the property or the income therefrom), to the father, mother, husband, wife, children by blood or legally adopted children, or any other lineal descendants or lineal ancestors of the decedent, shall be subject to a tax as follows: 1 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $5,000 and not in excess of $50,000; 2 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $50,000 and not in excess of $100,000; 3 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $100,000 and not in excess of $500,000; 4 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $500,000 and not in excess of $1,000,000; 5 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $1,000,000.

"(b) So much of said property so transferred to each of the brothers and sisters of the whole or half blood of the decedent shall be subject to a tax as follows: 3 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $2,000 and not in excess of $25,000; 4 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $25,000 and not in excess of $50,000; 6 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $50,000 and not in excess of $100,000; 8 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $100,000 and not in excess of $500,000; 10 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $500,000.

"(c) So much of said property so transferred to any person other than those included in paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section and all firms, institutions, associations, and corporations shall be subject to a tax as follows: 5 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $1,000 and not in excess of $25,000; 7 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $25,000 and not in excess of $50,000; 9 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $50,000 and not in excess of $100,000; 12 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $100,000 and not in excess of $500,000; 15 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $500,000.

"(d) Executors, administrators, trustees, and other persons making distribution shall only be discharged from liability for the amount of such tax with the payment of which they are charged by paying the same as hereinafter described.

"(e) Property transferred exclusively for public or municipal purposes, to the United States or the District of Columbia, or exclusively for charitable, educational, or religious purposes within the District of Columbia, shall be exempt from any and all taxation under the provisions of this section.

"(f) Where any beneficiary has died or may hereafter die within six months after the death of the decedent and before coming into the possession and enjoyment of any property passing to him, and before selling, assigning, transferring, or in any manner contracting with respect to his interest in such property, such property shall be taxed only once, and if the tax on the property so passing to said beneficiary has not been paid, then the tax shall be assessed on the property received from such share by each beneficiary thereof, finally entitled to the possession and enjoyment thereof, as if he had been the original beneficiary, and the exemptions and rates of taxation shall be governed by the respective relationship of each of the ultimate beneficiaries to the first decedent.

"(g) The provisions of article I of this title shall apply to property in the estate of every person who shall die after this title becomes effective.

"(h) The transfer of any property, or interest therein, within 2 years prior to death, shall, unless shown to the contrary, be deemed to have been made in contemplation of death.

"(i) All property and interest therein which shall pass from a decedent to the same beneficiary by one or more of the methods specified in this section, and all beneficial interests which shall accrue in the manner herein provided to such beneficiary on account of the death of such decedent, shall be united and treated as a single interest for the purpose of determining the tax hereunder.

"(j) Whenever any person shall exercise a general power of appointment derived from any disposition of property, made either before or after the passage of this title, such appointment, when made, shall be deemed a transfer taxable, under the provisions of this title, in the same manner as though the property to which such appointment relates belonged absolutely to the donee of such power; and whenever any person possessing such power of appointment so derived shall omit or fail to exercise the same, within the time provided therefor, in whole or in part, a transfer taxable under the provisions of this title shall be deemed to take place to the extent of such omissions or failure in the same manner as though the person or persons thereby becoming entitled to the possession or enjoyment of the property to which such power related had succeeded thereto by the will of the donee of the power failing to exercise such power, taking effect at the time of such omission or failure.

"(k) The doctrine of equitable conversion shall not be invoked in the assessment of taxes under this article.

"Sec. 2. The tax provided in section 1 shall be paid on the market value of the property or interest therein at the time of the death of the decedent as appraised by the assessor, or, in the discretion of the assessor, upon the value as appraised by the probate court of the District. The taxable portion of real or personal property held jointly or by the entireties shall be determined by dividing the value of the entire property by the number of persons in whose joint names it was held.

"Sec. 3. The appraisal thus made shall be deemed and taken to be the true value of the said property or interest therein upon which the said tax shall be paid, and the amount of said tax and the tax imposed by article II of this title shall be a lien on said property or interest therein for the period of ten years from the date of death of the decedent: Provided, however, That such lien shall not attach to any personal property sold or disposed of for value by an administrator, executor, or collector, or of the estate of such decedent appointed by the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia or by a trustee appointed under a will filed with the register of wills for the District or by order of said court, or his successor approved by said court, but a lien for said taxes shall attach on all property acquired in substitution therefor for a period of ten years after the acquisition of such substituted property: And provided further, That such lien upon such substituted property shall, upon sale by such personal representatives, be extinguished and shall reattach in the manner as provided with respect of such original property.

"Sec. 4. The personal representative of every decedent, the gross value of whose estate is in excess of $1,000, shall, within fifteen months after the death of the decedent, report under oath to the assessor, on forms provided for that purpose an itemized schedule of all the property (real, personal, and mixed) of the decedent, the market value thereof at the time of the death of the decedent, the name or names of the persons to receive the same and the actual value of the property that each will receive, the relationship of such persons to the decedent, and the age of any persons who receive a life interest in the property, and any other information which the assessor may require. Said personal representative shall, within eighteen months of the date of the death of the decedent and before distribution of the estate, pay to the collector of taxes the taxes imposed by section 1 upon the distributive shares and legacies in his hands and the tax imposed by section 1 hereof against each distributive share or legacy shall be charged against such distributive share or legacy unless the will shall otherwise direct.

"Sec. 5. The personal representative of the decedent shall collect from each beneficiary entitled to a distributive share or legacy the tax imposed upon such distributive share or legacy in section 1 hereof, and if the said beneficiary shall neglect or fail to pay the same within 15 months after the date of the death of the decedent such personal representative shall, upon the order of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, sell for cash so much of said distributive share or legacy as may be necessary to pay said tax and all the expenses of said sale.

"Sec. 6. Every person entitled to receive property taxable under section 1 hereof, which property is not under the control of a personal representative, and is over $1,000 in value, shall, within six months after the death of the decedent, report under oath to the assessor, on forms provided for that purpose, an itemized schedule of all property (real, personal, and mixed) received or to be received by such person; the market value of the same at the time of the death of the decedent and the relationship of such person to the decedent; and any other information which the assessor may require. The tax on the transfer of any such property shall be paid by such person to the collector of taxes within nine months after the date of the death of the decedent: Provided, however, That with respect to real estate passing by will or inheritance such report shall be made within fifteen months after the death of the decedent, and the tax on the transfer thereof shall be paid within eighteen months after the date of the death of the decedent.

"Sec. 7. In the case of any grant, deed, devise, descent, or bequest of a life interest or term of years, the donee for life or years shall pay a tax only on the value of his interest, determined in a manner as the Commissioners by regulation may prescribe, and the donee of the future interest shall pay a tax only on his interest as based upon the value thereof at the time of the death of the decedent creating such interest. The value of any future interest shall be determined by deducting from the market value of such property at the time of the death of such decedent the value of the precedent life interest or term of years. Where the future interest is vested the donee thereof shall pay the tax within the time in which the tax upon the precedent life interest or term of years is required to be paid under the provisions of sections 4 and 6 of this article, as the case may be. Where the future interest is contingent the personal representative of such decedent or the persons interested in such contingent future estate shall have the option of (1) paying, within the time herein provided for the payment of taxes due upon vested future interests, a tax equal to the mean between the highest possible tax and the lowest possible tax which could be imposed under any contingency or condition whereby such contingent future interest might be wholly or in part created, defeated, extended, or abridged; or (2) paying the tax upon such transfer at the time when such future interest shall become vested at rates and with exemptions in force at the time of the death of the decedent: Provided, That the personal representative or trustee of the estate of the decedent or the persons interested in the future contingent interest shall deposit with the assessor a bond in the penal sum of an amount equal to twice the tax payable under option (1) hereof. Such bonds shall be payable to the District and shall be conditioned for the payment of such tax when and as the same shall become due and payable. The tax upon the transfer of future interests or remainders shall be a lien upon the property or interest transferred from the date of the death of the decedent creating the interests and shall remain in force and effect until ten years after the date when such remainder or future interest shall become vested in the donee thereof. If the tax upon the transfer of a contingent future interest is paid before the same shall become vested, such tax shall be paid by the personal representative out of the corpus of the estate of the decedent, otherwise by the person or persons entitled to receive the same.

"ARTICLE II—ESTATE TAXES

"Sec. 1. In addition to the taxes imposed by article I, there is hereby imposed upon the transfer of the estate of every decedent who, after this title becomes effective, shall die a resident of the District, a tax equal to 80 per centum of the Federal estate tax imposed by subdivision (a) of section 301, title III, of the Revenue Act of 1926, as amended, or as hereafter amended or reenacted.

"Sec. 2. There shall be credited against and applied in reduction of the tax imposed by section 1 of this article the amount of any estate, inheritance, legacy, or succession tax lawfully imposed by any State or Territory of the United States, in respect of any property included in the gross estate for Federal estate-tax purposes as prescribed in title III of the Revenue Act of 1926, as amended, or as hereafter amended or reenacted: Provided, however, That only such taxes as are actually paid and credit therefor claimed and allowed against the Federal estate tax may be applied as a credit against and in reduction of the tax imposed by section 1.

"Sec. 3. In no event shall the tax imposed by section 1 of this article exceed the difference between the maximum credit which might be allowed against the Federal estate tax imposed by title III of the Revenue Act of 1926, as amended, or as hereafter amended or reenacted, and the aggregate amount of the taxes described in section 2 of this article (but not including the tax imposed by section 1) allowable as a credit against the Federal estate tax.

"Sec. 4. The purpose of section 1 of this article is to secure for the District the benefit of the credit allowed under the provisions of section 301 (c) of title III of the Revenue Act of 1926, as amended, or as hereafter amended or reenacted, to the extent that the District may be entitled by the provisions of said Revenue Act, by imposing additional taxes, and the same shall be liberally construed to effect such purpose: Provided, That the amount of the tax imposed by section 1 of this article shall not be decreased by any failure to secure the allowance of credit against the Federal estate tax.

"Sec. 5. A tax is hereby imposed upon the transfer of real property or tangible personal property in the District of every person who at the time of death was a resident of the United States but not a resident of the District, and upon the transfer of all property, both real and personal, within the District of every person who at the time of death was not a resident of the United States, the amount of which shall be a sum equal to such proportion of the amount by which the credit allowable under the applicable Federal revenue Act for estate, inheritance, legacy, and succession taxes actually paid to the several States exceeds the amount actually so paid for such taxes, exclusive of estate taxes based upon the difference between such credit and other estate taxes and inheritance, legacy, and succession taxes, as the value of the property in the District bears to the value of the entire estate, subject to estate tax under the applicable Federal revenue Act.

"Sec. 6. Every executor or administrator of the estate of a decedent dying a resident of the District or of a nonresident decedent owning real estate or tangible personal property situated in the District, or of an alien decedent owning any real estate, tangible or intangible personal property situated in the District, or, if there is no executor or administrator appointed, qualified, and acting, then any person in actual or constructive possession of any property forming a part of an estate subject to estate tax under this title shall, within sixteen months after the death of the decedent file with the assessor a copy of the return required by section 304 of the Revenue Act of 1926, verified by the affidavit of the person filing said return with the assessor, and shall, within thirty days after the date of any communication from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, confirming, increasing, or diminishing the tax shown to be due, file a copy of such communication with the assessor. With the copy of the Federal estate-tax return there shall be filed an affidavit as to the several amounts paid or expected to be paid as taxes within the purview of section 2 of this article: Provided, however, That any case where the time for the filing of such return as required by section 304 of the Revenue Act of 1926 is extended without penalty by the Bureau of Internal Revenue, then the copy thereof verified as aforesaid may be filed with the assessor within thirty days after the expiration of said extended period.

"Sec. 7. The assessor shall, upon receipt of the return and accompanying affidavit, assess such amount as he may determine, from the basis of the return, to be due the District. Upon receipt of a copy of any communication from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, herein required to be filed, the assessor shall make such additional assessment or shall make such abatement of the assessment as may appear proper.

"Sec. 8. The estate taxes imposed by this article shall be paid to the collector of taxes within seventeen months after the death of the decedent: Provided, however, That in any case where the time for the payment of taxes imposed by subdivision (a) of section 301, title III, of the Revenue Act of 1926, is extended by the Bureau of Internal Revenue, then the tax imposed by this article shall be paid within sixty days after the expiration of such extended period, together with interest as provided in section 4 of article IV of this title: Provided further, That any additional assessment found to be due under section 7 of this article shall be paid to the collector of taxes within thirty days after the determination of such additional assessment by the assessor.

"ARTICLE III—GENERAL

"Sec. 1. The bond of the personal representative of the decedent shall be liable for all taxes and penalties assessed under this title, except inheritance taxes and penalties imposed in relation to the transfer of property not under the control of such personal representative: Provided, That in no case shall the bond of the personal representative be liable for a greater sum than is actually received by him.

"Sec. 2. The register of wills of the District shall report to the assessor on forms provided for the purpose every qualification in the District upon the estate of the decedent. Such report shall be filed with the assessor at least once every month, and shall contain the name of the decedent, the date of his death, the name and address of the personal representative, and the value of the estate, as shown by the petition for administration or probate.

"Sec. 3. The Commissioners shall have supervision of the enforcement of this title and shall have the power to make such rules and regulations, consistent with its provisions, as may be necessary for its enforcement and efficient administration and to provide for the granting of extension of time within which to perform the duties imposed by this title. The assessor shall determine all taxes assessable under this title and immediately upon the determination of same, shall forward a statement of the taxes determined to the person or persons chargeable with the payment thereof and shall give advice thereof to the collector of taxes. The assessor is hereby authorized and empowered to summon any person before him to give testimony on oath or affirmation or to produce all books, records, papers, documents, or other legal evidence as to any matter relating to this title, and the assessor is authorized to administer oaths and to take testimony for the purposes of the administration of this title. Such summons may be served by any member of the Metropolitan Police Department. If any person having been personally summoned shall neglect or refuse to obey the summons issued as herein provided, then and in that event the assessor may report that fact to the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia or one of the justices thereof, and said court or any justice thereof hereby is empowered to compel obedience to said summons to the same extent as witnesses may be compelled to obey the subpoenas of that court.

"Sec. 4. If the taxes imposed by this title are not paid when due, 1 per centum interest for each month or portion of a month from the date when the same were due until paid shall be added to the amount of said taxes and collected as a part of the same, and said taxes shall be collected by the collector of taxes in the manner provided by the law for the collection of taxes due the District on personal property in force at the time of such collection: Provided, however, That where the time for payment of the tax imposed by this title is extended by the assessor or where the payment of the tax is lawfully suspended under the regulations for the administration of this title, interest shall be paid at the rate of 6 per centum per annum from the date on which the tax would otherwise be payable.

"Sec. 5. If any person shall fail to perform any duty imposed upon him by the provisions of this title or the regulations made hereunder the Commissioners may proceed by petition for mandamus to compel performance and upon the granting of such writ the court shall adjudge all costs of such proceedings against the delinquent.

"Sec. 6. Any person required by this title to file a return who fails to file such return within the time prescribed by this title, or within such additional time as may be granted under regulations promulgated by the Commissioners, shall become liable in his own person and estate to the District in an amount equal to 10 per centum of the tax found to be due. In case any person required by this title to file a return knowingly files a false or fraudulent return, he shall become liable in his own person and estate to the said District in an amount equal to 50 per centum of the tax found to be due. Such amounts shall be collected in the same manner as is herein provided for the collection of the taxes levied under this title.

"Sec. 7. Any person required by this title to pay a tax or required by law or regulation made under authority thereof to make a return or keep any records or supply any information for the purposes of computation, assessment, or collection of any tax imposed by this title, who willfully fails to pay such tax, make any such return, or supply any such information at the time or times required by law or regulation shall, in addition to other penalties provided by law, be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both.

"Sec. 8. When the assessor is satisfied that the tax liability imposed by this title has been fully discharged or provided for, he may, under regulations prescribed by the Commissioners, issue his certificate, releasing any or all property from the lien herein imposed.

"Sec. 9. No person holding, within the District, tangible or intangible assets of any resident or nonresident decedent, of the value of $300 or more, shall deliver or transfer the same or any part thereof to any person other than an executor, administrator, or collector of the estate of such decedent appointed by the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, unless notice of the date and place of such intended transfer be served upon the assessor of the District of Columbia at least ten days prior to such delivery or transfer, nor shall any person holding, within the District of Columbia, any assets of a resident or nonresident decedent, of the value of $300 or more, deliver or transfer the same or any part thereof to any person other than an executor, administrator, or collector of the estate of such decedent appointed by said District Court without retaining a sufficient portion or amount thereof to pay any tax which may be assessed on account of the transfer of such assets under the provisions of articles I and II without an order from the assessor of the District of Columbia authorizing such transfer. It shall be lawful for the assessor of the District, personally, or by his representatives, to examine said assets at any time before such delivery or transfer. Failure to serve such notice or to allow such examination or to retain as herein required a sufficient portion or amount to pay the taxes imposed by this title shall render such person liable to the payment of such taxes. The assessor of the District may issue a certificate authorizing the transfer of any such assets whenever it appears to the satisfaction of said assessor that no tax is due thereon: Provided, however, That any corporation, foreign or domestic to the District having outstanding stock or other securities registered in the sole name of a decedent whose estate or any part thereof is taxable under this title, may transfer the same, without notice to the assessor and without liability for any tax imposed thereon under this title, upon the order of an administrator, executor, or collector of the estate of such decedent appointed by the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, or by a trustee appointed under a will filed with the register of wills of the District, or appointed by said court, or his successor approved by said court: Provided further, That the lessor of a safe-deposit box standing in the joint names of a decedent and a survivor or survivors may deliver the entire contents of such safe-deposit box to the survivor or survivors, after examination of such contents by the assessor or his representative, without any liability on the part of the said lessor for the payment of such tax.

"SEC. 10. The Bureau of Internal Revenue of the Treasury Department of the United States is authorized and required to supply such information as may be requested by the Commissioners relative to any person subject to the taxes imposed under this title or relative to any person whose estate is subject to the provisions of this title.

"SEC. 11. If any return required by this title is not filed with the assessor when due, the assessor shall have the right to determine and assess the tax or taxes from such information as he may possess or obtain.

"SEC. 12. The assessor is authorized to enter into an agreement with any person liable for a tax on a transfer under article I of this title, in which remainders or expectant estates are of such nature or so disposed and circumstanced that the value of the interest is not ascertainable under the provisions of this title, and to compound and settle such tax upon such terms as the assessor may deem equitable and expedient.

"SEC. 13. In the interpretation of this title unless the context indicates a different meaning the term "tax" means the tax or taxes mentioned in this title.

"(a) The term "District" means the District of Columbia.

"(b) The term "Commissioners" means the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, or their duly authorized representative or representatives.

"(c) The term "assessor" means the assessor of the District of Columbia or his duly authorized representative or representatives.

"(d) The term "collector of taxes" means the collector of taxes for the District of Columbia, or his duly authorized representative or representatives.

"(e) The term "Metropolitan Police Department" means the Metropolitan Police Department of the District of Columbia.

"(f) The term "include", when used in a definition contained in this title, shall not be deemed to exclude other things otherwise within the meaning of the term defined.

"(g) The term "resident" means domiciled and the term "residence" means domicile.

"SEC. 14. The provisions of this title shall become effective at 12:01 antemeridian, the day immediately following its approval."

"TITLE VI—ADVANCEMENT OF MONEY BY TREASURY

"The Secretary of the Treasury, notwithstanding the provisions of the District of Columbia Appropriation Act, approved June 29, 1922, is authorized and directed to advance, on the requisition of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, made in the manner now prescribed by law, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary from time to time to meet the general expenses of said District as authorized by Congress, and such amounts so advanced shall be reimbursed by the said Commissioners to the Treasury out of taxes and revenue collected for the support of the government of the said District of Columbia.

"TITLE VII—JOINT SELECT COMMITTEE

"A joint select committee, composed of three Senators to be appointed by the President of the Senate, and three Representatives to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, is created and is authorized and directed to make a further study of the tax structure of the District of Columbia with the purpose in view of providing a permanent tax structure for said District, and to make a report of such study with recommendations to Congress.

"TITLE VIII—GENERAL PROVISIONS

"SEPARABILITY CLAUSE

"Sec. 1. If any provision of this Act or the application thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid, the remainder of the Act, and the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances, shall not be affected thereby.

"RULES AND REGULATIONS

"SEC. 2. The Commissioners shall prescribe and publish all needful rules and regulations for the enforcement of this Act." And the Senate agree to the same.

GEORGE J. BATES,

Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. OVERTON. I ask for the immediate consideration of the report.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the conference report.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, I desire to make an explanation as briefly as possible. It will be recalled that with respect to District of Columbia revenue the House passed a bill providing that the Federal payment for the upkeep of the National Capital be in the lump sum of $5,000,000, and also eliminating the existing business-privilege tax and the tax on intangible personal property; and that the House substituted for these taxes an income tax, both corporate and individual.

The bill reached the Senate during the closing hours of the past fiscal year. The District of Columbia Committee of the Senate undertook to consider the bill as carefully as possible, within the brief time at its disposal. On the recommendation of the District of Columbia Committee of the Senate, the Senate passed the bill fixing the Federal payment to the District of Columbia upon the basis of a formula which in turn was predicated upon the quantity of Federal property in the District with certain deductions, and which, applied to the existing status, was equivalent to fixing the payment of the National Government to the District of Columbia at approximately $8,000,000.

At the first conference there was a disagreement between the Senate conferees and the House conferees as to what the Federal payments should be. Each House then took a vote and stood by the report of its conferees. At the last meeting of the conferees we agreed upon a report. In this report now being considered by the Senate we compromised on the Federal payment, fixing it at a lump sum of $6,500,000. The House conferees met the Senate conferees half way, and the Senate conferees met the House conferees half way. The Senate then agreed to the provision in the House bill which eliminated the tax on intangible personal property.

The Senate conferees also agreed with the House conferees on eliminating the business privilege tax. The Senate conferees then agreed with the House conferees to adopt a corporate and individual income tax, with certain modifications. The result is that the tax structure agreed upon between the Senate and House conferees is the tax structure embodied in the House bill, with certain amendments. Therefore the Senate conferees, in order to have a revenue bill, have agreed, with certain modifications, to the tax structure proposed by the House, and have compromised on the Federal payment to be made to the District of Columbia.

Mr. President, I should make a brief statement in reference to the income tax which has been recommended by the conferees of both Houses, because it is a new tax. The House bill proposed a corporate income tax of 5 percent for both domestic and foreign corporations upon all income derived from sources within the District of Columbia. This has been agreed to by the Senate conferees.

With respect to the individual income tax, the House had imposed an income tax upon residents and nonresidents—upon residents with reference to their total taxable income, and upon nonresidents with respect to income derived by them within the District of Columbia—with an exemption of $2,000, whether the taxpayer be single or married, and regardless of the number of dependents he may have. The House provided an exemption for Senators and Representatives and their official personnel or staffs, and, as I recall, provided for no other exemptions.

The income tax agreed upon in conference between the Senate and the House is the imposition of an individual income tax upon all who are domiciled within the District of Columbia. The bill agreed to contains the same exemptions provided in the Federal statute, and, so far as they are applicable, the same deductions set forth in the Federal statute. In other words, the income-tax provision of this bill as recommended by the conferees follows as closely as possible the Federal statute on the subject of income taxes.

The rates are very moderate. The rate is 1 percent on the first $5,000 of taxable income, 1½ percent on the next $5,000, 2 percent on the next $5,000, 2½ percent on the next $5,000, and 3 percent on all taxable income above $20,000. It is estimated that the individual income tax will provide a revenue of approximately $300,000.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TYNDINGS in the chair). Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. OVERTON. I shall be glad to yield.

Mr. WALSH. How do the rates which the Senator has just enumerated compare with the rates of the various States which have similar income-tax laws? Are they higher, or lower, or about the average?

Mr. OVERTON. I am advised that they are considerably lower than the average. The Senator will observe that they are very moderate rates.

Mr. WALSH. I observed that as they were read. Are they among the lowest rates fixed by law in the various States?

Mr. OVERTON. I do not know any State which imposes a lower income-tax rate than that contained in the bill. There may be such a State, but I have not been advised of it.

The total tax revenue which will be derived under the provisions of the bill for the fiscal year 1940 is estimated to be $42,270,000, as against total revenue for the District of Columbia for the fiscal year 1939 of $42,137,277.

Mr. President, the appropriation bill for the District of Columbia is in conference on several items. As agreed to so far between the House conferees and the Senate conferees, the total appropriation of the general fund items is $40,173,192. There are still in controversy items aggregating $1,404,550. If the items of appropriation which are in controversy are agreed upon as passed by the Senate, the District of Columbia will need a total revenue of $43,035,528 for the general fund appropriations, as against an estimated income of $42,270,000. I entertain the hope, however, that there will be an agreement between the House conferees and the Senate conferees on the appropriation bill and that the appropriations will be brought approximately within the income of the District of Columbia.

Mr. President, I now call attention to the fact that the individual income tax is imposed only on those domiciled in the District of Columbia. It, therefore, necessarily excludes from its imposition all Senators and Members of the House of Representatives, the President of the United States, all Cabinet officers, and all Federal employees who have been brought into the District from the various States of the Union to serve their country in the National Capital, provided such employees have not of their volition surrendered their domiciles in the States and have voluntarily acquired domiciles within the District of Columbia.

When the conferees were considering this measure, as the distinguished Senator now presiding [Mr. TYNDINGS in the chair] will recall, the junior Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN] was recorded by me as voting against the imposition of any income tax, he being at the time necessarily detained by important business in Nevada. I did so because of the stand taken by the junior Senator from Nevada before the Committee on the District of Columbia and by reason of conversations I had with him and the utterances he had made upon the floor of the Senate. At the same time I knew that the Senator from Nevada realized that there was a disagreement between the House and the Senate which was imperiling the fiscal functions of the District of Columbia, and that it was necessary for us, if possible, to agree upon a bill in order to provide the necessary revenue.

I had been advised by the office of the Senator from Nevada that the Senator from Nevada had telegraphed his secretary, as follows:

Advise OVERTON he has my proxy for any matter pertaining to District tax bill.

When, therefore, the conferees had agreed upon an income tax which was to be applied only to individuals domiciled in the District of Columbia, which provided very moderate rates, I felt that I was at liberty to affix the signature of the Senator from Nevada to the conference report. But, before doing so, I consulted with his office, the Senator from Nevada being still absent. His office advised me that there would be no objection to my signing the conference report on behalf of the junior Senator from Nevada.

However, Mr. President, out of abundance of caution, I telegraphed the junior Senator from Nevada as follows:

JULY 10, 1939.

Hon. PAT A. McCARRAN,

United States Senator,

% Postmaster Pete Petersen, Reno, Nev.:

Senate and House conferees on the District of Columbia tax bill agreed to a $6,500,000 annual Federal payment, $1.75 real-estate and personal-property tax, eliminated tax on intangibles and business privilege, and agreed to a corporate income tax and a very moderate personal income tax levied only against individuals domiciled in the District of Columbia, thereby excluding all Senators and Congressmen and Federal employees whose domiciles are in the States. The rates are 1 percent on first $5,000 of taxable income, one-half of 1 percent on next $5,000, 2 percent on next $5,000; 2½ percent on next $5,000, and 3 percent on taxable income in excess of $20,000. Exemptions and deductions are the same as prescribed by Federal statute. It represents the best compromise that we could effect. Pursuant to suggestion of your office I signed your name to the conference report, which will be submitted tomorrow.

JOHN H. OVERTON,

United States Senator.

I did that, Mr. President, in order that, if the able Senator from Nevada had any objection to any of the provisions of the conference report, and especially the provision relating to the income tax, he could so advise me, and, if he objected to his name being signed to the conference report I would remove it. He did object, and, therefore, the conference report has been submitted without the approving signature of the Senator from Nevada.

The Senator from Nevada has telegraphed me and has asked me to read into the RECORD the telegram which he has addressed to me upon this subject. It is dated, Reno, Nev., July 10, 1939, and reads as follows:

RENO, NEV., July 10, 1939.

Hon. JOHN H. OVERTON,

United States Senator,

Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.:

Your wire received. Our former conferences and conversation had led me to believe that you would never stand for personal income tax in any form. On this assumption I wired my secretary to authorize you to act as my proxy in conference on District of Columbia tax bill. I regret exceedingly to learn from your wire that you have overlooked the principle, which to my mind is all important, as against income tax in any form for those who may be domiciled in the District of Columbia or who may reside there. My high regard for you and my realization of your splendid study of the subject of taxation in the District of Columbia prompts me to have pause in the matter of opposing your views. However, in this matter I must disagree in that I believe no income tax should be imposed against those individuals who may be domiciled in the District of Columbia by reason of the location of the National Capital being in that District. I have expressed myself on this subject in the committee and elsewhere. The National Capital, located in the District of Columbia, calls upon the service of those whom the Government may seek to employ and who by reason of employment are required to live or be domiciled in the District. To impose income tax against those whom the Government calls to service, and therefore requires that they be domiciled in the District, is to my mind unfortunate and unworthy of Government taxing power. The District of Columbia is the Capital of the Nation, and those who are domiciled there, by reason of that fact, should not be penalized. Domicile and bona fide residence are different in point of significance. To my mind it is an absurdity to say the Government shall call upon public servants and demand their presence in the District of Columbia and pay them out of the National Treasury for serving the Government in the District of Columbia and then impose a tax against the wages or salaries of those who are so called into Government service. I realize that you did not yield your theories as to taxation in the District, which to my mind were entirely correct, unless the exigency of the occasion demanded something unusual. Based on my viewpoint, there is no compromise, and I respectfully request that you withdraw my name from the conference report and that this wire be read into the Record on the floor of the Senate in explanation thereof. Kindest personal regards.

PAT MCCARRAN.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, I have taken the trouble to present the incident rather fully to the Senate because the request has come to me from the Senator from Nevada to do so. He desires that his attitude in reference to the income tax be fully explained and set forth before the Senate as detailed by him in the telegram he has forwarded to me and which I have read. I take great pleasure in complying with that request. I have found the able and distinguished Senator from Nevada of great service in working out the tax problems of the District of Columbia. There is no member of the committee and no Member of the Senate who has given more faithful and more studious and more patriotic application to this difficult and complex subject than has the junior Senator from Nevada.

It is true that I voted in the Committee on the District of Columbia against an income tax. I realized the difficulties of imposing an income tax in the District. If an income tax were imposed upon all Federal employees within the District, an injustice would be done Federal employees; and if an income tax were imposed which exempted all Federal employees living within the District, an injustice would be done to the District of Columbia. It is therefore a very difficult problem to undertake to settle, if there is to be any income tax at all. I finally agreed to the income tax in conference only when it was provided that the tax should be imposed exclusively on those domiciled within the District of Columbia. I took the position before the District of Columbia Committee and in conference that I would not support any legislation which would exempt Senators and Members of the House of Representatives and their official force from an income tax in the District of Columbia but would impose it on all others. I then took the position in conference that if we imposed an income tax only on those domiciled within the District, then we would be imposing it only on those who of their own volition had abandoned their domiciles in the States of their origin and had elected to make their permanent home or domicile here in the District of Columbia. Such persons, it may be justly contended, have no cause to complain against an income tax that is imposed upon them only because they have chosen to establish within the District of Columbia their permanent places of abode and to abandon their domiciles within the States.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the Record at this point a memorandum showing the revenue collections for the District of Columbia for 1939 and the estimated revenue collections for 1940 on the basis of the District tax bill as agreed to by the Senate and House conferees, and also a memorandum setting forth certain figures with respect to appropriations for the District of Columbia for the fiscal year 1940.

There being no objection, the memoranda were ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, I move the adoption of the conference report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, communicated to the Senate the intelligence of the death of Hon. SAM D. McREYNOLDS, late a Representative from the State of Tennessee, and transmitted the resolutions to the House thereon.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 1575) to provide that the annual registration of motor vehicles in the District of Columbia shall be for the period from April 1 in each year to March 31 in the succeeding year, with amendments, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to each of the following bills of the House:

H. R. 4499. An act authorizing the county of Gallatin, State of Illinois, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Ohio River at or near the city of Shawneetown, Gallatin County, Ill., to a point opposite thereto in the county of Union, State of Kentucky; and

H. R. 5452. An act to provide certain benefits for World War veterans and their dependents, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to each of the following bills of the House:

H. R. 2296. An act to restore certain benefits to World War veterans suffering with paralysis, paresis, or blindness, or who are helpless or bedridden, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 5479. An act granting annual and sick leave with pay to substitutes in the Postal Service.

The message further announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5407) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. CHANDLER, Mr. McLAUGHLIN, and Mr. MICHENER were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker pro tempore had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the Vice President:

H. R. 733. An act for the relief of S. A. Rourke;

H. R. 2296. An act to restore certain benefits to World War veterans suffering with paralysis, paresis, or blindness, or who are helpless or bedridden, and for other purposes;

H. R. 3537. An act to extend the facilities of the United States Public Health Service to active officers of the Foreign Service of the United States;

H. R. 3541. An act for the relief of John Chastain and Mollie Chastain, his wife;

H. R. 3576. An act to make effective the provisions of the Officers' Competency Certificates Convention, 1936;

H. R. 4370. An act authorizing the city of Chester, Ill., to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Chester, Ill.;

H. R. 4497. An act to prescribe rules for the enrollment of Menominee Indian children born to enrolled parents, and for other purposes;

H. R. 4499. An act authorizing the county of Gallatin, State of Illinois, its successors, and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Ohio River at or near the city of Shawneetown, Gallatin County, Ill., to a point opposite thereto in the county of Union, State of Kentucky;

H. R. 4511. An act to extend to Sgt. Maj. Edwin O. Swift, United States Marine Corps (retired), the benefits of the act of May 7, 1932, providing highest World War rank to retired enlisted men;

H. R. 5288. An act to amend section 691-a of the Code of Law of the District of Columbia, approved March 3, 1901, and of any act or acts amendatory thereof relating to foreign building and loan associations doing business in the District of Columbia;

H. R. 5346. An act for the relief of Mrs. A. R. Barnard, Charles A. Stephens, Donald W. Prairie, and dependents of Vern A. Needles;

H. R. 5452. An act to provide certain benefits for World War veterans and their dependents, and for other purposes;

H. R. 5479. An act granting annual and sick leave with pay to substitutes in the Postal Service; and

H. R. 6836. An act to amend the act entitled "An act for the grading and classification of clerks in the Foreign Service of the United States of America, and providing compensation therefor," approved February 23, 1931, as amended.

AMENDMENT OF SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6635) to amend the Social Security Act, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the first amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. HARRISON obtained the floor.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me? This is an important matter, and I think as many Senators as possible should hear the Senator's explanation of it. If he will permit me to do so, I should like to suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I do not want to object to the Senator's suggestion; but, as Senators are at luncheon at this time, it is very difficult to keep them in the Chamber.

Mr. BARKLEY. If they knew that the Senator from Mississippi was about to speak on this bill, I think probably they would come in. At any rate, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Ellender	Lee	Schwollenbach
Andrews	Frazier	Lodge	Sheppard
Austin	George	Logan	Shipstead
Barbour	Gerry	Lucas	Slattery
Barkley	Gibson	Lundeen	Smith
Bilbo	Gillette	McKellar	Stewart
Bone	Glass	McNary	Taft
Borah	Green	Maloney	Thomas, Okla.
Bridges	Guffey	Mead	Thomas, Utah
Bulow	Gurney	Miller	Townsend
Burke	Hale	Minton	Truman
Byrd	Harrison	Murray	Tydings
Byrnes	Hatch	Neely	Vandenberg
Capper	Hayden	Norris	Van Nuys
Chavez	Herring	Nye	Wagner
Clark, Idaho	Hill	O'Mahoney	Walsh

Connally	Holt	Pittman	White
Danaher	Johnson, Calif.	Radcliffe	Wiley
Davis	Johnson, Colo.	Reed
Donahay	King	Reynolds
Downey	La Follette	Schwartz

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-five Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, the proposed legislation is so important that I shall occupy the time of the Senate to make a brief explanation of the more important changes made in the present law by the bill passed by the House and the changes made by the Finance Committee in the House provisions.

I shall not burden the Senate with a discussion of the high purposes of social-security legislation. When the Social Security Act was passed, in 1935, both the reports of the committees accompanying the legislation and the pages of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD attested the object and applauded the purposes of the legislation.

We all knew when we passed that legislation that it was not perfect, and that in the course of time it would have to be supplemented and changed in many material respects. I shall confine my remarks to a brief explanation of some of the more important substantive amendments which have been adopted by the House or which have been proposed by the Senate committee and which are now before the Senate.

The major changes proposed relate to old-age insurance. It will be recalled that when the law was passed in 1935 an old-age insurance tax beginning at 1 percent on the employer and the employee was imposed, and that rate was to continue until 1940, at which time it was to be increased to 1½ percent on the employer and employee, that rate to be in effect until 1943. The rate then was to increase to 2 percent on each until 1946, and would reach the maximum of 3 percent on each in 1949.

The House bill provides for freezing the tax at the present rate for 1940, 1941, and 1942; and the Committee on Finance recommends the adoption of this proposal.

I see before me the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG], and I wish to give to him full credit for the sentiment that was created, and for what has come out of the suggestions he and others made with reference to the freezing of the tax.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, the Senator is very generous, but nothing would have resulted without the hos-pitiable cooperation of the able chairman of the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HARRISON. I thank the Senator, of course, but he made the suggestion, and it has now received the practically unanimous recommendation of both the Ways and Means Committee of the House and the Finance Committee of the Senate. So this tax will not be increased in 1940 but will be frozen and will remain at 1 percent on the employer and 1 percent on the employee.

It has been estimated that this tax reduction will amount to some $275,000,000 in 1940, and, for the 3-year period, to some $825,000,000.

The old-age benefit provisions in the present law have been greatly liberalized. Under the present law, old-age insurance benefits are based on an individual's total wages in covered employment before 65 years of age. The only monthly benefits payable are to the individual who earns these wages; and if he dies before getting any benefits, an amount equal to 3½ percent of his wages is paid to his estate. If he gets some benefits, but less than 3½ percent of his total wages, the difference is paid to his estate. Under the system, no regard is had as to whether he has a dependent wife, or whether he dies leaving a child, widow, or parents.

No monthly benefits are payable until 1942, and the number receiving benefits then would not be large, because before being entitled to benefits under the present law, a person must have total wages of at least $2,000, and must have been in covered employment in at least some part of each of 5 separate calendar years after 1936.

It is not in a spirit of criticism that I state that the present provisions afford very little protection in the early years, and will be very expensive in the later years. I should like to remind the Senate, however, that it is because of this fact that we find the pay-roll taxes necessary to finance the system under the law would greatly exceed the amount paid out in the early years, and the reserves built up from these taxes to finance the benefits in the later years would be very large indeed.

The amendments before the Senate in the bill now presented would modify this system by beginning the monthly benefit payments in 1940, instead of 1942, and would base the benefits on average wages rather than total wages. Under the present law the total wage received, before one is eligible to be covered in, is $2,000. The amendments would also include a system of benefits for aged wives, which is not in the present law, and for widows who are aged or who have dependent orphans in their care, for aged dependent parents, and for orphans. Where there are no surviving dependents, reasonable burial expenses will be provided.

In my opinion, the provisions with reference to these old-age benefits have been immeasurably liberalized, and will be of inestimable benefit to that large portion of our population.

The amendments of the law ought to have a very great effect on the large appropriations, which have been necessary and which have been made by Congress for the relief of unemployment in this country, because with the liberal treatment afforded by the proposed legislation to the people who have been working and who will obtain the benefits after 1940, while in some instances the payments will not be large, they will be large enough so that it will not be necessary for those people to be placed on relief rolls, and there will be less pressure on the Federal Treasury for such enormous amounts.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. In most of the instances where changes have been made the sum total outgo over the next 30 or 40 years will remain the same, I understand.

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator is correct.

Mr. VANDENBERG. In other words, the amendments reduce the payments at the farther end of the period and increase them at this end of the period?

Mr. HARRISON. That is true.

Mr. VANDENBERG. But the sum total will remain the same, so that the system will remain reasonably in actuarial balance. But there is one point at which the committee made an amendment which will increase the outgo during the next 15 years some five or six hundred million dollars. Is the Senator intending to discuss that in particular?

Mr. HARRISON. I shall call the attention of the Senate to that matter.

I should like to mention the effect of these provisions for more liberal benefits in connection with the reserve account. Not only is there less disparity between the tax receipts and the benefit payments, but the bill provides that regular reports shall be made to Congress each year as to whether the proceeds of the pay-roll taxes will result in a reserve greater than three times the highest annual expenditure required in the ensuing 5 years. Congress can act in the light of these reports if they indicate the need for any change in the tax structure, and the maximum reserve should never exceed $15,000,000,000, even in the later years. Those who have expressed so much concern over the size of the reserve which is incident to the present law should feel comforted at this change.

I might add that the measure authorizes a permanent appropriation, so that without the necessity of an annual appropriation, as is now the case, the total of the old-age insurance tax collections will go into the reserve.

Further, the bill sets up a board of three trustees, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Chairman of the Social Security Board, and the Secretary of Labor, and the funds will be in a trust fund, which is to be called the "Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund."

I may say in this connection that under the present law these funds have been used for the purchase of Government bonds, and that the rate of interest was fixed at 3 percent. We have changed that in this proposal, and while special obligations may be issued, such obligations will bear interest at a rate equal to the average rate of interest on the public debt, in effect at the date of issue of the obligations.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, if it will not interfere with the Senator's narrative, I should like to have the RECORD clear at this point with respect to the full reserve to which the Senator has referred.

Under the original proposal the full reserve would have reached $47,000,000,000 in 1980. Under the amendment pending, as the Senator has stated, nothing like $47,000,000,000 will ever be contemplated, but the maximum reserve will probably not exceed $15,000,000,000.

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator is correct.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. Under the freezing of the tax for a period of 3 years and the contributions that are to be made over a period of years, will there come a time before 1980 when the amount of money required to pay the benefits will exceed the amount of contributions received under the taxes?

Mr. HARRISON. I am fearful that that is true. I do not think there is any doubt about that.

Mr. WAGNER. So there will come a time when we will have to make up our minds either to increase those contributions or have a Government contribution?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes; I think the committee understands that is probably true.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I think the Senator from New York is completely correct in his statement. There must be a general public contribution to offset what would have been the contribution obtained through the interest on the reserve fund, and our contention has been from the beginning that we might as well make it frankly in the form of a straight contribution rather than to make it through the detour of interest on the reserve.

Mr. WAGNER. Yes; I would be in favor of a contribution from the Federal Government at the present time as all other countries have. I wanted to have that appear clearly on the record.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I do not think there is any doubt about that being true.

Just before mentioning the reserve, I stated that under the provisions of the House bill, supplementary benefits would be payable, and that there would be an increased liberality in the amount of all monthly benefits. The Finance Committee has approved this liberalized schedule of benefits. Your committee has, however, offered perfecting amendments with respect to eligibility for benefits.

I may say also that in the committee hearings there were certain matters—questions which were propounded by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE], and from those questions there was shown to be certain anomalies and we made certain changes. These were made with the approval of the Social Security Board. I think these changes, if adopted, would greatly improve the bill.

One of these amendments is to better take care of the situation of people who are already 65 or over. It is felt that these people should be permitted to earn credits at the earliest possible date, and your committee proposes an amendment which would make coverage of employment after 65 effective January 1 of this year, instead of January 1 of next year, as is proposed in the House measure. This will permit earlier retirement for these people, and in some instances, where they will not be able physically to work much longer, will mean the difference between their receiving benefits and not receiving benefits.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, is this the amendment which increases the total cost $600,000,000 in the next 15 years?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes; it is estimated that over a period of 15 years that would entail a cost of about $600,000,000 plus, but that comes out of the trust fund financed by the pay-roll taxes.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Yes; but the fund was not figured in contemplation of that payment.

Mr. HARRISON. No; we have liberalized it to that extent in order to take care of these people who would not receive the benefit if they worked the time required in the amendments offered in the House and in the present law without the proposed changes. It will cost the fund $600,000,000 plus by virtue of these changes. I might mention that this is only a small fraction of the increase contemplated in the benefits payable in the next 15 years.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Yes. The only point I was making was that the changes are utterly humane and thoroughly justified by every heart consideration that a man may have. Yet they are not justified on the basis of the tax which is being collected to pay for social security under title II, and if we are to continue liberalizing the benefit payments to an extent which will increase the sum total of benefit payments we have either got to increase the tax rate sooner or later, or we are merely fooling folks by inviting them into a system that is going bankrupt one of these days.

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator is absolutely correct. But we felt that the liberal treatment could be accorded even though over a 15-year period it will be very costly. We felt the action justified, however.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. KING. I assent to the statement made by the able Senator from Michigan, and I desire to supplement that statement. We are liberalizing, as has been said, many provisions of the bill, and that will only lead to demand for further liberalization at the next session of Congress, and additional liberalization, until within a short time the fund will be bankrupt and we will be utterly unable to meet the demands which will be made upon it. Demand will then be made that we resort to the Federal Treasury, and I make the prophecy—although I am not a prophet nor the son of a prophet—that within 4 or 5 years, under the policy which we are pursuing, we will have a bankrupt organization in some branches of this important security agency.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, the second perfecting amendment is to change the basis of eligibility from a required number of years' employment to a required number of quarters' employment.

In the House bill eligibility for retirement benefits for those now 65 would require that they must earn in covered employment $200 per year for 2 years and earn a total before retirement of $600.

The Senate committee proposal substitutes the requirement of six quarters with wages of $50 a quarter, which would amount to $300. This shows the liberality that actuated the committee.

Your committee feels that the general principle of the House bill should be followed, so that persons who will have a longer period to be in the system will be required to be in the system half of the quarters after 1936, rather than one-half of the years, as is provided in the House bill. The provision of the House bill makes people eligible who will not have been in the system one-half the time after 1936 and before they reach 65, if they are in the system 15 years before they retire. Your committee proposes to substitute 40 quarters for the 15 years' retirement.

It is felt that changing the eligibility requirements from years to quarters and giving coverage for 1939 to those now over 65 will very greatly increase the number who will be in a position to retire during 1940.

To increase the adequacy of benefits for married men who will retire after having earned very low average wages, your committee proposes to make the minimum benefit which will be paid the wage earner with an aged wife $10, as is the case now under the House bill, where no wife's benefit is payable. Under the Senate proposal then, the minimum benefit to an aged couple would be $15, $10 for the wage earner and $5 for the aged wife. Under the House bill, it would be $6.67 for the wage earner and $3.33 for his wife.

The measure before you contains changes not only relating to old-age insurance, but to unemployment compensation. As you will recall, there is a Federal Unemployment Compensation pay-roll tax, which is at the rate of 3 percent. This tax is at present levied on a wages-earned basis, and is imposed only on the employer. For example, the tax would be due on commissions earned by an employee in a tax year, whether paid or not. Frequently a situation later arises so that the calculated amount on which the tax was paid is found to be erroneous and readjustment is required.

It would be much simpler to have the tax apply when the wages are actually paid, as is the existing law in the case of old-age insurance taxes. Your committee accordingly recommends that the amendments be adopted which will effect this change, placing the employment-compensation tax on the same basis as the old-age insurance tax in that particular.

Unemployment-compensation taxes are based on all wages an employer pays his employee, regardless of the amount, while the old-age insurance tax is effective only as to the first $3,000 paid in a year. For instance, at present the tax under the law is on the entire salary paid an employee, even if it is $100,000 a year. We have proposed the limit of $3,000 and the tax imposed accordingly, placing it on the same basis as is the present law on old-age insurance.

Under the House proposal the $3,000 limit would be placed in the unemployment-compensation tax, and your committee recommends the adoption of this proposal.

A further amendment which is proposed allows refunds and abatements, giving relief to employers who paid their 1936, 1937, and 1938 unemployment compensation contributions late. Because of failure to pay on time, many employers have lost their 90-percent credit against the Federal tax. The proposed provisions would permit this credit, and would take care of the future by giving a longer time for payment of contributions. For example, if contributions are paid by June 30 following the due date of the Federal return, while there would be no credit under existing law, the employer would lose but 10 percent of his credit under the proposed amendments. These amendments also have provisions taking care of situations in which late payment is occasioned by assets of the taxpayer being in the custody of the court, or because the employer made a mistake and paid his contribution to the wrong State. It is felt that all of these amendments are equitable and should go a long way toward correcting hardships under the present law.

There are several important revisions proposed to the present coverage of the act. Certain services are exempt, including those for agricultural and horticultural associations, voluntary employees' beneficiary associations, local or ritualistic services for fraternal beneficiary societies, and services of employees earning nominal amounts—less than $45 per quarter—from nonprofit institutions exempt from income tax. Newsboys and boys distributing the Shopping News are excluded. Family employment, such as employment of a son by his father, will be excluded in the old-age insurance tax. This exclusion is existing law as to the unemployment-compensation tax.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. DAVIS. The provision as to the Shopping News is limited to boys under 18 years of age, is it not?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes. This is true also as to newsboys.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. DANAHER. What provision is there for independent contractors, such as insurance salesmen?

Mr. HARRISON. I am coming to that question.

There is also a clarification and extension of the agricultural labor exemption of the present law. The present law exempts "agricultural labor" without defining the term. This bill defines the term so that the law will prescribe more definitely the extent of the exemption. The definition is so drawn that all service of the sort ordinarily performed on or about a farm, in connection with its operation or in producing crops or livestock, will be exempt from the act, and so that other services which are closely related to or an integral part of farming activities will also be exempt, even though they may not be performed on a farm.

There is a clarification of the present law relating to Federal and State instrumentalities. At present some institutions, such as banks, are exempt as national banks and State member banks of the Federal Reserve System. This proposal was very carefully studied, and there is a general approval of the clarification by those affected.

No opposition was expressed by the banking institutions of the country.

There is a proposal in the House bill for the extension of coverage to salesmen. Under the present law, whether a salesman is covered depends upon the test of whether he is an employee in the legal sense, and your committee believes that it would be unwise at this time to attempt any change. In this connection, however, your committee does propose an amendment with respect to the unemployment-compensation tax. Several States have exempted insurance salesmen from coverage, and your committee believes that it would be wise to exclude from the Federal unemployment-compensation tax insurance salesmen whose sole pay is by way of commission. This would, of course, still leave the States free to cover this employment when they choose to do so, but it would eliminate the present situation, where the entire Federal tax, without any offset for State unemployment contributions, comes to the Federal Government where the State exempts this employment. The principal class of insurance salesmen which would be affected is that class engaged in what is generally called industrial insurance. The proposed amendment of your committee would not affect the rights of any insurance salesman to old-age insurance, but would leave their situation as to being covered or not covered just as it is under existing law.

The House bill proposes to cover maritime employment for old-age insurance purposes, but not for the unemployment-compensation tax.

American seamen have expressed a strong desire for coverage, and there has been practically no opposition to this request. Your committee concurs in this proposal, but with an amendment excluding services by fishermen and by the crews of fishing vessels. No request for coverage has come from this group, and it is not felt expedient to extend coverage until a special study has been made of the particular problems and desires of those who would be affected.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. DAVIS. One of the leaders of the fishermen called on me this morning. They are objecting to the exemption.

Mr. HARRISON. They want to be included?

Mr. DAVIS. They want to be included.

Mr. HARRISON. What kind of fishermen does he represent?

Mr. DAVIS. All kinds of fishermen.

Mr. HARRISON. In many places an oyster or shrimp gatherer who has perhaps one or two employees goes out in his own boat. He sells his oysters or shrimp to the cannery. We have had no request from such people to be included. There was no suggestion to the committee that they be included, and we felt that the matter required study. In the course of time the Social Security Act will have to be further amended. It is not yet perfect. I think we have helped it greatly. However, as long as we are here we shall have to make certain amendments to it. We have exempted fishermen with the feeling that this is the practical approach. Their wishes in the matter should be known before we determine on their coverage.

The remaining matters affecting unemployment compensation are of a highly technical nature. I shall merely mention the Finance Committee action in proposing an amendment to strike out the McCormack amendment and the 2.7 amendment relating to additional credit.

No doubt many Senators have received letters with reference to the so-called McCormack amendment, giving the Social Security Board authority to fix certain standards for States. Certain States have enacted laws giving ratings to certain groups of employees. It would be necessary for the legislatures of such States to change the present State laws. We considered that matter very carefully.

Under the existing law employers who have merit rating under State laws containing certain standards with respect to merit rating experience may receive credit against the Federal unemployment compensation tax for a full 90 percent, when their contributions are reduced under the State law. The McCormack amendment proposed that when certain standards as to adequacy of benefits were met, and the State funds were equal to one and one-half times the largest annual contribution to the fund or the largest annual expenditure from the fund, there could be a general reduction of contributions required of all employers, and these employers would retain their full credit against the Federal tax.

The 2.7 provision requires States which do not meet the benefit and reserve standards set up in the McCormack amendment to provide that the employers in the State will make a total of contributions equal to that which would be paid in if each employer were contributing at a 2.7 rate. In other words, if some employers are to receive credit against the Federal tax for reductions in their contributions, other employers would have to contribute more than 90 percent of the 3-percent Federal tax.

Your committee heard considerable testimony as to these proposals and felt after the hearings that it would be unwise at this time to make such material changes in the existing law. The representative of many State unemployment compensation agencies appeared before us and objected to the standards laid down in the House bill. They felt that they were getting along very well under the present law. The problem should be very carefully worked out. Your committee took the view that under the circumstances it would be dangerous for us to tamper with the present law, and I hope the Senate will also take that view of it.

The last thing I should like to mention is the change in some of the present provisions for grants-in-aid to States.

Under the House bill the Federal matching for dependent children was increased from one-third to one-half. Your committee concurs in this proposal. Under the present law the Federal Government contributes a third. The House bill provides for equal contributions.

Your committee also recommends an amendment which changes the maximum payment toward which the Federal Government will contribute from the existing law of $18 for the first and $12 per additional dependent child to an average of $18. This gives much more flexibility to the matching, eliminates much auditing, and allows exceptional circumstances to be met more equitably. The cost of the proposed amendment of your committee would be very small. The estimate of the increased matching ratio will range from thirty to sixty million, depending upon State action.

Your committee also proposes amendments authorizing increased appropriations for maternal and child-health services from the present three million eight hundred thousand to five million eight hundred and twenty thousand, and for crippled children from two million eight hundred and fifty thousand to three million eight hundred and fifty thousand.

The House bill increased the authorization for vocational rehabilitation from $1,938,000 to $2,938,000 and included Puerto Rico. Your committee recommends that the amount be increased from $1,938,000 to $4,000,000. Each State would receive an allocation of not less than $30,000 under your committee's amendment.

It is also proposed that the authorization for the public-health work be increased from the present limitation of $8,000,000 to $12,000,000. The Senate committee was very much impressed with the services rendered by the Public Health Service, the Children's Bureau, and the Office of Education and approved these increased authorizations. We believe the increases are justified by the facts. The Children's Bureau, under Miss Lenroot, has worked wonders, and the effects of its work is seen among children throughout the country. The allocations to the various States for public-health work in the rural sections throughout the country have been of great benefit to many unfortunate persons who were far away from a doctor or from any attention they might need.

I may say that the Finance Committee went very carefully into all these proposals and feels that the proposed changes in the existing law are amply justified.

As to old-age assistance and blind assistance, there is a proposed change in the House bill raising the amount the Federal Government will match from $15 to $20. Under the present law, as Senators know, the Federal Government matches the contributions of the States up to $15. So if a State can contribute $15 to a needy person who is 65 years of age or over, the Federal Government will likewise contribute $15. The House raised that limit to $20 upon the part of the State and provided that the Federal Government would match the State contribution up to $20.

About the only contest in the Finance Committee arose over the question of requiring the Federal Government to extend greater assistance to States for our elderly people. There were two proposals before the committee. One was suggested by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES], who is chairman of the Unemployment and Relief Committee, which was appointed at the last session of the Congress to study the question of unemployment and relief and to try to solve that problem. He appeared before the committee and endeavored to have it carry out the recommendations of his committee and to make allocations to the States on the basis of the per capita income of residents of the State to the per capita income of the Nation as a whole. That would have assisted greatly many needy States. I may say to the Senate I voted for that amendment not only as a member of the Byrnes committee on unemployment but I voted for it in the Finance Committee. I was very hopeful that it would be adopted, because there are many States in the Union that cannot respond even to the $15 maximum that is provided in the present law. My State is among the number of the States so situated. No man can get any glory from answering criticisms that the old people residing in his State receive only about $7—half from the State and half from the Federal Government. I have an abiding conviction that some States have about reached the maximum of their ability to pay under present conditions and unless the Federal Government provides additional aid the old people who are in need will have to suffer.

Someone may say that the poorer States have spent a great deal of money for roads. Of course they have. They have spent money for roads because they wanted to get out of the mud; and they have also had to spend money for schools. There are many problems that affect some sections of the country that do not affect other sections; but the States have to carry those loads. So I felt that the amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina was entirely justified. When it was defeated the distinguished Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], a member of the committee, offered an amendment that up to $15 would require the Federal Government to put up $2 to the State's $1. That would have practically insured to every old person in need about $15. The increase would apply to the poorer States and the richer States, because all would have contributed alike up to $15, on the matching basis of $2 by the Federal Government and $1 by the State. The cost involved under the amendment of the Senator from Texas was estimated at about $80,000,000 per year, and under the Byrnes amendment the cost was estimated to be from $30,000,000 to $40,000,000 per year.

Those questions will come before the Senate during the further debate on the pending bill. I never like to vote against my committee—I always am a committee man—yet in this one case, I may say to the Senate, when these amendments are offered I shall vote for the proposals. I believe they are justified by the facts, and have advised the Finance Committee that I shall support them.

I may say in connection with liberalizing benefits, that while I am not for the Townsend plan, and never have been for it, nevertheless, credit must be given Dr. Townsend for helping to bring the needs of the aged before the American people. To him should be given a part of the credit for what the House has done with reference to raising the Federal contribution limit even to $20, though, in my opinion, very few States will get any advantage. I believe there are only three or four States that would profit by the change the House has made, as only those who pay pensions in excess of $30 would get any additional Federal assistance.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. DOWNEY. I am sure that if Dr. Townsend were here he would ask me to extend his appreciation for the very courteous remarks made concerning him by the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, there is nothing that has touched me more than the plight of our needy aged people. I know if I go to one of the departments in an effort to assist one who is 50 or 55, or older, in getting employment, the door is not open to him. I am told, "Go over to some other bureau or some other department." I have been unable to assist many such persons, many of whom needed assistance, to obtain Government employment.

If the same person goes to a private corporation in this day and time and endeavors to obtain employment, is he employed? Oh, no; the corporations want the younger men and women. So the older person is left out in the cold, but we ought to see to it that, at least up to $15, every individual in this country, if in need, whether he lives in Mississippi, or New York, or Massachusetts, or California, through Federal cooperation with the States, shall be given $15 a month.

Someone may say that will not help them much. It will help them a great deal everywhere in this country, if we provide a means whereby under State old-age assistance an aged person with no other means of support will be assured a minimum of $15 a month.

Mr. President, I have said all that I desire to say. I hope we may expedite consideration of this bill. I think the bill is a fine and constructive piece of legislation. It is not perfect, but it is along the right lines of endeavor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The first amendment reported by the committee will be stated.

The first amendment of the Committee on Finance was, under the heading "Title I—Amendments to Title I of the Social Security Act," on page 2, line 9, after the word "administration" and the parenthesis, to strike out "other than those relating to selection, tenure of office, and compensation of personnel" and insert "including, after January 1, 1940, methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis", so as to read:

SEC. 101. Section 2 (a) of the Social Security Act is amended to read as follows:

"(a) A State plan for old-age assistance must (1) provide that it shall be in effect in all political subdivisions of the State, and, if administered by them, be mandatory upon them; (2) provide for financial participation by the State; (3) either provide for the establishment or designation of a single State agency to administer the plan, or provide for the establishment or designation of a single State agency to supervise the administration of the plan; (4) provide for granting to any individual, whose claim for old-age assistance is denied, an opportunity for a fair hearing before such State agency; (5) provide such methods of administration including, after January 1, 1940, methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis as are found by the Board to be necessary for the proper and efficient operation of the plan; (6) provide that the State agency will make such reports, in such form and containing such information, as the Board may from time to time require, and comply with such provisions as the Board may from time to time find necessary to assure the correctness and verification of such reports; (7) effective July 1, 1941, provide that the State agency shall, in determining need, take into consideration any other income and resources of an individual claiming old-age assistance; and (8) effective July 1, 1941, provide safeguards which restrict the use or disclosure of information concerning applicants and recipients to purposes directly connected with the administration of old-age assistance."

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, when the original Social Security Act was pending in the Congress there were provided in the act certain standards which the State plans must meet before they could be approved by the Board. Greatly to my disappointment, Congress saw fit to exclude from among the various items which must be approved those relating to the selection, tenure of office, and compensation of personnel. The result was that the Social Security Board had no right to require that the State plan should include provisions for the selection of State personnel under the merit system.

Senators who have followed the history of the administration of the Social Security Act since it went upon the statute books are familiar with the fact that in several States of the Union such a condition has resulted from the provision of law which is now sought to be stricken from the bill that the Board has had to take the extreme action of denying their benefits to elderly persons under the system set up. But this drastic action was the only recourse left to the Board under the existing law.

The Finance Committee has now included in the provisions which must be included in every State plan after January 1, 1940, methods relating to the establishment and to the maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis. As I understand and construe the amendment, it will mean that each State plan will have to provide, as a condition of securing approval by the Board, that the personnel selected within the State to administer the law shall be selected on a civil-service or merit basis. The amendment does not in any way, as I view it, extend to the Board the right to pick and choose between individuals who are to be selected; but under this provision, if it becomes a law, the Board may require that each State shall set up a satisfactory merit system for the selection of the personnel.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. In just a moment.

Because I believe the amendment is an important step forward in the administration of the social-security law, and because I believe it is very important that it become law, I rose merely to point out the situation to the Senate, so that there could be no question that the Senate fully realized the import of the amendment, and to ask that there be a record vote upon it, so that the Senate may be put upon record, and so that it may be evident to all concerned that the Senate has given consideration to this matter and that it has taken a record vote thereon.

I now yield to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, first of all, I desire to say that I am in full accord with what the able Senator from Wisconsin has said; and I sincerely hope there will be a record vote, so that we may emphasize the position of the Senate on this amendment.

I should like to ask the Senator if this amendment is not the outgrowth of complaints and criticisms which have prevailed throughout the country because of the manner in which the Social Security agents and investigators employed in the several States have acted, to the dissatisfaction and against the protest of the Social Security Board, and also if the amendment is not in part the result of the investigation made last year by a committee of the Senate during the senatorial campaign which exposed some of the political activities of these employees in the various States?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I think the Senator from Massachusetts is correct in his statement; and I desire to say to the Senator that ever since I have known about his service in the Senate—and it dates back to his first term in this body—I have known that he has been an ardent advocate of the merit system for the selection of Government personnel.

I do not desire to be drawn into a discussion of the particular States where difficulties have arisen, nor do I wish to go into additional information which is in my possession about other States where the Board has not acted because it has not felt justified in taking the drastic action of withholding Federal contributions, and thereby penalizing the old people who are receiving the pensions; but there are other States where the Board has not acted, and where the situation is one that has brought about criticism.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield with pleasure to the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I merely desire to ask the Senator from Wisconsin whether he is of the opinion that the language of the amendment is such as to provide a definite tenure for the personnel that may be appointed. In other words, is the phrase "on a merit basis" sufficiently definite to prevent the removal of personnel with possible changes of administration in the States?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I will say to the Senator that the amendment is somewhat in the nature of a compromise which comes out of the committee after some discussion. It is an important step in the right direction, and I have great confidence that it will accomplish its purpose. I may say to the Senator that I have the feeling that we should take this step, since it is the result of some discussion and compromise in the committee, and we hope to retain it in conference; and I have every reason to believe that it is of sufficient definiteness so that a merit system, as the term is commonly understood, may be required by the Board.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Does the amendment give the Social Security Board discretion to fix the standards, or does it permit the standards to be modified in the several States?

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I may say that the amendment does not give the Social Security Board power to fix the standards, but it does give the Board power to approve merit systems which the States must in the first instance set up.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. That is my understanding of the matter; and I think I am at liberty to say that the chairman of the Social Security Board, who has been very much interested in the whole situation, believes that the amendment as drawn provides a workable basis and a workable standard which the Board will find satisfactory in dealing with the States.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President—

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield to the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. HATCH. The Senator will recall that during some of the discussion which took place here last summer about various amendments which were proposed, a great deal was said about employees of the Social Security Administration engaging in political activity within the States. Frankly, I have drawn and lying on my desk an amendment which I was at least thinking about offering, and which is much more drastic in its terms than this amendment. In view of what the Senator has just said about this amendment being the result of a compromise, and his belief that it is a step in the right direction, I am wondering if he thinks it is sufficient to cover some of the things which were discussed here last summer.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I believe that under this language, if it shall become law, the Social Security Board will have power to require the establishment of a genuine merit basis for the selection of personnel. As I stated a moment ago, I have every reason to believe that the chairman of the Social Security Board feels that the present language is sufficient, and that a very sound and workable system can be established under the terms of the committee amendment.

Mr. HATCH. Of course the Senator understands that my question was not prompted by any opposition to the amendment.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I understand that; and I also wish to commend the Senator from New Mexico. In every way I have done all that I could to support his efforts in connection with the so-called Hatch bill and other legislation of similar character.

Mr. HATCH. I appreciate the support the Senator has given. My only thought was whether the amendment goes far enough.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. As I stated in response to the inquiry of the able Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], it is my belief that we are making a great step forward, and that we should accept the amendment as it comes from the committee, in the nature of a compromise, and make every honorable effort to retain it in conference, with full confidence that under the administration of the Social Security Board the results which we desire to see obtained will be obtained.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield, with pleasure.

Mr. TAFT. Coming from one of the States where very serious abuses occurred, which now have been corrected, I thoroughly approve of the Senator's amendment; but one question arises in my mind.

As I understand, a good many of these State plans are statutory plans. In some places it may be necessary to enact statutes. Will it not be embarrassing to have this amendment take effect on the first of January 1940? Would it not be better to make the effective date April 1 or July 1, so that the State legislature may be called together and meet and act?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I may say to the Senator from Ohio, in the first place, that I very much appreciate his statement. Also, I wish to say that this is not my amendment. The amendment was tendered to the committee by the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN], and this particular language is the result of discussion in the committee and the suggestions, as I remember, made by the able Senator from Colorado [Mr. JOHNSON].

In direct answer to the Senator's question, I will say that we did discuss this question in the committee with the Chairman of the Social Security Board and the experts of the Board; and they stated that the State provisions so far as personnel are concerned are not statutory provisions, and that the amendment will give the States ample notice. It will give them from the date of enactment of the pending measure to January 1, 1940, to work out their provisions and bring them to the Social Security Board and secure their approval; and the effective date was advanced to January 1, 1940, for that very purpose.

So I think the Senator may rest easy, because the question was raised in the committee; and the experts of the Board assured us that the State personnel provisions are not statutory in character, and therefore are subject to change without action by the respective legislatures of the States.

Mr. TAFT. With due respect, I do not see how civil service can be established in an old-age department unless the State passes a law providing that there shall be civil service in that department, if there is not already civil service.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I think that can be done, because the Senator will remember that the funds for the personnel were provided, and this can be done by regulation. I am certain it is entirely within the power of the respective administrative agencies.

I ask for the yeas and nays on the committee amendment.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Certainly.

Mr. KING. The Senator may think the question is a joke, but it is not. In view of the inefficiency of the civil service of the Federal Government, does the Senator think the Federal Government, by giving its blessing to State governments and compelling them to have civil service, is going to improve their condition? I do not think the Federal Government's conduct of its civil-service administration is any particular guide to the States.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I do not think the question is a joke. I do not wish to be drawn into a long discussion of the whole question of the Federal civil service. I think there is much to be said for the fact that the civil service of the Federal Government has grown up more or less as a counter action against the patronage system, and that because of that environment and that conditioning it has become more largely an agency endeavoring to protect employees in the civil service in retaining their positions rather than acting as a personnel agency for the Federal Government. I discussed that question to some extent and at greater length in connection with the reorganization bill. I hope that some day we may have a modern, efficient personnel service for the Federal Government; but from my own experience in my own State, I say that it is possible to build up a sound personnel system for a State Government, and I say that it is the judgment of all who have had anything to do with the administration of this act that this particular amendment if enacted into law will greatly improve the conditions surrounding the administration of the old-age title.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I am anxious to yield the floor.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I merely wanted to make it clear that I understand the Senator to believe that while this is a step in the right direction, it is little more than a step.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. That is not correct. If the Senator will remember, in response to his first question I stated that the amendment was not so sweeping as the one originally tendered to the committee, that it was somewhat the result of a compromise, but that the Chairman of the Social Security Board and others who have studied this question firmly believe that under the terms of the amendment they can bring about a genuine merit basis for the selection of the personnel under this title of the act.

I think we are making a great advance, although it may not be all that any Senator might want. We are not writing the details of the standards into the law. In other words, we are trusting somewhat to the judgment of the Social Security Board and to their ability to work this matter out with the various State administrations.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I wish to express it as my personal opinion that this represents a minimum below which we should not in any event go.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, as I understand, the Senator from Wisconsin desires to have a roll call on the amendment in order to show how strongly the Senate favors it?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. That is my reason for asking for a roll call.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. THOMAS of Utah in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee on page 2, line 9. On that amendment the Senator from Wisconsin asks for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk called the roll.

Mr. LUCAS. My colleague the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. SLATTERY] is unavoidably detained. If present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS] are detained from the Senate because of illness in their families.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN], the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HUGHES], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN], the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER], and the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] are absent on important public business.

The Senator from Idaho [Mr. CLARK], the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. LUNDEEN], the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING], the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN], the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MALONEY], and the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS] are detained in various Government departments on matters pertaining to their respective States.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER] and the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT] are conducting hearings in the Committee on Education and Labor.

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY] has a general pair with the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER].

The result was announced—yeas 72, nays 2, as follows:

So the committee amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the next amendment of the committee.

The next amendment was, in the heading, on page 6, line 1, after the word "And", to strike out "Survivor" and insert "Survivors"; and in line 3, after the word "And", to strike out "Survivor" and insert "Survivors", so as to make the heading read:

TITLE II—FEDERAL OLD-AGE AND SURVIVORS INSURANCE BENEFITS
FEDERAL OLD-AGE AND SURVIVORS INSURANCE

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 6, line 7, after the word "and", to strike out "Survivor" and insert "Survivors"; in line 25, after the word "and", to strike out "Survivor" and insert "Survivors", so as to read:

SEC. 201. (a) There is hereby created on the books of the Treasury of the United States a trust fund to be known as the "Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund" (hereinafter in this title called the "Trust Fund"). The Trust Fund shall consist of the securities held by the Secretary of the Treasury for the Old Age Reserve Account and the amount standing to the credit of the Old Age Reserve Account on the books of the Treasury on January 1, 1940, which securities and amount the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to transfer to the Trust Fund, and, in addition, such amounts as may be appropriated to the Trust Fund as hereinafter provided. There is hereby appropriated to the Trust Fund for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941, and for each fiscal year thereafter, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, amounts equivalent to 100 percent of the taxes (including interest, penalties, and additions to the taxes) received under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act and covered into the Treasury.

(b) There is hereby created a body to be known as the Board of Trustees of the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund (hereinafter in this title called the "Board of Trustees") which Board of Trustees shall be composed of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Labor, and the Chairman of the Social Security Board, all ex officio. The Secretary of the Treasury shall be the managing trustee of the Board of Trustees (hereinafter in this title called the "managing trustee"). It shall be the duty of the Board of Trustees to—

(1) Hold the Trust Fund;

(2) Report to the Congress on the first day of each regular session of the Congress on the operation and status of the Trust Fund during the preceding fiscal year and on its expected operation and status during the next ensuing 5 fiscal years;

(3) Report immediately to the Congress whenever the Board of Trustees is of the opinion that during the ensuing 5 fiscal years the Trust Fund will exceed three times the highest annual expenditures anticipated during that 5-fiscal-year period, and whenever the Board of Trustees is of the opinion that the amount of the Trust Fund is unduly small.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the subhead on page 10, line 3, after the word "And", to strike out "Survivor" and insert "Survivors", so as to make the heading read:

Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Benefit Payments.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 17, line 15, after the word "section", to strike out "(b)"; on page 18, line 4, after the word "or", to insert "to the"; and in line 5, after the word "the", to strike out "deceased and to any other person or persons who are entitled under such law to share as distributees with the parents of the deceased, in such proportions as is provided by such law" and insert "deceased, in equal shares", so as to read:

Lump-Sum Death Payments

(g) Upon the death, after December 31, 1939, of an individual who died a fully or currently insured individual leaving no surviving widow, child, or parent who would, on filing application in the month in which such individual died, be entitled to a benefit for such month under subsection (c), (d), (e), or (f) of this section, an amount equal to six times a primary insurance benefit of such individual shall be paid in a lump sum to the following person (or if more than one, shall be distributed among them) whose relationship to the deceased is determined by the Board, and who is living on the date of such determination: To the widow or widower of the deceased; or, if no such widow or widower be then living, to any child or children of the deceased and to any other person or person who are, under the intestacy law of the State where the deceased was domiciled, entitled to share as distributees with such children of the deceased, in such proportions as is provided by such law; or, if no widow or widower and no such child and no such other person be then living, to the parent or to the parents of the deceased, in equal shares. A person who is entitled to share as distributee with an above-named relative of the deceased shall not be precluded from receiving a payment under this subsection by reason of the fact that no such named relative survived the deceased or of the fact that no such named relative of the deceased was living on the date of such determination. If none of the persons described in this subsection be living on the date of such determination, such amount shall be paid to any person or persons, equitably entitled thereto, to the extent and in the proportions that he or they shall have paid the expenses of burial of the deceased. No payment shall be made to any person under this subsection, unless application therefor shall have been filed, by or on behalf of any such person (whether or not legally competent), prior to the expiration of 2 years after the date of death of such individual.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Reduction and increase of insurance benefits", on page 19, line 9, after the word "the", to strike out "benefit or"; in line 11, after the word "wages", to insert "is more than $20 and"; in line 15, after the word "such", to strike out "benefit or"; and in line 18, after the word "amount", to insert "or to $20, whichever is greater", so as to read:

SEC. 203. (a) Whenever the total of benefits under section 202, payable for a month with respect to an individual's wages, is more than $20 and exceeds (1) $85, or (2) an amount equal to twice a primary insurance benefit of such individual, or (3) an amount equal to 80 percent of his average monthly wage (as defined in sec. 209 (f)), whichever of such three amounts is least, such total of benefits shall, prior to any deductions under subsections (d), (e), or (h), be reduced to such least amount or to $20, whichever is greater.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 19, line 20, after the numerals "202", to strike out "(or as reduced under subsection (a))", so as to read:

(b) Whenever the benefit or total of benefits under section 202, payable for a month with respect to an individual's wages, is less than $10, such benefit or total of benefits shall, prior to any deductions under subsections (d), (e), or (h), be increased to $10.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 20, line 3, after the word "benefit", to insert "except the primary benefit", so as to read:

(c) Whenever a decrease or increase of the total of benefits for a month is made under subsection (a) or (b) of this section, each benefit, except the primary benefit, shall be proportionately decreased or increased, as the case may be.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 20, line 6, after the word "Deductions", to insert "in such amounts and at such time or times as the Board shall determine"; in line 8, after the word "payment", to insert "or payments"; in line 15, after the word "age", to insert "not an apprentice serving without remuneration"; and in line 17, after the word "feasible", to insert "or, if serving as an apprentice without remuneration, failed to so serve regularly and the Board finds that such service was feasible", so as to read:

(d) Deductions, in such amounts and at such time or times as the Board shall determine, shall be made from any payment or payments under this title to which an individual is entitled, until the total of such deductions equals such individual's benefit or benefits for any month in which such individual:

- (1) Rendered services for wages of not less than $15; or
- (2) If a child under 18 and over 16 years of age, not an apprentice serving without remuneration, failed to attend school regularly and the Board finds that attendance was feasible or, if serving as an apprentice without remuneration, failed to so serve regularly and the Board finds that such service was feasible; or
- (3) If a widow entitled to a widow's current insurance benefit, did not have in her care a child of her deceased husband entitled to receive a child's insurance benefit.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 21, line 11, after the word "individual", to strike out "those benefits are" and insert "in receipt of benefits", and in line 13, before the word "because", to insert "(or who is in receipt of such benefits on behalf of another individual)"; so as to read:

(g) Any individual in receipt of benefits subject to deduction under subsection (d) or (e) (or who is in receipt of such benefits on behalf of another individual), because of the occurrence of an event enumerated therein, shall report such occurrence to the Board prior to the receipt and acceptance of an insurance benefit for the second month following the month in which such event occurred. Any such individual having knowledge thereof, who fails to report any such occurrence, shall suffer an additional deduction equal to that imposed under subsection (d) or (e).

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Evidence, Procedure, and Certification for Payment", in section 209, on page 35, line 12, after the word "year", to insert "prior to 1940"; so as to read:

DEFINITIONS

SEC. 209. When used in this title—

(a) The term "wages" means all remuneration for employment, including the cash value of all remuneration paid in any medium other than cash; except that such term shall not include—

(1) That part of the remuneration which, after remuneration equal to $3,000 has been paid to an individual by an employer with respect to employment during any calendar year prior to 1940, is paid to such individual by such employer with respect to employment during such calendar year;

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 35, after line 14, to insert:

(2) That part of the remuneration which, after remuneration equal to $3,000 has been paid to an individual with respect to employment during any calendar year after 1939, is paid to such individual with respect to employment during such calendar year;

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 35, line 20, before the word "The", to strike out "(2)" and insert "(3)"; in line 25, after the word "insurance", to insert "or annuities"; and on page 36, line 4, after the word "disability", to insert a comma and or (D) death, provided the employee (1) has not the option to receive, instead of provision for such death benefit, any part of such payment or, if such death benefit is insured, any part of the premiums (or contributions to premiums) paid by his employer, and (11) has not the right, under the provisions of the plan or system or policy of insurance providing for such death benefit, to assign such benefit, or to receive a cash consideration in lieu of such benefit either upon his withdrawal from the plan or system providing for such benefit or upon termination of such plan or system or policy of insurance or of his employment with such employer.

So as to read:

(3) The amount of any payment made to, or on behalf of, an employee under a plan or system established by an employer which makes provision for his employees generally or for a class or classes of his employees (including any amount paid by an employer for insurance or annuities, or into a fund, to provide for any such payment), on account of (A) retirement, or (B) sickness or accident disability, or (C) medical and hospitalization expenses in connection with sickness or accident disability, or (D) death, provided the employee (1) has not the option to receive, instead of provision for such death benefit, any part of such payment or, if such death benefit is insured, any part of the premiums (or contributions to premiums) paid by his employer, and (11) has not the right, under the provisions of the plan or system or policy of insurance providing for such death benefit, to assign such benefit, or to receive a cash consideration in lieu of such benefit either upon his withdrawal from the plan or system providing for such benefit or upon termination of such plan or system or policy of insurance or of his employment with such employer.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 37, line 4, after the words "prior to", to strike out "such date" and insert "January 1, 1940", so as to read:

(b) The term "employment" means any service performed after December 31, 1936, and prior to January 1, 1940, which was employment as defined in section 210 (b) of the Social Security Act prior to January 1, 1940.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, may I inquire whether that is the amendment which we discussed previously, which adds $600,000,000 to the cost of the bill?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes. It is the amendment on page 37. That is the amendment to which reference was previously made.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I simply wish to call attention to what would happen under this amendment. I am not quarreling with its objective. The objective is highly laudable. The amendment would add $600,000,000 in the next 15 years to the cost of the social-security bill, and add $600,000,000 outside of the contemplated revenues from payroll taxes. It is the beginning of those steps which are gradually going to build an ever-increasing benefit payment outside the purview of the taxes to pay for them. I submit the general observation that the best friend of social-security legislation in the long run is the one who insists that the fund shall be kept solvent so that on the one hand there will be avoided the disaster and the humiliation of making promises which cannot be kept, and, on the other hand, that steps be not taken which will lead ultimately to such an increased burden of payroll taxes that the revolt against the whole system will destroy it.

Mr. President, we found it necessary to freeze where it is the 1-percent pay-roll tax under title II for the next 3 years. In 1943 it increases another full 1 percent. In 1943 the whole system will confront the most terrific kind of an impact from the country, because American business in many of its smaller units has had difficulty in paying even the 1-percent pay-roll tax and surviving.

In 1943, with the unemployment tax added, the total tax will be 5 percent upon the pay roll. In 1948 the total tax will be 9 percent.

Mr. President, a total pay-roll tax of 9 percent upon American industry is a terrific burden to be borne by American industry. It is a grave question whether American industry can carry a 9-percent pay-roll tax. It is particularly doubtful whether it can be done. While we are increasing the cost of American production of commodities 9 percent upon the one hand, we are reducing the tariff protection upon the other. We are increasing the cost of production at home by means of the social-security legislation, and we are decreasing protection against goods from abroad. Entirely aside from that, however, the burden of the 9 percent itself is going to be a terrific challenge.

What I am saying is that you had better be careful not to create a situation which will necessitate going beyond the 9 percent, and every time you add a major item of expenditure, precisely as this measure adds $600,000,000, which was never contemplated in the actuarial calculations upon which the tax is based, by the time you have accumulated these items in 1948, you will have created such a situation that even the 9-percent tax will not pay the bill. I submit that when we are voting to increase the benefits we had better give some consideration to the source of the money with which to pay the benefits, lest there be no money to pay the benefits upon the one hand, or, upon the other, that we are ultimately forced to such a heavy pay-roll tax that the revolution against the whole system will strike it down.

Let us vote on the amendment. I should like to vote on it.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Michigan how the question arises? Is a committee amendment under consideration?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Yes.

Mr. HARRISON. A parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. HARRISON. I thought we had passed the matter to which the very eloquent Senator from Michigan referred in his speech, some time ago. Is the Senate recurring to that amendment?

Mr. VANDENBERG. The amendment is now pending.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is now pending.

Mr. HARRISON. The amendment which the Senator has just discussed?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Yes.

Mr. HARRISON. I understood the Senator raised no objection to the Senate agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Quite to the contrary. I raised a very serious objection to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment on page 37. [Putting the question.] The "noes" appear to have it.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I ask for a division.

Mr. HARRISON. I ask for the yeas and nays on this amendment.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. LUCAS. Will the Chair have the clerk state the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 37, line 4, after the words "prior to", it is proposed to strike out "such date" and to insert "January 1, 1940."

Mr. VANDENBERG. That is the pending amendment.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. KING. I do not know whether to address the chairman of the committee or the Senator from Michigan. I should like to inquire whether this is the amendment that adds $600,000,000 of cost to the taxpayers of the United States or to this fund.

Mr. VANDENBERG. It does not add it to the taxpayers of the Nation because there is no provision made to pay it.

Mr. KING. Or to the fund.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Some day it will be added to the cost of the fund.

Mr. KING. That is exactly what I desire to know; whether or not it compels an obligation which will have to be discharged from the fund, and if not from the fund, if that becomes bankrupt, from the Treasury of the United States? I assume that the answer must be in the affirmative.

I shall vote "nay" on the question.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, the Social Security Advisory Council, composed of very able men and women from all over the country, suggested in its report that the time would come when the Federal Government would have to help out in the matter of supplementing this fund by making annual appropriations. We have not accepted that view yet. That would be some time in the future, whether in 1980 or some other year. That is a little too far off for me to figure at this time. We have taken care of this situation, though, without question for the next 15 years. The time may come when the Federal Government may have to reimburse or supplement this fund; but what we are doing, to which the Senator from Michigan has alluded, is on page 37. The next amendment provides:

If performed prior to January 1, 1939.

When the bill came from the House, after we approved the freezing of the taxes for 1940, 1941, and 1942, and certain other stipulations with reference to eligibility and coverage were placed in the law, we found that there were certain people who were beyond the age of 65 who would not measure up to the $2,000 they had to earn under the present law, or the $600 required in the House bill. This problem was discussed with the Chairman of the Social Security Board, and it was decided that the best method of giving these people an opportunity for covered employment was to make the inclusion of work over 65 effective January 1 of this year, instead of January 1 of next year, as was provided in the House bill.

Many of the people over 65 would be left out if we did not date the provision back to January 1, 1939. In carrying out the program of liberalization and trying to help the situation of those who have reached 65 years of age, the Finance Committee changed eligibility requirements from years in which $200 or more of wages from covered employment were paid to quarter years in which $50 or more were paid, and advanced the inclusion of wages after 65 from January 1, 1940, to January 1, 1939. In the course of time, over 15 years, the cost of these changes will be considerable; but the situation which confronts us is that the social-security law was passed in 1935, and wage credits begin the 1st of January 1937. Time is required for persons to become eligible for the benefits. The object of the amendment, as I recall, it was not disapproved by anyone in committee.

Mr. VANDENBERG. No, Mr. President.

Mr. HARRISON. Of course, the Senator expressed some objections to it in the discussion a few moments ago, but there was no roll call in the committee. I did not understand the Senator was going to carry the fight to the extent of having a roll call in the Senate. That is why I am trying to explain the amendment at this time.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I have not asked for a roll call.

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] was opposed to the amendment, and expressed himself against it; but the great majority of the committee was for it, and I hope the Senate will now adopt the committee amendment.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. BYRD. I will say to the Senator from Mississippi that the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] was against it, and voted against it.

Mr. HARRISON. I do not think there was a roll call on this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment on page 37, line 4. The yeas and nays have been demanded.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, the other side called for a vote, and the Presiding Officer announced that the "noes" seemed to have it. I want to see if the other side will vote on a roll call as they would a while ago. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS]. I am not informed as to how he would vote. I therefore withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. HARRISON (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY]. I find he has not voted, so I transfer my pair to the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], and allow my vote to stand.

Mr. McKELLAR (after having voted in the affirmative). I inquire if the Senator from Delaware [Mr. TOWNSEND] has voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed he has not voted.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have a pair with the Senator from Delaware. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER], and allow my vote to stand.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS] are detained from the Senate because of illness in their families.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN], the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HUGHES], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN], the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER], and the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] are absent on important public business.

The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON], and the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] are detained in various Government departments on matters pertaining to their respective States.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER] and the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT] are conducting hearings in the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. AUSTIN. The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY] has a general pair with the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER].

The result was announced—yeas 58, nays 16, as follows:

So the committee amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Clerk will state the next amendment reported by the committee.

The next amendment was, on page 37, line 6, after the word "sixty-five", to insert "if performed prior to January 1, 1939", so as to read:

(b) The term "employment" means any service performed after December 31, 1936, and prior to January 1, 1940, which was employment as defined in section 210 (b) of the Social Security Act prior to January 1, 1940 (except service performed by an individual after he attained the age of 65 if performed prior to January 1, 1939), and any service, of whatever nature, performed after December 31, 1939, by an employee for the person employing him, irrespective of the citizenship or residence of either, (A) within the United States, or (B) on or in connection with an American vessel under a contract of service which is entered into within the United States or during the performance of which the vessel touches at a port in the United States, if the employee is employed on and in connection with such vessel when outside the United States, except—

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 40, line 2, after the word "organization", to insert "exempt from income tax under section 101 (1) of the Internal Revenue Code", so as to read:

(B) Service performed in the employ of an agricultural or horticultural organization exempt from income tax under section 101 (1) of the Internal Revenue Code.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 40, line 17, after the word "or", to insert "their"; and in line 20, before the word "employees", to insert "officers or", so as to read:

(D) Service performed in the employ of a voluntary employees' beneficiary association providing for the payment of life, sick, accident, or other benefits to the members of such association or their dependents or their designated beneficiaries, if (i) admission to membership in such association is limited to individuals who are officers or employees of the United States Government, and (ii) no part of the net earnings of such association inures (other than through such payments) to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 42, line 6, after the word "State", to strike out "law." and insert "law,"; so as to read:

(13) Service performed as a student nurse in the employ of a hospital or a nurses' training school by an individual who is enrolled and is regularly attending classes in a nurses' training school chartered or approved pursuant to State law; and service performed as an interne in the employ of a hospital by an individual who has completed a 4 years' course in a medical school chartered or approved pursuant to State law.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 42, after line 6, to insert:

(14) Service performed by an individual in the catching, taking, harvesting, cultivating, or farming of any kind of fish, shellfish, crustacea, sponges, seaweeds, or other aquatic forms of animal and vegetable life, or as officer or member of the crew of any sail vessel, or a vessel other than a sail vessel of less than 400 tons (determined in the manner provided for determining the register tonnage under the laws of the United States), while such vessel is engaged in any such activity (including preparation for, and unloading after, any such activity); or

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I should like to have an explanation of this amendment.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, the House bill covered maritime employees in the old-age-insurance tax. We except fishermen from its operation. The object of this amendment is to take care of that exception, so that such employees will not be covered by that tax.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I should like to know what reason the committee has for excepting the employees of such companies?

Mr. HARRISON. I will tell the Senator what prompted me. I presume the conditions in the locality which I have in mind are quite like those in many other localities throughout the country where men dredge for oysters or gather shrimp. The owner of a small vessel goes out with two or three persons who may be his own sons or men he employs by the day. At one place in my State there are thousands of such small fishing vessels which would have to make tax reports to the Bureau of Internal Revenue. I think it would cause a great deal of confusion; I do not believe the benefits which would be obtained would be worth the disadvantages to those engaged in such business, and I do not believe it would be workable. So we excluded fishermen and officers and members of the crew on a sail vessel or a vessel other than a sail vessel under 400 tons.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. The limitation is in the alternative; that is, an "or" and not an "and"?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I can appreciate the situation which the Senator explains. However, that condition does not prevail in the fishing industry in many sections of the country and in many parts of the industry. In other words, it is one thing when the efforts are sporadic, and, say, three or four or five men go out in very small boats; but in a situation such as prevails in the Pacific Northwest, where thousands of people are taken by companies to Alaska, for example, over a period of several months, a very different situation is presented. I wonder if the Senator will agree that this might go over until tomorrow? It may be that I may be able to work out an exception.

Mr. HARRISON. Yes. I may say that if the people to whom the Senator is referring want to be covered by this insurance system, and he can properly frame the provision so that it does not include all the others operating small boats, I should be perfectly willing, so far as I am concerned, to accept it.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. May the amendment go over until tomorrow?

Mr. HARRISON. I ask that the amendment be passed over for the present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be passed over.

The clerk will state the next amendment reported by the committee.

The next amendment was, on page 42, after line 17, to insert:

(15) Service performed by an individual under the age of 18 in the delivery or distribution of newspapers or shopping news, not including delivery or distribution to any point for subsequent delivery or distribution.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 43, line 11, after the word "performed", to strike out "for an employer", and in the same line, after the word "period", to insert "by an employee for the person employing him", so as to read:

(c) If the services performed during one-half or more of any pay period by an employee for the person employing him constitute employment, all the services of such employee for such period shall be deemed to be employment; but if the services performed during more than one-half of any such pay period by an employee for the person employing him do not constitute employment, then none of the services of such employee for such period shall be deemed to be employment. As used in this subsection the term "pay period" means a period (of not more than 31 consecutive days) for which a payment of remuneration is ordinarily made to the employee by the person employing him. This subsection shall not be applicable with respect to services performed in a pay period by an employee for the person employing him, where any of such service is excepted by paragraph (9) of subsection (b).

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 44, line 4, after the word "exceeds", to strike out "$50, and" and insert "$50 and does not exceed $250, and", so as to read:

(e) The term "primary insurance benefit" means an amount equal to the sum of the following—

(1) (A) 40 percent of the amount of an individual's average monthly wage if such average monthly wage does not exceed $50, or (B) if such average monthly wage exceeds $50, 40 percent of $50, plus 10 percent of the amount by which such average monthly wage exceeds $50 and does not exceed $250, and.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 44, line 9, after the word "individual" and the period, to insert "Where the primary insurance benefit thus computed is less than $10, such benefit shall be $10.", so as to read:

(2) An amount equal to 1 percent of the amount computed under paragraph (1) multiplied by the number of years in which $200 or more of wages were paid to such individual. Where the primary insurance benefit thus computed is less than $10, such benefit shall be $10.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 44, line 14, after the word "the", to strike out "year" and insert "quarter"; in line 16, after the word "by", to strike out "twelve" and insert "three"; in the same line, after the word "or", to strike out "years" and insert "quarters"; in line 17, after the word "such", to strike out "year" and insert "quarter"; in line 18, after the word "any", to strike out "year" and insert "quarter"; in line 19, after the word "the" where it occurs the first time, to strike out "year" and insert "quarter"; in line 20, after the word "than", to strike out "$200" and insert

"$50"; and in line 21, after the word "wages", to strike out the semicolon and "but in no case shall such total wages be divided by a number less than 36" and insert "and any quarter, after the quarter in which he attained age 65, occurring prior to 1939", so as to read:

(f) The term "average monthly wage" means the quotient obtained by dividing the total wages paid an individual before the quarter in which he died or became entitled to receive primary insurance benefits, whichever first occurred, by three times the number of quarters elapsing after 1936 and before such quarter in which he died or became so entitled, excluding any quarter prior to the quarter in which he attained the age of 22 during which he was paid less than $50 of wages and any quarter, after the quarter in which he attained age 65, occurring prior to 1939.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the top of page 45, to strike out:

(1) (A) he attained age 65 prior to 1940, and
(B) he has not less than 2 years of coverage, and
(C) the total amount of wages paid to him was not less than $600; or

(2) (A) within the period of 1940-1945, inclusive, he attained the age of 65 or died before attaining such age, and
(B) he had not less than 1 year of coverage for each 2 of the years specified in clause (C), plus an additional year of coverage, and

(C) the total amount of wages paid to him was not less than an amount equal to $200 multiplied by the number of years elapsing after 1936 and up to and including the year in which he attained the age of 65 or died, whichever first occurred; or

(3) (A) the total amount of wages paid to him was not less than $2,000, and

(4) he had at least 15 years of coverage.
As used in this subsection, the term "year" means calendar year, and the term "year of coverage" means a calendar year in which the individual has been paid not less than $200 in wages. When the number of years specified in clause (2) (C) or clause (3) (B) is an odd number, for purposes of clause (2) (B) or (3) (B), respectively, such number shall be reduced by one.

And insert:
(1) He had not less than one quarter of coverage for each two of the quarters elapsing after 1936, or after the quarter in which he attained the age of 21, whichever quarter is later, and up to but excluding the quarter in which he attained the age of 65, or died, whichever first occurred, and in no case less than six quarters of coverage; or
(2) He had at least 40 quarters of coverage.

As used in this subsection, and in subsection (h) of this section, the term "quarter" and the term "calendar quarter" mean a period of 3 calendar months ending on March 31, June 30, September 30, or December 31; and the term "quarter of coverage" means a calendar quarter in which the individual has been paid not less than $50 in wages. When the number of quarters specified in paragraph (1) of this subsection is an odd number, for purposes of such paragraph such number shall be reduced by one.

The amendment was agreed to.
The next amendment was, on page 47, line 9, after the word "who", to insert "either (1) is the mother of such individual's son or daughter, or (2)", so as to read:
(1) The term "wife" means the wife of an individual who either (1) is the mother of such individual's son or daughter, or (2) was married to him prior to January 1, 1939, or if later, prior to the date upon which he attained the age of 60.

The amendment was agreed to.
The next amendment was, on page 47, line 15, after the word "who", to insert "either (1) is the mother of such individual's son or daughter, or (2)", so as to read:

(j) The term "widow" (except when used in section 202 (g)) means the surviving wife of an individual who either (1) is the mother of such individual's son or daughter, or (2) was married to him prior to the beginning of the twelfth month before the month in which he died.

The amendment was agreed to.
The next amendment was, on page 48, line 5, after the word "in" where it occurs the second time, to strike out "connection with"; in line 6, after the word "in", to strike out "connection with"; in line 8, after the word "raising", to insert "shearing"; in the same line, after the word "feeding", to insert "caring for, training"; and in line 10, after the word "animals", to insert "and other wildlife", so as to read:

(1) The term "agricultural labor" includes all service performed—
(1) On a farm, in the employ of any person in cultivating the soil, or in raising or harvesting any agricultural or horticultural commodity, including the raising, shearing, feeding, caring for, training, and management of livestock, bees, poultry, and fur-bearing animals and other wildlife.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 48, line 11, after the word "tenant", to insert "or other operator"; in line 13, after the word "management", to insert "conservation, improvement"; and in line 14, after the word "farm", to insert "and its tools and equipment", so as to read:

(2) In the employ of the owner or tenant or other operator of a farm, in connection with the operation, management, conservation, improvement, or maintenance of such farm and its tools and equipment, if the major part of such service is performed on a farm.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 48, line 21, after the word "cotton", to insert a comma and "or in connection with the operation or maintenance of ditches, canals, reservoirs, or waterways used exclusively for supplying and storing water for farming purposes"; so as to read:

(3) In connection with the production or harvesting of maple sirup or maple sugar or any commodity defined as an agricultural commodity in section 15 (g) of the Agricultural Marketing Act, as amended, or in connection with the raising or harvesting of mushrooms, or in connection with the hatching of poultry, or in connection with the ginning of cotton, or in connection with the operation or maintenance of ditches, canals, reservoirs, or waterways used exclusively for supplying and storing water for farming purposes.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 49, line 1, after the word "handling", to insert "planting"; so as to read:

(4) In handling, planting, drying, packing, packaging, processing, freezing, grading, storing, or delivering to storage or to market or to a carrier for transportation to market, any agricultural or horticultural commodity; but only if such service is performed as an incident to ordinary farming operations or, in the case of fruits and vegetables, as an incident to the preparation of such fruits or vegetables for market. The provisions of this paragraph shall not be deemed to be applicable with respect to service performed in connection with commercial canning or commercial freezing or in connection with any agricultural or horticultural commodity after its delivery to a terminal market for distribution for consumption.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Title III—Amendments to Title III of the Social Security Act"; on page 51, line 18, after the word "administration" and the parenthesis, to strike out "other than those relating to selection, tenure of office, and compensation of personnel" and insert "including, after July 1, 1941, methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis"; so as to read:

Sec. 302. Section 303 (a) of such act is amended to read as follows:

"(a) The Board shall make no certification for payment to any State unless it finds that the law of such State, approved by the Board under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act, includes provision for—

"(1) Such methods of administration (including, after July 1, 1941, methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis) as are found by the Board to be reasonably calculated to insure full payment of unemployment compensation when due; and

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Title IV—Amendments to Title IV of the Social Security Act", on page 53, line 25, after the word "administration" and the parenthesis, to strike out "other than those relating to selection, tenure of office, and compensation of personnel" and insert "including, after January 1, 1940, methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis"; so as to read:

Sec. 401. (a) Clause (5) of section 402 (a) of such act is amended to read as follows: "(5) provide such methods of administration (including, after January 1, 1940, methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis) as are found by the Board to be necessary for the proper and efficient operation of the plan."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 54, after line 15, to strike out:

Sec. 402. (a) Effective January 1, 1940, subsection (a) of section 403 of such act is amended by striking out "one-third" and inserting in lieu thereof "one-half", and paragraph (1) of subsection (b) of such section is amended by striking out "two-thirds" and inserting in lieu thereof "one-half."

(b) Effective January 1, 1940, paragraph (2) of section 403 (b) of such act is amended to read as follows:

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 54, after line 22, to strike out:

Sec. 402. Effective January 1, 1940—

(a) Subsection (a) of section 403 of such act is amended to read as follows:

"(a) From the sums appropriated therefor, the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay to each State which has an approved plan for aid to dependent children, for each quarter, beginning with the quarter commencing January 1, 1940, an amount, which shall be used exclusively for carrying out the State plan, equal to one-half of the total of the sums expended during such quarter under such plan, not counting so much of such sums expended as aid to dependent children for any month as exceeds $18 multiplied by the total number of dependent children receiving aid to dependent children for such month."

(b) Paragraph (1) of subsection (b) of such section is amended by striking out "two-thirds" and inserting in lieu thereof "one-half."

(c) Paragraph (2) of subsection (b) of such section is amended to read as follows:

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 56, line 12, before the word "who", to insert "or serving as an apprentice without remuneration", so as to make the section read:

Sec. 403. Section 406 (a) of such act is amended to read as follows:

"(a) The term 'dependent child' means a needy child under the age of 16, or under the age of 18 if found by the State agency to be regularly attending school or serving as an apprentice without remuneration, who has been deprived of parental support or care by reason of the death, continued absence from the home, or physical or mental incapacity of a parent, and who is living with his father, mother, grandfather, grandmother, brother, sister, stepfather, stepmother, stepbrother, stepsister, uncle, or aunt, in a place of residence maintained by one or more of such relatives as his or their own home."

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendments to title V will be considered en bloc. The amendment will be stated.

The amendments to title V were, on page 56, line 20, after the word "to", to strike out "title V" and insert "titles V and VI"; on page 56, after line 21, to insert.

Sec. 501. Section 501 of such act is amended by striking out "$3,800,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$5,820,000."

At the top of page 57, to insert:

Sec. 502. (a) Subsection (a) of section 502 of such act is amended by striking out "$1,800,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$2,800,000."

(b) Subsection (b) of such section 502 is amended by striking out "$980,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$1,980,000."

On page 57, line 7, to change the section number from 501 to 503, and in line 9, after the word "administration" and the parenthesis, to strike out "other than those relating to selection, tenure of office, and compensation of personnel" and insert "including, after January 1, 1940, methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis."

On page 57, after line 14, to insert the following section:

Sec. 504. Section 511 of such act is amended by striking out "$2,850,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$3,870,000."

On page 57, after line 17, to insert the following section:

Sec. 505. (a) Subsection (a) of section 512 of such act is amended by striking out the words "the remainder" and inserting in lieu thereof "$1,830,000."

(b) Such section is further amended by inserting after subsection (a) the following new subsection:

"(b) Out of the sums appropriated pursuant to section 511 for each fiscal year the Secretary of Labor shall allot to the States

$1,000,000 (in addition to the allotments made under subsection (a)), according to the financial need of each State for assistance in carrying out its State plan, as determined by him after taking into consideration the number of crippled children in such State in need of the services referred to in section 511 and the cost of furnishing such services to them."

(c) Subsection (b) of such section 512 is amended by striking out the letter "(b)" at the beginning thereof and inserting in lieu thereof the letter "(c)."

On page 58, line 10, to change the section number from 502 to 506, and in line 12, after the word "administration" and the parenthesis, to strike out "other than those relating to selection, tenure of office, and compensation of personnel" and insert "including, after January 1, 1940, methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis."

On page 58, after line 17, to insert the following section:

SEC. 507. (a) Subsection (a) of section 514 of such act is amended by striking out "section 512" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 512 (a)."

(b) Such section 514 is further amended by inserting at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) The Secretary of Labor shall from time to time certify to the Secretary of the Treasury the amounts to be paid to the States from the allotment available under section 512 (b), and the Secretary of the Treasury shall, through the Division of Disbursement of the Treasury Department, and prior to audit or settlement by the General Accounting Office, make payments of such amounts from such allotments at the time or times specified by the Secretary of Labor."

On page 59, after line 6, to strike out:

SEC. 503. Section 531 (a) of such act is amended by striking out "$1,938,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$2,938,000."

On page 59, after line 8, to insert:

SEC. 508. (a) Section 531 (a) of such act is amended by—
(1) Striking out "$1,938,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$4,000,000."

(2) Striking out "$5,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$15,000."

(3) Inserting after the word "Hawaii" the following: "and Puerto Rico, respectively."

(4) Inserting before the period at the end thereof a colon and the following: "Provided, That the amount of such sums apportioned to any State for any fiscal year shall be not less than $30,000."

(b) Section 531 (b) of such act is amended by striking out "$102,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$150,000."

On page 59, after line 22, to insert:

SEC. 509. Section 601 of such act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 601. For the purpose of assisting States, counties, health districts, and other political subdivisions of the States in establishing and maintaining adequate public-health services, including the training of personnel for State and local health work, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year, beginning with the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, the sum of $12,000,000 to be used as hereinafter provided."

So as to make the title read:

TITLE V—AMENDMENTS TO TITLES V AND VI OF THE SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

SEC. 501. Section 501 of such act is amended by striking out "$3,800,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$5,820,000."

SEC. 502. (a) Subsection (a) of section 502 of such act is amended by striking out "$1,800,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$2,800,000."

(b) Subsection (b) of such section 502 is amended by striking out "$980,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$1,980,000."

SEC. 503. Clause (3) of section 503 (a) of such act is amended to read as follows: "(3) provide such methods of administration (including, after January 1, 1940, methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis) as are necessary for the proper and efficient operation of the plan."

SEC. 504. Section 511 of such act is amended by striking out "$2,850,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$3,870,000."

SEC. 505. (a) Subsection (a) of section 512 of such act is amended by striking out the words "the remainder" and inserting in lieu thereof "$1,830,000."

(b) Such section is further amended by inserting after subsection (a) the following new subsection:

"(b) Out of the sums appropriated pursuant to section 511 for each fiscal year the Secretary of Labor shall allot to the States $1,000,000 (in addition to the allotments made under subsection (a)), according to the financial need of each State for assistance in carrying out its State plan, as determined by him after taking into consideration the number of crippled children in such State in need of the services referred to in section 511 and the cost of furnishing such services to them."

(c) Subsection (b) of such section 512 is amended by striking out the letter "(b)" at the beginning thereof and inserting in lieu thereof the letter "(c)."

SEC. 506. Clause (3) of section 513 (a) of such act is amended to read as follows: "(3) provide such methods of administration including, after January 1, 1940, methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis) as are necessary for the proper and efficient operation of the plan."

SEC. 507. (a) Subsection (a) of section 514 of such act is amended by striking out "section 512" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 512 (a)."

(b) Such section 514 is further amended by inserting at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) The Secretary of Labor shall from time to time certify to the Secretary of the Treasury the amounts to be paid to the States from the allotment available under section 512 (b), and the Secretary of the Treasury shall, through the Division of Disbursement of the Treasury Department, and prior to audit or settlement by the General Accounting Office, make payments of such amounts from such allotments at the time or times specified by the Secretary of Labor."

SEC. 508. (a) Section 531 (a) of such act is amended by—

(1) Striking out "$1,938,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$4,000,000."

(2) Striking out "$5,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$15,000."

(3) Inserting after the word "Hawaii" the following: "and Puerto Rico, respectively."

(4) Inserting before the period at the end thereof a colon and the following: "Provided, That the amount of such sums apportioned to any State for any fiscal year shall be not less than $30,000."

(b) Section 531 (b) of such act is amended by striking out "$102,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$150,000."

SEC. 509. Section 601 of such act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 601. For the purpose of assisting States, counties, health districts, and other political subdivisions of the States in establishing and maintaining adequate public-health services, including the training of personnel for State and local health work, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year, beginning with the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, the sum of $12,000,000 to be used as hereinafter provided."

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, the amendments at the bottom of page 56 and following have to do with increased authorizations for appropriations for maternal and child health, vocational rehabilitation, and public health, as authorized in the original Social Security Act. The committee heard testimony from Miss Lenroot, Chief of the Children's Bureau, and Dr. Eliot, Assistant Chief of the Children's Bureau; Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General, and those interested in vocational rehabilitation. The increases in the authorization are as follows:

First. Two million and twenty thousand dollars is added for grants to States for maternal and child-health services in amendments to title V, part 1, section 502.

One million and twenty thousand dollars of this sum is added to subsection 502 (a) to be matched in the ratio of one-half Federal and one-half State funds, $20,000 being added to cover the flat annual grant to Puerto Rico which has been designated as a State in an amendment to title XI, and $1,000,000 is added to subsection 502 (b) so that a total of $1,980,000 instead of $980,000 will be available for allotment by the Secretary of Labor, without matching, according to the financial need of each State for assistance in carrying out its State plan after taking into consideration the number of live births in such States.

The total amount authorized for grants to States annually for maternal and child-health services will then be $5,820,000 as compared with $3,800,000 in the present act.

Second. One million and twenty thousand dollars is added for grants to States for services for crippled children in amendment to title V, part 2, section 512.

Of this sum, $1,000,000 is added in a new subsection 512 (b) to provide a fund for allotment to the States (without a requirement for matching) on the basis of the financial need of each State for assistance in carrying out its State plan. Grants to the States under the act at present must be matched in full by the States.

Of this sum $20,000 is added to provide a flat annual allotment to Puerto Rico since an amendment to title XI designated Puerto Rico as a State.

The total amount authorized for grants to the States annually for services for crippled children will then be $3,870,000 as compared with $2,850,000 in the present act.

Third. Four million dollars increase is authorized for vocational rehabilitation.

Fourth. Four million dollars increase is authorized for public health.

I do not desire to take up the time of the Senate in going into the details of the testimony which was adduced before the committee in support of these amendments. I will say, however, that the testimony impressed the members of the committee who heard the statements with the urgent need for the modest increases in the authorizations to take care of child health, maternal care, and crippled children. The statements so impressed the committee that, as I remember, there were very few votes in the committee against the amendments.

This service, Mr. President, is greatly needed, as has been demonstrated by the testimony of both Miss Lenroot and Dr. Eliot. These funds are being used in an effort to reduce the very high maternal and child death rate in the United States.

The States, in setting up their plans under this title of the Social Security Act, have thus far more largely formulated them so as to take care of the more urban areas. These funds, if they shall be provided by an appropriation in case this authorization increase is allowed, will largely go to help bring the same kind of efficient service which is now being rendered in some of the urban areas of this country to the rural population of the United States, where there is more need for it, or at least as much need for it, as there is in the highly congested centers of the United States. In the highly congested centers there are available hospital facilities and other facilities which are not available in many of the rural areas of the United States.

The testimony of Dr. Parran was conclusive on the point of urgent need for increased funds for public health. Tuberculosis, pneumonia, and cancer are diseases which increased funds will enable the Public Health Service to augment their work to lessen their toll.

Good work is being done in vocational rehabilitation; thus increased funds will make it possible to enlarge this activity.

The only justification for my taking a moment of the Senate's time on these amendments is that I want the RECORD to show that the Senate of the United States paused long enough to understand what was involved in the amendments; and then I want a test of the Senate upon them, in order that we may show that they were not casually passed over by this body.

On the amendments I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing en bloc to the amendments to title V, beginning in line 20, page 56, and ending in line 8, page 60. On that question the yeas and nays have been demanded. Is the demand seconded?

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. AUSTIN. The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY] has a general pair with the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER].

Mr. McKELLAR (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a pair with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. Townsend]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER], and will allow my vote to stand.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I have a pair with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS]. I am not informed how he would vote on this question. I therefore withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote I should vote "yea."

Mr. HARRISON (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY]; but I understand that if he were present he would vote as I have already voted, so I will let my vote stand.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS] are detained from the Senate because of illness in their families.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN], the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HUGHES], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN], the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER], and the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] are absent on important public business.

The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BURKE], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], the Senator from Idaho [Mr. CLARK], the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY], the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON], and the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] are detained in various Government departments on matters pertaining to their respective States.

The Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] and the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] are detained in important committee meetings.

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GERRY] and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] are necessarily detained.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER] and the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT] are conducting hearings in the Committee on Education and Labor.

The result was announced—yeas 59, nays 4, as follows:

So the amendments of the committee to title V were agreed to en bloc.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, we are now engaged in a study of the question of social security. Earlier in the day I heard the distinguished senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS] make use of the word "unemployment," and I know of no better time to bring to the attention of this distinguished body the fact that, in my opinion, the finest security, social or otherwise, we could possibly provide the American people would be to afford American jobs for American citizens, particularly in view of the condition that today between eleven and twelve million God-fearing American men and women are walking the streets in search of honest employment.

In addition to that, statistics show that there are approximately 26,000,000 people working only part time, by which I refer to those who are engaged only a few hours out of each day, a few days out of each week, or 1 or 2 weeks out of each month.

Then there are 3,000,000 people upon the W. P. A. rolls of this country, and we shall probably give further consideration to their situation during the present week.

There are also 300,000 fine young men in the C. C. C. camps; and a hundred thousand more who are seeking admission.

There are 4,000,000 people working for the Federal Government, the 48 State governments, the more than 3,200 counties, the more than 10,000 incorporated municipalities, in the form of hamlets, cities, and towns.

During the past month more than 700,000 boys and girls were graduated from the high schools and universities of the country, and we all know that under present conditions only one out of every three of those fine boys and girls will be able to secure a position.

For these reasons I am very happy at this hour to have the opportunity of bringing to the attention of the Members of the Senate a clipping from one of the New York papers, which was mailed to me a few days ago, which will give a general idea, at least, of the deplorable conditions existing at this time. I wish to read the clipping to the Senate. This is from the columns of the New York Sun of Wednesday, July 5, 1939, in the great metropolitan city of New York. The caption reads:

Fifty-eight jobs in all sought by 7,000—Some wait all night for doors to open—Misapprehensions are many—Civil Service Board besieged for chauffeurs' places.

I may state that the article is accompanied by a reprint of a photograph, evidently made by the news photographer, showing young and old assembled in the armory, more than 7,000, in an endeavor to secure 1 of 58 jobs. The article reads:

A queue that included more than 1,000 persons, some of whom had been in place since 7 o'clock last night, was on hand today when the municipal civil-service commission opened its doors at 90 Duane Street today to give out applications for jobs as automobile enginemen.

Such was the rush for jobs, of which about 58 paying from $1,200 to $1,500 a year are now open, that it was estimated that 7,000 applications had been given out during the day, 4,000 of them in the first hour and a half.

Extra policemen were on hand to keep the job seekers in line but there was no disorder. Even with the long wait the men were in good humor and once the office had opened the line moved rapidly.

Commissioner Wallace S. Sayre attributed the line to misconception on the part of applicants, most of whom felt that it was a case of first come first served. These jobs, however, are in the competitive class and are filled after an examination has been held.

To qualify as an automobile engineman, one must be not more than 40 years old, have a chauffeur's license and be able to make minor repairs and adjustments, clean, oil, and maintain in good moving condition automobiles entrusted to him and assist in loading and unloading as required.

One man, Angelo Grimaldo, of 34 Snedeker Avenue, the Bronx, reached the commission's office at 5 p. m. yesterday to be first in line but, seeing nobody there, left. When he returned at 11:30 he found a number ahead of him. He and other early birds said that the real rush did not begin until after daylight this morning.

When the door was open, the waiting applicants were allowed in 10 at a time until the peak of the rush had been passed. Several women were in line, some seeking to qualify on their own account and others seeking applications for their husbands.

There were 7,000 God-fearing men and women in the city of New York alone assembled in the armory in that great metropolitan area the night before the applications were to be received the following morning, 7,000 seeking only 58 jobs.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the next amendment reported by the Committee on Finance.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Title VI—Amendments to the Internal Revenue Code", on page 61, line 6, before the word "Section", to insert "(a)"; and after line 14, to insert:

(b) Such section 1401 is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) Special refund: If by reason of an employee rendering service for more than one employer during any calendar year after the calendar year 1939, the wages of the employee with respect to employment during such year exceed $3,000, the employee shall be entitled to a refund of any amount of tax, with respect to such wages, imposed by section 1400, deducted from such wages and paid to the collector, which exceeds the tax with respect to the first $3,000 of such wages paid. Refund under this section may be made in accordance with the provisions of law applicable in the case of erroneous or illegal collection of the tax; except that no such refund shall be made unless (1) the employee makes a claim, establishing his right thereto, after the calendar year in which the employment was performed with respect to which refund of tax is claimed, and (2) such claim is made within 2 years after the calendar year in which the wages are paid with respect to which refund of tax is claimed. No interest shall be allowed or paid with respect to any such refund."

So as to make the section read:

Sec. 602. (a) Section 1401 (c) of the Internal Revenue Code is amended to read as follows:

"(c) Adjustments: If more or less than the correct amount of tax imposed by section 1400 is paid with respect to any payment of remuneration, proper adjustments, with respect both to the tax and the amount to be deducted, shall be made, without interest, in such manner and at such times as may be prescribed by regulations made under this subchapter."

(b) Such section 1401 is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) Special refund: If by reason of an employee rendering service for more than one employer during any calendar year after the calendar year 1939, the wages of the employee with respect to employment during such year exceed $3,000, the employee shall be entitled to a refund of any amount of tax, with respect to such wages, imposed by section 1400, deducted from such wages and paid to the collector, which exceeds the tax with respect to the first $3,000 of such wages paid. Refund under this section may be made in accordance with the provisions of law applicable in the case of erroneous or illegal collection of the tax; except that no such refund shall be made unless (1) the employee makes a claim, establishing his right thereto, after the calendar year in which the employment was performed with respect to which refund of tax is claimed, and (2) such claim is made within 2 years after the calendar year in which the wages are paid with respect to which refund of tax is claimed. No interest shall be allowed or paid with respect to any such refund."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 65, line 14, before the word "or", to insert "or annuities"; and on line 18, after the word "disability", to insert a comma and "or (D) death, provided the employee (i) has not the option to receive, instead of provision for such death benefit, any part of such payment or, if such death benefit is insured, any part of the premiums (or contributions to premiums) paid by his employer, and (ii) has not the right, under the provisions of the plan or system or policy of insurance providing for such death benefit, to assign such benefit, or to receive a cash consideration in lieu of such benefit either upon his withdrawal from the plan or system providing for such benefit or upon termination of such plan or system or policy of insurance or of his employment with such employer", so as to read:

Sec. 1426. Definitions.

When used in this subchapter—

(a) Wages: The term "wages" means all remuneration for employment, including the cash value of all remuneration paid in any medium other than cash; except that such term shall not include—

(1) That part of the remuneration which, after remuneration equal to $3,000 has been paid to an individual by an employer with respect to employment during any calendar year, is paid to such individual by such employer with respect to employment during such calendar year;

(2) The amount of any payment made to, or on behalf of, an employee under a plan or system established by an employer which makes provision for his employees generally or for a class or classes of his employees (including any amount paid by an employer for insurance or annuities, or into a fund, to provide for any such payment), on account of (A) retirement, or (B) sickness or accident disability, or (C) medical and hospitalization expenses in connection with sickness or accident disability, or (D) death, provided the employee (i) has not the option to receive, instead of provision for such death benefit, any part of such payment or, if such death benefit is insured, any part of the premiums (or contributions to premiums) paid by his employer, and (ii) has not the right, under the provisions of the plan or system or policy of insurance providing for such death benefit, to assign such benefit, or to receive a cash consideration in lieu of such benefit either upon his withdrawal from the plan or system providing for such benefit or upon termination of such plan or system or policy of insurance or of his employment with such employer;

(3) The payment by an employer (without deduction from the remuneration of the employee) (A) of the tax imposed upon an employee under section 1400 or (B) of any payment required from an employee under a State unemployment compensation law; or

(4) Dismissal payments which the employer is not legally required to make.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 67, line 2, before the word "of", to strike out "(i)" and insert "(h)", so as to read:

(b) Employment: The term "employment" means any service performed prior to January 1, 1940, which was employment as defined in this section prior to such date, and any service, of whatever nature, performed after December 31, 1939, by an employee for the person employing him, irrespective of the citizenship or residence of either, (A) within the United States, or (B) on or in connection with an American vessel under a contract of service which is entered into within the United States or during the performance of which the vessel touches at a port in the United States, if the employee is employed on and in connection with such vessel when outside the United States, except—

(1) Agricultural labor (as defined in subsection (h) of this section).

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 69, line 8, after the word "organization", to insert "exempt from income tax under section 101 (1)", so as to read:

(B) Service performed in the employ of an agricultural or horticultural organization exempt from income tax under section 101 (1).

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 69, line 23, after the words "dependents or", to insert the word "their"; and on line 25, after the word "are", to insert "officers or", so as to read:

(D) Service performed in the employ of a voluntary employees' beneficiary association providing for the payment of life, sick, accident, or other benefits to the members of such association or their dependents or their designated beneficiaries, if (1) admission to membership in such association is limited to individuals who are officers or employees of the United States Government, and (2) no part of the net earnings of such association inures (other than through such payments) to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 71, line 12, after the word "State", to strike out "law," and insert "law," so as to read:

(13) Service performed as a student nurse in the employ of a hospital or a nurses' training school by an individual who is enrolled and is regularly attending classes in a nurses' training school chartered or approved pursuant to State law; and service performed as an interne in the employ of a hospital by an individual who has completed a 4 years' course in a medical school chartered or approved pursuant to State law;

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 71, after line 12, to insert:

(14) Service performed by an individual in the catching, taking, harvesting, cultivating, or farming of any kind of fish, shellfish, crustacea, sponges, seaweeds, or other aquatic forms of animal and vegetable life, or as officer or member of the crew of any sail vessel, or a vessel other than a sail vessel of less than 400 tons (determined in the manner provided for determining the register tonnage under the laws of the United States), while such vessel is engaged in any such activity (including preparation for, and unloading after, any such activity); or

(15) Service performed by an individual under the age of 18 in the delivery or distribution of newspapers or shopping news, not including delivery or distribution to any point for subsequent delivery or distribution.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, let me ask the Senator from Mississippi whether or not this amendment should not go over with the other amendment which was passed over?

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I was about to make the statement that the Senator from Washington has withdrawn his objection to the other amendment, and I was about to ask that we recur to the amendment on page 42, line 7, and have that amendment adopted. The objection raised by the Senator from Washington has been withdrawn, and he understands the situation thoroughly.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment on page 71, beginning with line 13.

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Mississippi now asks that the Senate recur to the amendment on page 42, line 7.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 42, after line 6, it is proposed to insert the following:

(14) Service performed by an individual in the catching, taking, harvesting, cultivating, or farming of any kind of fish, shellfish, crustacea, sponges, seaweeds, or other aquatic forms of animal and vegetable life, or as officer or member of the crew of any sail vessel, or a vessel other than a sail vessel of less than 400 tons (determined in the manner provided for determining the register tonnage under the laws of the United States), while such vessel is engaged in any such activity (including preparation for, and unloading after, any such activity); or

(15) Service performed by an individual under the age of 18 in the delivery or distribution of newspapers or shopping news, not including delivery or distribution to any point for subsequent delivery or distribution.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 72, line 16, after the word "performed", to strike out "for an employer"; and in line 17, after the word "period", to insert "by an employee for the person employing him", so as to read:

(c) Included and excluded service: If the services performed during one-half or more of any pay period by an employee for the person employing him constitute employment, all the services of such employee for such period shall be deemed to be employment; but if the services performed during more than one-half of any such pay period by an employee for the person employing him do not constitute employment, then none of the services of such employee for such period shall be deemed to be employment. As used in this subsection the term "pay period" means a period (of not more than 31 consecutive days) for which a payment of remuneration is ordinarily made to the employee by the person employing him. This subsection shall not be applicable with respect to services performed in a pay period by an employee for the person employing him, where any of such service is excepted by paragraph (9) of subsection (b).

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 72, line 21, after the word "corporation" and the period, to strike out:

It also includes any individual who, for remuneration (by way of commission or otherwise) under an agreement or agreements contemplating a series of similar transactions, secures applications or orders or otherwise personally performs services as a salesman for a person in furtherance of such person's trade or business (but who is not an employee of such person under the law of master and servant); unless (1) such services are performed as a part of such individual's business as a broker or factor and, in furtherance of such business as broker or factor, similar services are performed for other persons and one or more employees of such broker or factor perform a substantial part of such services, or (2) such services are not in the course of such individual's principal trade, business, or occupation.

(e) Employer: The term "employer" includes any person for whom an individual performs any service of whatever nature as his employee.

So as to read:

(d) Employee: The term "employee" includes an officer of a corporation.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I was unable to hear the Senator from Mississippi when he spoke, as I understood, with reference to the amendment on page 72, line 21. Will the Senator please tell what happened to that amendment?

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, we struck out the amendment which the House had put in, which carried a definition of employee covering salesmen who are not employees. We also propose an amendment at another place in the bill which expressly excludes from the unemployment insurance tax agents of insurance companies who work on commission—solely on commission.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, does this apply also to self-employed persons generally? Are they also now exempt?

Mr. HARRISON. They are not covered.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. DANAHER. I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the RECORD at this point, as part of my remarks, a very full and complete letter dealing with this general subject which I feel is of such value that it should be perpetuated in the RECORD for the examination of all.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE FULLER BRUSH CO.,
Hartford, Conn., June 16, 1939.

HON. JOHN A. DANAHER,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: There is a proposed amendment to the Federal Social Security Act before the Senate under which the term "employee" is redefined to include independent contractors or dealers. The amendment is to section 1101 (a) substituting a new paragraph (6). We feel that you may be unfamiliar with the difficulties that would be experienced under this amendment.

Allow us to give you some facts about our dealers:

The dealer enjoys the independent character and freedom of his business; prizes his status as a local businessman, for he has no boss, does not punch a time clock, fixes his hours of labor and his hours of leisure, and no one tells him when, how, or where he should work. Each day he makes his own decision as to what he will do and how he will do it. He negotiates business with his customers, trades and barbers with them, makes special inducements for them to buy, throwing in articles or making special prices to get larger orders. Some weeks he buys merchandise from us and some weeks he does not. We do not know whether he is selling or not selling.

Frequently he just stops buying and it is weeks before we hear from him, sometimes months. Some dealers use automobiles in their business, others do not. Some advertise, some do not. Some dealers are engaged in selling brushes as a part-time business. For the balance of their time they are otherwise engaged or employed. Some are also selling other lines of merchandise. We do not know when they are selling our merchandise or selling the merchandise of another company or engaged in activities of their own.

The dealers buy merchandise from us at wholesale prices. We do not pay them any salary, wages, commissions, or other form of remuneration. The difference between the price a dealer receives from his customer and the price he pays us, less his expense of selling, taxes, and credit losses, is his profit, the amount of which we do not know. We have no pay roll for dealers.

Since we do not know how much the dealers' profits amount to we cannot compute the amount of the tax.

Someone may say that we could have the dealer report to us the amount of his gross profits and the amount of his expenses, taxes, credit losses, etc., and thus his net income would be determined, but this would be based entirely on information provided by the dealer. The company, however, would have no way of compelling a dealer to make such reports to it, and even if a dealer would make such reports we would have no way of deducting a tax from the profits the dealer claims he has made. The dealer is always indebted to us for merchandise purchased. The company might bill the dealer for a so-called pay-roll tax based upon the dealer's statement as to the amount of his net profits, but we would have no way of collecting the tax from the dealer.

The fact is the dealer is not our employee.

The above brief statement will give you some idea of the problems that will be confronting us should the amendment be adopted.

If you will bear with us a few more moments, we shall give you more facts, which we trust will be of assistance to you.

From our years of experience, we positively know that it is impossible to supervise, control, or direct dealers scattered throughout the Nation. Some of them work diligently all day, others devote only a few hours—their time is their own—they work or not, as they please. They will not work regularly, they are not at our place of business. It is common knowledge that a dealer can do enough business in a few hours or part of a week to give him enough profits to satisfy him for a whole week or until he again needs money. Many times it cannot be determined for weeks whether he is or is not doing business. It is also a practice for these people to lump their orders, so that for 1 or 2 or more weeks they earn nothing as far as we can determine. After 3 or 4 weeks they send us an order and we do not know whether they have sold all the merchandise they are buying or whether they order a stock to keep on hand. If the latter, we do not know when they will sell it or whether they ever will sell it.

Under this practice, if he is an employee, he can claim he is unemployed and we would have no knowledge about the real facts.

The adoption of the amendment will present staggering administrative problems. The paper work involved in trying to get data to put into reports will be stupendous; must be obtained by correspondence and there is no way of making dealers give us the information necessary for reports. We are not overpainting the picture, we are giving you hard, cold, actual facts, and that is what you want.

We sincerely hope that the above information will convince you that the amendment should not become a law and that you will share this information with other Senators.

However, if it is the judgment of Congress that the amendment should be passed, the following sentence should be added: "It does not include any individual who purchases merchandise for resale whose profit is determined by his resale price."

The language of the amendment is not clear. If any such amendment as this is going to be adopted, it should exclude specifically the individuals who purchase merchandise for resale at a profit and who are not compensated in any other way by the firm whose goods they are buying and selling. If the amendment is intended, by a mistake in judgment, to include individuals coming under this category, it should be borne in mind that it would be impossible to conform with it.

If the above sentence is not added, the produce merchant who sells fruit and vegetables to persons for resale, the pharmacist who sells food flavoring extracts to individuals for resale, the grocer who sells lemons and popcorn to girls for resale, the producer or grower who sells eggs and dressed poultry to the itinerant dealer for resale, the hardware merchant who sells faucet water strainers and anti-splashes to persons for resale, and a host of others—all may be classified under the amendment as employers and the buyers as employees.

Surely Congress does not intend to have this type of buyer, who conducts his business from his home and who calls upon the occupants of homes to sell the merchandise, made an employee by statute. There is no difference in principle between the Fuller dealer and the individuals described above.

Respectfully submitted.

ALFRED C. FULLER,
President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment on page 72, line 21.

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the next amendment of the committee.

The next amendment was, on page 74, in line 4, before the word "cultivating", to strike out "connection with"; in the same line, after the word "in", to strike out "connection with"; in line 6, after the word "raising", to insert "shearing,"; in line 7, after the word "feeding", to insert "caring for, training,"; and in line 8, after the word "animals", to insert "and other wildlife", so as to read:

(h) Agricultural labor: The term "agricultural labor" includes all services performed—

(1) On a farm, in the employ of any person, in cultivating the soil, or in raising or harvesting any agricultural or horticultural commodity, including the raising, shearing, feeding, caring for, training, and management of livestock, bees, poultry, and fur-bearing animals and other wildlife.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 74, line 9, after the word "tenant", to insert "or other operator"; in line 11, after the word "management", to insert "conservation, improvement,"; and in line 12, after the word "farm", to insert "and its tools and equipment", so as to read:

(2) In the employ of the owner or tenant or other operator of a farm, in connection with the operation, management, conservation, improvement, or maintenance of such farm and its tools and equipment, if the major part of such service is performed on a farm.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 74, line 20, after the word "cotton", to insert a comma and "or in connection with the operation or maintenance of ditches, canals, reservoirs, or waterways used exclusively for supplying and storing water for farming purposes", so as to read:

(3) In connection with the production or harvesting of maple sirup or maple sugar or any commodity defined as an agricultural commodity in section 15 (g) of the Agricultural Marketing Act, as amended, or in connection with the raising or harvesting of mushrooms, or in connection with the hatching of poultry, or in connection with the ginning of cotton, or in connection with the operation or maintenance of ditches, canals, reservoirs, or waterways used exclusively for supplying and storing water for farming purposes.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 74, line 24, before the word "drying", to insert "planting", so as to read:

(4) In handling, planting, drying, packing, packaging, processing, freezing, grading, storing, or delivering to storage or to market or to a carrier for transportation to market, any agricultural or horticultural commodity; but only if such service is performed as an incident to ordinary farming operations or, in the case of fruits and vegetables, as an incident to the preparation of such fruits or vegetables for market. The provisions of this paragraph shall not be deemed to be applicable with respect to service performed in connection with commercial canning or commercial freezing or in connection with agricultural or horticultural commodity after its delivery to a terminal market for distribution for consumption.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 78, line 25, after the word "law", to insert "to the highest rate applied thereunder in the taxable year to any person having individuals in his employ, or"; and after the words "per centum", to insert "whichever rate is lower", so as to read:

(b) Additional credit: In addition to the credit allowed under subsection (a), a taxpayer may credit against the tax imposed by section 1600 for any taxable year an amount, with respect to the unemployment compensation law of each State certified for the taxable year as provided in section 1602 (or with respect to any provisions thereof so certified), equal to the amount, if any, by which the contributions required to be paid by him with respect to the taxable year were less than the contributions such taxpayer would have been required to pay if throughout the taxable year he had been subject under such State law to the highest rate applied thereunder in the taxable year to any person having individuals in his employ, or to a rate of 2.7 percent, whichever rate is lower.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 79, to strike out lines 16 to 19, inclusive, as follows:

(1) The total annual contributions will yield not less than an amount substantially equivalent to 2.7 percent of the total annual pay roll with respect to which contributions are required under such law, and.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, at this point in the consideration of the amendments I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the RECORD a telegram from T. B. Wright, President of the Vermont Council of Retail Merchants.

There being no objection, the telegram was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

BURLINGTON, VT., July 10, 1939.

HON. WARREN R. AUSTIN,

The Senate:

Unemployment compensation provisions of title 6, section 610, of H. R. 6635, as amended by Senate Finance Committee, has hearty approval of Vermont Council of Retail Merchants. We feel imposition of Federal standards on State unemployment-compensation laws will have undesirable effect on development of stabilized employment and experience rating in the States.

T. B. WRIGHT,

President, Vermont Council of Retail Merchants.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment on page 79, beginning with line 16.

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the next amendment of the committee.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, has the amendment on page 79, beginning with line 16, been adopted?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It has been adopted.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I have an amendment to offer on behalf of the American Federation of Labor, dealing with that amendment, which has just been agreed to.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I ask that the vote by which the amendment, on page 79, lines 16 to 19, was agreed to, be reconsidered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the vote by which the amendment was agreed to is reconsidered.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I have an amendment to offer on behalf of the American Federation of Labor. Their position is that the security fund will be impaired if the amendment, as it now reads, shall be agreed to. The total income will be less than 2.7 percent, and the fear is expressed that it will provide an inducement to the various States to compete for lower and lower rates and so impair the funds of the security fund. In view of that fact I ask the Senator from Mississippi to accept my amendment and to have it inserted in lieu of the committee amendment.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, there was no question before the committee which gave it more concern and upon which longer time was taken to study than the 2.7 provision. We had before us the so-called McCormack amendment. I think the committee was all agreed on the elimination of the McCormack amendment, which was adopted in the House. We also agreed on the elimination of the 2.7-percent provision.

The matter will be in conference, I may say to the Senator. The whole question will be in conference, and I hope that the Senate will win out in the conference. I think there was no dissention in the committee on the question that this matter should be stricken out, although I know that I got the impression that if the McCormack amendment were agreed to we ought to have something in the bill providing that the reserves be maintained on a reasonable basis such as suggested by the Social Security Board. But we felt that that question was so technical in character that it ought to be subjected to a study by an advisory committee, and if I recall correctly, the Chairman of the Social Security Board stated to the committee that it would not be a bad idea if this matter be studied for awhile, and that it would not under the House proposal be put into operation until, I believe, 1942.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I think the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] has pending a resolution providing for the re-creation of the advisory council to deal with the whole subject.

Mr. HARRISON. Yes. I was further going to state that the amendment would be offered by the Senator from New York to create an advisory committee to study this question. The matter is a very important one. No one wants to see these funds which have been built up for this reason or that increased or reduced to such an extent that the States might not have sufficient funds to pay unemployment benefits. We think there should be further study before any changes are made. There are some States in which these unemployment benefits are just now beginning to be paid. I think Wisconsin led in the march, and they adopted the merit rating system. The whole matter is one of such technical and far-reaching significance that we think it should be further studied.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Am I to understand that the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] will offer an amendment to this bill?

Mr. HARRISON. He will offer an amendment to create an advisory council to be appointed by the Finance Committee of the Senate, and the Ways and Means Committee of the House to work on this question and to submit its advice and findings to the Social Security Board and to Congress.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Can the Senator give us an idea how long such a study will require? How much time will it take?

Mr. HARRISON. That depends on many factors. There may be a report ready for the next session of Congress.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. If it is for the next session of Congress I think that would be a reasonable procedure.

Mr. HARRISON. The American Federation of Labor is no more intent than the members of the Finance Committee of the Senate on seeing that these funds are preserved and that proper legislation is passed by the States. We do not want to see the fund depleted at all. We do not want it to be lowered to the point where it is dangerous.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I see the Senator from New York has just entered the Senate Chamber. I should like to direct a question to him about the wording of the proposed amendment.

Mr. HARRISON. I will ask the Senator from New York if it is not his purpose to offer an amendment which will create a board to study the whole unemployment-insurance question?

Mr. WAGNER. Yes. The amendment proposes the establishment of a board similar to the advisory council which was appointed several years ago, I think at the suggestion of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG], to study the question of old-age pensions, and I think they rendered an extraordinary service and have aided the committee very greatly in the formulation of amendments.

Mr. HARRISON. They certainly have done so.

Mr. WAGNER. I shall propose an amendment calling for a similar study of the subject of unemployment insurance, because of the very many technical subjects which are involved that are constantly arising. I do not think any committee of Congress should be asked to deal with these technical subjects before they have at least the constructive and sound advice of a technical group representing employers and employees, the public, and the Government.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Has the Senator an amendment to that effect to offer to the bill?

Mr. WAGNER. The amendment is ready to be offered. I may say to the Senator, when the consideration of committee amendments shall have been completed.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. And is it expected that the proposed committee will report at the next session of Congress?

Mr. WAGNER. It is hoped that they will so report. Undoubtedly they will report just as soon as they are prepared to give their conclusions.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. The Senator understands that time is important, because there is some doubt about maintaining the integrity of these funds.

Mr. WAGNER. I do not think it is any more essential than it was essential to fix a particular time with reference to the advisory council which treated with the subject of old-age pensions. They did a very fine job in advising Congress as to the technical changes that were desirable because of the short experience that had been had with the matter. I think the Congress may very well rely upon any council that is appointed representing both employers and employees as well as the Government. I believe they will be very diligent. They will be able to advise Congress in relation to any changes that may be necessary.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Does the Senator believe the amendment he will offer will be acceptable to the committee?

Mr. HARRISON. I may say that the Finance Committee by vote has already expressed itself favorably to the chairman's acceptance of the amendment of the Senator from New York when offered.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I should like to ask the chairman of the committee [Mr. HARRISON] or the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] whether or not the text of the proposed amendment is available.

Mr. WAGNER. Yes; it is printed.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I refer to the amendment to be offered by the Senator from New York.

Mr. WAGNER. Yes.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be printed in the RECORD at this point the full text of the amendment proposed to be offered by the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] dealing with the investigation of unemployment insurance.

There being no objection, the amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. WAGNER was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. WAGNER to the bill (H. R. 6635) to amend the Social Security Act, and for other purposes, viz: On page 119, at the end of the bill, insert the following new section:

"Sec. 903. (a) There is hereby authorized to be established by the Committee on Finance of the Senate and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives, in cooperation with the Social Security Board, an Advisory Council on Unemployment Insurance, representing employers, employees, and the general public, to study and report to said committee on the following matters concerning unemployment insurance:

- "1. Scope and coverage.
- "2. Amount, character, duration, and qualification for benefits.
- "3. Advisability and nature of individual employer and State unemployment experience ratings for tax purposes.
- "4. Size, character, adequacy, and disposition of reserves.
- "5. Source, character, and method of financing.
- "6. Coordination of unemployment insurance with relief, work relief, and other programs for alleviating economic distress among the unemployed.
- "7. Pertinent experience in the operation and administration of existing unemployment-insurance laws.
- "8. Any other matters which either of the above-mentioned committees or the Social Security Board may deem relevant to the inquiry.
- "(b) The Social Security Board shall furnish all necessary technical assistance in connection with such study."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee, on page 79, lines 16 to 19.

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the next amendment reported by the committee.

The next amendment was, on page 80, line 1, after the words "not less than", to strike out "the 3 consecutive years" and insert in lieu thereof "a 1-year period", so as to read:

(1) No reduced rate of contributions to a pooled fund or to a partially pooled account is permitted to a person (or group of persons) having individuals in his (or their) employ except on the basis of his (or their) experience with respect to unemployment or other factors bearing a direct relation to unemployment risk during not less than a 1-year period immediately preceding the computation date.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I should like to have the attention of the chairman of the committee on this amendment, which is very important.

The present law fixes the period of time for determining the compensation paid by an employer in a particular State on the basis of the average over a period of 3 years. The House bill contained the same provision. The Finance Committee has changed the period to 1 year. Many persons are of the opinion that 1 year's experience is not a sufficient test of whether the employer should have his rate raised or lowered. I was about to suggest to the chairman of the committee an amendment making the period 2 years. As the House bill provided 3 years, the whole matter could then go to conference and be disposed of on a basis of not less than 2 years or more than 3 years. Personally, I feel that one year is altogether too short a time for a determination by the State of what contribution should be made by an employer.

Mr. HARRISON. So far as I am concerned, I shall be very glad to accept an amendment providing for 2 years, so that the matter may go to conference.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee on page 80, beginning in line 1.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I move to amend the part proposed to be stricken out in the committee amendment by striking out, on page 80, line 1, the word "three" and inserting in lieu thereof the word "two."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question now is on agreeing to the committee amendment, as amended.

The amendment, as amended, was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the next amendment reported by the committee.

The next amendment was, on page 80, line 3, after the word "date", to insert a comma and the words "throughout which compensation has been payable under such law"; and at the end of line 4, after the semicolon, to strike out the word "or", so as to read:

immediately preceding the computation date, throughout which compensation has been payable under such law.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 81, after line 22, to strike out:

(b) Other State standards: Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a) (1) of this section a taxpayer shall be allowed an additional credit under section 1601 (b) with respect to any reduced rate of contributions permitted by a State law if the Board finds that under such law—

(1) the amount in the unemployment fund as of the computation date equals not less than one and one-half times the highest amount paid into such fund with respect to any one of the preceding 10 calendar years or one and one-half times the highest amount of compensation paid out of such fund within any one of the preceding 10 calendar years, whichever is the greater; and

(2) compensation will be paid to any otherwise eligible individual in accordance with general standards and requirements not less favorable to such individual than the following or substantially equivalent standards:

(A) the individual will be entitled to receive, within a compensation period prescribed by State law of not more than 52 consecutive weeks, a total amount of compensation equal to not less than 16 times his weekly rate of compensation for a week of total unemployment or one-third the individual's total earnings (with respect to which contributions were required under such State law) during a base period prescribed by State law of not less than 52 consecutive weeks, whichever is less.

(B) no such individual will be required to have been totally unemployed for longer than 2 calendar weeks or two periods of 7 consecutive days each, as a condition to receiving, during the compensation period prescribed by State law, the total amount of compensation provided in subparagraph (A) of this subsection.

(C) the weekly rates of compensation payable for total unemployment in such State will be related to the full time weekly earnings (with respect to which contributions were required under such State law) of such individual during a period prescribed by State law or will be determined on the basis of such fractional part of an individual's total earnings (with respect to which contributions were required under such State law) during that calendar quarter within such period in which such earnings were highest, as will produce a reasonable approximation of such full-time weekly earnings, and will not be less than (i) $5 per week if such full-time weekly earnings were $10 or less, (ii) 50 percent of such full-time weekly earnings if they were more than $10 but not more than $30, and (iii) $15 per week if such full-time weekly earnings were more than $30, and

(D) compensation will be paid under such State law to any such individual whose earnings in any week equal less than such individual's weekly rate of compensation for total unemployment, in an amount at least equal to the difference between such individual's actual earnings with respect to such week and his weekly rate of compensation for total unemployment; and

(3) Any variations in reduced rates of contributions, as between different persons having individuals in their employ, are permitted only in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (2), (3), or (4) of subsection (a) of this section.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 84, line 12, before the word "Certification", to strike out "(c)" and insert "(b)"; in line 20, before the word "of", to strike out "or (b)"; on page 85, line 4, before the word "of", to strike out "or (b)"; in line 10, before the word "of", where it occurs the second time, to strike out "or (b)"; in line 12, after the word "subsection", to strike out "(d)" and insert "(c)"; and in line 22, before the word "of", where it occurs the second time, to strike out "or (b)", so as to read:

(b) Certification by the Board with respect to additional credit allowance—

(1) On December 31 in each taxable year the Board shall certify to the Secretary of the Treasury the law of each State (certified with respect to such year by the Board as provided in section 1603) with respect to which it finds that reduced rates of contributions were allowable with respect to such taxable year only in accordance with the provisions of subsection (a) of this section.

(2) If the Board finds that under the law of a single State (certified by the Board as provided in section 1603) more than one type of fund or account is maintained, and reduced rates of contributions to more than one type of fund or account were allowable with respect to any taxable year, and one or more of such reduced rates were allowable under conditions not fulfilling the requirements of subsection (a) of this section, the Board shall, on December 31 of such taxable year, certify to the Secretary of the Treasury only those provisions of the State law pursuant to which reduced rates of contributions were allowable with respect to such taxable year under conditions fulfilling the requirements of subsection (a) of this section, and shall, in connection therewith, designate the kind of fund or account, as defined in subsection (c) of this section, established by the provisions so certified. If the Board finds that a part of any reduced rate of contributions payable under such law or under such provisions is required to be paid into one fund or account and a part into another fund or account, the Board shall make such certification pursuant to this paragraph as it finds will assure the allowance of additional credits only with respect to that part of the reduced rate of contributions which is allowed under provisions which do fulfill the requirements of subsection (a) of this section.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 86, line 2, after the word "subsection", to strike out "(d)" and insert "(c)"; in line 4, before the word "of" where it occurs the second time, to strike out "or (b)"; and in line 13, before the word "of", to strike out "or (b)", so as to read:

(3) The Board shall, within 30 days after any State law is submitted to it for such purpose, certify to the State agency its findings with respect to reduced rates of contributions to a type of fund or account, as defined in subsection (c) of this section, which are allowable under such State law only in accordance with the provisions of subsection (a) of this section. After making such findings, the Board shall not withhold its certification to the Secretary of the Treasury of such State law, or of the provisions thereof with respect to which such findings were made, for any taxable year pursuant to paragraph (1) or (2) of this subsection unless, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State agency, the Board finds the State law no longer contains the provisions specified in subsection (a) of this section or the State has, with respect to such taxable year, failed to comply substantially with any such provision.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 86, line 16, before the word "Definitions", to strike out "(d)" and insert "(c)", so as to read:

(c) Definitions: As used in this section.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 89, line 7, before the word "any", to strike out "1939" and insert "1940", and in line 12, after the numeral "1", to strike out "1939" and insert "1940", so as to read:

(6) Balance: The term "balance", with respect to a reserve account or a guaranteed employment account, means the amount standing to the credit of the account as of the computation date; except that, if subsequent to January 1, 1940, any moneys have been paid into or credited to such account other than payments thereto by persons having individuals in their employ, such term shall mean the amount in such account as of the computation date less the total of such other moneys paid into or credited to such account subsequent to January 1, 1940.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 89, after line 22, to strike out:

(b) The provisions of paragraph (1) of section 1602 (a) of the Internal Revenue Code, as amended, shall be applicable to paragraph (2) of such section only after December 31, 1941; and shall in no event be applicable to paragraph (4) of such section in force prior to January 1, 1942.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 91, line 22, after the word "the" where it occurs the second time, to strike out "taxes imposed by sections 1410 and" and insert "tax imposed by section", so as to read:

(b) The legislature of any State may require any instrumentality of the United States (except such as are (A) wholly owned by the United States, or (B) exempt from the tax imposed by section 1600 by virtue of any other provision of law), and the individuals in its employ, to make contributions to an unemployment fund under a State unemployment compensation law approved by the Board under section 1603 and (except as provided in section 5240 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, and as modified by subsection (c) of this section) to comply otherwise with such law.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 94, line 6, after the word "were", to strike out "in his employ" and insert "employed by him in employment", so as to read:

SEC. 1607. Definitions.

When used in this subchapter—

(a) Employer: The term "employer" does not include any person unless on each of some 20 days during the taxable year, each day being a different calendar week, the total number of individuals who were employed by him in employment for some portion of the day (whether or not at the same moment of time) was eight or more.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 94, line 25, after the word "insurance", to insert "or annuities", and on page 95, line 4, after the word "disability", to insert a comma and "or (D) death, provided the employee (i) has not the option to receive, instead of provision for such death benefit, any part of such payment or, if such death benefit is insured, any part of the premiums (or contributions to premiums) paid by his employer, and (ii) has not the right, under the provisions of the plan or system or policy of insurance providing for such death benefit, to assign such benefit, or to receive a cash consideration in lieu of such benefit either upon his withdrawal from the plan or system providing for such benefit or upon termination of such plan or system or policy of insurance or of his employment with such employer", so as to read:

(2) The amount of any payment made to, or on behalf of, an employee under a plan or system established by an employer which makes provision for his employees generally or for a class or classes of his employees (including any amount paid by an employer for insurance or annuities, or into a fund, to provide for any such payment), on account of (A) retirement, or (B) sickness or accident disability, or (C) medical and hospitalization expenses in connection with sickness or accident disability, or (D) death, provided the employee (i) has not the option to receive, instead of provision for such death benefit, any part of such payment or, if such death benefit is insured, any part of the premiums (or contributions to premiums) paid by his employer, and (ii) has not the right, under the provisions of the plan or system or policy of insurance providing for such death benefit, to assign such benefit, or to receive a cash consideration in lieu of such benefit either upon his withdrawal from the plan or system providing for such benefit or upon termination of such plan or system or policy of insurance or of his employment with such employer.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 98, line 11, after the word "organization", to insert "exempt from income tax under section 101 (1)"; so as to read:

(B) Service performed in the employ of an agricultural or horticultural organization exempt from income tax under section 101 (1).

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 98, line 25, after the word "or", to insert "their", and on page 99, line 3, before the word "employees", to insert "officers or"; so as to read:

(D) Service performed in the employ of a voluntary employees' beneficiary association providing for the payment of life, sick, accident, or other benefits to the members of such association or their dependents or their designated beneficiaries, if (i) admission to membership in such association is limited to individuals who are officers or employees of the United States Government, and (ii) no part of the net earnings of such association inures (other than through such payments) to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 100, line 13, after the word "State", to strike out "law." and insert "law"; so as to read:

(13) Service performed as a student nurse in the employ of a hospital or a nurses' training school by an individual who is enrolled and is regularly attending classes in a nurses' training school chartered or approved pursuant to State law; and service performed as an interne in the employ of a hospital by an individual who has completed a 4-year course in a medical school chartered or approved pursuant to State law.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 100, after line 13, to insert:

(15) Service performed by an individual under the age of 18 in the delivery or distribution of newspapers or shopping news, not including delivery or distribution to any point for subsequent delivery or distribution.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] if his interpretation of the amendment on page 100, beginning at line 14 and continuing down to and including line 18, is the same as my own. It is my understanding that the committee amendment just referred to, which excludes from employment service performed by insurance agents, does not change the status of insurance agents generally under other titles of the bill or under the present law.

Mr. HARRISON. I think the Senator is exactly correct.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee on page 100, after line 13.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 101, line 12, after the word "performed", to strike out "for an employer"; and in line 13, after the word "period", to insert "by an employee for the person employing him", so as to read:

This subsection shall not be applicable with respect to services performed in a pay period by an employee for the person employing him, where any of such service is excepted by paragraph (9) of subsection (c).

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 103, line 8, before the word "cultivating", to strike out "connection with"; in the same line, after the word "in", to strike out "connection with"; in line 10, after the word "raising", to insert "shearing"; in line 11, before the word "and", to insert "caring for, training"; in line 12, after the word "animals", to insert "and other wildlife"; in line 15, after the word "management", to insert "conservation, improvement"; and in line 16, after the word "farm", to insert "and its tools and equipment"; and in line 24, after the word "cotton", to insert a comma and "or in connection with the operation or maintenance of ditches, canals, reservoirs, or waterways used exclusively for supplying and storing water for farming purposes", so as to read:

(1) On a farm, in the employ of any person, in cultivating the soil, or in raising or harvesting any agricultural or horticultural commodity, including the raising, shearing, feeding, caring for, training, and management of livestock, bees, poultry, and fur-bearing animals and other wildlife.

(2) In the employ of the owner or tenant or other operator of a farm, in connection with the operation, management, conservation, improvement, or maintenance of such farm and its tools and equipment, if the major part of such service is performed on a farm.

(3) In connection with the production or harvesting of maple sirup or maple sugar or any commodity defined as an agricultural commodity in section 15 (g) of the Agricultural Marketing Act, as amended, or in connection with the raising or harvesting of mushrooms, or in connection with the hatching of poultry, or in connection with the ginning of cotton, or in connection with the operation or maintenance of ditches, canals, reservoirs, or waterways used exclusively for supplying and storing water for farming purposes.

The next amendment was, on page 104, line 4, before the word "drying", to insert "planting", so as to read:

(4) In handling, planting, drying, packing, packaging, processing, freezing, grading, storing, or delivering to storage or to market or to a carrier for transportation to market, any agricultural or horticultural commodity; but only if such service is performed as an incident to ordinary farming operations or, in the case of fruits and vegetables, as an incident to the preparation of such fruits or vegetables for market. The provisions of this paragraph shall not be deemed to be applicable with respect to service performed in connection with commercial canning or commercial freezing or in connection with any agricultural or horticultural commodity after its delivery to a terminal market for distribution for consumption.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Title VII—Amendments to Title X of the Social Security Act," on page 105, line 7, after the word "administration" and the parenthesis, to strike out "other than those relating to selection, tenure of office, and compensation of personnel" and insert "including, after January 1, 1940, methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis", so as to read:

SEC. 701. (a) Clause (5) of section 1002 (a) of the Social Security Act is amended to read as follows: "(5) provide such methods of administration including, after January 1, 1940, methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis) as are found by the Board to be necessary for the proper and efficient operation of the plan."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Title VIII—Amendments to Title XI of the Social Security Act," on page 108, line 18, after the numeral "1", to strike out "1940"; at the beginning of line 19, to strike out "(a) clause" and insert "1940, paragraph"; and in line 23, before the word "section", to strike out "including" and insert "except", so as to read:

SEC. 801. Effective January 1, 1940, paragraph (1) of section 1101 (a) of such act is amended to read as follows: "(1) the term State (except when used in section 531) includes Alaska, Hawaii, and the District of Columbia, and when used in titles V and VI of such act (except section 531) includes Puerto Rico."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the top of page 109, to strike out:

(b) section 1101 (a) is further amended by striking out paragraph (6) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(6) The term 'employee' includes an officer of a corporation. It also includes any individual who, for remuneration (by way of commission or otherwise) under an agreement or agreements contemplating a series of similar transactions, secures applications or orders or otherwise personally performs services as a salesman for a person in furtherance of such person's trade or business (but who is not an employee of such person under the law of master and servant); unless (A) such services are performed as a part of such individual's business as a broker or factor and, in furtherance of such business as broker or factor, similar services are performed for other persons and one or more employees of such broker or factor perform a substantial part of such services, or (B) such services are not in the course of such individual's principal trade, business, or occupation.

"(7) The term 'employer' includes any person for whom an individual performs any service of whatever nature as his employee."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Title IX—Miscellaneous Provisions", on page 115, after line 16, to insert:

(i) No part of the tax imposed by the Federal Unemployment Tax Act or by title IX of the Social Security Act, whether or not the taxpayer is entitled to a credit against such tax, shall be deemed to be a penalty or forfeiture within the meaning of section 57j of the act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, as amended.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 116, after line 3, to insert:

SEC. 904. Effective January 1, 1940, section 1428 of the Internal Revenue Code is amended by striking out "paragraphs (9) and (10)" and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraph (9)."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 116, after line 7, to insert:

SEC. 905. (a) No service performed at any time during the calendar year 1939 by any individual shall, by reason of the individual having attained the age of 65, be excepted from employment as defined in section 1426 (b) of subchapter A of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code. Paragraph (4) of such section (which excepts such service from employment) is repealed, effective January 1, 1939. The tax on employees imposed by section 1400 of such subchapter and the tax on employers imposed by section 1410 of such subchapter, and the provisions of law applicable to such taxes, shall apply with respect to remuneration paid after December 31, 1938, for service which, by reason of the enactment of this section, constitutes employment as so defined.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no employer shall be liable for the tax on any employee, imposed by section 1400 of such subchapter (unless the employer collects such tax from the employee), with respect to service performed before the date of enactment of this act which constitutes employment by reason of the enactment of this section, except to the extent that the employer has under his control at any time on or after the ninetieth day after such date amounts of remuneration earned at any time by the employee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 117, after line 5, to insert:

SEC. 906. If the Social Security Board finds with respect to any State that the first regular session of such State's legislature which began after June 25, 1938, and adjourned prior to 30 days after the enactment of this act (1) had not made provision to authorize and direct the Secretary of the Treasury, prior to 30 days after the close of such session or July 1, 1939, whichever date is later, to transfer from its account in the unemployment trust fund to the railroad unemployment insurance account in the Unemployment Trust Fund an amount equal to such State's "preliminary amount," or to authorize and direct the Secretary of the Treasury, prior to 30 days after the close of such session or January 1, 1940, whichever date is later, to transfer from its account in the Unemployment Trust Fund to the railroad unemployment insurance account in the Unemployment Trust Fund an amount equal to such State's "liquidating amount," or both; and (2) had not made provision for financing the administration of its unemployment-compensation law during the period with respect to which grants therefor under section 302 of the Social Security Act are required under section 13 of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act to be withheld by the Social Security Board, notwithstanding the provisions of section 13 (d) of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act the Social Security Board shall not begin to withhold from certification to the Secretary of the Treasury for payment to such State the amounts determined by it pursuant to section 302 of the Social Security Act and to certify to the Secretary of the Treasury for payment into the railroad unemployment-insurance account the amount so withheld from such State, as provided in section 13 of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, until after the thirtieth day after the close of such State's first regular or special session of its legislature which begins after the date of enactment of this act and after the Social Security Board finds that such State had not, by the thirtieth day after the close of such legislative session, authorized and directed the Secretary of the Treasury to transfer from such State's account in the Unemployment Trust Fund to the railroad unemployment insurance account in the Unemployment Trust Fund such State's "preliminary amount" plus interest thereon at 2½ percent per annum from the date the amount thereof is determined by the Social Security Board, and such State's "liquidating amount" plus interest thereon at 2½ percent per annum from the date the amount thereof is determined by the Social Security Board. Notwithstanding the provisions of section 13 (e) of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, any withdrawal by such State from its account in the Unemployment Trust Fund for purposes other than the payment of compensation of the whole or any part of amounts so withheld from certification with respect to such State pursuant to this act shall be deemed to constitute a breach of the conditions set forth in sections 303 (a) (5) of the Social Security Act and 1603 (a) (4) of the Internal Revenue Code. The terms "preliminary amount" and "liquidating amount," as used herein, shall have the meanings defined in section 13 of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 119, after line 12, to insert:

SEC. 907. In addition to any other deductions made under section 203 of the Social Security Act, as amended, deductions shall be made from any primary insurance benefit or benefits to which an individual is entitled or from any other insurance benefit payable with respect to such individual's wages, until such deductions total 1 percent of any wages paid him for services performed in 1939, and subsequent to his attaining age 65, with respect to which the taxes imposed by section 1400 of the Internal Revenue Code have not been deducted by his employer from his wages or paid by such employer.

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That completes the committee amendments.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment which I ask to have stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment offered by the Senator from Texas will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 3 it is proposed to strike out lines 5 to 20, both inclusive, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

PAYMENT TO STATES

SEC. 3. (a) From the sums appropriated therefor the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay to each State which has an approved plan for old-age assistance, for each quarter, beginning with the quarter commencing January 1, 1940, (1) an amount, which shall be used exclusively as old-age assistance, equal to the sum of the following proportions of the total amounts expended during such quarter as old-age assistance under the State plan with respect to each needy individual who at the time of such expenditure is 65 years of age or older and is not an inmate of a public institution, not counting so much of such expenditure with respect to any such individual for any month as exceeds $40:

(A) Two-thirds of such expenditures, not counting so much of any expenditure with respect to any month as exceeds the product of $15 multiplied by the total number of such individuals who received old-age assistance for such month, plus

(B) One-half of the amount by which such expenditures exceed the maximum which may be counted under clause (A), and (2) 5 percent of the amount of the payment under clause (1) of this subsection, which shall be used for paying the costs of administering the State plan or for old-age assistance, or both, and for no other purpose.

On page 4, line 8, strike out "one-half" and insert in lieu thereof "the State's proportionate share."

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado in the chair). Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. CONNALLY. If the Senator will permit me to state the effect of the amendment, I shall then be glad to yield.

Mr. President, the effect of this amendment is to provide that in the matter of old-age assistance or old-age pensions the Federal Government shall make a contribution of $2 to the State's $1, up to $15. Above $15 there shall be an equal contribution. The purpose of the amendment is to provide Federal benefits, or at least to offer encouragement to the weaker and poorer States, in order that they may make adequate contribution for old-age assistance.

I now yield to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I presented to the committee for its consideration an amendment having in mind the same object as that now presented by the Senator from Texas. The amendment I offered was drafted in accordance with the suggestion which had been made by the officials of the Social Security Board and by others who have given thought to this subject, and provided that the contribution on the part of the States should be based upon a variable formula, so that the States with a low per capita income would contribute an amount related to the percentage that the per capita income of the State bore to the national income.

Mr. CONNALLY. I suggest to the Senator that his amendment provided a two-thirds maximum.

Mr. BYRNES. Yes. In the amendment which I offered, as well as in the amendment of the Senator from Texas, as I understand, there is a provision that in no case shall the contribution by the Federal Government amount to more than two-thirds, nor shall the contribution of the State government amount to less than one-third.

The committee, after considering the amendment and also the amendment offered by the Senator from Texas failed to adopt either of them. It is my opinion that the amendment of the Senator from Texas will receive greater support than the amendment offered by me. Because I am in favor of the objective, I am, therefore, not going to offer the amendment I offered to the committee. Instead I am going to support the amendment of the Senator from Texas.

I desire to call the attention of the Senate to the situation confronting us. Under the existing law, though the Federal Government is contributing 50 percent of any amount not in excess of $30, the average amount paid by the various States of the Union as of December 31 was $19.55. The amount paid ranges all the way from $32.43 in California to $6.15 in Arkansas.

Under the circumstances, the provision of the bill as it passed the House and was reported by the committee increasing to $20 the contribution to be made by the Federal Government, conditioned upon the State appropriating $20, is, in my opinion, absolutely ineffective and can only result in misleading many of the aged who are in need throughout the country. Manifestly, if the States cannot now contribute one-half of $30, it will be impossible for them to contribute one-half of $40. When only one State in the Union contributes $15; namely, the State of California, I can see no justification for the hope that by merely increasing the maximum contribution of the Federal Government in the statute we can thereby bring about an increased payment to the needy old people throughout the country.

Today when we talk about $30 old-age assistance in the Congress, it is almost a hopeless task to explain the situation to the man in Arkansas who says, "I get an average of $6.15 a month," and so on, throughout the other States where the payment is less than $15 a month.

As a member of the unemployment committee, I devoted some time to the investigation of this subject. Our committee was of the opinion that if old-age assistance was really to be of the service it was intended to be, we should make more adequate provision for the aged needy. So long as payments of $6.15 or $8.10 a month are made in the form of old-age assistance the recipients will still be in need, will still resort to the municipality, county, or State for relief, and the taxpayers, through another agency, will contribute to their relief. So long as we are paying this inadequate sum, we will find the local officials who certify eligibles for the W. P. A. rolls certifying the old man and the old woman who is still able to work for a job on W. P. A.

That costs the taxpayers an average of $1,000 a year, including materials, labor, and overhead. Therefore, from a mere cold-blooded view, considering the expense to the taxpayer, the wise thing for us to do is to contribute such an amount as will make it possible for the States to provide a sum sufficiently adequate to remove the old people from the field of other forms of relief.

The amendment prepared by the Senator from Texas provides for a contribution by the Federal Government of two-thirds of the sum paid by the State to the recipient in the State, the two-thirds being based upon and limited to the average amount paid, not in excess of $15. It would mean that if today in a State the sum of $15 is paid, the Federal Government contributing $7.50 and the local government $7.50, under this amendment the Federal Government would contribute $10 and the local government $5, taking the average. That would mean an additional $2.50 per man per month contributed by the Federal Government. On all over $15 the contribution would be, as under the existing law, on the 50-50 basis. The estimate of additional cost is $80,000,000 in excess of the amount now paid by the Federal Government.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The $80,000,000 estimate, as I understand, is based upon the maintenance of the existing total, where the system which the Senator contemplates would undoubtedly increase the total, would it not?

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I am unable to answer the Senator's question as satisfactorily as I should like to do. I must say that the figure is contained in a letter written to the Senator from Texas. It was my understanding that, based upon the existing roll of one million eight hundred and some thousand, it would cost only $63,000,000. I understand the letter to the Senator from Texas states that the estimate of $80,000,000 is "an intermediate estimate." By that is meant that the estimate is $60,000,000, based upon the existing roll, and, if they have an estimate as to the addition that would result, it would be somewhere about $100,000,000, and when the chairman of the Board refers to "an intermediate estimate" he has taken 50 percent of the estimated increase.

Obviously, in justice to the officials of the Board, it should be said that it is impossible for them to estimate accurately the result of an increase on the rolls. I think, therefore, that it is not unfair for them to estimate $20,000,000 as the increase resulting from the additional number of people who would be granted relief.

Of course, in various States there are various degrees of liberality in placing aged persons upon the roll. It depends upon the attitude of State officials. I think, however, the figure I have stated would be a fair estimate. If it is, I submit to the Senate, that if we are to admit a dual responsibility in this matter, if we admit that the Federal Government owes a responsibility with reference to the care of the aged as well as do the States, then the Federal Government cannot entirely divest itself of that responsibility and say that it will be content to be a partner in the payment of $6.15 or $6.50 or $7 or $8 in a State.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I have observed that the Senator has here a very interesting table, apparently taken from the hearings of the Committee on Unemployment, of which he was chairman, which lists the average payment received by each old-age beneficiary in each of the several States for the period ended December 1938, and that the averages run from a maximum of $32.43 in the State of California to a minimum of $6.15 in the State of Arkansas. I ask the Senator if my understanding is correct that the amount of the payment received by each beneficiary is dependent upon the State law and not upon the Federal law?

Mr. BYRNES. Of course, that is correct; and that is what I was addressing myself to, that, while we admit a dual responsibility, we leave to the States the entire determination of the amount. The result of the $10.10 contribution is that the United States Government pays to the individual in the State 10 cents a day—one thin dime per day to take care of aged and feeble persons. The States are likewise responsible for that, and, if anything, they are more responsible, because they fix the amount. Nevertheless, I submit that, where there is a dual responsibility, the Government of the United States can consider whether or not that is a condition that should be permitted to continue.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Then I should like to ask the Senator a further question. This list, then, is not a list showing the amount received by each beneficiary, but it is a list showing the amount of the payment by the Federal Government?

Mr. BYRNES. Oh, no; it shows the average amount paid in each State to the beneficiary. When it shows the amount of $6 and some cents, it means that the average payment to the individual in Arkansas is $6, in South Carolina $7, or whatever it is, and so forth.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Then, under the bill as the committee reported it, the Federal contribution would be one-half of the sum shown in this table?

Mr. BYRNES. That is correct.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I think it might be well to have the table inserted in the RECORD at this point.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I accept the suggestion of the Senator from Wyoming, and ask that the table be inserted in the RECORD.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I now desire to ask the Senator another question. What differences are there in the laws of the various States which account for these differences in the payments?

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, of course, the laws of the States simply provide for the reduced payments in the large number of States indicated on the list.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Is it solely a question of the inability of the States to raise by taxation sufficient funds to meet the maximum allowed by the United States law?

Mr. BYRNES. That is the only other point to which I desire to refer. That question, of course, has been discussed at some length. The result of my investigation convinces me that it is due to the inability of the States to make larger contributions.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield to the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. I should like the Senator to refer, for example, to Illinois, the second richest State in the Union. It is now paying a pension of $19.10. Does the Senator contend that Illinois cannot pay more than $19.10 to the aged persons of that State?

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I have before me the table. The hearings contain, opposite the table showing the amounts paid in the various States, a table showing the per capita income by States. According to that table, Illinois ranks tenth in the list of States in per capita income, and does not rank second in the list of States.

Mr. BYRD. I will say to the Senator that in wealth it does rank second.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I know the Senator's views on the subject, because the matter was discussed in committee. The question as to what constitutes the ability of a State to pay is to my mind best settled by the question of per capita income according to the statement of the Department of Commerce issued about 6 weeks ago. The figures to which I refer are based upon that investigation by the Department of Commerce, following the most scientific methods known to the officials of the United States Government at this time. They show Illinois as tenth in the list. That, I contend, is the best evidence of ability to pay; but I want to say that the figures speak for themselves. I hope Members of the Senate will read these figures in the RECORD in the morning.

There are two or three States whose per capita income is high, but which have made a relatively small contribution. Illinois is not the best illustration from that viewpoint, as I see it; but this situation cannot be judged by any one State or two States. We must take the list; and if we will follow the list we shall find that according to the per capita income, as determined by the Department of Commerce, the payments of old-age assistance to the beneficiaries are very closely in accord with the per capita income of the States. To my mind, the list shows that, so far as the States have been able to pay, they are paying; and there is no question in my mind, in view of the sentiment throughout the country today on this question that when the States are able to pay they are willing to pay for this particular cause.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield to the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. To revert to Illinois, the per capita income, to which the Senator has referred, is in that State considerably above the average. I ask the Senator if he thinks $9.50 is all that Illinois could contribute to the aged persons of that State, and all that she should be expected to contribute. The figures which I obtained from the Department of Commerce show that the average per capita income in Illinois is $596, and the average for the country is $515.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I have said and I will repeat to the Senator from Virginia that I see that he and I are never going to agree on these figures. He doubtless will have a chance to address the Senate on the subject, and he can put into the RECORD the figures he has. I have put into the RECORD the figures which have been furnished me. The Senate may read them, and, as usual, they will have to do what I have had to do—take the figures that they like better.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the Senator has not answered my question. Does he think the great, rich State of Illinois has reached the maximum amount it can pay to its old-age pensioners?

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I do not know the conditions existing in the State of Illinois. I should not want to express an opinion on the basis of the list. Before the Appropriations Committee I heard many statements made in behalf of the people of Illinois. I do not know the conditions. The Senator himself will have to answer that question, because I cannot answer it for him any better than I have done.

Mr. President, the list shows that not only Illinois but the other States of the Union are not contributing the maximum.

Then I ask the Senate, Is it right, is it fair, to say to the old people of the country, "We want to show you what we are going to do for you; we will increase the amount of your monthly payment from $30 to $40," and let every old man and old woman sit down at home and read about the passage of this bill, and think $40 is coming to them, and await the receipt of the $40? They will wait a long time, judging from the action of the various States of the Union.

I know what has happened to the States, and every Member of the Senate knows. Gradually, the Federal Government has usurped the field of taxation, and has left to the States relatively few taxes. In most States what is left consists of taxes upon real estate. There comes a time when the farm and the home can no longer be taxed sufficiently to raise enough money to match the $20 which is offered by the United States Government. We may go home and say, "We offered on the part of the Federal Government to give you $20; it is not our fault that you have not got it, and that you are getting only $8 or $10"; but somebody is going to understand the situation. The situation is that instead of saying $40 we might as well say $400, for the beneficiaries would come just as near getting $400 as most of the States of the Union are going to be able to pay $40.

We can do a practical thing. We can adopt this amendment, and at least insure that in the States there will be paid an average of $15. That is the average. A State may pay one individual $20, and it may pay another individual $15. The individual receiving $15 may have a son who can contribute to some extent to his assistance, and the other individual may not, and he will get $20; but the payments will average $15, and if the average is $15 all that the Federal Government pays in addition to the present amount is $2.50 per man or per woman on this list. I submit that it is not an unreasonable thing to ask, and it will make the States of the Union contribute something approaching an adequate amount.

Mr. CONNALLY obtained the floor.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. MILLER. I do not desire to occupy the time of the Senator from Texas, nor to speak unduly within his time; but since the State from which I come occupies the position that it does in reference to the payment of old-age pensions, I feel that it is incumbent on me to say a few words.

I should be the last man in the Senate to destroy State responsibility for old-age pensions. I do not agree with the group who think that the obligation should be assumed entirely by the Federal Government. I think the State owes an obligation to its citizens which it should discharge. I do not want to destroy State responsibility. But in States like Arkansas—and this is not a pleasant thing for me to say, it is not a source of gratification—the people who are qualified under the State law and in accordance with the Federal law have been receiving pensions of approximately $6.15 a month. If, as the Senator from South Carolina has so well said, this is a Federal responsibility, I merely wish to submit the one proposition to the Senate, that those people are just as much citizens of the United States as are the citizens of any other State, and contribute as much in proportion to their financial ability to the upkeep and to the maintenance of the Federal Government. Then the responsibility of the Federal Government likewise ought to be discharged in Arkansas in the same proportion as it is discharged in other States.

The amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina, in my opinion, was more just than the pending amendment, but the pending amendment will go a long way toward destroying the inequality which exists among citizens of the United States.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator from Texas yield so that I may ask the Senator from Arkansas a question?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. What is the experience of the Senator's State in matching other funds that are on a 50-50 basis? Is the Senator's State meeting the other invitations from the Federal Government in full?

Mr. MILLER. Not to the extent of one dime. Every dime that has been spent in Arkansas during the last 7 years in the construction of roads has been Federal money. Today we owe $144,000,000 in road bonds. There is not a single fund from the Federal Government that is being matched as we would like to match it in Arkansas.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Would the Senator say that the same argument would apply to changing the basis of matching, for instance, in connection with roads?

Mr. MILLER. I think so.

Mr. VANDENBERG. In other words, if we are changing, are we not setting the precedent for a complete change?

Mr. MILLER. I think the Committee on Unemployment suggested the best solution of the problem; that is, handling it on a variable basis, depending upon the per capita income in the various States.

I beg the pardon of the Senator from Texas, because I do not want to monopolize his time, and I am not going to take the time of the Senate to discuss the position my State occupies, but I wish to submit this one proposition, that the Federal Government, if it owes its citizens anything, owes them a semblance of equality.

I thank the Senator from Texas.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator from Texas yield?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. HATCH. I have been unavoidably detained from the Chamber, and I do not know what amendment is being considered. I merely wish to ask the Senator from Texas whether the amendment he proposed to offer is now being discussed.

Mr. CONNALLY. It is. I wish to thank very deeply the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES], who has made such a valuable contribution to the discussion. I wish to say that the Committee on Unemployment, of which he is chairman, has made an exhaustive study of the question involved. The Senator's original amendment had much appeal and a great deal of merit.

My reason for offering the amendment in the form in which it is now presented, containing a definite percentage, was because of the variable factors, and the guesses and estimates which would have to be resorted to under the amendment of the Senator from South Carolina. Some actuary of the department each year would have to determine, not from accurate data, but from his imagination, frequently, the relative incomes of the people in the different States, and we would always have a considerable discussion on the floor of the Senate along those lines. So I concluded that it would probably be administratively better to have a definite ratio. I wish to thank the Senator from Arkansas for his statement along the same line.

Mr. President, why did we ever pass an old-age pension law? What business is it of the Federal Government? Why should not the States attend to that? Why should they not determine how much they will pay their old people? What business has the Federal Government in this problem at all?

I do not suppose there was a single State in the Union which had an old-age pension system before the Federal Government first came forward and said, in effect, "You ought to have one, and we are going to make you have one by adopting a Federal old-age pension system; and if we cannot persuade you to do likewise, we are going to offer you a little inducement."

A Senator sitting near me says "bribery." Well, call it bribery. That is the point I am trying to make. The Federal Government had to determine the best policy under which to put the system into effect, and if it could not persuade them, it would toll them by saying "You see this money. You will get some of it if you will come in. If you do not come in, you will not get any."

The point I am trying to drive home is that the Federal Government is responsible for this system. The Federal Government decreed that the policy of giving something to dependent aged persons in the United States should come into existence.

Why did we do that? Did we have any obligation to do it? It is said, "Yes, the Federal Government owes an obligation to all of the aged people who are dependent, who are in need. It owes them the duty of seeing that they get something toward relieving their need."

Very well. Where are these citizens? They are not all in Washington; they are not all in the Senate; they are not all in the House of Representatives. They are scattered throughout 48 States of the Union. They are all the same kind of citizens. They are all in need. They are all sovereigns in some State, in some Commonwealth.

What would we think of a government which said, "Well, now, there is a good citizen down in Arkansas who is in need. The Federal Government owes him something. But how much does it owe him? It owes him only $3.08. There is another citizen in California in need. How much does the Federal Government owe him? It owes him $15." He is the same kind of a citizen, in the same condition, in the same country, under the same flag. But we give one of these citizens, the one in Arkansas, just $3.08, and the other one, in California, $15. Is that right?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Is there not another possible implication, that if this continues indefinitely there will be an attraction to the States which are able now to pay more; that ultimately a larger burden will be placed upon them; and that then the possibility will arise that those States which are now able to pay more will not be able to pay the amount they are now paying? Thus an additional responsibility will be placed upon the States which are able at the present time to pay more?

Mr. CONNALLY. I thank the Senator. I can well envisage that if California, with all its other attractions, had a generous old-age assistance law, it would catch the old as it now catches the young.

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. LEE. Would the Senator's amendment completely correct that situation, or merely help to correct it?

Mr. CONNALLY. I do not think it would completely meet it. I do not think it would solve it entirely.

Mr. LEE. It would help?

Mr. CONNALLY. It would help, of course. It would help the very lowest ones, the ones at the bottom, where the need is the greatest. After a pension gets as high as $15, then the State and the Federal Government, under the amendment which I have offered, would share the burden equally.

Mr. LEE. If the situation is to be completely corrected, the pension will have to be paid by the Federal Government without regard to the States matching at all, will it not?

Mr. CONNALLY. Not necessarily. I do not agree to that. I doubt whether the country would stand for that. I do not believe that would be quite right, because we let the States administer the law in the first place. If a State is going to administer the law and is going to specify the recipient of the fund, it ought to have some financial responsibility, because it is much easier to divide other people's money than one's own. So, I think the State ought to be forced to contribute, and thereby have a feeling of financial responsibility.

What would Senators think of a pension law, not an old-age-pension law, especially, but any kind of a pension law—a military-pension law, for instance, for men who are in the service—if we should say, "We are going to give pensions to deserving soldiers, whether they fought or whether they stayed at home, but if one of them lives in Arkansas he is going to get $3.08, but another soldier who lives in California will get $15"? Would Senators vote for such a measure? Would they say that simply because a soldier happens to live in Colorado he should receive $12 out of the Federal Treasury in the form of a pension, when another soldier who had stood by his side in battle ranks, and who now lives in Arkansas, would get $3.08? That is the question involved.

I will say to the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. LEE] that the amendment is in conformity with the original spirit of the law, because our theory was that we would persuade the States, we would induce them, we would coax them to adopt a policy which they have never heretofore adopted of their own motion, and so by making provision for the payment of two-thirds, up to $15, we are helping States such as Arkansas. Arkansas pays only $3.08 now. If the amendment is adopted Arkansas will pay $5, if they have to go out and hijack the taxpayers to get it, because those who run for office, those who run for governor or other offices there will very wisely conclude, "We can raise it to as much as $5 because we will then get a larger amount." I do no violence to my own opinions or views when I say that the policy of this law is to coerce, to coax, to persuade the States, to influence them, to bring them to a state of mind, whatever one may want to call it. That is what this law was passed for. Why? Because up to the time this law was enacted no State, so far as I know, had an old-age-pension system. If there was any State which had one I should like to be corrected. No Senator answers.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. The State of Washington did have.

Mr. CONNALLY. May I ask the Senator how much it paid?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. It did not pay very much. The State law was enacted in 1933, prior to the time the Federal law was enacted.

Mr. CONNALLY. It did not operate very long?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. No. And I will say that probably it was in contemplation that the Federal Government would later adopt such a law.

Mr. CONNALLY. I knew that the State of Washington was enterprising. It saw what was coming, and it beat the Federal Government to the gun by a few months. Be that as it may, I still will let my statement stand, because the system had not begun to operate well before the Federal Government entered the field. But, by and large, the Federal Government is entirely responsible for the States adopting the system of old-age pensions. If we have an adequate sense of our obligations, if we have sufficient sense of duty to the citizens to pass this law, and to appropriate the millions of dollars which we have been appropriating, and to coerce the States into appropriating an equal number of millions of dollars, why should we let the States dominate the entire system? That is what we are doing. We are saying to the State, "We will only pay to your needy what you pay them." Do not we owe any duty to the needy man himself? And if we owe him any duty, it is not dependent on what the State does for him. If the Federal Government owes the citizen an obligation, it owes it to him directly. The Federal Government does not operate through the State government, but every responsibility of the Federal Government to the citizen is direct. Every duty that a citizen owes to the Federal Government is direct. It does not pass through the State.

The duty that I owe my Government in time of war does not go through any State. It is due to the Federal Government. There are two sovereignties, each operating over the same territory at the same moment, and the citizen is a dual citizen. He is not simply a citizen of California, but he is a citizen of California and also a citizen of the United States, and what he owes unto the Federal Government he must pay to the Federal Government. We do not pay taxes to the State and then have the State contribute those taxes to the Federal Government. Whenever a citizen pays a Federal tax he pays it directly to the Federal Government, and he pays his other taxes to the State government, and the reverse of that proposition is just as sound today as the day when the Constitution was ratified by the first nine States of the original Union.

Whatever duty the Federal Government owes to a citizen it owes to him not because he happens to be a citizen of a State but because he is a citizen of the United States, and it has no right to shirk its responsibility and say, "Because you belong in this State the measure of our Federal duty to you, the measure of our Federal obligation, will not be a measure that we set, but it will be a measure that your State sets, and if your State is unfair to you, if it is unable to raise the money, if it is not sufficiently wise to raise an adequate amount, neither will the Federal Government do justice to you. If your State is unfair to you, if it is indifferent to your wants and your needs, the Federal Government will copy the State in that respect, and we will be indifferent also." If that is to be the Federal attitude, why did we ever pass the original bill?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CONNALLY. I will yield in just a moment. If we wanted the States to do as they saw fit about old-age pensions and determine how much they would give, why did we not let the matter alone, and let each State raise the question and decide it for itself?

I now yield to the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. If the old-age pension is considered to be unjust by the people living in the States, do they not have the power to elect to office those who will treat them justly?

Mr. CONNALLY. In theory that is fine. I will say to the Senator from Virginia that I am not trying to agitate. God knows there is already sufficient agitation about old-age pensions. The amendment I am now discussing is most moderate. I am not in favor of unloading all this obligation on the Federal Government. The Senator from Virginia heard me say that so long as the States are going to administer the system they ought to make some contribution of a financial character, and ought to feel the reins of authority and the bonds of responsibility.

The Senator from Virginia quoted statistics with reference to Illinois. I am not particularly concerned about Illinois, but if Illinois is rich and able to pay old-age pensions and does not pay enough, if an increased amount comes out of the Federal Treasury, Illinois will be benefited by that much. If it has such a high income, if it is so rich, then the Federal Government will reach in and get a little more of the money of Illinois and pay it to the people who need it.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. HATCH. I was going to suggest to the Senator with respect to the discussion of the unfairness of individual States to their citizens, that I happen to come from one of the poorer States, a State whose old people receive but little in the way of old-age assistance. That is not due to any unfair attitude on the part of the State officials.

Mr. CONNALLY. No. Let me say to the Senator that some of my deductions were, of course, hypothetical.

Mr. HATCH. Yes; I understand that perfectly. But I merely wanted to put in the Record that, at least so far as my State is concerned, the small payments are due simply to the fact that the State is unable to make larger payments. Should the people in New Mexico be discriminated against because of the poverty of the State? That is the situation.

Mr. CONNALLY. I thank the Senator. I think the Senator from New Mexico has put his finger right squarely on the most delicate and sensitive spot in the whole problem.

The Senator from Virginia talked about the great State of Illinois being rich, and that it ought to contribute more to old-age pensions. That is probably true. Who made the State of Illinois rich? Did it come from within the city limits of Chicago? Was the wealth that is in Illinois produced there? Every time a brakeman uncoupled a train in New Mexico or Arizona on one of the transcontinental lines, he was contributing to the wealth of Chicago by making it possible to concentrate there the great industries and the great financial and commercial activities which made Chicago the second city of the Nation. And ought not Chicago to pay something to help those who have helped make her rich?

Mention is made of New York. New York would still be the village that old Peter Minuit bought from the Indians for $24 if it had not been for people all over these United States who from their own activities and their own industries poured a great stream of wealth into New York.

In the old days everyone who took out a small life-insurance policy cut a few years off his life and gave them to those in New York who owned the life-insurance company. That happened all over the Nation. If one traced the interest paid on money borrowed at the little country bank one would find that a great deal of it went to New York, to the big bank, from that little bank which borrowed the money to loan to persons in my State and, Mr. President, in your State. And when people in my State and people in your State were paying 10 percent and 12 percent, the favored interests in the great cities were getting their money for 3 percent, 4 percent, and 5 percent.

The Senator from New Mexico put it vividly. There are many States in the Union which are poor. Take New Mexico. Let us say a road 10 miles or 20 miles long is to be built. Relatively there are very few people on the highway, very few people to maintain it. A highway in New York of the same length would reach 10 times or 100 times as many people who would use it, and yet it costs just as much, and perhaps more, to build a road in New Mexico than it does in New York.

Mr. ANDREWS rose.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, does the Senator wish me to yield?

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, I wish to inquire if the Senator is now yielding the floor.

Mr. CONNALLY. No; I am not yielding the floor. I shall be glad to yield to the Senator. I have not quite concluded. I shall be glad to have the Senator interrupt me if he so desires. I probably shall conclude at 5 o'clock.

Mr. ANDREWS. I should like to interrupt the Senator for a few minutes.

Mr. CONNALLY. I shall be very glad to be interrupted by the Senator from Florida, because I am sure he is in sympathy with the amendment.

Mr. ANDREWS. It is my purpose to show that one department of the Government, which has to deliberate carefully on all questions of fact and law, has determined that old-age assistance and old-age pensions are a national obligation, and not a local one. The direct question at issue was title II of the Social Security Act, which provides for Federal old-age benefits. The case was that of Helvering v. Davis (301 U. S., 640). I should like to quote from the opinion in order to show that the highest authority in the country has determined the question.

The Supreme Court, in an opinion written by the late Justice Cardozo and concurred in by six Justices of the United States Supreme Court—all except Justices McReynolds and Butler—said:

The purge of Nation-wide calamity that began in 1929 has taught us many lessons. Not the least is the solidarity of interests that may once have seemed to be divided. Unemployment spreads from State to State, the hinterland now settled that in pioneer days gave an avenue of escape. * * * Spreading from State to State, unemployment is an ill not particular but general, which may be checked, if Congress so determines, by the resources of the Nation. If this can have been doubtful until now, our ruling today in the case of the Chas. C. Steward Mach. Co. (301, U. S. 548, ante, 1279, 57 S. Ct. 883, 109 A. L. R. 1293, supra), has set the doubt at rest. But the ill is all one or at least not greatly different whether men are thrown out of work because there is no longer work to do or because the disabilities of age make them incapable of doing it. Rescue becomes necessary irrespective of the cause. The hope behind this statute is to save men and women from the rigors of the poorhouse as well as from the haunting fear that such a lot awaits them when journey's end is near.

Congress did not improvise a judgment when it found that the award of old-age benefits would be conducive to the general welfare. The President's Committee on Economic Security made an investigation and report, aided by a research staff of Government officers and employees, and by an advisory council and several other advisory groups. Extensive hearings followed before the House Committee on Ways and Means and the Senate Committee on Finance. A great mass of evidence was brought together supporting the policy which finds expression in the act. Among the relevant facts are these: The number of persons in the United States 65 years of age or over is increasing proportionately as well as absolutely. What is even more important, the number of such persons unable to take care of themselves is growing at a threatening pace. More and more our population is becoming urban and industrial instead of rural and agricultural. The evidence is impressive that among industrial workers the younger men and women are preferred over the older. In times of retrenchment the older are commonly the first to go, and even if retained, their wages are likely to be lowered. The plight of men and women at so low an age as 40 is hard, almost hopeless, when they are driven to seek for reemployment. Statistics are in the brief. A few illustrations will be chosen from many there collected. In 1930, out of 224 American factories investigated, 71, or almost one-third, had fixed maximum hiring-age limits; in 4 plants the limit was under 40, in 41 it was under 46. In the other 153 plants there were no fixed limits, but in practice few were hired if they were over 50 years of age. With the loss of savings inevitable in periods of idleness, the fate of workers over 65, when thrown out of work, is little less than desperate. A recent study of the Social Security Board informs us that "one-fifth of the aged in the United States were receiving old-age assistance, emergency relief, institutional care, employment under the Works Program, or some other form of aid from public or private funds; two-fifths to one-half were dependent on friends and relatives; one-eighth had some income from earnings; and possibly one-sixth had some savings or property. Approximately three out of four persons 65 or over were probably dependent wholly or partially on others for support." We summarize in the margin the results of other studies by State and national commissions. They point the same way.

The problem is plainly national in area and dimensions.

That is one point I wish to bring out.

Moreover, laws of the separate States cannot deal with it effectively.

That is another point I wish to bring out.

Congress at least had a basis for that belief. States and local governments are often lacking in the resources that are necessary to finance an adequate program of security for the aged.

That is exactly the point the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] is making.

This is brought out with a wealth of illustration in recent studies of the problem. Apart from the failure of resources, States and local governments are at times reluctant to increase so heavily the burden of taxation to be borne by their residents for fear of placing themselves in a position of economic disadvantage as compared with neighbors or competitors. We have seen this in our study of the problem of unemployment compensation.

By the way, that is one of the strongest points, proving the statement that it is a national obligation.

* * * A system of old-age pensions has special dangers of its own, if put in force in one State and rejected in another. The existence of such a system is a bait to the needy and dependent elsewhere, encouraging them to migrate and seek a haven of repose.

That is exactly the situation we now face in the State of Florida. One hundred thousand elderly people migrated to Florida before the depression touched us. The depression caught them in Florida. They suddenly found that the coupons attached to their industrial and other bonds were worthless, and they themselves were cast out, to be taken care of by the public or allowed to suffer. They come from every State in the Union. They are part of the national problem which we are trying to help solve. The Supreme Court of the United States, in the opinion from which I have read, has held that the problem is national, and not local, and has given its reasons. Those reasons were arrived at deliberately, behind closed doors, where the Court had plenty of time to think over the problem and then lay down the policy.

We cannot escape the problem. We must face it.

Only a power that is national can serve the interests of all.

The opinion goes on and gives further reasons why the problem is a national one. I thank the Senator from Texas for permitting me to speak in his time.

Mr. CONNALLY. I am very glad indeed to have the Senator from Florida contribute to this discussion.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, is the Senator from Texas ready to suspend for the day, or does he wish to proceed at this time?

Mr. CONNALLY. I wish to be recognized when the Senate meets tomorrow. I am willing to have an armistice at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that upon the resumption of the session tomorrow the Senator from Texas will have the floor.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point an amendment which I intend to offer tomorrow to the pending bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. SHIPSTEAD is as follows:

At the proper place in the bill insert the following new section:

"SEC. —. (a) On and after the date of enactment of this act the total amount of the stabilization fund established by section 10 of the Gold Reserve Act of 1934, as amended, shall not exceed $500,000,000, and the balance of the sum of $2,000,000,000 appropriated by such section for the purposes of such fund shall be set aside in a special account in the Treasury and used as a basis for the issuance of coins and currency in an equivalent amount. The coins or currency so issued shall be used to retire the special obligations of the United States which on the date of enactment of this act are held in the Federal Old-Age and Survivor Insurance Trust Fund, the Railroad Retirement Account, and the Unemployment Trust Fund. All amounts paid into such funds for the purpose of retiring such special obligations shall be available for the purchase at the market price of interest-bearing obligations of the United States, or of obligations guaranteed as to both principal and interest by the United States, or for the acquisition of any such obligations on original issue at par.

"(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 7 of the Gold Reserve Act of 1934, as amended, in the event that the weight of the gold dollar shall at any time be further reduced after the date of enactment of this act, the resulting increase in value of the gold held by the United States (including the gold held as security for gold certificates and as a reserve for any United States notes and for Treasury notes of 1890) shall be credited to the account of the Federal Old-Age and Survivor Insurance Trust Fund and shall be available for the purposes of such fund.

"(c) All amounts hereafter retained as seigniorage upon the delivery of silver to the United States mints for coinage shall be credited to the account of the Federal Old-Age and Survivor Insurance Trust Fund and shall be available for the purposes of such fund.

"(d) The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to make such rules and regulations as may be necessary with respect to the issuance of coins and currency authorized by this section, and the retirement of the special obligations provided for by this section."

INTERPRETATION OF CONSTITUTIONAL PHRASE "ADVICE AND CONSENT OF THE SENATE"

Mr. KING. Mr. President, it will be recalled that during the consideration of the nomination of Hon. Floyd H. Roberts for a position as a Federal judge in the State of Virginia, the question was raised as to the interpretation to be placed upon that provision of the Constitution wherein it is stated that the President—shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the Senators present concur, and he shall nominate, and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint Ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, judges of the Supreme Court, and all other officers of the United States, whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and which shall be established by law.

And so forth. As I understood the position taken by some was that the words "advice and consent" were used in a rather perfunctory way or, at any rate, accorded to the Senate an unimportant part in connection with the making and ratification of treaties and the appointment and confirmation of judges and other Federal officials. The thought, as I understood the position of some, was that the President's action in the matter of negotiating treaties and the naming of persons for positions, was not to be challenged; that the word "advice" had but little significance, and that the word "consent" implied prompt ratification of treaties and the approval of appointees. In other words, that the duty of the Senate was—unless some extraordinary conditions arose—to ratify treaties submitted by the President and to confirm Presidential appointees.

I entertained the view that a proper interpretation of the constitutional provision referred to accorded to the Senate a broader field of operation than that indicated. In other words, it was my opinion that the word "advice" contemplated that the Senate was not to act as a mere automaton but rather was to advise with the Chief Executive in connection with treaties and appointments, and that the word "consent" did not imply that the views of the President were to be conclusive, and called for acquiescence in Executive policies, or the negotiation of treaties upon the part of the Senate.

As Senators know the power of the Senate to modify the provisions of treaties and thereby participate directly in their formation was also recognized in the early days of the Republic. This fact was made clear in the relations between President Washington and the Senate and also in the message of President Adams to the Senate in 1801. President Adams stated:

I have considered the advice and consent of the Senate, to the ratification of the convention with France, under certain conditions. Although it would have been more conformable to my own judgment and inclination, to have agreed to that instrument unconditionally, yet, in this point, I found I had the misfortune to differ in opinion from so high a constitutional authority as the Senate, I judged it more consistent with the honor and interest of the United States to ratify it under the conditions prescribed, than not at all.

I shall not take the time of the Senate to refer to other instances indicating the interpretation which was placed at various times upon the constitutional provision referred to, by Presidents and the Senate.

I might add that there was no thought upon the part of President Washington of withholding information from the Senate in the case of nominations to offices any more than in the case of treaties. In other words, apparently the words "advice and consent" had the same connotation whether applied to the ratification of treaties or to the confirmation of Presidential appointees.

It is also clear from an examination of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD that in some cases the Senate determined matters of policy in connection with appointments as well as in connection with treaty negotiations, and thereby decided the question of propriety on grounds other than the fitness of the particular nominees.

In view of the discussion which occurred in the Senate growing out of the nomination of Hon. Floyd H. Roberts to be United States district judge for the western district of Virginia, I requested Henry G. Wood, Esq., legislative counsel of the Senate, to make an examination of the records dealing with appointments to Federal offices and the making of treaties under the Constitution. As Senators know, Mr. Wood is an able lawyer, a painstaking investigator, and a man of high character. He has made a comprehensive study of this matter as it relates to appointments to Federal offices and the making of treaties under the Constitution, as they were developed in the Constitutional Convention of 1787 and as they were exercised during the early years of the Federal Government.

In my opinion it is only by referring to the historical background of these powers and the circumstances which led to the adoption of the advice and consent requirements of the Constitution that the respective roles of the Senate and the President can be viewed in their true light.

I am also in accord with the conclusion reached in the memorandum that the Senate was expected to take an active and affirmative part in the making of treaties and appointments and not to have a mere negative on the action of the President. This means in effect that the advice of the Senate, however given, is an integral and important element in the constitutional processes, and that when such advice is given it is not to be ignored or treated as a usurpation of Executive functions. The practice during the early years of the Republic supports this conclusion.

Mr. President, in view of the importance of the study which has been made by Mr. Wood, I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate to have the same printed as a Senate document.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? There being no objection, it is so ordered.

ANNUAL REGISTRATION OF MOTOR VEHICLES IN THE DISTRICT

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1575) to provide that the annual registration of motor vehicles in the District of Columbia shall be for the period from April 1 in each year to March 31 in the succeeding year, which were, on page 2, after line 12 to insert:

SEC. 3. That subparagraphs (c) and (d) of paragraph 31 and paragraph 33 of an act entitled "An act to amend section 7 of an act entitled 'An act making appropriations to provide for the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, and for other purposes', approved July 1, 1902, and for other purposes", approved July 1, 1932, are amended to read as follows:

"(c) Owners of passenger vehicles for hire having a seating capacity of eight passengers or more, in addition to the driver or operator, other than those licensed in the preceding subparagraph, shall pay a license tax of $100 per annum for each vehicle used. No such vehicle shall be operated unless there shall be conspicuously displayed therein a license issued under the terms of this subparagraph. Licenses issued under this subparagraph shall date from April 1 of each year, but may be issued on or after March 15 of such year: Provided, however, That all licenses issued for a period prior to April 1, 1940, shall expire on March 31, 1940, and the license fee therefor shall be prorated accordingly.

"(d) Owners of passenger vehicles for hire, whether operated from a private establishment or from public space, other than those licensed in the two preceding subparagraphs, shall pay a license tax of $25 per annum for each such vehicle used in the conduct of their business. Stands for such vehicles upon public space, adjacent to hotels or otherwise, may be established in the manner provided in section 6 (e) of the act entitled 'An act to amend the acts approved March 3, 1925, and July 3, 1926, known as the District of Columbia Traffic Acts, and so forth.' The Public Utilities Commission is hereby authorized to make and enforce all such reasonable and usual police regulations as it may deem necessary for the proper conduct, control, and regulation of all vehicles described in this and the preceding subparagraphs and paragraph 33 hereof. Licenses issued under this subparagraph shall date from April 1 of each year, but may be issued on or after March 15 of such year: Provided, however, That all licenses issued for a period prior to April 1, 1940, shall expire on March 31, 1940, and the license fee therefor shall be prorated accordingly.

"PAR. 33. Owners of vehicles for hire, used in hauling goods, wares, or merchandise, and operating from public space, shall pay a license tax of $25 per annum for each vehicle. Stands for such vehicles upon public space may be established in the manner provided in section 6 (e) of the act entitled 'An act to amend the acts approved March 3, 1925, and July 3, 1926, known as the District of Columbia Traffic Acts, and so forth.' Licenses issued under this subparagraph shall date from April 1 of each year but may be issued on or after March 15 of such year: Provided, however, That all licenses issued for a period prior to April 1, 1940, shall expire on March 31, 1940, and the license fee therefor shall be prorated accordingly."

"SEC. 4. That an act entitled 'An act to amend paragraphs 31 and 33 of an act entitled 'An act to amend section 7 of an act entitled 'An act making appropriations to provide for the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, and for other purposes', approved July 1, 1902, and for other purposes', approved July 1, 1932' (Public, No. 24, 76th Cong.), approved April 5, 1939, is hereby repealed."

And to amend the title so as to read:

An act to provide that the annual registration of motor vehicles and the annual licensing of certain public vehicles in the District of Columbia shall be for the period from April 1 in each year to March 31 in the succeeding year.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, my understanding is that these amendments were made by the House committee at the request of the District Commissioners. I think they are all right. I therefore move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate resumed the consideration of legislative business.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE McREYNOLDS, OF TENNESSEE

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the resolution of the House of Representatives (H. Res. 254) adopted on the occasion of the death of Hon. SAM D. McREYNOLDS, late a Representative from the State of Tennessee, which was read, as follows:

IN THE HOUSE REPRESENTATIVES,

July 11, 1939.

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of the Honorable SAM D. McREYNOLDS, a Representative from the State of Tennessee.

Resolved, That a committee of 15 Members of the House with such Members of the Senate as may be joined be appointed to attend the funeral.

Resolved, That the Sergeant at Arms of the House be authorized and directed to take such steps as may be necessary for carrying out the provision of these resolutions and that the necessary expenses in connection therewith be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect the House do now adjourn.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I submit a resolution which I send to the desk, and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be read. The resolution (S. Res. 159) was read, considered by unanimous consent, and unanimously agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with profound sorrow the announcement of the death of Hon. SAM D. McREYNOLDS, late a Representative from the State of Tennessee.

Resolved, That a committee of six Senators be appointed by the Presiding Officer to join the committee appointed on the part of the House of Representatives to attend the funeral of the deceased Representative.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Under the second resolving clause of the resolution, the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. McKELLAR, Mr. STEWART, Mr. CONNALLY, Mr. RUSSELL, Mr. BURKE, and Mr. MILLER, the committee on the part of the Senate.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, as a further mark of respect to the memory of the late distinguished Representative from my State, I move that the Senate now take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was unanimously agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Wednesday, July 12, 1939, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

TUESDAY, JULY 11, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

*The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.*

He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for Thou art with me; Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: Thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever.

Blessed Lord and Savior, with bereaved and saddened hearts again we tarry in the valley. The shadows hang heavy. A brother, neighbor, friend, and statesman has passed through the gates, and we shall greet him in the Chamber no more. The yoke is so heavy; dear Lord, line it with Thy comfort and with the inspiration of Thy promise: "I will go with Thee all the way." Bend low, heavenly Father, above the afflicted hearthstone and give heavenly peace.

Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord; henceforth they rest from their labors and their works do follow them.

In the name of our Blessed Master and Saviour. Amen and amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

H. R. 5479. An act granting annual and sick leave with pay to substitutes in the Postal Service.

THE LATE HON. SAM D. M'REYNOLDS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair asks the indulgence of the House to make a short statement.

The Chair would much prefer that there be no proceedings today except with respect to the resolution relating to our late beloved colleague.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, it is with very deep regret and a feeling of genuine sorrow that I announce that our genial friend, highly esteemed and distinguished colleague the gentleman from Tennessee, Hon. SAM D. McREYNOLDS, passed away at his home in the city of Washington early this morning.

It has been the privilege of many of us to serve for many years with Mr. McREYNOLDS and to know his great value. I am sure I voice the true sentiment and feeling of the membership when I say that we have sustained an irreparable loss in his passing.

Mr. McREYNOLDS served with great credit and distinction on the bench in Tennessee for about 20 years and was elected to membership in this body in 1922 and served continuously from that time until today. For several years he served as chairman of the important Committee on Foreign Affairs. He was a man who possessed the highest attributes of character, and all of the sterling qualities of manhood. His native State of Tennessee, his great congressional district, and the Nation have sustained a great loss in his untimely death.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. TAYLOR].

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, while we of the Tennessee delegation have known for some time of the critical illness of our esteemed colleague, Representative McREYNOLDS, and have kept ourselves daily advised of his condition with the deepest interest and solicitude, nevertheless his death came as a distinct shock to each of us. Judge McREYNOLDS was not only popular with the Tennessee delegation, he was loved and respected by the entire membership of the House regardless of political alignment.

He was recognized as an able lawyer and a capable legislator.

As chairman of the great Foreign Relations Committee, he not only brought credit to himself but he also brought credit and distinction to his committee, of whose dignity and integrity he was scrupulously jealous and justly proud.

I first met our late colleague when he was judge of one of the circuit courts in Tennessee and since our first acquaintance we have been warm personal friends. In the campaign of 1936 an effort was made to have Representative McREYNOLDS come into my district and make speeches against me. This he emphatically refused to do, thus showing the appreciation he had for our cordial relationship. Judge McREYNOLDS, as he was familiarly known, was a man of profound conviction and indomitable courage; while he was firm in his faith, he was always tolerant, considerate, and courteous.

SAM D. McREYNOLDS was a man of outstanding ability and in his death the State of Tennessee and the Nation have suffered an irreparable loss.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BLOOM].

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, the Foreign Affairs Committee this morning met and adopted the following resolution:

The Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives learns with profound sorrow of the death of its beloved chairman, the Honorable SAM D. McREYNOLDS, of Tennessee. It is shocked with the thought of the loss that this Nation faces in the passing of a man whose largeness of heart and mind has helped shape the legislation of the last decade to preserve the historic traditions of our country.

Its membership, regardless of political affiliation, held him in affectionate esteem, and feel that in his death we have experienced a personal grief, and his district and the Nation have suffered the loss of an able, patriotic, and unselfish public servant.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. JOHNSON].

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Mr. Speaker, there are times when we cannot express in language our feelings. Such time as that confronts me now when I consider the loss of one of the best friends I ever had. I was elected to Congress at the same time as Judge McREYNOLDS, and during the 16 years of my service in this House the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. McREYNOLDS] and I were the warmest and closest personal friends.

He was my conception of a real man, a typical American. He was brave. He was courageous. He was candid. He was fair. His heart beat in sympathy with humanity, and in his long service here there is no man who has exerted a more potent influence on legislation in this House, and no man who will be remembered longer and revered with more affection than the distinguished gentleman, the announcement of whose passing has just been made.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH].

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, during my many years in this House I served with outstanding men, but I cannot recollect a single Member with whom I served during these many years for whom I had greater respect and admiration for his patriotism, loyalty, courage, and devotion to the country and to duty than the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. McREYNOLDS]. He indeed was a real southern gentleman for all that that term implies.

It was my good fortune to be closely associated with him especially during 1932 and 1933. At that time the great State of Tennessee that has given to the country so many statesmen had an outstanding Member of this House who was a candidate for the Speakership, but the gentleman whose passing we mourn today withdrew as a candidate and supported Mr. Rainey, of Illinois.

I know there was not a prouder man in this House than Mr. McREYNOLDS when Joseph Byrns, of Tennessee, was elected Speaker of this House upon the passing of Mr. Rainey, of Illinois. Mr. McREYNOLDS was a strong man. He had strong views. He was a real courageous fighter for what he believed was right.

In the passing of this splendid gentleman not only does Tennessee lose a great citizen but the entire United States loses a statesman and an outstanding man. I wish I possessed the words with which I at this time could express my innermost feelings for the loss of this great friend of mine, this great legislator, and this great citizen.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH].

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, it was my privilege and honor to have served with the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. McREYNOLDS] on the Committee on Foreign Affairs for some 16 years. He was an able and distinguished Member of this House, learned in the law, and gave his entire time to the study of international problems. He was one of the most outstanding chairmen of any committee in the House and carried on with distinction the traditions of previous great chairmen of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. He was always fair, courteous, and cooperative with the members of that committee. Due to his long friendship with the Secretary of State, Mr. Hull, of the State of Tennessee, he was able to bring to that committee additional information which was helpful in all of our deliberations. He was a man of strong convictions and I believe if he had been here during the recent fight in the House of Representatives on neutrality, he would have led that fight on the other side with ability and distinction because of his knowledge of international issues and of international law.

He will be mourned equally on this side as on the Democratic side because he made a host of friends wherever he went. Mr. Speaker, SAM McREYNOLDS was a credit to the Democratic Party, which he represented so ably for many years in Congress, he was a credit to the great State of Tennessee and to our country, because Judge McREYNOLDS was a fine, high type public servant and a great American citizen.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. EATON].

Mr. EATON of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, as we stand once more face to face with the eternal mystery, words fail us. I can only speak of him as a dear friend. I loved him. He loved me. We were companions for 15 years on that great committee; and during all of that time, although we bore different political labels, we were one in heart and purpose.

The test of a man's greatness is the inspiration which flows from his life and character to other men to be real men. Under that test SAM McREYNOLDS was great. He was a real man. I cherish his memory; so do you who served with him here through the long years.

May he rest in peace in the arms of God.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. SHANLEY].

Mr. SHANLEY. Mr. Speaker, few men in our history have exercised the salutary control and guidance over foreign affairs that our superbly equipped late colleague exhibited in his 9 years of committee chairmanship. He acted as a liaison between our equally great State Department and its beloved head, Cordell Hull, and this body of legislators. SAM McREYNOLDS never surrendered the dignity or the prerogatives of his committee or this House, yet SAM McREYNOLDS never failed to understand the problems of his very great personal and political friend the distinguished Secretary of State. From that loyalty to the House of Representatives and that admiration of his fellow Tennessean came a robust, clear-cut picture of foreign affairs that made his handling of his duties a delight and an inspiration.

Through such souls alone
God stooping shows sufficient of His light
For us in the dark to rise by.

An American at all times not purblind or jingoist but an American of whom it might well be said in love of country, "His country at all times; his country, if right to keep it right; if wrong, to set it right."

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. PEARSON].

Mr. PEARSON. Mr. Speaker, in the city of Atlanta there stands a monument erected to a great statesman by the name of Benjamin Hill. Inscribed upon that monument are these words:

He who saves his country saves all things,
And all things saved will bless him.
He who lets his country die, lets all things die,
And all things dying curse him.

A beautiful tribute to his efforts to protect and save his native land; and I think it is applicable to the life of the great citizen of my State who has passed from his active field of endeavors and whose passing we mourn today. He sought to save his country by preserving inviolate those fundamental principles which guarantee to American citizens peace, happiness, and freedom. History will bless him for it.

I had never had the privilege of knowing Judge McREYNOLDS until I became a Member of this body some 5 years ago. Upon my arrival here as a freshman, inexperienced, the first man to take me in and offer words of friendly advice and counsel in an effort to help me start out in the right direction was my friend Judge McREYNOLDS. From that time on I considered him one of the best friends I had in this group, one interested in my welfare not only as a Member of this body but as a member of the delegation from the great State which he had the honor of representing in part.

Judge McREYNOLDS was a man who led an exemplary life in every sense of the word. He was not only a faithful, honorable, and courageous public servant but in his private and in his domestic life he leaves an example to all men which I deem unexcelled. He was a true patriot and a faithful servant, faithful to every trust pledged to his keeping. I think we do well today to pay honor and tribute to a man who throughout the years of his life and public service brought nothing but honor and glory to his name, to his State, and to his Nation.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM].

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, in the language of one of our American poets, "I would that my tongue could utter the thoughts that arise in me." At such a time there are no words to express the emotions of the heart. If they could be spoken, they would give tender solace to all bereaved by the passing of this genial friend and able statesman.

May I accentuate the thought that there can be parting from but no permanent loss of a good man. Benjamin Franklin once wrote an epitaph for himself, as follows:

The body of Benjamin Franklin, printer, like the cover of an old book, its contents torn out and stripped of its lettering and gilding, lies here, food for worms; but the work itself will not be lost, for it will, as he believed, appear once more in a new and more beautiful edition, corrected and amended by the Author.

So, in our sorrow, in contemplation of the Christian life our distinguished friend lived and the Christian virtues he exemplified, we may be comforted by the hope, the promise, and the assurance that we shall meet again.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DOUGHTON].

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, perhaps the greatest compensation that comes to a Member of this House is the delightful friendships and fellowships he forms during the period he is permitted to serve as a Member of Congress. I recall very vividly and shall ever remember with greatest pleasure my service in this House with Judge McREYNOLDS. No truer friend anyone ever possessed than SAM McREYNOLDS. He was not only true to his friends but he was, above all, true to his family. He was one of the most devoted and lovable men in his family life I have ever known, not only to his friends and his family but to his country and to his divine Creator.

I have never known a man in this House who brought to the discharge of his duties greater all-around qualifications of mind and heart than Judge McREYNOLDS. I am sure that not only his district and his native State but the entire country have suffered a very, very great loss in his passing. It will be a long, long time—the fact is, none of us will ever have the privilege of serving in this House with a man more worthy, more capable, and more faithful, and who is in every sense of the word a more true representative of his people, than was Judge McREYNOLDS.

To me his passing is one of the greatest losses I have suffered, and I have lost many friends since I have been here. On a trip with him to the Orient I was in his company a great deal, and I never heard him make a remark or utter a single word in disparagement or criticism or derogation of his colleagues. He always spoke of them in the highest terms. He was in the highest sense a true American, a true patriot, and a true, devoted, faithful, capable, and loyal representative of his people. My deepest sympathy is extended to each member of his family.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BEAM].

Mr. BEAM. Mr. Speaker, Shakespeare once said:

Friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hooks of steel.

When I first came to the Congress of the United States in 1930 one of the first Members with whom I became acquainted was the gentleman from Tennessee whose demise we mourn today. His kindness of heart, his magnanimity of soul, his sterling qualities, and his good fellowship impressed, I am sure, every person who was privileged to know him. He was a noble man, an orator of distinction, and a staunch Democrat; but his democracy was not parochial, and on questions of vital concernment affecting the welfare of the Nation his Americanism overshadowed any partisanship which he may have entertained. He was a great legislator, an astute parliamentarian, and a man of quality. He was a son whose passing the State of Tennessee mourns today, and whose loss will be felt throughout the length and breadth of our Nation.

An occasion such as the death of one whom we revere has a tendency to mellow us, to render us more conscious of our own frailties, of our human weaknesses, and of our own mortality. It has a strong impelling force to draw us a little closer in the brotherhood of man and causes us to harbor in our hearts a more sympathetic understanding of our fellow beings.

We often in our desire and ambition to achieve legislative conquests perhaps become a little overzealous in our endeavors or a little overimpressed with our own significance and of our own importance.

But what a lesson we learn today by the passing of our endeared colleague, and what a realization we can derive of what a humble and infinitesimal part we play in this crucible of life and in the great drama of American politics.

I join the Tennessee delegation in their sorrow, and I also desire to extend my heartfelt sympathy and condolence to the bereaved family of our beloved colleague.

America has lost a noble son, a staunch patriot, and an outstanding citizen.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. CHANDLER].

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Speaker, we are all bowed in grief today over the passing of this loved colleague of ours from Tennessee, and as one who felt his inspiration and received his friendly recognition I wish sorrowfully to pay this tribute to him.

Bearing the name of Sam Davis, Tennessee's soldier boy hero who gave his life rather than reveal the secrets entrusted to him or prove unworthy of his Confederate uniform, SAM McREYNOLDS throughout his own life exemplified the qualities of Sam Davis. He was of heroic mold. He was true to his trusts. Coming from the soil of Tennessee, he was rugged in his honesty, he never forgot the common touch, and he had the courage of a lion.

Throughout his life Judge McREYNOLDS lived in peace and harmony with his neighbors, and when he came to the House of Representatives and took up his part of the work of the Foreign Affairs Committee, that was the thought which was uppermost in his mind—he wanted to live in peace and harmony with the neighbors of this land of ours. Yes; he loved peace, but he was one of those intrepid souls who loved righteousness more than peace, and he never ceased to be a fighter for both causes.

He was admired by the people in all parts of the State of Tennessee. They wanted to give him added honors, but he was unwilling to leave this body, where he seemed to be a part of the fabric and spirit of the House.

SAM DAVIS McREYNOLDS was a staunch friend, a loyal Tennessean, a real American, a great statesman.

While we must not have it so, "Time, like an ever-rolling stream, bears all its sons away," and SAM McREYNOLDS goes back to the everlasting mountains which he loved, with the affection and esteem of his colleagues and the gratitude of a great Nation.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. JOHNS].

Mr. JOHNS. Mr. Speaker, there came to me this morning this sorrow which it has been very hard for me to bear, because as a young man out of college I started the practice of law at Chattanooga, Tenn., when Judge McREYNOLDS had just been elected to the bench. He was then a man of about 32 years of age, one of the youngest men who ever went on the bench in Tennessee. If there was ever a young lawyer who ever had a better friend in this world than Judge McREYNOLDS, I do not know who he was. I grew to love him, and the more I knew of him the more I admired him, and as a young man, no judge who ever sat on the bench had a greater sense of justice than Judge McREYNOLDS. I watched his career as young men watch those whom they admire, and I was most interested, of course, when he was elected to Congress. I followed him here to the Congress and saw him elevated to the most powerful committee, in my opinion, here in the House. I have known him all these years and our friendship has grown greater during all this time. I do not believe there is anyone who could pass out of my life that would bring me greater sorrow than the death of my good and great friend, Judge McREYNOLDS.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I yield now to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS].

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, this is a particularly sad day for me. A little over 3 years ago Judge McREYNOLDS rose in the same place in which I stand now and announced to this body the death of my father. At that time I did not dream that 3 years later I would stand here and make my maiden speech on such a heartbreaking subject. One of the last public addresses that Judge McREYNOLDS made was in my own district in the general election last fall. He came there and made this talk, I found later, at the risk of great physical injury to himself. We did not know then that he was not well because he gave the appearance of vigor and exuberance and the same kindness shown from his eyes that those of us who had known him for years had grown accustomed to see.

Man proposes but God disposes; and twice in a few short months the dread black camel has knelt at the door of the Tennessee delegation.

Mr. Speaker, in the death of Judge McREYNOLDS Tennessee has lost a distinguished son, the Nation a statesman of the first order, and I a personal friend of more than 20 years' standing. There is so little that can be said on an occasion like this that will mean anything, but I, having been closer to such a tragedy than perhaps most of you, fully realize just what this occasion means to those of his family who are left behind. I wish to say this, a word of comfort to them, that one who was as fine in life as was SAM McREYNOLDS can be no less glorious in death. I like to think that those of us who are here below have the guidance of those great men who have gone on, those distinguished men of history and of recent times. I like to think that somewhere, somehow, they are looking down upon us today, and in some way in which you and I may not now fathom are directing our footsteps in the collective way in which we as Americans should travel. This is a thought I like to dwell upon, and I like to leave with all of you. I feel that I can close these few remarks no more fittingly, no more sincerely, than to say what Judge McREYNOLDS said when he closed his remarks announcing the death of my father, that my heart is too full of emotion, and I can say no more.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I now yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARTIN J. KENNEDY].

Mr. MARTIN J. KENNEDY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak on another phase of the life of Judge McREYNOLDS, and that is as a student. When I came to Congress in the Seventy-first Congress the Democrats were in the minority. Shortly thereafter, the Democrats took control of the House, and SAM McREYNOLDS became chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. He assumed this new honor with great dignity and humility. During the time that he was chairman of that committee he was a close student of our domestic affairs as well as our international relations. He was a pacifist in the sense that he loved people, was a philosopher, and hated the thought of war. It was my good fortune to discuss with him on many occasions the problems that came before his committee. Knowing that I came from New York, where we have more than 7,000,000 people, many of foreign extraction, he often asked my opinion as to the attitude of our foreign-born citizens on legislation concerning their mother countries. I was flattered by his confidence, and I was happy to obtain information for him, which he always graciously accepted. There is still another contribution which he made to the Congress that I consider important. That is his contribution to the literature of the House as contained in the scholarly reports he made to this House. I think we might very well read these reports, for in these documents we will find reflected the views of a statesman untarnished by international influences. Frequently committee reports are dull and routine. But this was not true while Judge McREYNOLDS was chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. His reports always contained valuable information representing long and careful study.

In paying tribute today to my friend Judge McREYNOLDS I concur with all of the lovely sentiments that have been expressed by my colleagues, and, representing as I do, the great city and State of New York, I, too, wish to express the great sadness of my people at his passing.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBBS].

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, as that great river which bears the name of the proud State that today mourns the loss of one of her distinguished sons wends its happy way to mingle its waters with the other tributaries of the mighty Mississippi, it is unable to restrain itself from paying a visit to Alabama, coming down out of its way to bring us the blessings it gives its own State and to caress a favored part of our fair land in its sinuous embrace.

This is typical of the relationship between Tennessee and Alabama as exemplified by the lives of their citizens. We not only live next door to each other, but we live as neighbors should live, in mutual admiration, confidence, and love. We have that heartfelt devotion for each other which neighbors come to feel for good neighbors. We Alabamians always glory in the achievements of Tennessee, and it is a noteworthy achievement to have produced a man like SAM McREYNOLDS.

Eulogies may depict a career and record many of the heights attained by those eulogized. The splendid extemporaneous utterances from this floor today have done this well. But though every tribute has sounded the note of personal bereavement, the depth of that feeling cannot be plumbed by mere words. No eulogy can express the sorrow of our hearts because our friend has passed from this scene of his labors.

This great man, citizen, lawyer, jurist, statesman, gracious gentleman, patriot, "a man foursquare withouten flaw ywrought," Tennessee may well mourn, and so should the Nation. But it is as husband, father, friend, that his loss gives greatest grief. Today, as the throbbing heart of this House lays itself bare and bleeding in grief too deep for words, we do ourselves honor. Our profound sympathy goes out to his bereaved family and to the great State which rightly mourns her irreparable loss. A mighty warrior in the cause of liberty, justice, humanity has fallen. May God rest his soul, and may that proud mother of great men, his native State, continue to send to national councils other leaders of his inspiring kind, for God knows this Nation and the world needs more men like Judge McREYNOLDS.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK].

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, there is very little that I can add to what has already been said, but I want to briefly express the voice of the New England delegation in this body, and I know I will bespeak the thoughts of my colleagues on the Republican side as well as my colleagues on the Democratic side.

I agree with what the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS] has well said—that "it is not so much what we say on this occasion as what we think." Our thoughts of this great man as we knew him, the great speeches he made, and the battles he conducted on the floor of this House in the causes that he believed in; of our thoughts of him as he went down this very aisle to my left and down the center aisle; of our personal contacts with him in this body; of our thoughts of him as the chairman of the important Committee on Foreign Affairs; of our thoughts of him as a great American. But uppermost in my mind, in addition to what has heretofore been so ably said, there will be one thought of Judge McREYNOLDS that will always remain with me, and in or out of this body will always be an example to and a guide for me. Judge McREYNOLDS as a legislator and in his individual capacity was a symbol of the unity of the Union. To SAM McREYNOLDS public questions did not appear from the angle of the best interests of the South, the North, the East, or the West alone. He viewed all public questions from the broad angle of what was for the best interest of the people of the United States. He was not a sectionalist. He was not a man who appealed to emotional reactions, to group or racial action. He personified the highest ideals of tolerance and of understanding, and what the meaning of the unity of our Nation is, and the necessity of that unity, not only for today but for tomorrow, in order that we of this generation and those of future generations might carry on that which we inherited—the duty to preserve the fundamental law of our country and of our ideals, and improve upon its structure in the service and best interests of this and of future generations.

That is the lesson that I have learned from my associations with SAM McREYNOLDS. That is the paramount impression that is indelibly imprinted upon my mind and which will always be an example to me and a guide for me of the meaning and the significance of the unity of the 48 States which comprise our great Union, and of the relationship of the Federal Government to the State governments, and the State governments to the Federal Government.

A poet once well said:

Not a soul beneath the sun
But what is precious unto one.

The memory of SAM McREYNOLDS will always be precious to everyone who knew him, to everyone who came in contact with him.

After our days are over here and the page of public life in our book of life is turned over, and if we are blessed by our maker with living to a ripe old age, I doubt if you or I will be thinking of some great speech we made. I doubt if you or I will be thinking of some important bill that we may have introduced which became law and for which we fought for the passage. I think, if we live to that age when we be thinking of yesterday, we will be thinking of the friends we made. I know that, speaking for myself, one of those real friendships I have made that I will think of is that of SAM McREYNOLDS, of the great man he was, of the great contributions he made, and of the profound impressions he made upon my mind.

The loss of Judge McREYNOLDS is not a personal one to the State of Tennessee alone; it is a personal loss to the entire Nation.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. PATRICK].

Mr. PATRICK. Mr. Speaker, the quality I remember most tenderly in Judge McREYNOLDS was the gentleness of his nature and his disposition toward a feeling of sentiment rather than filling his whole life merely with workaday world matter. I have felt that as many opportunities arose to discuss things with him when I first came here, and I know many of their beginners as Congressmen had the same experience in their early days in this body.

The gentleness of that soul! His life suggests the thought contained in a poem written by Moschus, a Greek poet who lived four or five hundred years before Christ:

I would that my father had taught me his creed,
The creed of the keepers of sheep;
Taught me his creed as he taught me his craft
As we sat with the flocks on the steep,
As we sat with our flocks neath the yew trees,
He piping his troubles to sleep,
Piping on reeds I had sat on,
Piping his sorrows to sleep.
O that my father had taught me his creed,
The creed of the keepers of sheep.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN].

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, it was with great regret I learned this morning of the death of my good friend of many years, SAM McREYNOLDS.

Fifteen years ago, when I was first elected to Congress, I was assigned on the same day he was to the great Committee on Foreign Affairs. Then started a friendship which has extended through the years, growing riper and stronger with each passing day. During my service on the committee I came to admire SAM McREYNOLDS, to appreciate his fine character, his great ability, his judicial mind, his absolute fairness, and his great love of country.

This House has lost one of its most valuable Members at a time when, with confusion and fears abroad in the world, it could ill-afford to lose him. We naturally feel great sorrow at his death, yet with sorrow comes the great consolation—that he lived a fine life; that he contributed to the upbuilding of his country; and his memory will ever burn brightly among his host of friends.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SNYDER].

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, someone has well said that "He that hath one steadfast friend may count himself well blessed." Seven years ago, when I came to Congress, it was my good fortune to meet at this door here on the very first day of the session SAM McREYNOLDS. He escorted me to that seat right there; and then it was good fortune for me and my family to move into the Methodist Building where Mr. McREYNOLDS and his family lived up until about a year ago. Of all those who gave me an inspiration to serve my country the best I could as a Member of this House, SAM McREYNOLDS perhaps tops the list. I believe I voice the sentiment of all those with whom I have spoken in the last few minutes when I say that Tennessee lost a great statesman, a Christian gentleman, and a true patriot; and the Nation has lost a loyal soul who stood for justice in every avenue of life. I feel that I speak the sentiment of the members of the Pennsylvania delegation when I say that our hope is that another son of that great State, of a caliber of Mr. McREYNOLDS, may fill his place.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN].

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, there is nothing I can add to what has been said by the friends of our departed colleague, SAM McREYNOLDS. Mississippi joins Tennessee today in mourning the passing of this great man whose influence will be felt in that area as long as the Tennessee River bears its tributes to the sea.

For more than 10 years he fought with me for the Tennessee Valley Authority, which I regard as the greatest development of ancient or modern times.

A prince once said of a king struck down:
"Taller he seems in death."
And the word holds good, for now, as then,
It is after death that we measure men.

The time has come to measure the life and character of SAM McREYNOLDS by those standards of Americanism, those standards of Christianity, those standards of morality, those standards of statesmanship and patriotism by which he lived and which should guide the lives of all men who are engaged in shaping the destiny of this Republic.

Someone said:

A fire-mist and a planet,
A crystal and a cell;
A jellyfish and a saurian,
And caves where the cavemen dwell;
Then a sense of law and beauty,
And a face turned from the clod—
Some call it Evolution,
And others call it God.

SAM McREYNOLDS called it God. He was a Christian, without any hypocrisy. He had none of that atheistic taint in his system that is today poisoning the life stream of our civilization. He believed in those fundamental principles upon which our Christian civilization is built.

He believed in the fundamental principles of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States. He was not affected with any of that totalitarian attitude that denies the proposition that "government derives its just powers from the consent of the governed." He was not poisoned with any of that communistic nonsense that denies the existence of a Supreme Being or that repudiates those fundamental principles upon which our civilization is based and upon which it will forever stand, if it is to continue to bless mankind throughout the centuries to come. He believed in those great principles that actuated men like Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln, Lee, Davis, and the other immortal leaders whose names adorn and enrich the pages of American history.

In this age when we are threatened on the one hand by the stagnating influences of totalitarianism and on the other hand by the dry rot of communism that would destroy the last vestige of the Christian civilization in which we believe, we need more men like SAM McREYNOLDS to guide the destinies of this Nation. God, give us more such men, "men whom the lust of office does not kill; men whom the spoils of office cannot buy."

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN].

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I cannot allow this moment to pass without a word. It was my privilege to know intimately and to be associated with Mr. McREYNOLDS since he first came to the House of Representatives. Having myself been born in the mountain regions of Tennessee in the district now represented by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. TAYLOR], only a few miles from the home and birthplace of Mr. McREYNOLDS, I know those hills, I know the sod, I know the soil and the mountains of east Tennessee. I know the kind of stuff that the men were made of who stayed in east Tennessee and converted those primitive mountains into a wonderful land of homes, schools, and churches.

No one better typified that great section of our country than did SAM McREYNOLDS. May I at the hazard of reiteration say that especially in this hour of the Nation's hysteria, in this hour of world hysteria with its problems, its hates, its divisions, at no time in my opinion could we have so ill-afforded to have lost a man of SAM McREYNOLDS' stature, character, mind, and heart. All the world that knew him can stand up and say, "Here was a man."

He was my friend, tried and true. I loved him. I shall miss him and I hope that what still survives of him "out there" somewhere will hear me say: "Old friend, fine friend, hail and farewell."

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLAND].

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I realize how absolutely impossible in this hour and at this time it is for me to add anything to the tributes which have been paid to SAM McREYNOLDS. I do not wish the time to pass, however, without the testimony not only of myself but on behalf of every Member of the Virginia delegation in Congress of the splendid ability, the loyal service, and the continued friendship of SAM McREYNOLDS.

Personally, I suppose he as close to me as any Member of any Congress has been to me. Having visited my home many times I shared with him his hospitality. His going will be missed.

In 21 years of service in this House I have seen many men of outstanding ability, of deep convictions, of honest patriotism, and sincere devotion on both sides of the aisle come and go. Each has contributed much to the life and to the work of the men he has left behind. No man will have contributed more to the work of this Chamber in the days that are to come than SAM McREYNOLDS by his fine example, by his splendid service, by his genial comradeship, and by his unswerving and unwavering devotion to duty. He has gone, but we will ever feel the touch of a vanished hand and will ever hear the sound of a voice that is stilled.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 254

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. SAM D. McREYNOLDS, a Representative from the State of Tennessee.

Resolved, That a committee of 15 Members of the House with such Members of the Senate as may be joined be appointed to attend the funeral.

Resolved, That the Sergeant at Arms of the House be authorized and directed to take such steps as may be necessary for carrying out the provisions of these resolutions and that the necessary expenses in connection therewith be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

The resolution was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. RAYBURN). The Chair may state the Speaker will arrive in town this afternoon, and tomorrow he will appoint the committee.

The Clerk will report the further resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect the House do now adjourn.

The resolution was agreed to.

Accordingly (at 1 o'clock and 18 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Wednesday, July 12, 1939, at 12 o'clock noon.

SENATE

WEDNESDAY, JULY 12, 1939

(Legislative day of Monday, July 10, 1939)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

The Chaplain, Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Blessed Christ, who hast bidden us to pray for the coming of Thy Father's kingdom, that His righteous will may be done on earth: Help us to cherish this great hope even as the inspired souls of all the ages, who, seeing afar the shining City of God, by faith forsook the profit of the present life to follow their vision. As we have mastered Nature to our advantage that we might gain wealth, teach us now to master our social relations, that we may gain justice for all and promote true brotherhood; for what shall it profit our Nation if, with the increase of riches, we lose the sense of the presence of the living God and the joy of human kindness?

Accept this day the rededication of us all to this ideal of service, for we are determined to live by truth and to found our common life on the eternal foundations of righteousness and love. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. HARRISON, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Tuesday, July 11, 1939, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following joint resolution of the Legislature of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

Assembly Joint Resolution 32

Joint resolution relating to memorializing the Congress of the United States to pass the Wagner-Van Nuys-Capper antilynching bill

Whereas lynching is a repulsive and monstrous violation of human rights and justice that is deserving of governmental action as kidnapping; and

Whereas the spirit which tolerates lynching and, unlike other crimes, is invariably accompanied with inhuman cruelty to guilty and innocent alike, and the complete impotency or unwillingness of public authorities to prosecute; and

Whereas as long as the local and State laws are flaunted with impunity there can be no powerful deterrent or effective curb on mob violence; and

Whereas gross injustice results to the victim because he is deprived of his life or property without due process of law and equal protection thereunder; and

Whereas the mob spirit endangers both life and property, the continuance of orderly and sane government, and the future peace of this country; and

Whereas no civilized democratic government can rightfully continue to condone such cowardly atrocities and substitute a frenzied mob law for orderly justice; and

Whereas the unspeakable crime will never cease until an effective and adequate control by Congress is enacted; and

Whereas the Wagner, Van Nuys, and Capper bill is now pending before Congress as an effective and powerful deterrent upon the terrible evil of lynching: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the assembly (the senate concurring). That this legislature memorializes the Congress of the United States to pass such antilynching bill so as to prevent and restrain the punishment or destruction of persons accused or suspected of crime in any other manner than by a duly constituted court of justice and due process of law; be it further

Resolved. That properly attested copies of this resolution be sent to the President of the United States, both Houses of Congress, and to each Wisconsin Member thereof.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the house of delegates of the American Osteopathic Association at the annual convention assembled at Dallas, Tex., favoring amendment of Senate bill 1620, the so-called national health bill, so as to safeguard the freedom of choice of physician and school of practice to persons entitled to medical care, etc., which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. HOLT presented the petitions of Townsend Club No. 1 of Farmington, Townsend Club No. 1 of Martinsburg, the Townsend Club of Ridgeley, and members of the Townsend recovery movement in Morgan County, all in the State of West Virginia, praying for the enactment of the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 145) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States relating to old-age assistance, which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. CAPPER presented a telegram in the nature of a memorial from the Workers Council of Kansas, Topeka, Kans., signed by Everett R. King, State president, remonstrating against the monthly labor schedule recently prescribed for workers under the W. P. A., which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. WALSH presented the memorial of the Citizens' Alliance, of Waltham, Mass., remonstrating against the enactment of the so-called Bloom neutrality bill, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. WILEY presented the following joint resolution of the Legislature of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

Senate Joint Resolution 58

Joint resolution relating to the submission by the Wisconsin Conservation Commission to the United States Biological Survey of a program for the acquisition and restoration of Horicon Marsh as a Wisconsin project under the Pittman-Robertson Act

Whereas Horicon Marsh, located mainly in Dodge County, and extending into Fond du Lac County, State of Wisconsin, is a flat, low, practically level marshy area about 13 miles in length from north to south, and varying in width from 1 to 4 miles from east to west, formerly partially covered by the waters of the Rock River, and with an abundance of aquatic growth and vegetation; and

Whereas in its natural state Horicon Marsh was known not only throughout Wisconsin and the Northwest but throughout the entire Nation as one of nature's great natural refuges and nesting places for migratory wild fowl, and as a habitat for native upland game, birds, and fur-bearing animals; and

Whereas Horicon Marsh was drained by private capital beginning in the year 1910, such drainage being planned and accomplished to make available for agricultural use the lands of Horicon Marsh; and

Whereas a period of nearly 30 years has demonstrated conclusively that said drainage project has failed in its purpose of making available for agriculture the lands in the marsh proper, although it may have made available borderlands which, prior to drainage, could not be cultivated, and which thereafter were cultivated for agricultural purposes; and

Whereas the drainage of Horicon Marsh has changed the character of the marsh profoundly so as to impair its former suitability as a refuge and nesting place for migratory wild fowl and as a habitat for upland game, birds, and fur-bearing animals, without any compensating results by way of making available the central marsh areas for agricultural use, and the experience of the last several decades has shown conclusively that the best use of this unique area is as an environment for wildlife, and that restoration as near as is possible to the conditions existing prior to drainage, is desirable; and

Whereas this legislature recognized the desirability of restoring Horicon Marsh in 1927, by creating in said area a wildlife refuge and game preserve by chapter 475 of the laws of 1927, now section 29.571 of the Wisconsin statutes, which chapter required that the conservation commission "shall purchase or acquire by condemnation proceedings the land known as the Horicon Marsh, or as much thereof as it may deem necessary * * *" and further authorized the said commission "to construct and maintain a dam or dams in or near the city of Horicon to control and regulate the floodwaters on Rock River, and to restore the public waters of Rock River on Horicon Marsh to the natural levels existing prior to the private drainage of the same;" and

Whereas the conservation commission did in due course construct a dam in the city of Horicon, adequate to regulate and flood the waters on Rock River, and to restore the waters of Rock River to the levels existing prior to drainage, and did, in fact, acquire approximately 1,100 acres in the south end of the marsh, and took appropriate steps to have a determination made of the natural levels of Rock River in Horicon Marsh, by the public service commission, and the conservation commission thereupon proceeded by means of said dam to raise the levels of the waters in Rock River to such levels as were found by the public service commission to be the original or natural levels; and

Whereas litigation resulting from the attempt of the Wisconsin conservation commission to carry out the mandate of this legislature of 1927 terminated in a decision by the Supreme Court of Wisconsin (221 Wis. 246), holding in substance that since the drainage privately done was done with the consent of all of the owners of land involved and did not, in fact, impair the navigability of Rock River, the State of Wisconsin may not now "in view of * * * the long acquiescence by the State * * * in the status created by completion of the project" question the lawful character of the original drainage, and further held that restoration of Horicon Marsh, which will necessitate the impounding and raising of the waters in Rock River above the levels resulting from drainage, can be accomplished only with the consent of the owners of lands affected thereby and by compensating such owners for any loss or damage which they might suffer by reason of the raising of such water levels; and

Whereas it is universally conceded that the restoration of Horicon Marsh for use as a migratory wild-fowl refuge and nesting area, and as a habitat for upland game, birds, and fur-bearing animals, is desirable and constitutes the best and most practical usage to which said area can be devoted, and that the only questions to be determined in such restoration project are: (1) The extent of the areas to be acquired; that is, what lands in addition to the low-lying center portion shall be needed, and (2) the source of funds for acquisition purposes; and

Whereas the Wisconsin State Planning Board has prepared a detailed factual study of the Horicon Marsh, including data on the acreage involved in the various portions thereof, indicating that the low-lying center portion, all of which would of necessity have to be acquired in a restoration program, comprises 17,545 acres; a secondary higher land area adjacent to the low-lying center portion, comprises 7,640 acres; and a third or still higher land area adjacent to the secondary area, comprises 4,182 acres; and the said study and survey also giving complete detailed information on ownership and assessed valuation of all areas involved; and

Whereas in any restoration program of Horicon Marsh flowage rights or title must be acquired by the State and the reasonable market value thereof must be paid to the owners of the lands involved, regardless of whether such areas be acquired by negotiation or by condemnation, and there cannot, therefore, be involved in any acquisition or restoration program any question of conflict with the rights of private owners or taking without adequate and just compensation; and

Whereas the State of Wisconsin has heretofore not made available funds for carrying out the legislative mandate of 1927 to restore Horicon Marsh, and it is self-evident that, in view of current State finances, no adequate funds are available at this time from State sources either by way of appropriation from the general fund of the State or from the conservation fund; and

Whereas Congress has enacted legislation (approved September 2, 1937) designated as the "Federal Aid in Wildlife Restoration Act" (50 Stat. 917) and popularly known as the Pittman-Robertson Act, by the terms of which moneys accruing to the Federal Government from the tax imposed on firearms, shells, and cartridges are set aside as a special fund for apportionment among the several States for wildlife-restoration purposes, and wildlife restoration under said act is construed to mean and include the "selection, restoration, rehabilitation, and improvement of areas of land or water adaptable as feeding, resting, or breeding places for wildlife, including acquisition by purchase, condemnation, lease, or gift of such areas or estates or interests therein as are suitable or capable of being made suitable therefor," and the amount available to the State of Wisconsin for the current fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, together with the State's contribution amounting in all to more than $30,000, and sums available from said Federal source after the current fiscal year and continuously thereafter will aggregate, on the basis of present estimates and including the State's contribution to said funds, approximately $90,000 per annum; and

Whereas this legislature has before it a bill to enable the State to accept funds under the Pittman-Robertson Act, and to participate with the Federal Government in projects thereunder, being bill 160 A, which passed the assembly by unanimous vote on April 27, 1939, and is now pending before the senate on a recommendation for concurrence by the committee on State and local government; and

Whereas there is no question but that restoration of Horicon Marsh is a project coming within the terms of the Pittman-Robertson Act, and the United States Biological Survey, which is charged with the administration of said act and the selection and approval of projects submitted by the several States, has through its chief and through its officials charged with the duties of administering said act indicated unqualifiedly that the Horicon Marsh would be a suitable, worthy, and desirable project for the State of Wisconsin to submit as its major project; and

Whereas Horicon Marsh, by reason of its great importance not only in the State but nationally as a unique wildlife refuge, and because of the legislative mandate of 1927 for its restoration, which mandate has never been repealed, and because of its great additional value as a reservoir for water storage at the headwaters of the Rock River, for flood control, and for its great recreational possibilities for the residents of the State of Wisconsin, there is no single contemplated project before the public of Wisconsin today as important and as far-reaching as Horicon Marsh: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the senate (the assembly concurring), That it is the sense of this legislature that in the selection of projects for use of funds available to the State under the Pittman-Robertson Act, the restoration of Horicon Marsh be given first consideration; and the Wisconsin Conservation Commission is requested to work out a program and submit it for approval to the United States Biological Survey for restoration and acquisition of Horicon Marsh with the use of Pittman-Robertson funds and the contributions to be made by the State under said act, such program to include acquisition of such areas as in the judgment of the conservation commission and the United States Biological Survey may be necessary for restoration and for administration as a wildlife refuge and public hunting and fishing areas, such acquisition to be in full compliance with the laws of the State and the United States, condemnation of areas under State law, and payment to the owners of such areas condemned of any amounts determined by the court under Wisconsin law to be reasonable, where acquisition cannot be accomplished by negotiation; and be it further

Resolved, That since detailed information as to the areas which will be needed, ownership, and estimated values are now available, that the restoration of Horicon Marsh as Wisconsin's major project under the Pittman-Robertson Act be submitted to the United States Biological Survey for approval forthwith, and that the conservation commission cooperate with the United States Biological Survey in working out the details of said program as speedily as possible; and be it further

Resolved, That properly attested copies of this resolution be transmitted to the United States Biological Survey and to each Wisconsin Member of Congress.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. HILL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 2225) to create a new group within the Air Corps, Regular Army, with the designations of junior flight officer, flight officer, and senior flight officer, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 764) thereon.

Mr. WALSH, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to which was referred the bill (S. 2662) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to convey an easement in certain lands to the city of New York, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 765) thereon.

Mr. HARRISON, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to which were referred the following bill and joint resolution, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 2526. A bill to authorize Leonhard Stejneger, of the United States National Museum, to accept certain decoration from the Norwegian Government (Rept. No. 766); and

H. J. Res. 315. Joint resolution to provide for the adjudication by a Commissioner of Claims of American nationals against the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (Rept. No. 767).

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS PRESENTED

Mr. TRUMAN (for Mrs. CARAWAY), from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on today, July 12, 1939, that committee presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions:

BILLS AND A JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. NEELY:

S. 2782. A bill for the relief of Harold W. Kinderman; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

S. 2783. A bill for the relief of the estates of Marie R. Morkovsky and Alphons Morkovsky, both deceased; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. KING:

S. 2784. A bill to amend section 4 of the act entitled "An act to provide a civil government for the Virgin Islands of the United States," approved June 22, 1936; to the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs.

By Mr. STEWART:

S. 2785. A bill to amend the Federal Firearms Act (Public, No. 785, 75th Cong.) so as to more adequately define the term "ammunition" as said term is defined in said act; to the Committee on Commerce.

(Mr. BARBOUR introduced Senate bill 2786, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency, and appears under a separate heading.)

By Mr. CONNALLY:

S. 2787. A bill for the relief of Maude Smith; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. PITTMAN:

S. 2788. A bill to amend the act entitled "An act for the grading and classification of clerks in the Foreign Service of the United States of America, and providing compensation therefor," approved February 23, 1931, as amended; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

By Mr. STEWART:

S. J. Res. 168. Joint resolution authorizing an appropriation for the purpose of further improving and enlarging the campus and facilities of the Columbia Military Academy, Tennessee, in which the Federal Government retains certain rights and equities; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

INTEREST RATES ON HOME MORTGAGES

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President, I am sending to the desk for introduction and appropriate reference a bill which I hope may be passed before adjournment. It relates to the interest rates now being charged and to be charged in the future on home mortgages. Because of the importance of this subject, I beg to make a brief statement of the purposes of the bill. I do this so that my colleagues in the Senate may have a clear understanding of the measure without looking up the existing laws relating to the operations of the Federal Home Loan Bank System and the Federal Housing Administration.

Briefly, the bill would have the following results:

First. Lower the interest rate on unpaid balances of all home mortgages held by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, the so-called "distress" mortgages taken over by the H. O. L. C. under emergency authority approved in 1932 and 1933, on which the mortgagors are now paying 5 percent. The new rate would be 4 percent.

Second. Similarly, lower the interest rate from 5 to 4 percent on all newly insured mortgages financed through the Federal Housing Administration, the new rate to become effective 90 days after passage of the bill.

Third. Limit the "spread" between the borrowing rate of the Federal Home Loan Bank System, on its own debentures, and the lending rate to building and loan and other home-financing institutions, to one-half of 1 percent.

Fourth. As a condition of all future advances to building and loan and similar institutions by Federal Home Loan banks, require borrowing institutions to charge home builders an interest rate not more than 2 percent higher than that at which they are able to obtain advances from the F. H. L. B. As the Federal Home Loan Bank System is now able to sell its debentures at an interest level of 2 percent or less, my bill would make the loaning rate to member institutions  $2\frac{1}{2}$  percent on the present market, and restrict the interest charge of borrowing institutions to  $4\frac{1}{2}$  percent.

I am hopeful that the bill can be passed by Congress before we adjourn, and that its passage will be followed by a general lowering of interest rates for home-building purposes all along the line. This would be a natural result of competition for this business. Many home owners whose properties are now mortgaged also would be able, under these circumstances, to refinance their mortgages at lower interest rates.

To my mind this is one of the greatest single stumbling blocks to prosperity. Interest rates generally are entirely out of line with other prices, and likewise fail to reflect the condition of the banks and other lending institutions, most of which are filled to overflowing with idle funds. I am convinced that banks, life insurance companies, finance companies, building and loan institutions, and all other agencies lending money for home construction would make substantially more actual profits at lower interest rates, as these encourage a greater volume of building.

It is conceivable that a building boom, thus stimulated, would do much to restore prosperity. It would have a tremendously beneficial effect in putting idle money into circulation, and at the same time put the building industry and the mortgage business on a much sounder basis than they are now.

Building-trades workers would find jobs, millions of Americans could live in better homes, and millions of others would have their fixed charges reduced at a time when these are eating up a disproportionate share of their total income.

I cannot see how anyone would be injured by the proposed legislation, and I believe the whole country would benefit.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed at this point in the Record.

There being no objection, the bill (S. 2786) to reduce the interest rate on Home Owners' Loan Corporation mortgages, to limit the interest rate collectible by institutions borrowing funds from Federal Home Loan banks, and to further limit the interest rate collectible on mortgages insurable by the Federal Housing Administration was read twice by its title, referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency, and ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the "Home Loan Interest Reduction Act of 1939."

SEC. 2. (a) Section 5 of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 5. No institution shall be admitted to or retained in membership, or granted the privileges of nonmember borrowers, if (1) the combined total of the amounts paid to it for interest, commission, bonus, discount, premium, and other similar charges with respect to any home-mortgage loan made on or after July 22, 1932, and prior to the date of enactment of the Home Loan Interest Reduction Act of 1939, less a proper deduction for all dividends, refunds, and cash credits of all kinds, creates an actual net cost to the home owner in excess of the maximum legal rate of interest or, in case there is a lawful contract rate of interest applicable to such transactions, in excess of such rate (regardless of any exemption from usury laws), or, in case there is no legal rate of interest or lawful contract rate of interest applicable to such transactions, in excess of 8 percent per annum in the State where such property is located, or (2) the combined total of the amounts paid to it for interest, commission, bonus, discount, premium, and other similar charges with respect to any home-mortgage loan made on or after the date of enactment of the Home Loan Interest Reduction Act of 1939, less a proper deduction for all dividends, refunds, and cash credits of all kinds, creates an actual net cost to the home owner in excess of 2 percent more than the rate of interest on advances made by Federal Home Loan banks to member or nonmember borrowers at the time such home owner secured his loan."

(b) The first sentence of subsection (c) of section 10 of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, as amended, is amended by striking out the period at the end thereof and inserting in lieu of such period a colon and the following: "Provided, That the rate of interest upon any such advance made after the date of enactment of the Home Loan Interest Reduction Act of 1939 shall not be in excess of one-half of 1 percent more than the average rate of interest paid on obligations issued under section 11 during the 5 years immediately preceding the making of such advance."

SEC. 3. The Board of Directors of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation is authorized and directed to reduce to 4 percent per annum the rate of interest payable from and after the date of enactment of this act on the unpaid balance outstanding of any loan made by such Corporation and secured by a home mortgage or other obligation or lien upon real estate.

SEC. 4. From and after 90 days after enactment of this act, no mortgage (other than a mortgage for which the Administrator of the Federal Housing Administration has prior to the expiration of the aforesaid 90-day interval made a commitment to insure) shall be eligible for insurance under any section of the National Housing Act, as amended, unless such mortgage bears interest (exclusive of premium charges for insurance) at not to exceed 4 percent per annum on the amount of the principal obligation outstanding at any time.

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT—AMENDMENT

Mr. BILBO submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 6635) to amend the Social Security Act, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

IMPORTATIONS OF WOOD PULP OR PULPWOOD

Mr. BORAH submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 160), which was referred to the Committee on Finance:

Resolved, That the United States Tariff Commission, under authority conferred by section 332 of the Tariff Act of 1930, is directed to investigate and report to the Senate all facts relating to wood pulp or pulpwood, showing the volume of importations compared with domestic production and the conditions, causes, and effects relating to foreign competition, and all other facts showing the differences in, or which affect competition between, the production of wood pulp or pulpwood in the United States or that imported in the principal markets of the United States. Such report to be made to the Senate not later than January 15, 1940.

FLOOD CONTROL—AMENDMENTS

Mr. TAFT submitted three amendments intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 6634) amending previous flood-control acts, and authorizing certain preliminary examinations and surveys for flood control, and for other purposes, which were referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed.

ADDRESS BY SENATOR TAFT AT CORNERSTONE LAYING OF DOCTORS' HOSPITAL

[Mr. BYRD asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record an address delivered by Senator TAFT on July 11, 1939, on the occasion of the laying of the cornerstone of the Doctors' Hospital in Washington, D. C., which appears in the Appendix.]

SECOND PORTION OF STATEMENT ON NEUTRALITY BY LOUIS B. WARD

[Mr. REYNOLDS asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a portion of the statement on neutrality made by Hon. Louis B. Ward before the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE ROOSEVELT ADMINISTRATION—ARTICLE BY GENERAL JOHNSON

[Mr. WILEY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article on the Roosevelt administration by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, which appears in the Appendix.]

RECIPROCAL-TRADE TREATY WITH CANADA—IMPORT OF RED-CEDAR SHINGLES

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the body of the RECORD, as part of my remarks, copy of a letter which I sent to Secretary of State Cordell Hull on July 6, 1939, together with certain exhibits dealing with the red-cedar-shingle industry.

There is also accompanying the group of documents which I hold in my hand a letter from the Secretary of State, dated May 23, 1939, to which my letter, first referred to, was a reply.

Mr. President, this correspondence is self-explanatory. It throws considerable light on one phase of the reciprocal trade-treaty policy, and shows how careless the State Department has been of the interest of the lumber industry of the Pacific Northwest, which is our greatest industry in that section.

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

JULY 6, 1939.

HON. CORDELL HULL,
Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. SECRETARY: I have your letter of May 23 in reply to my letters of February 25, February 28, and May 3, 1939, with reference to imports of red-cedar shingles. I note you continue to take the view that no substantial damage has been inflicted upon the red-cedar-shingle industry of the United States by the concession made to Canada in the reciprocal-trade treaty that goes into effect June 17. Your letter gives a quantity of statistics intended to show that the United States industry has not been damaged.

I have been waiting to answer your letter until figures became available of the imports of shingles from Canada for the first week of unrestricted shipments. I now have these figures, and they appear to me to completely refute the theoretical statements of the State Department. I think I am safe in assuming that a single fact will overthrow a thousand theories, and in this case the fact is at hand. I am advised by the Customs Bureau that imports of Canadian shingles for the week of June 18-24 totaled 237,915 squares, which is an all-time high mark. This compares with a general average per week during quota periods of 60,000 squares.

This huge total entering during the first week after the quota law became a dead letter compares with 116,000 squares during the first week that the quota was open in 1939; that is, the week of June 1-7, inclusive. A further comparison is afforded by the opening 9 days of the quota period in 1938. July 1 fell on a Friday, and it is therefore desirable to take Friday and Saturday of that week and the 7 days of the following week, making a total of 9 days, and during those 9 days shingle imports totaled 188,000 squares. The destructive effect of the removal of the shingle quota law is well illustrated by these figures.

I also waited to reply to your letter until I had available the printed hearings on S. 1720, the buy-American bill, at which representatives of the shingle industry testified. At that hearing Mr. E. F. Herr, representing the Washington-Oregon Shingle Weavers District Council, testified:

"The industry has available a sufficient number of trained workmen, machines, and material to supply the entire wood-shingle demand of the United States without increasing the present productive capacity. This is clearly proved by the fact that during 1937, when the Canadian imports furnished 26.6 percent of the American consumption, 44.3 percent of the United States mills' capacity was idle."

Mr. Herr also testified:

"In a recent report on the Canadian red-cedar shingle industry that has come to our attention we note the presence in their operation of a large percentage of orientals, mostly employed in the higher-paid or skilled brackets. This report states that the hourly wage average in British Columbia is 60½ cents and that the work-week is 48 hours. We do not intend to see our industry average reduced to that figure, nor do we intend to increase our weekly hours of work from 36 to 48 in order to meet the Canadian idea of employment."

"If our union members are to maintain their present status, the market for our product must not be given away or traded off; or, if a portion of it is to be handed over to a foreign country, that portion must be such as has been established over a period of years and not increased to the point that our industry cannot survive and our membership be thrown on relief rolls."

I should comment at this point that the 60½ cents an hour wage rate average in British Columbia, which may seem to some a high average, is not actually so, because practically all of the work done in shingle mills is of a highly skilled nature. The average wage in our own mills in 1939 was 92.3 cents per hour.

Leaving aside for a moment the details of the statistics you offer, may I suggest it is reasonable to believe the Canadian Government would not have been so eager to eliminate the barriers raised against imports of red-cedar shingles if they had not felt that breaking down that barrier would bring its producers important advantages. Prior to enactment of the new reciprocal-trade treaty Canada was given 25 percent of the United States red-cedar shingle market, and that 25 percent was calculated to absorb 75 percent of Canada's normal red-cedar shingle production. You say that the policy of permitting an unrestricted flow into this country of a commodity directly competitive with our own, and produced with cheap labor, does not and will not have an adverse effect on American producers. Such a statement appears to me not to be in accord with the facts learned from everyday observation, namely, that where two products of the same kind and of equal quality are offered there is a tendency to use the one that can be purchased by the wholesaler for a lower price. To the ultimate consumer the price of the two competing products will be the same, since if they were not the same it would be impossible to sell the product that was higher in price. In other words, the problem of the United States red-cedar shingle industry is not one of price to the consumer, but one of price paid by the wholesaler, and the wholesaler is going to buy the shingles that he can get for the least money. Full evidence has been given you of the difference in cost of production in United States and Canadian shingles, this being at least 60 cents per square.

I believe you will agree with me that it is only common sense that the Canadian Government expected to obtain a definite advantage in the United States market or it would not have so urgently demanded the elimination of the 25-percent quota under which its producers previously operated. I think that you will also agree with me that it is only common sense that to whatever extent the imports increase over the 25-percent quota that was previously allowed, the United States shingle producers will be deprived of their normal domestic market to just that extent.

In the first page of your letter you point out that "the industry cannot be seriously harmed as the provisions of the new agreement have not entered into effect and that the 25-percent quota is still operative."

This statement is made apparently on the assumption that United States business people will be wholly oblivious to the effects of governmental action. However, experience shows, and I think you know, that any action or prospective action taken by the Government immediately causes a recasting of business plans. Shingle wholesalers, who were informed that the 25-percent quota on Canadian shingles would definitely be eliminated and that it was just a question of fixing the date of elimination, could not be expected to act as though the quota would continue indefinitely. The United States trade was informed, by Canadian rumor, early in November 1938, as to the terms of the new shingle concession and the effect on mill price was just the same as though the change in quota had actually been made effective at that time. Buyers of shingles are as smart as buyers of any other product and the anticipation of a flood of Canadian shingles, which might come in at any time, was sufficient to depress the market.

In the second page of your letter you say, however, that actually the domestic market was not depressed. You give certain figures taken from the American Lumberman. However, these figures do not apply to net prices received by the mills and those are the prices about which we are concerned. I stated to you that the effect was to depress shingle prices and that was the case.

I attach hereto an exhibit marked "A," which was supplied by the United States Red Cedar Shingle Industry, Inc., showing that the mill price of 16-inch, No. 1 shingles, declined from a high of $3.20 on October 4, 1938, to a low of $2.75 on November 29, 1938.

I also attach an exhibit marked "B" which indicates that the mill price of 18-inch, No. 1 shingles (perfections), declined from $3.70 on October 11, 1938, to a low of $3.10 on January 20, 1939. These figures are authoritative as they are obtained weekly by the Red Cedar Shingle Bureau, of Seattle, Wash., from member mills on both sides of the line and are published to members only each week.

I am informed by the Red Cedar Shingle Industry that if your experts will apply the new mill price of No. 1, No. 2, and No. 3 shingles to the entire cut, they will find that our operators have been unable to get back the cost of raw material and labor. In other words, the margin of profit was wiped out in the drop in price.

Your letter also states that although imports were somewhat greater in the early months of this year than in the corresponding months in 1938, they do not appear to have had adverse effects on domestic prices or production as a result of the new trade agreement. Unquestionably, you are referring to the price to the consumer and not to the mill price, as I have indicated.

With regard to production your conclusion is not correct because while you show an increase of 15 percent in American production for the first 3 months of 1939, you have not taken into account that imports increased 77 percent. In other words, if it had not been for the definite knowledge of Canadian shippers that the quota would shortly be off, they would presumably have spread out their shingle exports to the United States over a longer period of time instead of exporting comparatively large quantities with the resultant increase in imports mentioned as compared with the first 3 months of prior years.

Naturally the Canadians made no effort to hold back their exports in view of the fact that they knew they would soon be able to send shingles into the United States without any restriction whatever.

The value of the quota was indicated by the fact that 138 cars of shingles were waiting at the Canadian border when the last quota period closed. If the quota had not been on, those shingles would have come across and surely would have had some effect on the American shingle producer, because he would have had that much less market.

Mr. David M. Williams, secretary-manager of the Red Cedar Shingle Industry, Inc., after going over some of the figures you use, challenges them and points out that the figures you quote from the American Lumberman are at variance with the figures you quote from the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

I gather from your letter that you doubt that mills have been and are being shut down in the United States due to the reciprocal treaties arrangement with Canada. Mr. Williams offers to supply you with sworn statements if you so desire with regard to these mill operations.

I quote from a letter I received from Mr. Williams dated June 12: "Our statement with regard to shut-down was not made idly and if proof is required, we can furnish it together with stories of near labor riots at Everett, Wash. Congressman WALLGREN was in Everett at the time and can testify to the ugly temper of the men."

Specific testimony as to the shut-downs of shingle mills was introduced at the hearings on S. 1720, and you will find this testimony at page 126. I am enclosing copy of the hearings marked at the proper page, and I am also having these data inserted at this point in this letter:

"Mr. HERR. I have the list of mills, showing the time they lost in October, November, and December 1933, and then again the mills that were closed entirely between March 17 and March 30, 1939. The reason I give those dates of March 17 and March 30 is because on the 17th day of March our central office sent out a circular letter requesting that information. The letter stated:

"A late report from Washington, D. C., states that a bill has been introduced in Congress to restore the 25-percent shingle quota. This bill needs much support from our representatives and their constituents if it is to become a law. We are in need of information as to the number of mills now closed. It is very necessary that this information be returned to this office at once."

"That notice went out on the 17th, and the information was compiled on March 30.

"Mr. SEELIG. Can you supply for the record a compilation of what mills were down, and what mills were partly down, and the number of machines running?

"Mr. HERR. Yes.

"Senator BONE. If that information is to be supplied, it ought to go into the record at this point in connection with your testimony.

"Mr. HERR. I do not have the information written up. I will have to supply it later.

"(Mr. Herr supplied the following information for inclusion in the record:)

"Mr. SEELIG. The shut-down of these mills, in your opinion, was due to the prospective effect of the quota being lifted? That is, the manufacturers were necessarily, in advance of the going into effect of the trade treaty, discounting its effects; is that correct?

"Mr. HERR. No. It was just a question of their not having any business.

"Mr. SEELIG. That is what I am asking. Were they not, in effect, discounting the effect? Let me phrase it another way. When a shingle dealer in this country found out that at a certain date Canadian shingles would be permitted to come in in unlimited quantities, what effect did that have on him with regard to his desire to order from American shingle producers?

"Mr. HERR. It just curtailed all orders; that is all.

"Mr. SEELIG. With the hope that he would get a lower price later?

"Mr. HERR. That is correct.

"Mr. SEELIG. So, the effect of the removal of the shingle quota was felt even in advance of the actual removal?

"Mr. HERR. That is correct."

Again, your letter mentions the alleged abnormal demand caused by a hurricane. I have so often disproved the hurricane myth that I feel reluctant to mention it again. This so-called abnormal demand caused by the hurricane is nothing but a fairy tale, and that is known to the Department because I submitted definite proof showing that the shingle mills of my State were prepared to take care of all orders. I guaranteed to handle those orders through my office and to insure that they would be filled. The net result of my request for orders from those who were asking that Canadian shingles be admitted above the quota in order to satisfy the so-called hurricane demand was orders for only 10 cars of shingles instead of the great number of cars that certain interests said were wanted. The proven fact is that United States produced shingles have been available at all times in proper sizes and in any quantity. The State Department's experts will not help your case by constantly reiterating the statements that have been proved to be untrue.

Mention is made on page 6 of your letter of the increase in domestic production and shipments in 1939. This increase is undoubtedly due to both the desire of the manufacturers to liquidate log stocks and also to the demand built up by the Government building program. As I previously indicated, imports of red-cedar shingles from Canada in the first quarter of 1939 were 77 percent greater than average imports recorded for the same period in the 3 preceding years.

On page 7 reference is made to prices. The period of recession in business in 1937 and early 1938 is evident in the table presented, and the return to some degree of normalcy is indicated in the figures shown for the first quarter of 1939. But the January 1939 price is only 7 cents higher than the January 1937 price, and the February 1939 price is 12 cents less than 1937, and the March 1939 price is 10 cents less than the March 1937 figure.

It should be noted in connection with these price changes that the average wage per hour in the shingle industry increased more than 13 cents in 1937 and 1938. This means that the injury to the United States shingle industry by reason of the decreased prices is even greater than these figures might indicate.

Mr. Williams challenges the statement made by American consular officers that mills representing 90 percent of the Canadian production are operating on only a single-shift basis, 6 days a week. Mr. Williams refers to a recent report of the British Columbia Commissioner of Labor, who stated that as of January 1939 5 mills out of 10, with 72 machines out of 165, were working 2 shifts. In view of the labor commissioner's report, it seems to me that the reports of the United States consular officers should be rechecked.

I wish to call to your attention that I have submitted to you information giving the names and locations of United States mills that have reduced their production and have also given you detailed information with regard to the differential in cost of production and in wage rates between Canadian and United States mills.

I feel that the State Department is stubbornly refusing to recognize the true state of affairs in the shingle industry, and seeks to argue the matter rather than actually find out what the facts of the case are and act upon them. It seems to me that a strong effort has been made by the Department to justify the Canadian viewpoint with regard to the shingle problem rather than to understand the viewpoint of the United States producers and to act so far as possible in the interests of the United States producers.

Suave assurances by the Department that all the facts have been given careful consideration will not placate the wrath of the employees of the shingle mills who are being deprived of their employment by reason of the competition of cheaply produced Canadian shingles. This wrath no doubt will grow as the full effects of the elimination of the quota become apparent. I venture the prediction that the beginning of a period of severe depression in the United States red cedar shingle industry is under way.

Needless to say, I intend to remind the American people from time to time of the destruction of an important industry in my State due directly to the attitude of the State Department.

Yours sincerely,

HOMER T. BONE.

MAY 23, 1939.

The Honorable HOMER T. BONE,

United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR BONE: I refer again to your letters of February 25, February 28, and May 3, 1939, with reference to the provisions regarding red cedar shingles in the new trade agreement with Canada. With the second letter there was enclosed a statement on the subject by the United States Red Cedar Shingle Industry, Inc. I have delayed a further reply to your letters until a careful study could be made of their contents, including the statement of the Red Cedar Shingle Industry.

First, as to your statement and that of the United States Red Cedar Shingle Industry, that the domestic cedar shingle industry has been seriously harmed by the shingle provisions of the new trade agreement with Canada, I should like to point out that those provisions have not yet entered into effect and that the quota established pursuant to the provisions of section 811 of the Revenue Act of 1936, limiting the quantity of shingles that may be imported, is still operative.

Secondly, although imports were somewhat greater in the early months of this year than in the corresponding months in 1938, they do not appear to have had adverse effects on domestic prices or production as a result of the new trade agreement.

The United States average wholesale price on all red cedar shingles, as compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, advanced from $2.955 per square in August 1938 to $3 in September and $3.175 in October. The October price was the highest ever recorded in any month for red cedar shingles, with the exception possibly of 1919 and 1920, when prices were unusually high. Prices of prepared roofing and of building material in general, incidentally, remained practically unchanged and in some cases declined during the last half of 1938.

The United States Red Cedar Shingle Industry contends, however, that the new trade agreement caused prices to fall sharply. On page 1 of the statement of the United States Red Cedar Shingle Industry it is stated:

"The immediate effect, however, was felt in November 1938, following the public announcement of the new agreement. The market broke approximately 17 percent, or 40 to 55 cents per square."

I am not aware upon what source of information the industry bases this statement. Below are the average wholesale prices per square of red-cedar shingles at Seattle, as published in the American Lumberman. It will be recalled that the trade agreement was made public on November 17, 1938.

	Nov. 14	Nov. 28	Amount of change Nov. 28 over Nov. 14	Dec. 10
Royals:
1-24"-4/2	$4.45-$4.60	$4.45-$4.50	Cents 0 to -10	$4.45-$4.50
2-24"-4/2	3.20-3.30	3.20-3.30	0	3.20-3.30
3-24"-4/2	2.30-2.40	2.15-2.25	-15	2.15-2.25
Perfections:
1-18"-5/2 1/4	3.70-3.85	3.65-3.80	-5	3.70-3.80
2-18"-5/2 1/4	2.70-2.85	2.65-2.80	-5	2.65-2.80
XXXXX:
1-16"-5/2	3.25-3.30	3.20-3.25	-5	3.20-3.25
2-16"-5/2	2.15-2.25	2.10-2.20	-5	2.15-2.25
3-16"-5/2	1.80-1.85	1.65-1.75	-15 to -10	1.65-1.75

According to this information, the average drop in price of XXXXX shingles was only from 5 to 15 cents per square, and less in the case of Royals and Perfections.

Furthermore, in the last 3 months of 1938, the average wholesale price of shingles was actually higher than it was in the same period in 1935, 1936, and 1937. Compared with the 3 previous years,

United States average wholesale prices for October, November, and December 1938, as compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, were as follows:

	1935	1936	1937	1938
October.....	$2.859	$2.525	$2.713	$3.175
November.....	2.619	2.525	2.640	2.945
December.....	2.635	2.555	2.525	2.819

The statement of the United States red-cedar shingle industry continues:

"* * * the combination of the break in prices and cancellation of orders caused a large percentage of mills to be shut down, thereby throwing hundreds of men out of work, and causing a confused situation for the manufacturers."

The curtailment of production during the latter part of the year is, of course, just as seasonal an occurrence as is the decline in prices. Below are shown monthly production figures (in squares) compiled by the Bureau of the Census for the last quarter of the past 6 years.

Years	October	November	December
1933.....	332,000	180,000	172,000
1934.....	475,000	382,000	307,000
1935.....	609,000	365,000	368,000
1936.....	576,727	437,978	393,399
1937.....	482,235	381,787	283,896
1938.....	660,024	543,345	424,756

It will be noted that in 1938 production in each of the last 3 months was greater than in any of the previous 5 years.

In January 1939, when Canadian shingles were again permitted to enter, large imports occurred. Owing partly to special factors, such as the demand resulting from the hurricane of September 1938 and the large number of shingles that were shipped to the United States at that time but could not be entered for consumption until January 1, 1939, because the semiannual quota had been filled on September 28, imports in January were 79 percent greater than the average imports in January of the years 1936 to 1938. Imports in the first 4 weeks of January amounted to 304,000 squares. Domestic production, however, was 30 percent higher in January 1939 than the average production in January of the years 1936 to 1938.

On February 15, 1939, in accordance with the provisions of section 811 of the Revenue Act of 1936, which have remained in effect pending the definitive coming into force of the new agreement, a quota for the first half of 1939 was proclaimed, limiting imports during that period to 1,051,168 squares, or 25 percent of consumption during the previous 6 months. The quota was filled on April 14, 1939. The quota for the first half of 1938, which amounted to 916,246 squares, was filled on April 26, 1938. Imports during February, March, and the first half of April, however, did not continue at as great a rate as in the first 4 weeks of January; they averaged 60,000 squares weekly, as compared with 76,000 squares weekly for the first 4 weeks in January.

Meanwhile United States production and shipments continued to increase. In the first 3 months of 1939 (the latest period for which statistics are available) domestic shipments of red cedar shingles amounted to 1,184,308 squares, exceeding by 15 percent the average of 1,033,926 squares recorded for such shipments in the first quarter of the 3 preceding years. The 1939 shipments were 19 percent greater than the shipments of 997,383 squares in January, February, and March 1938. Domestic production in January, February, and March, 1939 was 22 percent greater than in the first 3 months of 1938, totaling 1,248,485 squares in 1939, compared with 1,020,896 squares in the previous year. Prices in the first 3 months of 1939, compared with the 3 previous years, as compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, are shown below.

	1936	1937	1938	1939	Amount of increase, 1939 over 1938
January.....	$2.553	$2.750	$2.494	$2.825	$0.331
February.....	2.553	2.950	2.538	2.825	.287
March.....	2.590	2.950	2.600	2.850	.250

The statistics show clearly that, far from being injured by the shingle provisions of the new agreement, the United States industry is producing and shipping more shingles and is receiving higher prices for them this year than last.

The Red Cedar Shingle Industry states that the transportation cost of the finished product is greater from the United States shingle-producing areas to American markets than it is from the Canadian areas, because, while rail rates are about the same, the Canadians enjoy an advantage in water shipments in that they can use the ships of any nation, whereas United States shippers must use American ships at established rates. An examination of import statistics shows that imports of red-cedar shingles into the United States at Atlantic and Gulf ports during the period January 1 to February 25, 1939, were less than 4 percent of the total imports of 532,000 squares at all districts. Such shipments by water form an insignificant part of lumber cargoes.

The Red Cedar Shingle Industry contends, in addition, that the Canadian mills are running two shifts a day, or 96 hours weekly. The Department is informed by American consular officers in Canada that while some Canadian mills worked overtime in December 1938, since January 1939 all mills belonging to the Consolidated Red Cedar Shingle Association of British Columbia (representing at least 90 percent of production) have operated a single 8-hour shift 6 days a week. It might be added that the double shift referred to would affect costs only through reduction in overhead.

As has been said previously, however, the existing limitations on imports of red-cedar shingles into the United States are in general the same as those that prevailed last year prior to the revision of the Canadian agreement. In connection with the statement and request submitted to the Committee for Reciprocity Information by the United States Red Cedar Shingle Industry, the interdepartmental trade-agreements organization has been giving careful consideration to the whole matter. It will, of course, be realized that the provisions relative to shingles of the new trade agreement with Canada are established by an international agreement duly entered into. However, the interdepartmental trade-agreements organization is always interested in receiving information with regard to the operation of any trade-agreement concession, and the information submitted by the Red Cedar Shingle Industry, together with any further information it may wish to submit in the future, will continue to receive its careful consideration.

In conclusion, I should like to call your attention to a point frequently overlooked by those who, like the American red-cedar shingle producers, produce goods almost exclusively for the domestic market and are therefore apt to minimize the importance of foreign trade. As a matter of fact, there is a direct relationship between foreign trade and domestic prosperity. When imports and exports are large, domestic employment and consumer purchasing power are increased and the domestic market for products of our own industries are improved accordingly.

When United States exports dropped from $5,157,000,000 in 1929 to the low point of $1,576,000,000 in 1932, partly as a result of the high tariff rates embodied in the Tariff Act of 1930 which helped to bring about and prolong the depression, great numbers of our workers were deprived of their employment and were unable to buy the goods produced by others in the United States, including shingles. The trade-agreements program is designed to restore and expand our foreign trade by means of mutually profitable agreements involving reciprocal adjustments of excessive trade restrictions, and thereby to increase domestic business activity, employment, and consumer purchasing power to the benefit of domestic producers and workers generally. This is of vital importance to all American producers, whether they participate directly in our exports or produce solely for the domestic market since the prosperity of the latter is in such great measure dependent upon the prosperity of our foreign trade.

Sincerely yours,

CORDELL HULL.

AMENDMENT OF TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY ACT—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I send to the desk for printing in the RECORD the conference report that has just been agreed to by the conferees on the bill (S. 1796) to amend the Tennessee Valley Authority Act of 1933. The parliamentary situation is that the House will have to act first. I am merely requesting that the report be printed in the RECORD for the information of the Senate.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, am I to understand that the House Members have also signed the report?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes. Three of the House Members have signed it.

There being no objection, the report was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 1796) to amend the Tennessee Valley Authority Act of 1933, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following:

"That the Tennessee Valley Authority Act of 1933, as amended, is amended by adding after section 15a the following new sections:

"Sec. 15b. No bonds shall be issued by the Corporation after the date of enactment of this section under section 15 or section 15a.

"Sec. 15c. With the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Corporation is authorized, after the date of enactment of this section, to issue bonds not to exceed in the aggregate $61,500,000. Such bonds may be sold by the Corporation to obtain funds which may be used for the following purposes only:

"(1) Not to exceed $46,000,000 may be used for the purchase of electric utility properties of the Tennessee Electric Power Co. and Southern Tennessee Power Co., as contemplated in the contract between the Corporation and the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation and others, dated as of May 12, 1939.

"(2) Not to exceed $6,500,000 may be used for the purchase and rehabilitation of electric utility properties of the Alabama Power Co. and the Mississippi Power Co. in the following-named counties in northern Alabama and northern Mississippi: The counties of Jackson, Madison, Limestone, Lauderdale, Colbert, Lawrence, Morgan, Marshall, De Kalb, Cherokee, Cullman, Winston, Franklin, Marion, and Lamar in northern Alabama, and the counties of Calhoun, Chickasaw, Monroe, Clay, Lowndes, Oktibbeha, Choctaw, Webster, Noxubee, Winston, Neshoba, and Kemper in northern Mississippi.

"(3) Not to exceed $3,500,000 may be used for rebuilding, replacing, and repairing electric utility properties purchased by the Corporation in accordance with the foregoing provisions of this section.

"(4) Not to exceed $3,500,000 may be used for constructing electric transmission lines, substations, and other electrical facilities necessary to connect the electric-utility properties purchased by the Corporation in accordance with the foregoing provisions of this section with the electric-power system of the Corporation.

"(5) Not to exceed $2,000,000 may be used for making loans under section 12a to States, counties, municipalities, and non-profit organizations to enable them to purchase any electric-utility properties referred to in the contract between the Corporation and the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation and others, dated as of May 12, 1939, or any electric-utility properties of the Alabama Power Co. or Mississippi Power Co. in any of the counties in northern Alabama or northern Mississippi named in paragraph (2).

"The Corporation shall file with the President and with the Congress in December of each year a financial statement and complete report as to the expenditure of funds derived from the sale of bonds under this section covering the period not covered by any such previous statement or report. Such bonds shall be in such forms and denominations, shall mature within such periods not more than 50 years from the date of their issue, may be redeemable at the option of the Corporation before maturity in such manner as may be stipulated therein, shall bear such rates of interest not exceeding 3½ percent per annum, shall be subject to such terms and conditions, shall be issued in such manner and amount, and sold at such prices, as may be prescribed by the Corporation with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, That such bonds shall not be sold at such prices or on such terms as to afford an investment yield to the holders in excess of 3½ percent per annum. Such bonds shall be fully and unconditionally guaranteed both as to interest and principal by the United States, and such guaranty shall be expressed on the face thereof, and such bonds shall be lawful investments, and may be accepted as security, for all fiduciary, trust, and public funds, the investment or deposit of which shall be under the authority or control of the United States or any officer or officers thereof. In the event that the Corporation should not pay upon demand when due, the principal of, or interest on, such bonds, the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay to the holder the amount thereof, which is hereby authorized to be appropriated out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and thereupon to the extent of the amount so paid the Secretary of the Treasury shall succeed to all the rights of the holders of such bonds. The Secretary of the Treasury, in his discretion, is authorized to purchase any bonds issued hereunder, and for such purpose the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to use as a public-debt transaction the proceeds from the sale of any securities hereafter issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as amended, and the purposes for which securities may be issued under such act, as amended, are extended to include any purchases of the Corporation's bonds hereunder. The Secretary of the Treasury may, at any time, sell any of the bonds of the Corporation acquired by him under this section. All redemptions, purchases, and sales by the Secretary of the Treasury of the bonds of the Corporation shall be treated as public-debt transactions of the United States. With the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Corporation shall have power to purchase such bonds in the open market at any time and at any price. None of the proceeds of the bonds shall be used for the performance of any proposed contract negotiated by the Corporation under the authority of section 12a of this act until the proposed contract shall have been submitted to and approved by the Federal Power Commission. When any such proposed contract shall have been submitted to the said Commission, the matter shall be given precedence and shall be in every way expedited and the Commission's determination of the matter shall be final. The authority of the Corporation to issue bonds under this section shall expire January 1, 1941, except that if at the time such authority expires the amount of bonds issued by the Corporation under this section is less than $61,500,000, the Corporation may, subject to the foregoing provisions of this section, issue, after the expiration of such period, bonds in an amount not in excess of the amount by which the bonds so issued prior to the expiration of such period is less than $61,500,000, for refunding purposes, or, subject to the provisions of paragraph (5) of this section (limiting the purposes for which loans under section 12a of funds derived from bond proceeds may be made) to provide funds found necessary in the performance of any contract entered into by the Corporation prior to the expiration of such period, under the authority of section 12a."

And the House agree to the same.

AMENDMENT OF SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6635) to amend the Social Security Act, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. When the Senate took a recess yesterday afternoon the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] gave notice that, after the expiration of the armistice this morning, he would like to renew the battle on the pending question, which is the amendment of the Senator from Texas. So, the Chair thinks he should recognize the Senator from Texas.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President—

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield to the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I am wondering how many speeches there are to be made on this particular amendment. I understood that the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. LEE] was going to offer an amendment after the disposition of the pending amendment. Due to the sudden death of one of our colleagues in the other House, several Senators will have to leave as members of the funeral party. I had hoped that the Senate might obtain a vote on the pending amendment at an early hour. I do not, however, desire to cut off any Senator from making a speech on it.

Mr. BYRD rose.

Mr. HARRISON. I understand the Senator from Virginia desires to speak on the amendment?

Mr. BYRD. I do.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I inquire if we could vote on this particular amendment at 1:30 p. m. today?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, at this time, I do not think, without further consideration of the matter, I could consent to that.

Mr. HARRISON. Very well.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I do not care to detain the Senate long on this amendment; but some Senators who now are present were not here yesterday, and I feel it necessary briefly to refer to what the amendment proposes.

As was explained yesterday, the amendment simply provides that in the matter of old-age pension payments the Federal Government shall contribute two-thirds of the payments up to a total of $15, and that after the payments reach $15 the contributions shall be equal, as under the present law. In other words, the Federal Government puts up $10 and the State puts up $5, making $15, and from that point on the amounts are equal; the purpose of the amendment being to encourage and stimulate the States which now, either by reason by having exhausted their available tax resources or from any other cause, have not provided substantial old-age pension payments.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President—

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. CONNALLY. I do.

Mr. McKELLAR. It is unquestionably true, is it not, that this arrangement applies to all the States exactly alike?

Mr. CONNALLY. Exactly.

Mr. President, I wish to make it clear to all Senators who may have labored under any misapprehension yesterday because of the debate regarding the rich and the poor States that this amendment does not discriminate in any-wise against any State. It applies to the rich States just as it does to the poor States. It simply relates to the ratio of the initial contribution, so that a rich State receives the same consideration that a poor one does, and a poor State enjoys the same opportunity and the same consideration as a rich State, except in the amount of stimulation. I think the amendment will stimulate and have a greater effect upon the poor States to encourage them to exert themselves to the utmost to meet the requirements necessary to obtain a substantial Federal payment than it will, perhaps, in the case of the rich States; but, so far as the law and its application are concerned, every State has the same opportunity, and there is no discrimination whatever.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President—

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. CONNALLY. I do.

Mr. HATCH. The Senator has stated that under his amendment there would be no discrimination. I ask him if it is not true that by reason of the inability of some of the States to match the payments of the Federal Government on a strict 50-50 basis the present law discriminates against the poorer States in favor of the richer States?

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator from New Mexico is correct. Technically, of course, the present law applies to every State alike; but in actuality and in practice, what happens in the case of the poorer States was described by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER] yesterday when he stated that his State had exhausted its tax resources, and was not contributing anything to all the other Federal matching programs, but that in the case of old-age pensions all that it had been able to pay so far was $3.08 per head. In a case of that kind, by putting up $2 more, Arkansas would be enabled to pay its pensioners a total of $15, and every other State could do the same thing and receive the same ratio of contribution from the Federal Government.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President—

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH. Assuming that the State and the Federal Government put up the amounts provided for, what is the full amount which the pensioner would receive?

Mr. CONNALLY. Under the present law?

Mr. BORAH. No; under the Senator's amendment.

Mr. CONNALLY. Under the pending bill the maximum has been increased by the House from $30 to $40.

Mr. BORAH. And each pays half?

Mr. CONNALLY. And each pays half. Under the amendment which I offer the Federal contribution would be $2.50 more than the State contribution. In other words, by putting up $10 the State could pay its pensioners $25; by putting up $15 it could pay them $35; and so forth and so on, up to a maximum of $40.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. So that I may understand the Senator's amendment and get it down to fractional figures, I should like to ask the Senator if this calculation is correct: At the present time in my State we pay $22, $11 being paid by the State and $11 by the Federal Government. As I figure, under the Senator's amendment the State would pay $5 and the Federal Government $10. That would make $15.

Mr. CONNALLY. Yes.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Assuming that the State paid the same amount as at present, $11—$6 more than the $5 I have just mentioned—the Federal Government then would put up an additional $6, which would make $12, increasing the total amount from $22 to $27.

Mr. CONNALLY. That is correct.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. And if each put up the maximum amount of $20 under the House provision, the total additional amount would be $9 more from the State and $9 more from the Federal Government, or $18 more, or a total of $45 to the individual pensioner.

Mr. CONNALLY. No; under the bill I think the maximum is $40. The Federal Government may not contribute more than a maximum of $20. The State may pay any additional amount it desires. It may raise the amount to $50 if it wants to do so.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. But, at any rate, under the present system, whereby the State of Washington pays $11, the pensioner would receive $27 instead of $22?

Mr. CONNALLY. That is correct.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. BURKE. In answer to a query from the senior Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH], the Senator from Texas referred to the fact that the increase in the Federal contribution would be $2.50.

Mr. CONNALLY. The amount would be $2.50 more than it is now.

Mr. BURKE. That is the increase over the present amount. That seems a very small amount. I was not here during the entire time the Senator was addressing the Senate yesterday. Did he state the total increased cost to the Federal Government which would result from the adoption of this amendment?

Mr. CONNALLY. I did not; but I can do so. I have an estimate before me.

Mr. BURKE. When it is reduced to $2.50 per individual, that seems to be a very reasonable amount; but I wondered what the total would be.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, the estimate is that this arrangement would entail an additional cost of $80,000,000 to the Federal Treasury.

Mr. BURKE. Eighty million dollars a year?

Mr. CONNALLY. That is correct.

Mr. BURKE. The only further question I should like to ask the Senator is, Has he given consideration to the question where the Federal Government is to get the additional $80,000,000 per year?

Mr. CONNALLY. Of course. I do not provide for it in this bill.

Mr. BURKE. No; naturally not.

Mr. CONNALLY. Of course the Senator from Nebraska knows, however, as the Senator from Texas knows, that all the money we are spending is going to have to come out of the pockets of the taxpayers. It is going to have to come out of the pockets of some of the taxpayers in Illinois about whom the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] was talking yesterday. A great hunk of it will have to come out of the rich men in Illinois; and about January 1941, no matter who is President, and no matter who constitute the Senate, the Finance Committee of the Senate will have to report a tax bill that will jerk some taxpayers out of their boots. We all know that; and that is where the money has to come from, just as the money for all other Federal expenses. It must come from those who have it. It cannot be raised by taxing poverty.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, just one further question. I understand, then, that the Senator has no qualms about imposing by this amendment a further tax burden of $80,000,000 a year on the country for this which he evidently considers a most worthy and deserving purpose.

Mr. CONNALLY. I have not. Let me say further to the Senator from Nebraska that if this $80,000,000 does not come out of the Federal Treasury it is going to come out of the treasuries of some of the States, or else the old people will not get it. The old-age pensioners either will not get it or the additional amounts will come out of the treasuries of the States.

Who puts up the money in the States? The same people who pay Federal taxes. The $80,000,000 will have to come out of either the Treasury of the Federal Government or the treasuries of the State governments. The Federal Treasury represents the comparative economic ability of people to pay taxes more nearly than do the treasuries of the individual States, for the reason I suggested yesterday, namely, that in the great commercial and financial centers built up by the contributions of people from every section of the United States there are aggregated and concentrated the great wealth and the great taxpaying ability, so that such centers should contribute out of their taxes to a project that is for the general welfare of all the people of the United States. I have no hesitation and no qualms of conscience about voting $80,000,000 more out of the Federal Treasury when it lessens by just that much the burdens on State governments, many of which have already practically exhausted their taxing resources upon real estate and upon homes and homesteads and visible property that the tax collector can see, and whose taxes are not levied upon the basis of income, or upon the basis of the real resources and financial strength of the great centers of wealth and population.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for one further question?

Mr. CONNALLY. I am glad to yield.

Mr. BURKE. Then why does not the Senator from Texas go the whole way? If the tax burden ought to be borne by the Federal Government, why not accept the amendment to be offered and have the entire amount paid by the Federal Treasury, or, at least, why set the payments at two-thirds and one-third? Why not make them three-fourths and one-fourth?

Mr. CONNALLY. Will the Senator vote for such a proposal if I will?

Mr. BURKE. I will consider that after the Senator offers it.

Mr. CONNALLY. Of course, the Senator would not vote for it. The Senator from Nebraska is not for it. His question was supposedly asked for purposes of information. Its real purpose—

Mr. BURKE. I have not received any information. [Laughter.]

Mr. CONNALLY. I will answer it. The real purpose was to "flabbergast" the Senator who has the floor. The Senator stated that he was not here yesterday.

Mr. BURKE. Not all of the time.

Mr. CONNALLY. His question proves it, because I explained yesterday, and I will reexplain now for the Senator, though it seems to me that if the Senator was not here yesterday he should have read the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and have informed himself of what happened yesterday—

Mr. BURKE. I much prefer to have the Senator explain it again in his own way; it is so much more interesting. [Laughter.]

Mr. CONNALLY. I thank the Senator. The Senator has bribed me into making a full disclosure. [Laughter.]

I will say to the Senator that I do not favor requiring the Federal Government to pay all the cost, for the reason that, under the law, we permit the States to administer the act; we allow the States to select all the employees; we allow the States to determine to whom old-age pensions shall be paid; and as we do that, I stated on yesterday that, in my opinion, the States ought to participate financially in the program; they ought to feel the responsibility that goes along with the raising of the revenue from their own taxpayers and its expenditure. It is so much easier to spend other people's money than our own money. I do not know what will happen in the years to come, but I believe that now, at least, in the experimental and first years of this plan we should insist that the States make a financial contribution.

If the Senator will observe, my amendment does not refer to two-thirds of all of the cost; it refers only to the amount up to $15, and that is for the purpose of reaching those in the lower brackets. If a man is hungry in Arkansas, his appetite is no more satisfied by $3.08 than it would be in any other State of the Union. By the enactment of the law the Federal Government indicated that it had an interest in the old-age pension system. We did not have to pass the law, but we enacted it, and we said to the States, "Now, you come in." If the Federal Government has any sense of obligation or responsibility, how is that met by paying a man in Arkansas $3.08, as against $15 to a man similarly situated residing in the State of California?

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, if the Senator will pardon me, a complete answer was given to my query by the Senator in his statement that it is so much easier to spend other people's money than our own.

Mr. CONNALLY. That is correct, and I thank the Senator. I am glad I satisfied his curiosity. I think he had that in his mind all the time but merely wanted the Senator from Texas to confirm his judgment. [Laughter.] I appreciate very much having the opportunity.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I do not intend to oppose the Senator's amendment, because a State would be required to put up part of the money, but if we are to take care of the old-age pension problem it will not be long, it seems to me, before the Federal Government will have to take care of the entire matter.

Mr. CONNALLY. That may be.

Mr. BORAH. As the Senator has said, merely because an old person lives in a State which cannot contribute is no reason why he or she should go hungry or in need. Sometime or other we are going to have to take care of this problem on a national basis. I do not say that the Senator is not justified at the present time, but we may look forward to it, because it is coming. We are moving rapidly in that direction.

Mr. CONNALLY. Permit me to say to the Senator from Idaho that, as I indicated a moment ago, perhaps at some time in the future the system will be entirely federalized, but as practical legislators, the Congress is not now ready to place the entire responsibility on the Federal Government. It has been tested out in the committees and in the House of Representatives, and the Congress is not ready to do it. The amendment of the Senator from Texas, according to the view of the Senator from Idaho, is an improvement on the present law; so I do not see how the Senator from Idaho can refrain from voting for the amendment I now offer, entertaining the views he does entertain.

Mr. BORAH. I am not indicating that I will vote against it.

Mr. CONNALLY. I am indicating that I hope the Senator will vote for it.

Mr. BORAH. I will say that I am going to vote for the Senator's amendment, with the understanding that if I can get a chance to vote for a better amendment, I will vote for it.

Mr. CONNALLY. Certainly; that is in keeping with the Senator's reputation here. He votes for a better amendment if he gets the chance, and I applaud him. I am always very comfortable if the Senator from Idaho and I are traveling in the same company.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, will the Senator from Texas yield?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. HILL. The Senator from Idaho has made very clear the situation, that it makes no difference in what State a couple may live, there is a minimum on which that couple can live and have anything like a livelihood, meat, and bread for their support. As the Senator remembers, we passed a wage and hour law which was to apply to all the States of the Union, and we laid down a standard of minimum wages which employers would have to pay. We did not provide one minimum for one State and another minimum for another State. The same minimum applies throughout all the 48 States of the Union; and certainly there is a minimum amount which can suffice as an old-age pension. As the Senator has stated, the Federal Government having recognized its responsibility in this matter, it ought to see to it that a minimum applies throughout the Union in all the States.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Alabama, and, replying to both the Senator from Alabama and the Senator from Idaho, I wish to say that we have been operating under the Old-Age Pension Act for only a few years, and, as in the case of all new and experimental legislation, we have to rely largely on our experience under it. It may be that later on the Federal Government will take over the entire responsibility, but up to the present time it has not done so, and I do not think it is prepared to do so, because this issue was tested in the House and, when the votes were taken, was wholly rejected.

Since we allow the States to select the objects of this gratuity or bounty and allow the States to administer the act, I think we must see to it that the States have some responsibility financially. If we finally take over the system federally, probably we will set up our own administration. So I hope the Senator from Idaho and the Senator from Alabama will vote with me.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, I may say to the Senator that there is no doubt about my vote. I am wholeheartedly with him and will vote for the amendment.

Mr. CONNALLY. I thank the Senator. I hope he will use his influence among his colleagues and line up some additional votes.

I have information here as to both the State and Federal contributions. The following States are paying now less than a total of $15 a month. Vermont, the State of my distinguished friend, the temporary leader on the other side, I regret to advise is now paying only $14.47. Under my amendment it would pay several dollars more per month.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. Does not the Senator regard that as an adequate payment under all the circumstances?

Mr. CONNALLY. I am not criticizing it. I am going to include my State with Vermont. I am telling the facts, and showing that the effect of the amendment will be to increase the payments so that the old men and old women in Vermont will receive more under my amendment than they are now receiving, and they will receive more in every other State, because the amendment does not discriminate against any State.

The State of Texas is next to Vermont in the list, although geographically it is at the extreme of the country. Texas at the present time pays only $13.84. It ought to pay more. The old people will get more under the amendment, and under the amendment Texas will pay more, because it will be stimulated to increase its contribution.

Florida pays $13.84; West Virginia pays $13.79; Tennessee pays $13.23; New Mexico pays $11.15; Delaware pays $10.84. Under the amendment the allocation to Delaware would be greater than it is at present. Louisiana pays $10.26. The State of Virginia, great in history, great in tradition, great in memories, but a little shy in old-age pensions, pays $9.54. [Laughter.] Alabama pays $9.51; North Carolina pays $9.36; Georgia pays $8.73; South Carolina pays $7.40; Mississippi pays $6.92; and Arkansas pays $6.15.

Let me say to Senators, further, that no odium attaches to the fact that some of the States have paid such relatively small amounts. Many do not realize the burden in Mississippi, for instance, caused by a certain racial population there which contributes practically nothing in taxes, yet constitutes a great burden on the old-age pension roll. Is Mississippi to blame for that? I say it is not. Mississippi has to take care of its old people, and it has to educate its children. It has to do that out of its resources. It is a State which does not possess great natural resources, a State which does not have a Detroit within its boundaries, a State which does not have a Chicago within its boundaries, or a New York, or a Philadelphia.

Mr. President, I do not wish to take up any more of the Senate's time on this proposal. I wish to stress the point that my amendment does not discriminate against any State. Its purpose is to provide an advantage and a benefit to the old-age pensioners in every State in the Union, and to be of help and aid to the treasuries of the States.

I wish to speak of the cost. No one can tell exactly what it will be, but the distinguished Senator from Mississippi has already indicated what it may be. I received a letter from

Dr. Altmeyer, the chairman of the Social Security Board, who appeared before the Senate Finance Committee and heard the amendment discussed. He stated what in his opinion the minimum and maximum cost would be, but he finally arrived at the view that it would not cost the Federal Government more than $80,000,000 annually. Whatever additional cost it may put on the Federal Government means that it will relieve the States of that much of a burden.

Mr. President, the amendment ought to be adopted, and I am confident that, if Senators will reflect upon it, they will vote in favor of it, and give the needed relief.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY].

Mr. BYRD obtained the floor.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me in order that I may place in the RECORD a telegram which seems appropriate to the Senator from Vermont in view of the remarks made by the distinguished Senator from Texas?

Mr. BYRD. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. I happen to have a telegram from the administrator of the State plan for old-age assistance, which I should like to read into the RECORD at this point. It is as follows:

MONTPELIER, VT., July 6, 1939.

Senator WARREN R. AUSTIN:

Allocation of funds for old-age assistance to the States on a variable basis would lead to endless political and economic abuse, destroy all sound principles of grants-in-aid, break down means test, and eventually wreck public assistance program. Byrnes and similar proposals of amendments to Social Security Act tremendously dangerous.

W. ARTHUR SIMPSON.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the amendment offered by the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] was very carefully considered by the Senate Finance Committee and was defeated in that committee by a vote of 13 to 6. In addition to that, the amendment offered by the Senator from Texas is opposed by the Chairman of the Social Security Board.

I wish to read from the record of the hearings held before the Senate Finance Committee. The Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] asked this question of Mr. Altmeyer:

Senator CONNALLY. What would you say to this: Instead of undertaking this so-called variable in proportion to the income, suppose the Federal Government would make a flat contribution of two-thirds out of the first $15, the Federal Government pay $10 and the State pay $5?

Mr. ALTMAYER. I think anything like that is very dangerous.

Senator CONNALLY. Why?

Mr. ALTMAYER. If you provide a higher variation of the matching on the first $15, or $20, or $25, you will have cases of partial dependency or even total dependency in the low-cost area being treated probably more liberally in proportion to the cases of people in need above that amount. Because the State is receiving a higher matching on certain payments there is a tendency for the State to concentrate upon those sort of cases where they can get the higher matching ratio. In other words, I think there would be a considerable tendency to freeze at or below any figure such as that which is set.

Secondly, I would say that with so much of the revenue of the Federal Government being derived from nonprogressive taxes—that is, not from income and inheritance taxes but from taxes of a more or less regressive character (and more than 50 percent of the revenue of the Federal Government is of that character) it would mean that under any formula like that, while the intent would be to put more money into the poorer State, that intent might be offset to a considerable extent by the fact that those same poorer States are paying into the Federal Government these nonregressive taxes of one sort or another.

So here is a very vital and important amendment, Mr. President, which the Chairman of the Social Security Board says would be very dangerous for the Congress to adopt.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. Does not the Senator from Virginia, however, also know that Mr. Altmeyer favored the Byrnes amendment, which would have discriminated as between the States by making the rich States pay a higher amount, and is it not true that Mr. Altmeyer's objection was due not so much to the contribution but to his fear that it would have an influence in stopping the payments at $15 and not making them larger? He was not pleading for economy. He was pleading for increased expenditures.

Mr. BYRD. I have read Mr. Altmeyer's statement which gives in full his reasons. It is true that Mr. Altmeyer does favor the variable suggestion made by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES], but that is a vitally different proposal from the one made by the Senator from Texas.

Mr. President, I wish it clearly and distinctly understood that I favor adequate and reasonable old-age assistance to those in need. I am opposing the Connally amendment because it is the first step toward breaking down a cooperation on a 50-50 basis which has existed between the Federal Government and the States with respect to various activities, starting first in 1898. It is the beginning of the adoption of the so-called Townsend pension plan.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. I yield.

Mr. HILL. Can the Senator advise us what disposition was made of the Byrnes amendment by the Finance Committee?

Mr. BYRD. The Byrnes amendment was defeated in the Finance Committee by practically the same vote by which the Connally amendment was defeated.

Mr. President, in 1898 the first cooperation with the States was undertaken by the National Congress on a 50-50 basis, the Federal Government paying 50 percent of the expenditures and the States paying 50 percent. That was done under a bill which was passed on July 1, 1898, relating to the United States and the State of California, each to pay one-half of certain expenses under the California Debris Commission Act.

Then, in 1916 the Federal Aid Road Act was passed, whereby the Federal Government paid 50 percent of the cost of construction of certain roads and the State government paid 50 percent.

Then on February 23, 1917, the Smith-Hughes Act was passed providing for cooperation in promotion of vocational education.

On July 9, 1918, an act was passed providing for cooperation between the States and the Federal Government in the matter of prevention and control of venereal diseases, 50 percent to be paid by the Federal Government and 50 percent to be paid by the States.

On January 27, 1920, an act was passed providing for payments to States for disabled veterans in State homes.

On June 2, 1920, an act was passed providing for cooperation in promotion of vocational rehabilitation of persons disabled in industry, 50 percent to be paid by the Federal Government and 50 percent to be paid by the States.

On November 23, 1921, an act was passed providing for cooperation in the matter of welfare and hygiene in connection with maternity and infancy cases.

On June 7, 1924, an act was passed providing for cooperation between the States and the Federal Government in the protection of forest lands.

On June 6, 1933, the Wagner-Peyser Act was passed providing for cooperation with States in the development of systems of public employment offices.

On June 29, 1935, the Bankhead-Jones Act was passed providing for cooperation between the Federal Government and the States in connection with agricultural activities.

Mr. President, should the amendment offered by the Senator from Texas prevail it will result in the first important departure from this 50-50 basis of cooperation between the States and the Federal Government.

Mr. President, I ask that a list of acts of Congress providing for State cooperation on a 50-50 basis be printed in the Record at this point.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The list is as follows:

Acts of Congress for State cooperation—Percentage of Federal contribution

Act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. 631; U. S. C. 33:686). United States and California each to pay half of certain expenses under California Debris Commission Act. (See also 30 Stat. 1148)	50
Act of Mar. 4, 1911 amended by act of Aug. 11, 1937 (36 Stat. 1353, ch. 265; 50 Stat. 621, ch. 580; U. S. C. 34:1121-1123). Aid in support of nautical schools	50
Act of Mar. 4, 1913 (37 Stat. 843; U. S. C. 16:501). Secretary of Agriculture may cooperate with State authorities in construction of roads and trails in national forests. (Amended by act of May 11, 1938, 52 Stat. 347, ch. 197, Public, No. 505)	50
Federal Aid Road Act of July 11, 1916, amended by act of Feb. 28, 1919 (39 Stat. 355-359, 49 Stat. 1200-1202; U. S. C. 16:503; 23:12a, 42, 48). Cooperation in construction of rural post roads, etc. (Largely superseded by Federal Highway Act of Nov. 19, 1921, below)	50
Smith-Hughes Act of Feb. 23, 1917 (39 Stat. 929-936; U. S. C. 20:11-28). Cooperation in promotion of vocational education. (See also act of June 8, 1938, below)	50
Act of Mar. 1, 1917 (39 Stat. 943-951; U. S. C. 33:701-704). Cooperation in flood-control work, Mississippi and Sacramento Rivers. (See also act of May 15, 1928, below)	50
Act of July 9, 1918 (40 Stat. 886-887, par. 4; U. S. C. 42:25). Cooperation with States in prevention and control of venereal diseases. (Amended by act of May 24, 1938, below)	50
Act of Jan. 27, 1920 (41 Stat. 399, ch. 56; U. S. C. 24:134). Payments to States for disabled veterans in State homes. (Supersedes similar act of Aug. 27, 1888 (25 Stat. 450, ch. 914) as amended by act of Mar. 2, 1889 (25 Stat. 975))	50
Act of June 2, 1920, amended by acts of June 9, 1930, and June 30, 1932 (41 Stat. 735-737; 46 Stat. 524-526; 47 Stat. 448-450; U. S. C. 29:31-44). Cooperation in promotion of vocational rehabilitation of persons disabled in industry. (See also par. 531 of Social Security Act of Aug. 14, 1936, and act of June 20, 1936, par. 5, below)	50
Federal Highway Act of Nov. 9, 1921 (42 Stat. 212-219; U. S. C. 23:1-25). Cooperation in construction of public highways, as amended. (See Federal Aid Road Act above)	50
Act of Nov. 23, 1921 (42 Stat. 224-226) repealed Jan. 22, 1927 (44 Stat. 1024). Cooperation in promotion of welfare and hygiene of maternity and infancy	50
Act of June 7, 1924, amended by acts of Mar. 3, 1925, and Apr. 13, 1926 (43 Stat. 653-655; 1127-1128, and 1132, ch. 457, par. 1; 44 Stat. 242; U. S. C. 16:499, 564-570). Cooperation in protection of forest lands, etc.	50
Act of Apr. 10, 1928 (45 Stat. 413, ch. 335; U. S. C. 20:69, 70). Secretary of Smithsonian Institution authorized to cooperate with States in ethnological researches among American Indians	50
Wagner-Peyser Act of June 6, 1933, amended by acts of May 10, 1935, and June 29, 1938 (48 Stat. 113-117; 49 Stat. 216-217; 52 Stat. 1244-1245, ch. 816, Public, No. 782, U. S. C. 29:49, 49a-49L). Cooperation with States in development of system of public employment offices	50
Bankhead-Jones Act of June 29, 1935 (49 Stat. 437-439; U. S. C., Supp. 7:343c, 343d, 427-427-g). Allotments to States for research in basic problems of agriculture, by agricultural experiment stations, appropriation of up to $12,000,000 a year additional for agricultural-extension work, and additional appropriation of $1,500,000 a year for agricultural and mechanic arts colleges, authorized. (See also acts of Mar. 2, 1887, Aug. 30, 1890, and May 8, 1914)	50
Titles I, V, and X of Social Security Act of Aug. 14, 1935, amended by Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act of June 25, 1938	50
Act of Aug. 29, 1935 (49 Stat. 963-965; U. S. C., Supp. 16:567a-c). Cooperation with States in forest-land management, etc.	50
Act of June 8, 1936 (49 Stat. 1488-1490; U. S. C., Supp. 20:15h-15p). Federal aid to States for vocational education (supplementing act of Feb. 23, 1917).
Act of July 3, 1930 (46 Stat. 945; U. S. C. 33:426). Cooperation with States in shore-erosion investigations. (See also act of June 26, 1936.)
Act of June 15, 1936, amended by act of Aug. 28, 1937 (49 Stat. 1509-1512, pars. 4, 5, 8a, 12; 50 Stat. 880, par. 6; U. S. C., Supp. 33:702a 1-10, 702b-1, 702j 1-2, 702k 1-2). Cooperation required of States, etc., in Mississippi River flood control. (See also act of June 28, 1938.)
Act of June 22, 1936, amended by acts of July 19, 1937, and Aug. 28, 1937 (49 Stat. 1570, par. 1; 1571, par. 3; 50 Stat. 518, 877, par. 4; U. S. C., Supp. 33:701a, 701c). Cooperation with States, etc., for flood control on navigable rivers. (See also act of June 28, 1938.)
Federal Aid Highway Act of June 8, 1938 (52 Stat. 633-636, ch. 328, Public, No. 584). Cooperation in construction of public highways (with amendments to Federal Highway Act of Nov. 9, 1921).

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?
Mr. BYRD. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator will recall that in the latter part of June of this year we passed a bill providing for relief. That is substantially what the present bill is—a bill for relief of the aged. In June we passed a relief bill under which the Government pays 75 percent, and the States for the first time were required to pay even as much as 25 percent. So the pending bill is very much more liberal to the Federal Government than the relief bill which we passed in June. That was on a 25-percent to 75-percent basis. I do not know exactly how the proportions will work out in order that the entire $40 will be paid, but they will be somewhere in the neighborhood of 45 percent and 55 percent.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I cannot agree with the Senator from Tennessee when he says that the pending bill is of the same nature as the measure providing relief to those who are in need of the necessities of life, which deals with an emergency situation, which, I presume, the Senator thinks will some day end in this country.

Mr. McKELLAR. I hope it will.

Mr. BYRD. That is not on the same basis at all with a permanent system providing for old-age assistance.

Mr. McKELLAR. I think there is great similarity between them. I think there is a great deal of similarity between old persons and others who need relief at this time.

Mr. BYRD. I am sorry I cannot agree with the Senator.

Mr. McKELLAR. The old people have to be relieved also.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. I may remind the Senator from Virginia that the relief program to which the Senator from Tennessee is referring is only part of the relief program of the whole United States. In other words, the relief program of which the Senator from Tennessee is speaking is the work-relief program. In addition to that we have a direct-relief program, and the direct-relief program is entirely financed by the counties and the States. The Federal Government has no part in it whatsoever, and it amounts to a very large sum.

The Federal Government has no part in relief as relief. It does have a part in work relief; and now, under a new formula which has been adopted, the sponsors of the projects must put up 25 percent. So in the matter of relief, as a matter of fact, the States put up 25 percent as against the Federal Government's 75 percent.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Senator for his contribution.

Mr. President, what about the cost of this amendment? I regard this as a very important proposal. Today 1,838,359 persons are receiving old-age pensions. There are in the United States 8,200,000 persons above 65 years of age. About one-fifth of those over 65 years of age are now receiving old-age assistance. We must recognize that some day the cost of this program must be paid. I assume that everybody, no matter how anxious he may be to pay pensions and old-age assistance to citizens of the country, knows that sooner or later the Budget of the Federal Government must be balanced, and that taxes must be collected to do so.

Let us assume that one-half of those over 65 years of age will sooner or later be eligible for old-age assistance. I think I am modest and conservative in making that statement. I believe the time is coming when more than one-half of those over 65 will be eligible. A proposal is already before the Senate to reduce the age limit to 60 years, adding perhaps 4,000,000 to the number of those who may be eligible. It is true that on the basis of the present number on the rolls the additional cost to the Federal Government of the proposed amendment would be $80,000,000. However, if we assume that one-half of those over 65 years of age will sooner or later become eligible for benefits, the cost of this amendment alone will then approximate $200,000,000 out of the Federal Treasury.

I know that some Senators favor paying the whole cost of old-age assistance out of the Federal Treasury. I have heard the remarks of my distinguished colleague from Idaho [Mr.

BORAH]. This amendment would be the first important step toward imposing on the Federal Government the total cost of old-age assistance, which, in my judgment, would be a great disaster to the country, because we should thereby remove the safeguard which now exists in the localities by reason of the localities being required to pay a part of the cost. For that reason they see to it that the system is not abused and does not result in a terrific increase in taxes, which may be unbearable. The essence of the Townsend pension plan is that old-age assistance is wholly a Federal obligation.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. Does the Senator think the fact that the State supplies a portion of the money is any considerable restraint upon the amount of money which is spent in these matters?

Mr. BYRD. I think it is a great restraint. I think that by reason of the fact that the States are required to contribute 50 percent, the eligible list is carefully scrutinized to see that only those in need of pensions are permitted to receive them.

Mr. BORAH. My experience is that all one has to do is to study the activities of the States with respect to these things to see to what extent they have restrained or failed to make expenditure by reason of the fact that they have something to do with it. In my opinion, one of the greatest sources of reckless expenditure of money is found in the cities and States of the country.

Mr. BYRD. The very reason for the amendment of the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] is that the States have been too frugal and niggardly in making appropriations for old-age assistance.

Let us discuss for a moment the capacity of the States to pay for old-age assistance and the other burdens which may be placed upon them.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MINTON in the chair). Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. BYRD. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. If the taxes are to be imposed on the people, does it make any material difference whether they are imposed by the State or by the Federal Government? The money must be raised. It can be raised only by taxation. Under the provisions of the amendment, a slight preponderance would be raised by the Federal Government. However, after all it will come out of the taxpayers; and it seems to me that if the amendment is otherwise worthy, the question of whether the State imposes the taxation or whether the Nation imposes the taxation is not very material.

Mr. BYRD. If the Senator is correct about that, we had better abolish all State and local taxes and have only one tax, a Federal tax.

Mr. President, let us see about the ability of the States to pay for this program. Let us take the great State of Texas, one of the greatest and richest States in the country. I shall refer also to my State of Virginia. Both Texas and Virginia are able to pay their full share of all old-age pensions if the people of those States desire to pay the taxes required to pay for such activities. I say that because I know the State of Virginia, and because I think I can prove from the statistics which I shall now give to the Senate that the State of Texas is amply able to pay every single dollar the taxpayers of that State desire to be paid for the purpose of old-age assistance.

Texas is now contributing $7.04 to each person on the old-age rolls.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. I have already stated on the floor of the Senate that Texas is not paying enough. The legislature and the Governor were in a squabble, and the program was tied up for 6 months. Texas should pay more. I make no apologies. However, even now we are paying more than is Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, let us see if Texas cannot pay the $2.50 a month of which the Senator's amendment provides that Texas shall be relieved. Texas would be relieved of the payment of something like $4,000,000 a year in the event the amendment were adopted. Let us see if Texas cannot pay $30 a year additional to its aged citizens who are in need, as the Senator from Texas said.

The wealth of Texas today is $10,726,000,000. The wealth of the State of Virginia is $4,220,000,000. Virginia can pay for the program on a 50-50 basis just as soon as a legislature is elected in Virginia which favors levying taxes to pay it. Virginia and Texas both can pay it better than can the Federal Government today, because both States have balanced budgets. Neither State is heavily in debt, while the Federal Government has an unbalanced Budget and is spending $2 for every dollar it takes in, and we are rapidly increasing our Federal debt.

Let us see about the income of the State of Texas, the great State so ably represented by my distinguished friend [Mr. CONNALLY], one of the most eloquent and graceful speakers on the floor of the Senate. I would rather hear him speak than almost any other Member of the Senate, because even when he disagrees with me it is most enjoyable to hear him.

The State of Texas has an income of $2,280,000,000 a year. Out of that sum Texas pays in local taxes $129,000,000; in Federal taxes $75,000,000; in State taxes $89,000,000; or a total of $293,000,000, leaving a clear income to the great State of Texas of approximately $2,000,000,000. Yet that State now is unable to pay the old people living there the measly sum of $30 a year additional.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. I remind the Senator from Virginia that in considering the income of the State of Texas it must be remembered that much of the property in our State is owned in New York, Chicago, Richmond, and other great commercial and business centers. The physical property is in Texas, but the title is up yonder somewhere.

Mr. BYRD. I will say to the Senator that the citizens of Texas own property in other States. I happen to know that they own property in Virginia. That situation exists in every State in the Union.

Mr. CONNALLY. Texas pays $75,000,000 in Federal taxes. Why is it not fair and just for some of that amount to be allowed to trickle back to the old folks who need it?

Mr. BYRD. The Senator from Texas knows that in the past 6 years Texas has obtained from the Federal Government four or five dollars for every dollar she has paid in Federal taxes. There is no question whatever about that.

Mr. CONNALLY. We have already spent that. [Laughter.]

Mr. BYRD. The Senator from Texas is trying to obtain more from the Federal Treasury, notwithstanding the fact that his State is as well able to pay the additional $30 a year to those on the old-age rolls as is any State in the Union. The State of Texas, after paying all taxes, Federal, local, and State, has a clear income of $2,000,000,000.

The statement has been made on the floor of the Senate that the ability of the States to pay has controlled, rather than the willingness of the States to make reasonable payments. Let us see if that statement is correct.

Take the case of the State of California, a great State: It is paying more than any other State in the Union to individuals over 65 years of age. California is paying $32.47 a month, the highest amount paid by any State. The State of New York, which is much more wealthy than the State of California, per capita and otherwise, is paying $23.82. Why is that? Certainly New York is as well able to pay, per capita, as is California. If a higher amount is not being paid, there is some reason why the citizens of New York do not desire to increase their taxes so as to make that payment.

The per capita income of the average citizen in New York is $827. The per capita income of the average citizen in California is $782.

Take the case of Illinois, another great State: The per capita income in Illinois is $596. Illinois pays $19.10 to the old people of that State, and does not match the Federal contribution, because as much as $30 could be paid by the State and the Federal Government together.

Mr. President, nearly every single State in the Union is in a better position today to pay increased expenditures than is the Federal Government. There is a feeling, often expressed in this Chamber, that a grant from the Federal Treasury is a gift to the 48 States. No greater fallacy than that could be uttered. Every single dollar that comes into the Federal Treasury comes from the citizens of the 48 States. No money can come into the Federal Treasury except what is collected from the people of the 48 States. The bonds the Government of the United States is issuing daily are made possible because of the property the people of the 48 States have accumulated. The Federal Government is using the credit of the people of the 48 States to bond them, frequently without their consent.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. I yield.

Mr. BONE. May I ask the Senator where he secured his figures as to the wealth of each State?

Mr. BYRD. I obtained the figures from the Bureau of the Census, and they are official.

Mr. President, let us briefly survey the situation during the past 6 years. The records show that the debts of the 48 States have not increased appreciably since 1933, when the depression began. The records show that the debt of the Federal Government has increased from $16,000,000,000 in 1929 to $40,000,000,000 now, and in addition to that various corporations created by the Government have been permitted to obligate the Federal Government to the extent of $8,000,000,000 more. So we have a direct and contingent obligation of $48,000,000,000, as compared to $16,000,000,000 when the depression began, a threefold increase in the space of about 8 years.

The records show, of course, as every Senator knows, that we spend $2 out of the Federal Treasury today for every dollar received.

There are only two or three of all the States of the Union that today have unbalanced budgets. The Federal Government is confronted with a constantly increasing deficit. We are further away from a balanced Budget today—and I say so advisedly—than we have ever been since the depression began, and Senators on this floor, without thought, apparently, of the pay day that must come, continue to vote to increase expenditures without any idea where the money is coming from.

Here is a proposition that involves $200,000,000. In addition it may involve the readjustment of all the cooperative efforts with the States in which the Government is engaged. If the States are unable to pay their part of the old-age pension, then the States are unable to pay their part of the Federal road fund; they are unable to pay their part of vocational education, of the control of venereal diseases, and of the 10 or 15 other cooperative activities that have been undertaken for years, and satisfactorily undertaken, on the basis of 50 percent on the part of the Federal Government and 50 percent on the part of the State governments.

The Senator from Texas says the Federal Government can collect taxes with greater justice to the taxpayers of the country than can the State governments. I take issue with him on that statement. Mr. Altmeyer gave us as one reason why he was opposed to this proposal, the fact, as he said, that 50 percent of the Federal revenue comes from "non-regressive taxes," as he called them, from invisible taxes on everything the people eat and everything they buy, taxes which fall heavily on the average citizen of this country without regard to his ability to pay. We are collecting less than 50 percent of the Federal revenue of our Government on the basis of ability to pay. So, I do not think that argument should be considered.

Mr. President, it was said yesterday that old-age assistance is a Federal obligation. I am unable to understand how anyone could make that assertion. The proposed act itself refers in the very beginning to "A State plan for old-age assistance." It says nothing about a Federal plan. It says, "A State plan for old-age assistance." The States prepare the lists of eligibles, which is one of the most important parts of the whole plan. The States, and not the Federal Government, say who shall obtain old-age pensions. The States have their tests as to need, which are more strict in some States than in others. If the payment of old-age pensions is a Federal obligation, I should like someone to point to any law or any part of the Constitution that makes the payment of old-age assistance a Federal obligation. If it be a Federal obligation, then, the Federal Government should pay uniform pensions on a uniform basis in every State in the Nation.

The Senator from Texas yesterday said that the Federal Government by the passage of the law owed an obligation to give to every person over 65 years of age and in need a Federal pension, to see that he got a pension, either by direction or by some inducement to increase local taxes in the various communities.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. I yield.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, in relation to the question of obligation, that matter has been submitted to the Supreme Court. I read yesterday from the decision of the Court in the case of Helvering against Davis. With all the information that was obtainable through the United States Government and its departments and State departments, the Supreme Court said it is a national problem and that the Federal Government should pay old-age pensions. I do not know why they did that, except the fact that they certainly had all the information before them, and, having such information, that was the statement made by the Court. I think I made that clear in a brief statement yesterday.

Mr. BYRD. Any problem that exists in all the States, of course, is a national problem. What I said was it was not a national obligation; it was not an obligation solely upon the Federal Treasury.

The pending amendment, as the Senate should clearly understand, does nothing toward bringing about uniformity or equality of old-age assistance between the States. The same variations that now exist between the States—payments may be $10 or $15 in Virginia or Texas and $32 in California—will still exist. There is nothing in this amendment that will bring about uniformity in the pensions now being paid.

Mr. President, of course, the question as to how far the Federal Government can go in spending money, and how far the State governments can go, is a very difficult one to determine. I do not agree with the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] in this respect; but I say from my experience as Governor of Virginia and my association with State governments, that taxes collected by local communities result in much more efficient expenditure than those collected by and disbursed from Washington. Some persons think that in some way the Federal Government can manufacture money without the collection of taxes from the people of the States. The impression has been created in this country, in the past few years, that a Federal expenditure need not be paid back; that it need not be paid in the form of taxes, and that a grant from the Federal Government is equivalent to a gift. In this country today $20,000,000,000 are being spent by local, State, and National Governments for governmental purposes of one kind or another. That represents one-third of the total revenue of the country for last year—33⅓ percent of all the income of the country is being expended for governmental purposes.

I believe that the records will show, in proof of the assertion I now make, that this country has never enjoyed a prosperous period in its entire history when it collected in the form of taxes from the people more than 12 percent of the gross income of the country. The people can pay only a certain amount of taxes, and still permit private enterprise to continue. We speak of Federal taxes. I should like someone on the floor of the Senate, who advocates these huge expenditures, to point to some new tax revenue that he would favor.

I want to compliment, however, those who favor the Townsend plan, because, at least, they are honest in the respect that they advocate a system of taxation which, although

I think it would be destructive to the private enterprise system of this country, at least recognizes the fact that we must provide revenue for great expenditures. I should like to ask other Senators what single tax would they increase? We cannot increase the taxes in the high-income brackets. They have already reached the point of diminishing returns. Are we to resort to a sales tax and tax everyone who buys the necessities of existence? Are we to levy a transactions tax, such as the advocates of the Townsend plan favor?

My able colleague, the Senator from California, made a splendid presentation of that plan the other day before the Senate Finance Committee. He advocated, as I understand, a 2-percent transactions tax under which every time an article was sold a 2-percent tax would have to be paid to the Federal Government. Thus an article that changed hands, say, five or six times may pay 10- or 15-percent taxation. That would place a burden upon the backs of the business of the country which, I think, would be destructive of our private-enterprise system and greatly increase the cost of living.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. At that point, and in connection with the Senator's calculation, I should like to observe that under the Social Security Act as it is now written, the total payroll tax becomes 9 percent in 1949. That 9 percent is already very close to the transactions tax accumulative total to which the Senator refers.

Now, let us be wholly frank about this matter. I spoke along these same lines yesterday. In 1948 the present Social Security Act, without any expanded benefits, will impose a 9-percent payroll tax on practically the whole total of American industry, including 40,000,000 workers. This of itself is enormously burdensome. It remains to be seen whether our industry can survive beneath these added exactions. But at least it may be said that the existing scheme of benefits is financed by the existing provisions for payroll taxes ultimately reaching 9 percent. Now, however, we are blandly voting additional benefits beyond the present contemplation of the Social Security Act, beyond the provisions for taxes with which to foot the bills, and without any responsible effort to provide the ways and means with which to justify the new benefits which we are promising to pay. It is the sheerest folly. We have already added some $650,000,000 of benefits of this nebulous character. Now, we are asked to add what may be another $100,000,000 in another section of the bill. It either is the holding out of a false hope to unfortunates or it is the promise of heavily increased taxes on our people. How much more than 9-percent payroll taxes do Senators think American industry can bear? If each succeeding Congress between now and 1948 performs with similar unfinanced liberality, we shall finally confront 15 or 20 percent in payroll taxes. Many of us feel that the pyramiding 2-percent transactions tax in the so-called Townsend plan will ultimately represent a tax as high as 10 or 12 percent. Many of us feel that any such tax is an impossible burden which would make healthy prosperity impossible. But if this habit of expanding the latitudes of the Social Security Act, without correspondingly expanding the tax revenues, is to continue until we suddenly confront the judgment day of doom, it would be infinitely better to borrow the Townsend-tax formula and have it frankly over with. Better frankly and courageously to tax to pay as you go, as Dr. Townsend advocates, than to spend and spend and spend without taxing and thus accumulate ultimate crisis and collapse. The best friend of social security is the friend who keeps it solvent.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Senator.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. I yield.

Mr. DOWNEY. I should like to point out to the Senator from Virginia the fact that under the transactions tax, assuming it would amount, as I will later attempt to show, to about 7 percent in increased living expense, if a man had a thousand-dollar-a-year income he would pay only $70 a year; the man who had $10,000 a year would pay $700; and the man who had $100,000 a year for living expenses would pay $7,000. Consequently, the transactions tax is based upon a man's standard of living, and, therefore, his ability to pay, while this iniquitous law ultimately is designed, as the honorable Senator from Michigan has very properly said, to impress a 9-percent tax upon the pay rolls of the Nation. To me that is an absolutely indefensible and improper tax compared to the transactions tax.

I should like further to interpolate that when I am permitted an opportunity to present the theory of the transactions tax, I shall be delighted and happy if the Senator from Virginia will listen and enter into a colloquy with me about the justice of the tax.

Mr. BYRD. I listened to the Senator with great interest when he was before the Senate Finance Committee, and, while he and I do not agree about the matter, I want to congratulate him on his frankness, because before the Congress of the United States in advocating a huge increase in expenditures he has the courage to say, "We propose to raise the money in such-and-such a way." That is what other advocates of spending have not had the courage to do, and as a consequence we are continuing to spend $2 for every dollar we take in.

Mr. President, if the Treasury of the Federal Government were overflowing, if we had huge surpluses here at Washington, if the States were bankrupt—which they are not—there might be some argument for continuing to pass the burden on to the Federal Government. Exactly the reverse, however, is true. We shall reach our Federal debt limit on July 1, 1940. According to the statement made by the Secretary of the Treasury before the Senate Finance Committee, no more bonds may be issued by the Federal Government after July 1, 1940, unless the Congress of the United States raises the debt limit.

As a consequence, the administration today has adopted an evasive and devious method of trying to overcome the barrier which was erected by Congress in fixing the debt limit, because we shall soon have before us the new lending and spending bill, which has the object of creating a corporation for the purpose of obligating the Treasury of the United States, but obligating it in such a way as to evade the limitation which has been placed by Congress upon our debt.

I desire to make the point clear in regard to the Connally amendment that there is no assurance whatever that the additional $2.50 per month, or $30 per year, will be passed on to the pensioners. There is no assurance whatever that a single additional dollar will go to the pensioners, except that, as the Senator says, the adoption of the amendment might stimulate the States to do their duty more fully in regard to this matter. The amendment simply says that up to $15, two-thirds of the amount will be paid by the Federal Government. The State of Texas may pay the same amount it is now paying, $14 per month, and not increase by one dollar the amount paid to the old-age pensioners there, and put this four or five million dollars into the treasury of Texas, if it chooses to do so. There is not a line in the amendment which compels this money to go to those who need it. It may go to the States. California need not increase its $32 per month.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. I yield to the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Did the Finance Committee consider any amendment to this proposal which would provide a limitation upon the use of the two-thirds fund?

Mr. BYRD. The proposal was made by the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] and defeated. There was no discussion of any modification of it.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. No; the Senator misunderstands me. I have not made my question clear. He has just made the statement that if this amendment should be adopted the additional contribution which the Federal Government would thereby make to the States might not be passed on to the needy individuals. That is my understanding of the Senator's statement.

Mr. BYRD. That is correct.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Therefore there is nothing in the amendment, as I understand, to compel the States receiving these increased payments to pass them on to the individuals for whom they are said to be intended.

Mr. BYRD. That is correct.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The question, therefore, is, Did the Finance Committee consider any modification of this amendment which would place a restraint upon the States, and make it certain that the funds would be used for the intended beneficiaries?

Mr. BYRD. There was no consideration of that matter in the Finance Committee.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, let me say that no such amendment was made because the committee, in its very protracted consideration of this amendment and in its elaborate discussion of it, believed it was so unfair that it would destroy the system which prevails; that it would tend to the consolidation of the States with the Federal Government, and therefore, in the ultimate, would more or less tend to destroy our form of government.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President—

Mr. BYRD. I yield to the Senator from Texas.

Mr. CONNALLY. Let me suggest to the Senator from Wyoming and the Senator from Virginia that no amendment of that kind was necessary, because this fund is to be administered just as it has been in the past under the law, and it cannot be used for any other purpose than the payment of old-age taxes.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Yes; but, as I understand the statement of the Senator from Virginia, and as I understood the explanation of the Senator from Texas, there is nothing in the amendment which would prevent a State from actually reducing its contribution to the payments made to individuals.

Mr. CONNALLY. If it did, it would get less Federal money, of course, because under the present law if a State does not want to put up over $5 or $3 per month it does not have to do so.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Yesterday there was placed in the Record a list of the payments being made in the several States, ranging from something over $30 in the case of California at the top to slightly over $6 in the case of Arkansas at the bottom of the list. I conceive it to be agreed that if the Senator's amendment should be adopted it would be possible, for example, for the State of Arkansas to reduce the $3 plus which it now pays and accept $6 from the Federal Treasury, so that the payment to the individual would still be only $6 plus.

Mr. CONNALLY. The payment to the individual would be $9.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Would the Senator from Texas be willing to accept a modification of his amendment which would provide, in effect, as follows:

Provided, That all payments to each State which reduces the payments now being made to needy individuals shall be under clause (b).

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator may prepare his amendment, and we will look it over. The pending amendment proposes no change at all from the present law as to how the fund shall be employed. It can be used only for the payment of old-age pensions. Why it is necessary in the case of this particular amendment to have that kind of a provision, when it was not necessary to have it in the original law, I cannot see; but I shall be glad to consider the Senator's amendment.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I thank the Senator from Virginia for permitting me to interrupt him.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the situation is very clear. Take, for instance, the case of the State of Texas: The State of Texas now pays $14.09, half of which is paid by the Federal Government and half by the State government. Under this amendment Texas need not increase by a single penny the $14.09, but the Federal Government would pay $9.38 and Texas would pay $4.69, thereby saving to the State of Texas between four and five million dollars a year. There is nothing whatever in this amendment which requires that the additional amount which the Federal Government is to contribute shall be paid to those who receive old-age assistance.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, let me ask the Senator who will get it, then?

Mr. BYRD. The State will get it under this situation.

Mr. CONNALLY. The State cannot take a nickel of it—not a copper cent of it.

Mr. BYRD. But the State can reduce its contribution, because the State only has to pay one-third under the Senator's amendment, and it now pays one-half; and that condition will apply to every State in the Union. Is the Federal Government going to enact legislation which will permit the States not to increase the compensation to old-age persons, but to help the treasuries of the States? That is exactly what this proposal does, Mr. President.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. BYRD. Yes.

Mr. CONNALLY. So far as the Senator from Texas is concerned, I do not object to a provision being added to the amendment that any State which reduces its present average payments to pensioners—of course, it might cut off some individuals who ought to be cut off—shall not receive this additional grant. I am willing to do that if it will be any satisfaction to the Senator from Virginia. I do not think he would vote for the amendment, however, if I should modify it in that respect.

Mr. BYRD. No, Mr. President; I am not going to vote for the amendment, but I thought I should state to the Senate what I regard as a great objection to those who think the amendment as now proposed will increase the amount that the old-age pensioners will receive, because it may increase the amount and it may not. It depends upon the action of the individual State. What the amendment does is that as to the first $15, instead of the State paying $7.50 and the Federal Government paying $7.50, the Federal Government pays $10 and the State pays $5.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I should like to have the attention of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON]. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate vote on this amendment not later than 2 o'clock p. m.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado in the chair). Is there objection?

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, before the question is put I desire to suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. CONNALLY. I shall not insist on the request if the Senator is going to object. I withdraw it.

Mr. AUSTIN. I simply give notice that I shall ask for a quorum whenever the Senator is ready to make his request.

Mr. CONNALLY. I shall not press it at the moment.

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, I had purposed to address the Senate at this time in partial support of the amendment now pending, and at the same time to present an amendment of my own; but since the Senator from Texas desires to be absent at 2 o'clock I will withhold my remarks on the amendment and speak to my own amendment after a vote shall have been taken on the Connally amendment.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, before the vote is taken I wish to say that I am not in agreement with my own committee in the action they took in rejecting the amendment. As I stated in my remarks yesterday, I voted in the committee for the Connally amendment, and I voted in the committee for the Byrnes amendment, which had been recommended by a Senate committee after studying the whole unemployment and relief question. I was very much in favor of one or the other being adopted, but they were rejected by the Finance Committee. I reserved the right at that time, as a member of the Committee on Finance, to vote for them when the amendments were offered on the floor of the Senate.

I am in favor of these amendments because I believe that every State, in cooperation with the Federal Government, should give on the average at least a $15 pension per month to the needy old people. I am not one of the so-called radicals with reference to pension legislation. I believed, when we passed the social-security legislation in 1935, that the States would be able to take advantage of the 50-50 basis for old-age assistance that was there presented to the point of matching the contributions of the Federal Government up to $15. We have learned from experience that many of the States have not met the Federal contribution. I will not discuss the question whether they could do it or not, but I feel sure that the Federal Government could contribute $2 to $1 up to $15 without straining the Treasury much more than we have already strained it in making other appropriations, many of which I have not favored.

Even though I have been styled one of the economy bloc, I realize that here is something in which I sincerely believe, even though I appreciate that it calls for an additional appropriation of $80,000,000 annually. I am going to resolve the doubt in favor of giving a minimum average to the needy old people of the country of $15 a month. So I shall vote for the amendment. It may help States which are better off than some of the so-called poorer States, and if it does that is all right; I hope it will help all of the States. But the Federal Government can very well afford to pay two-thirds, up to the amount of $15, under the circumstances.

I see no reason why we should not change the 50-50 basis with respect to old-age assistance. We adopted it in the beginning and we have found that the States cannot meet the 50-50 requirement. So if experience teaches us it has not worked as we had hoped, I do not understand why we cannot change it. All the laws which have been passed by the Federal Government providing Federal assistance have not been founded on a 50-50 basis. The appropriations which are carried for the Public Health Service, indeed, in this very bill, are allocated to the States according to need, in some instances. So we would not be changing any universal policy and rule by the adoption of the amendment. I hope it will be agreed to.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I do not desire to discuss the pending question at length, but I do wish to express my views very briefly and in a sense as to general principles. When this question of old-age pensions was first before the Senate I offered an amendment to increase the amount but it was defeated. No one respects more than do I the able fight which the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] makes for economy. One could get very greatly interested in the subject of economy if there were any consistent program which looked to economy. But all Senators are for economy on some subjects and no Senator is for economy on other subjects. After expending the amount of money which we have appropriated at this session for some things, which, to my mind, if not unnecessary were not pressing, I cannot bring myself to believe that we should ask the old people of this country to live on $15 or $20 or $30 a month.

We started some time ago to make amends for what we had failed to do theretofore, that is, to take care of the old people. I have not been an advocate of the Townsend plan; I have not been an advocate of the transaction-tax system proposed to take care of it. I have not favored $200 a month. But I have long been an advocate of the appropriation of a sufficient amount of money to enable old people to live with some degree of decency. We have not provided a reasonable amount as it is our duty to do.

These old people have done their part in developing this country. They have done their part in making this a great Nation. In my section of the country they are those who were the pioneers, they are the people who went into the desert and made it habitable and suffered all kinds of hardships. They built great commonwealths. Their work is over. They have not the energy, they have not the ability, and they have not the opportunity to carry on. They have practically closed their careers. They have nothing to look forward to, to my mind, as a matter of economy, to say nothing of the question of humanity, as somebody in some way must take care of them; we can best do this by a reasonable allowance by the Federal Government. We can afford to take care of them upon a basis which will enable them to live properly, at least from the standpoint of actual need, and my study leads me to believe that it can most efficiently be done by the Federal Government—there are two governments but only one taxpayer.

For these reasons I shall vote for the amendment, and I shall vote for any other amendment which will bring the amount of contribution up to what seems to me a proper amount to afford a reasonable standard of living for these old people. I do not feel the amount here provided is sufficient.

In doing so I do not feel it is an act of charity. I feel that it is actually taking care on an economical basis of those who must be cared for in some way. I would far rather give to these old people in excess of the $15 or $20 or $25 a month than to be preparing to spend uncounted millions on such things as the sand dunes of Guam or loan millions and millions abroad.

The best preparation we can make for all the future, against all the isms which can come—fascism and communism and all other isms—and the best defense we can make of this country is to let it be known that our people, our citizens, are our care, and that we propose to care for them in the most reasonable and best way possible.

Mr. President, I have advocated for a long time, have advocated in my State, and have advocated elsewhere a payment of $60 a month. I realize that that is beyond what my associates generally think is necessary or proper or possible at this time, but if they will go into the homes of those old people and undertake to estimate how they can live upon less, really live upon less, consider purchase at present prices the things necessary in order to maintain life, they will find that sum is not too much.

I am not one of those who believe, as the Senator from Virginia has said, that because the money comes from the National Government, it is supposed to be a gift from above, that, like manna, it has fallen from heaven. I know it comes from the same taxpayers who pay taxes in the States. But I know also that the American citizen is a citizen of the United States, by the Constitution we especially made him a citizen of the United States, and I know that when war and trouble come, he is called upon, not by the States, but he is called upon as a citizen to protect the United States. It seems to me from every viewpoint that we must prepare to care for these old people, and let it be known that they are to be cared for. I shall vote for the amendment for the reasons I have given.

Another thing, Mr. President. The Senator from Virginia found fault with my view that the Federal Government would have to take care of this problem finally, and I so much respect his views that I hesitate to disagree with him. But suppose a State is in such a condition, as some of them are, that it cannot pay more than it is paying, a pitiable sum. Shall we say that because a State happens to be in that condition, and the State is so situated that it can do no more, the localities shall punish the old people because of the place in which they have located?

In my opinion, a citizen of any State not prepared to take care of him is a citizen of the United States and should have the consideration of the National Government. If the local situation is such as to make it impossible for him to be taken care of, there is a duty devolving on the Federal Government. I do not care where he lives. If he cannot be taken care of, there is still an obligation on the National Government to see that he is taken care of.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Lucas in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Texas.

Mr. AUSTIN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Bulow	Davis	Guffey
Andrews	Burke	Downey	Gurney
Austin	Byrd	Ellender	Hale
Barbour	Capper	Frazier	Harrison
Barkley	Chavez	George	Hatch

McKellar	Pittman	Taft
McNary	Radcliffe	Thomas, Okla.
Maloney	Reed	Thomas, Utah

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-one Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I intend to delay the vote for only a very few minutes. I wish to call attention to the fact that in the Social Security Act itself we have recognized the obligation of the Federal Government without requiring the States to match on a 50-50 basis or any other fixed basis. There is a provision in the Social Security Act for the care of crippled children, and a fund is appropriated for that purpose. That fund is allotted between the States on the basis of certain enumerated factors. One of them is the financial needs of each State.

Mr. President, that fund has been in the Social Security Act from the beginning, so in social-security legislation at least we have not followed a rigid 50-50 allocation of the Federal appropriation. That fund has been increased by an amendment to the pending bill providing for an additional $1,000,000 per year for the care of crippled children, and both that increase and the amount authorized in the original act will be allocated to the States, among other things, on the basis of the financial needs of the States.

Mr. President, the Social Security Act also includes an appropriation for public-health work, an appropriation which has done a great deal of good in all the States, but which has been of inestimable value and benefit to the rural States. The appropriation of $8,000,000 carried in the original law for public-health work is not allocated to the States on a 50-50 basis. It is allocated on the basis of need in each State. The public-health funds are allocated by the Surgeon General. The appropriation for the care of crippled children is allocated by the Secretary of Labor. Both of these funds, not only the one for the care of crippled children but the fund for Public Health Service, have been increased in the bill now before the Senate, and the theory of 50-50 contribution does not exist with respect to the allocation to the States in either instance.

Mr. President, I wish to make this general statement: I have no difficulty in agreeing with the general observations made by the distinguished junior Senator from Virginia, nor in agreeing with the viewpoint of other Members of the Senate who believe that we should not depart from the general principle of a 50-50 contribution by the States provided for in most of the appropriations which have been made for necessary cooperative work within the States. I have no difficulty in agreeing generally with their point of view. But, Mr. President, I have difficulty in agreeing with the facts as they exist under social security. Let us take the case of any State; take that of my own State, for I do not want to make any invidious comparisons. In my State only about 50 percent of the worthy old people who are entitled to old-age assistance are on the rolls. What the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] says would be a good answer to the State of Georgia if the State of Georgia wanted a larger share paid by the Federal Government. However, what answer is it to 50 percent of the old people of my State, who are not on the rolls at all, and who do not receive a dime from the State or from the Federal Government, while in some other State, either because of the ability of the State or the disposition of the officials of the State, the old people are on the rolls and are receiving benefits? I cannot answer 40,000 men and women in Georgia who are not receiving a dime from the Federal Government by saying to them, "Go to the State government and have the State government raise enough taxes to put you on the rolls, and to match, dollar for dollar, what the Federal Government pays to the old people within this State or in other States."

That is no answer to them. They are American citizens. They have lived under all the burdens the Government has placed upon them. They have paid all the taxes that have been paid through a long lifetime. Some of them had property. Until 1929, some of them were in good circumstances. Some of them have been taxpayers through a long lifetime. All their property is swept away. They have no children or other dependents who can or will support them. The State government does not levy the tax. Whether it is unable to levy it or whether it is not disposed to levy it does not answer the question, does not answer the demand for these old people to be treated as are other old people who are on the rolls within my State and in neighboring States.

It is no answer so far as the Federal Government is concerned, because, if the Federal Government is willing to pay any part of $15 to an old man or an old woman 65 years of age who has seen better days, it is no answer to say to the old people, "Your State has not done its duty." Perhaps that is an answer to the State. Perhaps the States are not dealing with the question as they should. Perhaps they have not imposed the taxes they ought to impose. However, there is simply no answer that I as a representative of the people of my State in this body, can make to forty-odd thousand who are not on the rolls and who are not receiving a dime from the Federal Government, while some forty-odd thousand in the State are receiving checks monthly from the Federal Government.

Mr. President, I think this amendment would enable the States perhaps not to do equal justice to all the aged people but to do something that approaches it, to put people on the rolls who ought to go on the rolls, and to give to the aged people within the State who are already on the rolls something in the neighborhood of adequate provision for their actual necessities.

What are the facts with respect to those who are on the rolls? We must meet the facts as they are. The facts are that in a State which contributes, with the assistance of the Federal Government, some $6 per month to an old person, such contribution is inadequate to meet human needs. The State which contributes the sum of $8 per month, on the average, to an old person who has no means whatever is not meeting all the actual needs of that person.

Mr. President, the Federal Government thought it wise to enter this field, and to say to the States, "We will set up a fund from which you may draw if you see fit to set up benefits for the aged people within your State." Under those circumstances it seems to me the Federal Government owes something. Perhaps it is unwise to depart from the 50-50 basis of contribution; but we have done it in the case of social security. We have a condition which no kind of logic can answer, because it is a condition of naked human want and misery. The facts stand out. No logic can answer them. No logic can satisfy the aged person in my State or any other State who is receiving less from the State and the Federal Government than is necessary to meet his physical needs or who is receiving nothing simply and solely because the State itself does not act. The argument advanced is no answer to that man or woman, and it is no answer to my conscience, Mr. President. I dare say it is no answer to the conscience of any other Senator.

Mr. President, when I contemplate some of the things that we are doing I wonder why we hesitate to say that up to an average of $15, to which the State must contribute, the Federal Government will pay to the worthy aged people within that State $2 to the State's $1. At this very moment the Secretary of Agriculture is convening in this city the representatives of the cotton trade to devise the best program to give away $35,000,000 of the money of the taxpayers of the country to foreign spinners, to the aged and the young alike who live in foreign countries, in order to induce the shipment of our cotton out of the United States.

So, Mr. President, I shall vote for the amendment. It is not based upon aiding the poor States by discriminating against the better-off States, because under the provisions of the amendment every State would receive $2 for $1 until it had paid to the worthy old people within the State an average of $15 per month. If there is any justification for social-security legislation, if there is any justification for the Federal Government in the first instance inviting the States to take care of their old people, it seems to me we are justified in saying that up to the level at which ordinary physical demands can be only inadequately met the Federal Government shall pay $2 while the State pays only $1, and above that amount the States and the Federal Government shall pay on a 50-50 basis.

It is too late to raise the issue that we must never depart from a 50-50 basis. We have done so in the Social Security Act, and I think wisely so. We have done so in the case of public health. That action was based in part upon the financial need of the State. We said to the Surgeon General, "Apportion this appropriation among the States." We have done it in the case of crippled children. We have said to the Secretary of Labor, "Apportion this appropriation among the States on the basis of need." Of course, the financial condition of the State was again involved. The two appropriations to which I have referred are substantially increased in the bill now before the Senate.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. DOWNEY. The Senator from Georgia has stated that he believes the Federal Government should contribute $2 for every dollar from the State up to a sum which is required to satisfy the necessities of the old people. I should like to inquire of the Senator what sum he believes he would fix to satisfy the necessities of a senior citizen under this bill.

Mr. GEORGE. Speaking now to the amendment offered, my position is that the Federal Government should be willing to do at least what the amendment provides; that is, to contribute $2 to $1 up to the meager average of $15 a month.

Mr. DOWNEY. May I inquire further of the Senator if he does not think a sum substantially higher than $15 a month is required to keep body and soul together in decency and vigor?

Mr. GEORGE. I should hesitate to say that the statement made by the Senator from California is not true.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. The point was made that we ought to adhere to a certain definite policy. As I understand, the Social Security Board, which has had experience in administration over a period of 4 years, has itself recommended that there should be some variation between the States which can less afford to help the aged and the States which can better afford to do so, as measured by relative per-capita income. The amendment which had been prepared by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES], accomplished that objective. I favored that amendment, and would prefer it to that now offered by the Senator from Texas. Since this amendment, however, seeks the same objective, I propose to support it, with perhaps some safeguard that the additional Federal funds will be devoted to lifting up the States' present average pensions.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator from Georgia yield?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. BYRD. I should like to say to the Senator from New York that Mr. Altmeyer, in his testimony, stated that he thought the Connally amendment was a very dangerous proposal.

Mr. WAGNER. Did not Mr. Altmeyer say that the proposal submitted by the Senator from South Carolina was an improvement?

Mr. BYRD. That is true, but the proposal of the Senator from Texas he thought was a very dangerous proposal.

Mr. WAGNER. I am using my own judgment in supporting the amendment offered of the Senator from Texas, and I am going to vote for it because I want to give aid where aid is needed.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator may not have been informed that Mr. Altmeyer was opposed to the amendment of the Senator from Texas and thought it was very dangerous.

Mr. WAGNER. But he did favor the variable grant principle recognized by the Byrnes amendment.

Mr. BYRD. The Byrnes amendment, as the Senator knows, is very different from the pending amendment.

Mr. WAGNER. Yes; but it recognized the variable rule.

Mr. BYRD. This amendment does not recognize it.

Mr. WAGNER. Not to the same extent. I would very much have preferred the other amendment.

Mr. BYRD. The pending amendment does not do that at all, because it is uniform throughout the country.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, since the distinguished Senator from New York has raised the question, may I say that Dr. Altmeyer, of the Social Security Board, did favor the Byrnes amendment. The Byrnes amendment sought to do precisely what the pending amendment seeks to do in another way, so far as minimum assistance is concerned.

I may also say to the Senator from New York and the Senator from Virginia that Dr. Altmeyer objected to the amendment now before the Senate, not because it would vary the contributions from the 50-50 basis but because he thought—and undoubtedly with some reason—or at least he feared that, if the Federal Government matched $2 to $1 up to $15, some States might be content not to go above the $15. That is the reason why he opposed the amendment.

Mr. WAGNER. I may say to the Senator that there is some apprehension that if the Connally amendment were adopted, some States might take advantage of the situation. I believe that the States are sufficiently interested in helping unfortunate aged people that they will not take advantage of the amendment to reduce their own contributions.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Georgia yield at that point?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield the floor.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, earlier in the afternoon I interrupted the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Byrd] upon the phase of the matter which the Senator from New York has just mentioned and suggested that the pending amendment might be so modified as to prevent any danger of the contingency that any State might take advantage of the increased contribution under clause (a) to reduce its contribution to old-age assistance. The Senator from Texas was good enough to suggest to me that if I should attempt to prepare definite language to carry out the corrective plan, he would accept a satisfactory formula. I have now done that, Mr. President, and I should like to offer the modifying amendment at this time.

Mr. WAGNER. I take it that the Senator is providing for a minimum?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I shall read the proposed amendment to the amendment.

Provided, however, That in the case of any State which shall reduce the amount paid in such State in 1939 to such needy individuals for old-age assistance, the amount to be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury to such State shall be—

And then follows the language of the House bill, so that it would have the effect of declaring that if any State should seek to take advantage of the increased contribution by the Federal Government to decrease its own contribution, the 50-50 rather than the two-thirds plan would apply. I send the amendment to the desk.

Mr. WAGNER. The other way I had in mind to improve the Connally amendment would be to provide that the one-third and two-thirds rule should not apply unless a minimum average of $15 was paid to the aged individuals in any State.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, so far as I am concerned, I am willing to accept the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming, though I do not think it is necessary. It merely provides that if any State should reduce the amount paid during this fiscal year, it would still have to pay on a 50-50 basis instead of obtaining the advantage of the two-thirds Federal contribution. I have no objection to the amendment.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Let me add that the table which was put into the RECORD yesterday while the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] was addressing the Senate, reveals a rather startling condition with respect to the payment of old-age assistance. Twenty-eight of the States make an average total payment from both Federal and State sources combined of less than $20; 42 States make a total payment of less than $25; and in the State of California alone do needy aged persons who are obviously without resources of their own receive as much as $30.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Certainly.

Mr. LODGE. The Senator refers to average payments, does he not?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Yes; these are average payments, of course.

Mr. LODGE. In my State, I happen to know, there are 17,000 people who in May received more than $30; yet the average, of course, is less than that.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I was speaking of the average. The average for the State of Massachusetts is $28.56.

Mr. LODGE. And in the State of Louisiana, for instance, which is very far down on the list, there are people who receive more than $30.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The average in Louisiana is $10.26.

Mr. LODGE. But there are individuals there who receive more than $30.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I wish to say only a brief word about this amendment. I voted in the committee for the Byrnes amendment, and, as a matter of fact, as a member of the Committee on Unemployment, I participated in preparing that amendment, which was a departure from the original 50-50 requirement of the law as it now exists.

In considering the matter from the standpoint of the Federal Government and the States, I am convinced that we cannot lose sight of the condition of individual aged persons in the country irrespective of any meticulous regard for some proportion between the States and the Federal Government.

When I voted for the social-security law—and I imagine many other Senators had the same notion—I thought we were providing $30 a month old-age pension on a 50-50 basis, $15 by the Federal Government and $15 by the State. That is what I believed in. I have all over my State advocated a $15 contribution by the State to match the $15 contribution by the Federal Government, and I have criticized my own State government for not providing $15 to match the $15 contributed by the Federal Government.

When the bill was introduced calling for compliance by the State with the social-security law, it provided $15 a month to be matched by the States. That was reduced to $7.50. So the maximum under the present law that is possible in my State is $15. But, as a matter of fact, the average is eight dollars and fifty-some cents.

I believe that my State can do better than to pay an average of $8.50 to older people. I have advocated, and I am now advocating that the State of Kentucky amend its law so as to provide $15 to match the $15 contributed by the Federal Government. But I am confronted with the problem of how long I am willing to wait, and thereby add to the suffering and indigency of old people, while some State administration is willing to carry out what we thought was the original intention of Congress by putting up $15 to match the like Federal contribution. The Byrnes amendment, which was voted down in the committee but for which I voted and which I helped to frame as a member of the Committee on Unemployment, recognized that there are some States that may not be able to do that.

I would not draw any invidious comparisons here by attempting to name the States that cannot put up sufficient money to average at least $15 or even $30 per month. I am frank to say that I think my own State can do it, but there may be some others that cannot do it; but my State has not done it. Therefore it seems to me that if we are to depart from the rigid 50-50 rule, the amendment offered by the Senator from Texas is preferable even to the amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] in this respect, at least, that it does not embarrass the administration of the law by requiring the authorities to decide which States can and which States cannot put up more money than they are now contributing in order that they may make a higher average payment for old-age pensions.

Because I believe it is better to make the variation apply to all States than to pick out a few of them and make it applicable to them on the basis of need, and because I do not believe we can wait indefinitely for the States which either cannot or are unwilling to do their duty in regard to the old-age pension situation, I am going to vote for the amendment offered by the Senator from Texas, making this 2-to-1 proposition apply in all the States up to an average of $15 per month.

I realize that the question arises, How soon shall we reach a period when the Federal Government will undertake the entire obligation and leave the States entirely free? It may be that we are headed toward that situation. I do not know whether we are or not. If we are headed toward it, we cannot stop it any more than one can take a broom and sweep back the waves rolling in from the ocean. We shall reach that point some day if we are going to head in that direction, and it may be necessary to do it. It may be that from the standpoint of justice, the obligation of the Federal Government is paramount to the obligation of the States. But whether or not that be true, for the time being it seems to me we can afford to make this departure up to an average of $15 per month; and I reiterate my hope that the time is not far distant when the average pension received by the old people of the country will be at least $30, for it is difficult to understand how anybody entitled to it at all can live on any decent standard for less than $30 per month.

For these reasons I expect to vote for the pending amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], as modified.

Mr. LODGE. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Ellender	King	Reynolds
Andrews	Frazier	La Follette	Russell
Austin	George	Lee	Schwartz
Barbour	Gerry	Lodge	Schwellenbach
Barkley	Gibson	Lucas	Sheppard
Bilbo	Glass	McKellar	Shipstead
Bone	Green	McNary	Slattery
Borah	Guffey	Maloney	Stewart
Bridges	Gurney	Mead	Taft
Bulow	Hale	Miller	Thomas, Okla.
Burke	Harrison	Minton	Thomas, Utah
Byrd	Hatch	Murray	Tobey
Capper	Hayden	Neely	Townsend
Chavez	Herring	Norris	Truman
Clark, Idaho	Hill	Nye	Vandenberg
Clark, Mo.	Holman	O'Mahoney	Van Nuys
Connally	Holt	Overton	Wagner
Danaher	Hughes	Pittman	Walsh
Davis	Johnson, Calif.	Radcliffe	White
Downey	Johnson, Colo.	Reed	Wiley

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], as modified.

Mr. HARRISON and Mr. LODGE called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HALE (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES]. Being unable to transfer my pair, I cannot vote. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay" and the Senator from South Carolina would vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. DAVIS (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN]. Not knowing how he would vote if present, I withdraw my vote.

Mr. HILL. My colleague [Mr. BANKHEAD] and the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] are absent on important business. They have a pair on this question. I am advised that if my colleague were present he would vote "yea" and if the Senator from North Carolina were present he would vote "nay."

Mr. ANDREWS. My colleague [Mr. PEPPER] is out of the city. If he were present he would vote "yea." He is paired with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], who, I understand, if present, would vote "nay."

Mr. HAYDEN. My colleague [Mr. ASHURST] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES], the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CARAWAY], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN], and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] are absent on important public business.

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. GILLETTE], the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. LUNDEEN], and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] are detained in various Government departments.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CARAWAY] is paired on this amendment with the Senator from Iowa [Mr. GILLETTE]. I am advised that if present and voting, the Senator from Arkansas would vote "yea" and the Senator from Iowa would vote "nay."

The Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] is detained in the Committee on Interstate Commerce. I am advised that if present and voting, he would vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 43, nays 35, as follows:

YEAS—43

Andrews	Frazier	Miller	Schwellenbach
Barkley	George	Minton	Sheppard
Bilbo	Guffey	Murray	Shipstead
Bone	Harrison	Neely	Slattery
Borah	Hatch	Nye	Stewart

Byrnes	Hale	Smathers

So Mr. CONNALLY's amendment, as modified, was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4929) to amend the act of June 23, 1938 (52 Stat. 944); asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. VINSON of Georgia, Mr. DREWRY, and Mr. MAAS were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the enrolled bill (S. 955) creating the City of Dubuque Bridge Commission and authorizing said Commission and its successors to purchase and/or construct, maintain, and operate a bridge or bridges across the Mississippi River at or near Dubuque, Iowa, and East Dubuque, Ill., and it was signed by the Vice President.

AMENDMENT OF SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6635) to amend the Social Security Act, and for other purposes.

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, at this time I wish to have taken up an amendment of mine lying on the table. I ask that the clerk state the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to strike out beginning with line 7 on page 1, through line 22 on page 5, and to insert in lieu thereof the following:

SEC. 101. Effective January 1, 1940, title I of the Social Security Act is amended to read as follows:

"TITLE I—OLD-AGE ASSISTANCE"

"SECTION 1. (a) Every citizen of the United States who is 60 years of age or older and who is not gainfully employed shall, upon application, be entitled to receive a payment of $40 for each month beginning with the month in which he files application or the month in which he becomes 60 years of age, whichever month is later.

"(b) No such citizen shall be deemed to be gainfully employed in any month unless he renders services during such month for which he receives remuneration in excess of $10. The amount of any payment made to any such citizen for any month in which he is gainfully employed shall be deducted from subsequent payments to which he may be entitled.

"Sec. 2. (a) Applications for payments under this title shall be filed with the Social Security Board in such form as the Board may prescribe.

"(b) The provisions of sections 204 to 208, both inclusive (including penalties), shall, insofar as they are not inconsistent with the provisions of this title, be applicable with respect to payments under this title in the same manner and to the same extent as such provisions are applicable with respect to payments under title II.

"Sec. 3. (a) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this title.

"(b) The sums appropriated for making payments under this title shall be maintained in a separate account in the Treasury; and such payments shall be made by the Secretary of the Treasury from such account in accordance with certification by the Social Security Board."

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, I shall first explain the amendment by telling what it does not do. It does not change the pending bill or the present law with respect to, first, aid to the blind; second, aid to crippled children; third, aid to dependent children; fourth, aid for public health; fifth, aid for maternal and child welfare; sixth, vocational rehabilitation; seventh, unemployment compensation; and, finally, it does not change the present law or the pending bill with respect to old-age and survivors' insurance.

The amendment would, however, repeal the requirement of State contribution for aid to needy old people, and substitute therefor an outright Federal pension of $40 a month to every citizen 60 years of age or more who is not gainfully employed.

The amendment provides that the pension shall be paid directly to the old person, without State administration. It also provides that payment be made regardless of need. In other words, the amendment provides a clear-cut Federal pension of $40 a month without the administration of State officials, without regard to need of the individual.

Mr. President, this administration is the first administration to give old-age pensions. This administration deserves great credit for blazing the trail on the entire program covered by social-security legislation.

For the first time in the history of our Nation the Federal Government, in present law and in the pending bill, recognizes its obligation to crippled children, recognizes its obligation to blind people, recognizes its obligation to care for the health of the people throughout the Nation. For the first time in the history of this Nation the Federal Government, through this administration, has recognized the obligation of the Government to mothers, for maternal care, for the welfare of crippled children, and for the welfare of dependent children. For the first time in the history of this Nation the Federal Government, through this administration, has recognized the obligation of the Government to the old people of this country. Therefore I have only praise for the efforts which have been made already to meet these problems, and I certainly have no caustic criticism to make of the present administration for the things it has done in that direction.

However, we must learn by experience. We can profit by the years of experience which we have already had with respect to the administration of the law in its application to old-age pensions.

Again let me make it clear that the amendment does not change the law which provides for contribution and for old-age insurance. For example, a person who is contributing now to a fund which will later be paid to him in the form of an old-age annuity would still be allowed to draw that fund. Whatever is provided in the amendment would be in addition to that. If that person, who is now contributing to a fund, should die, his survivors—that is, his widow and orphans—would receive the amount of money he has contributed. That is not changed by the amendment. It seeks only to repeal that part of the law which provides that the States must match money for the payment of pensions to old people, and to put in its place a Federal old-age pension which is paid to old people regardless of whether the State matches it or not, and is paid directly to them by the Federal Government.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TRUMAN in the chair). Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. LEE. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. Has the Senator an estimate of how many people there are in the United States today who are over 60 years of age?

Mr. LEE. According to the last census, the Census of 1930, the total is 10,385,026. According to an estimate made by the Bureau of the Census in July 1938 there are 12,450,000 such persons in the United States.

Mr. TAFT. Then am I to understand that the amendment would require approximately $5,000,000,000 a year from the Federal Treasury as opposed to approximately $250,000,000 which the bill provides?

Mr. LEE. I do not believe so, and I base my belief on the following facts. In the first place the amendment provides payment only for those who are not gainfully employed, and according to figures furnished me, which seem to be reasonably accurate, there are 4,155,000 persons 60 years of age and over who are gainfully employed, which would leave a total of 6,230,000 who are not. That calculation is based on the census of 1930 of 10,385,026 persons, instead of the other figure which I gave. There is a little difference between the two. But it leaves a total of 6,230,000 persons, and that would amount to $2,990,400,000.

Mr. President, there is precedent for paying old-age pensions. In the first place, we now make retirement payments to certain groups. We pay to those who have served in the Army and Navy after a certain number of years of service. We retire such persons on a good income. A major general is retired after 30 years' service on a monthly retirement pay of $500. A brigadier general is retired on a monthly pay of $375. A colonel is retired on a monthly pay of $375. A lieutenant colonel on $359.37 monthly pay. A major on $338.12 monthly pay. A captain on $281.25 monthly pay. A first lieutenant on $225 monthly pay. A second lieutenant on $187.50 monthly pay.

In respect to the Navy, a rear admiral's retirement pay is $6,000 a year. A captain's retirement pay is $4,500 a year. A lieutenant's retirement pay is $3,300 a year. An enlisted man's retirement pay is from $133.80 down to $31.50 a month.

In addition to that, a Supreme Court Justice's retirement pay is $20,000 a year. Federal judges are retired on full pay. Whatever their salary is, they are retired on that salary.

Furthermore, the civil-service groups are retired on pay according to their service and their pay after a certain number of years' service.

I do not hear any questions asked in the Senate when we appropriate money to make these retirement payments. I do not hear a Senator rise and ask, "How much will it cost?" It is accepted as a matter of course that these people have earned this retirement pay.

The mail carrier who brings our mail every day knows that at the end of a certain period of time he is going to be retired on sufficient to keep him in a respectable station of life. He also knows that he is protected by the civil-service laws; that he cannot be arbitrarily discharged. In other words, he is given a guaranty, so to speak, of a job with an income for 30 years, and then a guaranty of an income on retirement pay.

An Army officer or an enlisted man is given a certain guaranty of an income while he lives and while he serves. Then he is guaranteed an income afterward on retirement.

Let me ask the Senate, What about the laborer who does not know whether or not he will have a job next month? Consider his condition. It may be argued that because a man has given 30 years of service to the Government, therefore he should be retired with pay; but compare that with this argument: The man who is not sure of a job may say, "Why, I look at it the other way. That other man has been guaranteed a job for 30 years. If there is any difference, it ought to be in my favor, because I have not had a guaranty of a job. He has had an assurance that his job is secure, and in addition to that you guarantee him a living on a decent standard afterward, but I am not guaranteed even a job, and because I am not guaranteed a job, neither am I guaranteed a retirement pension after a certain number of years. Why," he says, "instead of saying that you owe that man retirement pay, you should say that he has been guaranteed a job all the time and has had an opportunity to save for his old age. He has had the best of it. I am the one who has been receiving the rebuffs of life. I lost my job and used up my saving. I am the one who needs a pension more than the man who has had a steady income all of his life."

A Federal judge cannot be dismissed. He serves for life during good behavior. He has a guaranteed income; and because of his service the Government says to him, "When you reach 70 years of age, after 10 years' service, we will continue you on full pay."

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LEE. I yield.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Under sections 1 and 2, would the Government pay $40 a month to a person over 60 years of age who has a substantial income but who has retired and is not performing any service?

Mr. LEE. That is correct. I shall discuss that question before I conclude.

I am pointing out that our Government is already committed to a policy of pensions and retirement pay. I do not wish anyone to interpret my remarks to mean that I do not favor retirement for Army or Navy officers or for enlisted men who serve in the Army or Navy. I favor such retirement. I favor retirement pay for men who serve on the bench. I favor civil-service retirement. However, I am arguing that since such individuals are protected from the hardships of life by virtue of the perpetuity and security of their positions, and since we grant them a continued income after a certain period of service, we should grant an income to the man who serves and who has not been so protected.

Whom could we better do without, the civil-service worker or the farmer? Who is to guarantee the farmer an income after he has spent his vigorous years producing food for the country? Who is to guarantee an income to the merchant? Who is to guarantee an income to the doctor, or to professional and business people who are not protected by our system of insurance and retirement funds? Who is to guarantee an income to the wage earner after he has given a life of labor?

I mention these things to show that we are committed to a system of retirement pay. The farmer, the laborer, the merchant, and the professional people, and all workers, are just as much entitled to an income after they have served their fruitful years as are those who have served in protected capacities.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BILBO in the chair). Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. LEE. I yield.

Mr. HATCH. I do not wish to interrupt the Senator's remarks; but he was talking about civil-service employees, and the thought occurred to me that there is a provision under which certain deductions are made from their salaries throughout the years to provide a retirement fund. Is not retirement something for which they themselves pay? I am asking for information.

Mr. LEE. I cannot answer that question directly. I am inclined to think that they make a contribution, and I believe the Government also makes a contribution. However, they have sufficient salary after the contribution is made to insure them a reasonable income. I am not saying what I say in criticism of that system. In fact, I voted for it when I was a member of the Civil Service Committee in the House.

Mr. HATCH. I merely wanted to interrupt the Senator to say that I am sure he desires to be fair in the matter.

Mr. LEE. That is correct.

Mr. HATCH. The RECORD should show that in a sense civil-service employees are paying for the retirement which is granted to them. In other words, it is not a gratuity from the Government.

Mr. LEE. In the case of an Army or Navy officer I believe that if there is a contribution from his pay it is not so considered. The same is true of Federal judges.

Mr. HATCH. I am sure the Senator is correct with respect to Federal judges. I have no information with respect to Army and Navy personnel.

Mr. LEE. If it be true that they make a certain contribution, they have enough left over to sustain them during the time they are working and after they have worked the necessary period to entitle them to a retirement income.

The present law with respect to old-age pensions for the needy is not good. Of course, it is better than none at all. I voted for it, and it is today serving a great purpose; but it has defects and faults which I believe we should correct at this time. We are blazing a new trail. We are working on a new subject. We should perfect and improve the law where it falls short.

At the present time the law requires State matching. We have just adopted an amendment; and all the argument in support of that amendment could just as well apply to the amendment which I have offered. It would apply even better, for the reason that the amendment which we have just approved, the amendment offered by the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], removes only a degree of the objection raised to the present law. Everything the Senator from Texas said with regard to the present situation could be said with greater force in support of my amendment, because his amendment goes only part of the way toward correcting the fault of the present law. It only matches $2 for $1, instead of dollar for dollar, and that only up to $15.

The Senator from Texas said yesterday, very effectively:

The point I am trying to drive home is that the Federal Government is responsible for this system. The Federal Government decreed that the policy of giving something to dependent aged persons in the United States should come into existence.

Why did we do that? Did we have any obligation to do it? It is said, "Yes; the Federal Government owes an obligation to all of the aged people who are dependent, who are in need. It owes them the duty of seeing that they get something toward relieving their need."

Very well. Where are these citizens? They are not all in Washington; they are not all in the Senate; they are not all in the House of Representatives. They are scattered throughout 48 States of the Union. They are all the same kind of citizens. They are all in need. They are all sovereigns in some State, in some Commonwealth.

What would we think of a government which said, "Well, now, there is a good citizen down in Arkansas who is in need. The Federal Government owes him something. But how much does it owe him? It owes him only $3.08. There is another citizen in California in need. How much does the Federal Government owe him? It owes him $15." He is the same kind of a citizen, in the same condition, in the same country, under the same flag. But we give one of these citizens, the one in Arkansas, just $3.08, and the other one, in California, $15. Is that right?

We adopted an amendment which would cause the Federal Government to give the citizen in Arkansas a little more than he is receiving now. It would increase the amount he receives by one-third and to that extent it is an improvement over the present law. However, there would still be an inequality, and the Senator admitted that his amendment would not entirely correct the evil of which he spoke.

What is the average old-age pension in Arkansas? It is $6.15 a month. What is the average old-age pension in Oklahoma? It is $19.94. There is an imaginary line between Oklahoma and Arkansas. When I was campaigning for the Senate I may have crossed the line into Arkansas. I did not see any line. At that time Senator Robinson was living. One of my friends asked one of the men who was attending the meeting, "Are you going to vote for JOSH LEE?" He replied, "Well, I like JOSH all right, but I guess I will have to vote for Uncle Joe again." [Laughter.] Either I was over the line campaigning or this citizen was over the line listening. Usually I could tell when I crossed the line. When I crossed the line the applause was unanimous. When I got back into Oklahoma only those who were supporting me applauded. That was the only way I could tell I was over the line into Arkansas. [Laughter.]

The line is an imaginary one. A citizen living on one side of that imaginary line draws a monthly pension of $6.15, while a citizen in exactly the same circumstances on the other side of the imaginary line, which cannot be seen, draws $19.94. That is making fish of one and fowl of the other.

The amendment which we have just adopted does not correct that situation. It helps it only to a degree; but it does not eliminate the difference. It is left up to the States to decide, first, whether they are able, and, second, whether they want to match Federal funds and to what extent, even on a 2-to-1 basis, up to $15. Even the pending bill, which amends the present law, would not correct that situation. It would only ameliorate it.

Yesterday the Senator from Florida [Mr. ANDREWS] read into the Record a very fine statement from the late Mr. Justice Cardozo, following the decision on the present law, in which he recognized and stated that our obligation to the old people is a national obligation. In the opinion, which was written by the late Justice Cardozo and concurred in by six Justices of the United States Supreme Court, all except Justice McReynolds and Justice Butler, the Court said:

The purge of Nation-wide calamity that began in 1929 has taught us many lessons. Not the least is the solidarity of interests that may once have seemed to be divided. Unemployment spreads from State to State, the hinterland now settled that in pioneer days gave an avenue of escape. * * * Spreading from State to State, unemployment is an ill not particular but general, which may be checked, if Congress so determines, by the resources of the Nation. If this can have been doubtful until now, our ruling today in the case of the Chas. C. Steward Mach. Co. (301 U. S. 548, ante, 1279, 57 S. Ct. 883, 109 A. L. R. 1293, supra), has set the doubt at rest. But the ill is all one or at least not greatly different whether men are thrown out of work because there is no longer work to do or because the disabilities of age make them incapable of doing it. Rescue becomes necessary irrespective of the cause. The hope behind this statute is to save men and women from the rigors of the poorhouse as well as from the haunting fear that such a lot awaits them when journey's end is near.

Then later in the opinion the Court said:

The problem is plainly national in area and dimensions.

A second fault of the present law is that old people are required to prove their poverty in order to receive old-age pensions. An old man must prove that he is "broke"; that he has no property; that he has no relatives or kin sufficiently close who will support him. In other words, whether or not we like to say it, he must take a pauper's oath in order to be eligible to receive an old-age pension.

The present plan penalizes the thrifty and rewards the extravagant. A man who has nothing and proves that he has nothing is put on the pension roll, but another man who has been a little more thrifty and has foregone some of the pleasures of life and accumulated and saved a little property is penalized by not being eligible to receive a pension. So the present law places a penalty upon the thrifty and offers a reward to the extravagant.

Again the present law is faulty because it causes friction since the human equation enters into the decision of whether or not a man or a woman is entitled to receive an old-age pension. The amendment which I have offered will remove that friction because it will remove the element of human judgment. A State board in every State now sits in judgment to decide the question whether or not an individual is in need and to what extent he is in need before he may receive a pension. I say that form of procedure should be eliminated. Most of the misunderstanding, most all of the friction that has arisen in the administration of the law, has been due to that very element of human judgment deciding that one man is in need and his neighbor is not in need or is in need to a lesser degree.

Year before last Oklahoma received some unfavorable publicity, which I greatly regretted. It grew out of the allegation that dead men were on the pension rolls in Oklahoma. When investigation was held before the Social Security Board, members of the State board of Oklahoma explained that the reason the names of some who were dead were on the rolls was due to the fact that the case load in Oklahoma was so heavy that the social-security workers could not visit the pensioners sufficiently often to check the rolls. One social-security worker, a girl, perhaps—most of them are girls—had 1,000 old people whom she had to interview. That was the average, we were told. The social-security worker had to go to the homes, ascertain everything possible as to the economic condition of the old people, and then report back to the State board. If she had to visit a thousand homes that would mean at least three or more pensioners a day from whom she would have to secure all the necessary information. The statement was made that the case load was so heavy that she could make the rounds so infrequently that some of those on the pension roll had died since the list was last checked. That is a reasonable explanation of that condition.

The point I am coming to is that the machinery of administration under the present law is so intricate and complicated that, in itself, it results in friction and will continue to result in friction, and it also adds to the cost of administering the present law. Much of the money that is intended to go to the old people must, of necessity, be spent in administration, in order to determine who should be on the rolls and who should not be on the rolls.

The Senator from Wyoming [Mr. SCHWARTZ] asked a very proper and important question a while ago. He asked if, under this proposal, every person 60 years of age would receive $40 a month. My reply is, "Yes; he would"; and the universality of its application would meet with the approval of the people throughout the country. For example, Henry Ford would receive a pension of $40 a month if it should be determined that he was not gainfully employed, but, with a fair tax adequate to raise the money for the payment of the amount provided, Henry Ford would pay back in taxes much more than he would receive in pension, and he would pay it much more willingly when he realized that the plan was fairly administered and that its simplicity argued in its favor.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LEE. I yield.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. I wonder if the Senator has any information as to the number of people over 60 who have private incomes which enable them to live according to good, American standards of living?

Mr. LEE. I do not have such information. I have only the figures as to those who are considered to be gainfully employed, and, in round numbers, of 10,000,000 people 60 years of age or over, 4,000,000 are gainfully employed or are so considered. It is safe to say that only a small percentage of people 60 years of age and over have an income sufficient to sustain them. The percentage must, of necessity, be small, because when we consider the people around us, we know that the number who are poor is much greater than the number of those who are wealthy. Those who no longer have jobs and who can depend entirely upon income from wealth naturally must constitute a small percentage. For that reason I am persuaded that the payment of old-age pensions, regardless of need, is desirable, because many persons in the middle class who would receive $40 a month, even though they might be able to eke out an existence without the $40, would have their purchasing power increased, and the money would find its way immediately back into the current of circulation, for they would spend it; they would buy things they want and need; and many who might be able to get along without it would put it back in circulation and thereby increase our national income and stimulate employment.

The question is asked, "Why $40 per month? Why not $45, or why not $50, or why not $60, or why not $30?" I grant you that I have no magic method of determining exactly the right amount; but the Gallup poll which was published in the Washington Post of February 26, 1939, gave us the figure of $40 per month. After Dr. Gallup had taken a poll, the average pension which the people of the United States were willing to support was $40 per month.

The question which was sent out by Dr. Gallup was, "Do you believe in old-age pensions?" The response to that question was, "Yes," 94 percent; "No," 6 percent.

The next question was, "About how much pension per month do you believe should be paid?" The average of the answers to that question was $40. These figures are the average for all those who stated a figure. The amounts varied in various sections. For example, Southern States had a low figure of $31; Western States had a high figure of $44; West Central States had a figure of $36; but the average was $40.

This question then was asked, "Would you be willing to pay a sales tax or an income tax to pay these pensions?" The result of that questionnaire was, "Yes," 87 percent; "No," 13 percent.

Forty dollars per month is not enough to discourage taking out life-insurance policies. Forty dollars per month is not enough to destroy retirement plans of private companies. A pension of $40 per month would augment an income from the pension of a private company, or it would augment an annuity paid by a life-insurance company. I am persuaded that it would even encourage taking out such annuities, because it is very difficult for an average man in the middle class to pay for enough life insurance to give him a large enough annuity to encourage him to lay aside the little he would be able to spare from his daily living; but when he realized that he would receive a pension of $40 per month, he would know that whatever life insurance he might be able to pay for would simply augment his income to that amount, and I think the adoption of the amendment would encourage taking out life-insurance annuities. I believe it would further encourage the retirement plans of private companies and institutions and professions.

Forty dollars per month is not enough to discourage saving. It would encourage saving. A person would have an incentive to save. If he knew his income above 60 years would be only $40 per month, he would say, "Well, if I can save a little I shall have more to spend. I can live in a little better condition than I could with only $40 per month."

Again, the question is asked, "Why 60 years? Why not 65? Why not 70? Why not 50?" I cannot answer that question. We have to arrive at some reasonable figure. It may be that the age ought to be lower than 60 years, because business discriminates against a man after he is 40 years of age. If you apply for a job after you are over 40 years of age you run squarely into the policy of companies which will not employ workers above 40 years of age.

In this regard I wish to read again from the opinion which was written by Mr. Justice Cardozo, and which the Senator from Florida [Mr. ANDREWS] quoted yesterday:

In 1930, out of 224 American factories investigated, 71, or almost one-third, had fixed maximum hiring-age limits; in 4 plants the limit was under 40; in 41 it was under 46. In the other 153 plants there were no fixed limits, but in practice few were hired if they were over 50 years of age.

As a man grows older, usually his responsibilities increase, his obligations increase, and his possibility of earning decreases. Sixty years seem to be a fair and reasonable age, because I doubt if a man 60 years of age could secure employment in industry today unless he was a craftsman of unusual expertness, and his efficiency was not impaired because of his years. It might be possible then that he could secure employment for a few more years. The principle involved of paying an outright Federal pension is the important thing, not as to whether the age should be 60 or 65.

Mr. President, I am going to ask for a ye-a-and-nay vote on this amendment. I have heard different persons giving lip service to the old people in very general terms and very general phrases. Now, let us see if that lip service was lip service only. Here is the vote.

I support this old-age pension for economic reasons as well as for sentimental reasons, if you want to call them that, or emotional reasons, or humanitarian reasons. I support it for economic reasons.

The amendment would decrease unemployment, first, by making room for more young men. As the amendment is drawn, the pension would be paid to those not gainfully employed. Many old persons who are working, but who are not really able to work, would surrender their employment under this plan, and that would make room for younger men and give them employment, and the old persons would still have incomes.

Again, the amendment would decrease unemployment because it would tremendously increase purchasing power, and that increase in purchasing power would increase the demand for goods. The increased demand for goods would increase the demand for employment and thereby increase jobs.

The amendment would force money into circulation and restore prosperity.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. LEE. I do.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I desire to ask the Senator for one bit of information regarding his proposal. Has he submitted an estimate of its cost?

Mr. LEE. The nearest estimate I can arrive at is $2,990,000,000.

Mr. VANDENBERG. In round numbers, $3,000,000,000?

Mr. LEE. In round numbers, $3,000,000,000. The estimate is based upon the census of 1930, and the estimate of old persons gainfully employed.

Mr. VANDENBERG. How is the Senator proposing that the money shall be raised? Is he suggesting some special tax in connection with it?

Mr. LEE. I am not suggesting any tax in the amendment. I am prepared to vote for a tax, but the money would have to be raised in the same manner that money is now being raised to pay pensions through the present law.

Mr. VANDENBERG. But it cannot be raised, as the Senator knows, from income taxes to an extent equal to $4,000,000,000. We must find some other method of taxation, and I was wondering whether the Senator would approve the theory of the sales tax or the transactions tax in order to get the money.

Mr. LEE. I will approve whatever tax the Finance Committee report as one that they recommend to raise this money, and let me correct the Senator. Instead of $4,000,000,000, the estimated amount is $2,990,000,000, or, if the Senator likes, in round numbers, $3,000,000,000. The amount is large enough. Let us not make it larger than it actually is.

I am prepared to vote for a tax to raise this sum. In this particular measure I am not offering or recommending a tax, but whenever the Finance Committee of the Senate or the Ways and Means Committee of the House shall report a measure providing for a tax to raise the money to pay these benefits, I am prepared to support it and to vote for it.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I happen to be a member of the Committee on Finance, and I happen to know some of the grave difficulties in finding available tax targets from which to get enough money to make it possible to come anywhere near closing the existing fiscal gap in the Government's operations, and I was wondering whether the Senator had any suggestions to offer as to where this tax could be levied in order to produce the $3,000,000,000.

Mr. LEE. Of course, I have some opinions, which I shall be glad at the proper time to offer to the Committee on Finance. However, I feel that the Senator and the other members of the committee should, and will, at the proper time, if this amendment shall be agreed to, bring forward a tax, and whatever tax plan they bring forward, it is my intention to support it, and I believe the people of this country will support it. I cannot swear by the Gallup poll, but it seems to hit a pretty good average in getting the opinions of the people; and in one of the questionnaires which Mr. Gallup has sent out, and which was published in the Washington Post on February 26, 1939, this question was asked:

Would you be willing to pay a sales tax or an income tax to pay these pensions?

Yes, 87 percent.

No, 13 percent.

I believe that the people of this country are willing and ready to support the imposition of a tax for this purpose. I am not yet prepared to say that it should be a sales tax. I am not prepared to say it should be a tax raised all from one source.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Of course, it would not be possible to get $3,000,000,000, or anything like it, from an income tax. It will be necessary to resort to some new tax method, and that is what induced me to ask the Senator the question. I feel as the Senator from Virginia stated he felt a few hours ago; much as I disagree at the moment with the philosophy of the transactions tax, under the Townsend plan, I think the proponents of that plan are to be tremendously commended for their courage and their bravery in proposing the means with which to pay the bill which they propose to incur. I share every sentiment the Senator has uttered about the wisdom and desirability of old-age pensions, yet it seems to me it is a snare and a delusion to hold that mirage before the senior citizens of this country, except as it is balanced with a specific program for producing the money with which to pay the bill.

Mr. LEE. Of course, that is very sound; but let us see about it. I stated that I was willing to vote for any tax the committee would present to this body to finance what I propose. The Senator from Michigan says he agrees with everything I propose.

Mr. VANDENBERG. No; I say I agree—

Mr. LEE. With the sentiment.

Mr. VANDENBERG. With the sentiment the Senator utters, and that it would be a splendid thing if what he proposes could be done. I am asking the Senator to show me how it can be done, in dollars and cents.

Mr. LEE. Will the Senator then join me also in saying he will vote for any tax bill the Committee on Finance will present to this body for financing such a proposal?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Certainly not, unless the tax bill is one which in its very nature does not stifle American industry and commerce, and does not make it impossible for us to do anything except to live on a pension system sooner or later. That is the reason why I am interested in finding how the Senator wants us to raise the money, because I am keenly concerned in finding the practical means of doing it, and I am wondering whether the Senator has any suggestion.

Mr. LEE. This is just another case of lip service, but when it comes to voting the Senator says, "No, I will not vote for anything the committee brings out; I will not vote for a transactions tax;" and I suppose the Senator is ready to say he will not vote for a gross income tax.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator uses the phrase "lip service" with a great deal of freedom. Let me say to the Senator that I think it is lip service to propose these pensions without proposing a way to raise the money.

Mr. LEE. The Senator seems to favor an old-age pension, but he is not willing to say that he will propose a tax or vote for a tax to provide the money for paying it. I say I am willing to vote for any tax the Finance Committee will report for financing it.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I do not think the Finance Committee can find a tax with which to pay it, and I am asking the Senator where he would find it.

Mr. LEE. If the Finance Committee is made up of members of the same frame of mind as that of the Senator from Michigan, no doubt the Senate Finance Committee will never find one, or bring in a proposal, for financing such a humanitarian program.

Mr. VANDENBERG. It takes more than a frame of mind to finance a tax.

Mr. LEE. Yes; it takes courage.

Mr. VANDENBERG. And it takes resources.

Mr. LEE. Does the Senator mean to tell me that in the richest Nation on the face of the earth we cannot get sufficient money to take care of the men and women who made the wealth of this country?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I mean to say to the Senator that for 7 years we have failed by $3,000,000,000 a year to find the money with which to pay our bills.

Mr. LEE. Because the Finance Committee has not brought in a tax bill to accomplish that, and every time we offer a tax bill the Senator is one of the first to say, "Let us not stifle business."

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator knows that is not accurate if he is familiar with the RECORD. I have voted for every increased tax amendment proposed by the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE]. I have voted for every increased tax that has been proposed in the Senate for the purpose of paying the Government's bills, and I cannot do any more than that.

Mr. LEE. But the Senator is not willing to vote for a tax bill to raise the money with which to pay old-age pensions.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I cannot vote for a tax bill which the Senator will not present to me. I am trying to find out how he proposes to raise the money, what kind of a tax it is he wants.

Mr. LEE. Tax proposals have been presented, but the Finance Committee have not reported them. The Townsend-plan advocates proposed a transactions tax, a turn-over tax, a gross-income tax; they have all been presented, but I have not heard the Senator advocating any of them with which to finance this proposal.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Is the Senator in favor of the transactions tax?

Mr. LEE. I am in favor of any tax the Finance Committee will report; and if they will report a tax to this body, I will support it.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator is very careful to hide behind the Finance Committee before he makes his commitment. Will the Senator support a transactions tax per se, himself?

Mr. LEE. Certainly.

Mr. VANDENBERG. That is the exact answer I want; and if the Senator joins that with his proposal, I say he is on sound ground.

Mr. LEE. Will the Senator vote for the amendment, then?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I will not. [Laughter.] But this is the first time in the course of the Senator's address that I have discovered precisely how he is willing to raise the money, which is what I have been trying to discover.

Mr. LEE. I am willing to raise it in that way; I am willing to raise it by a gross-income tax; I am willing to raise it by any tax the Finance Committee will report to this body, or the Ways and Means Committee will report to the other body. I think any tax ought to have the careful scrutiny of the committees. I think it ought to be gone over by experts.

At first it was my intention to offer a tax measure along with the amendment I am now offering, but finding that it had not gone through the hot fires and the close scrutiny and the careful, fine-tooth combing of either one of the revenue committees, I did not present the measure, because I did not want merely to make an empty gesture. I will prove my faith by my works at any time, but I am convinced that the Senator from Michigan is not willing to support any kind of a tax that will raise the money to pay the old people of this country $40 a month. I challenge him now to stand up and tell the Senate, in my time, whether he will support any kind of a tax; and if so, what kind?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I shall be very happy to tell the Senator. The first thing I want to find is a tax which will pay the existing $3,000,000,000 deficit of the Federal Government. Thus far the Finance Committee, under the leadership of the Senator's administration, has been unable to find such a tax, although I have supported every increase proposed.

In my judgment, if the existing spending tempo, without an increase of any nature, shall continue, there will be no recourse except a national sales tax, and much as I should regret to resort to that, I expect sooner or later to have to vote for some kind of a national sales tax, unless the spending deficits decrease.

After we have found a way to put the Public Treasury on a solvent basis, in the presence of its existing obligations—which, in my judgment, cannot be ignored very much longer—then, on the basis of what I anticipate will be the increased costs of this Nation, just so soon as we are on a sound fiscal basis nationally, with respect to the Government, I should be perfectly willing to expand the sales tax to pay whatever reasonably ought to be paid in behalf of the senior citizens, so-called, of this country. I am not prepared to give the Senator a bill of particulars, because I have not the slightest idea of what it will be.

Mr. LEE. The Senator expected me to give a bill of particulars and answer definitely, which I did, but the Senator has not done so, and I will give him a chance now to say what tax will he vote for to pay the old people of this country $40 a month.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I asked the Senator for a bill of particulars because he is proposing a measure which would call for the expenditure of a vast sum. Whenever I propose that the Government expend money I will submit the method by which I think the Government should obtain the money.

Mr. LEE. But the Senator wanted it to go into the RECORD that he agreed with the sentiments of the Senator from Oklahoma, which were for an old-age pension, but he is not ready to offer any proposal for paying the pensions, and I am.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I am glad the Senator finally has done so.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oklahoma yield?

Mr. LEE. I yield.

Mr. REYNOLDS. As the Senator knows, I am very much interested in providing for the elderly in this country, and I have a suggestion to make. I should like to know from the Senator how much it is going to cost annually to take care of the elderly people of this country, under the plan proposed by him?

Mr. LEE. As near as I can estimate, $2,990,000,000.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I have a proposal to make which will take care of those people for at least 6 years. The countries abroad, with whom we were allied during the World War, owe us $13,000,000,000. I am suggesting, and have heretofore suggested, and have presented a resolution to that end, the appointment of an American gentleman to go abroad and rap on the doors of all those nations every day and ask them to pay us the money which they owe us. He might tell them that we want that money because we are nearly broke, and we want to look after the old people in this country, whom we love. If we can get those "chiselers" to pay the taxpayers of this country the $13,000,000,000 they owe us, then we can take care of our old folks, at least for 6 years.

Mr. LEE. I appreciate that statement from the Senator, and I imagine that he and I will both be waiting a long time, and the Congress will be waiting a long time if we have to wait for either the Senator from Michigan to advocate a tax plan which will finance this proposal, or for foreign governments to pay the debt which the able Senator from North Carolina is interested in collecting. I may say that I share his feeling in the matter. I wish we could collect the debt. But I have never been one who continues to follow a vain hope. I am ready and willing now to vote, and will vote today for a tax measure which the proper fiscal committee of either House is willing to recommend which will pay for this proposal. I will vote for a tax measure, if the committee will report it, which will enable $40 a month to be paid to the old people. I should like to hear the Senator from Michigan say as much. Yes; there is lip service to the old people. Yes; they are told how they built this country. They are told how their dear trembling old fingers have erected monuments in America, but when we come to the vote, where are those who tell them that? We just cannot get the money to do it.

In a campaign it is very easy to say, "I am for a reasonable old-age pension." And there is another good statement behind which lip-service pension advocates can hide: "I am for an adequate old-age pension which can be raised in a reasonable manner without stifling business." There is plenty of cover there to hide anyone.

Yes, Mr. President; I am for an old-age pension, and I am offering an amendment which would provide a pension of $40 a month. Forty dollars a month would make the old people very happy, and it would keep many of them from misery.

We no longer send old people to the poorhouse. We make them take a pauper's oath for a pauper's pension. We have just voted to adopt an amendment to increase the amount of the pension. I voted for it, and I approve it. I commend the present administration for being the only administration which has ever considered the old folks in legislation so far as an old-age pension is concerned. I am for that, and I think we ought to refine and improve the pension legislation. The way to improve it is to separate the Federal old-age pension from the State pension, and not make fish of one citizen and fowl of another. We pay one citizen $6.15, and another citizen, under exactly the same circumstances, across an imaginary line, not 100 yards away, $19.94.

Mr. CLARK of Idaho. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BILBO in the chair). Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. LEE. I yield.

Mr. CLARK of Idaho. Is it fair to say that what the Senator from Oklahoma means is that today we pay the old folks a pension not to live on but to die on?

Mr. LEE. I imagine that pretty well covers it.

The average amount paid in Oklahoma is $19.94. That means, as was shown in the hearings here, that some old people there receive $1.36; perhaps some receive less than that.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LEE. I yield.

Mr. CHAVEZ. When the Senator from Oklahoma says that some States pay as much as $6 he is too liberal. I have right now on my desk many letters from persons in my State who say they receive as low as $2.82. I do not know which would be the better, to go to the poorhouse or to receive only $2.82.

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, I have always felt that the poorhouse is a disgrace and a shame. Of course, the poorhouse was developed and came into being, I supposed, as an act of mercy. People decided that instead of letting old people die on the street they would have a county farm or a county poorhouse, and those who were not able to take care of their mothers and fathers, or were not charitable enough to take care of them, sent them "over the hill to the poorhouse," where most of them died of a broken heart instead of old age. There is not a great deal of difference in that and forcing our fathers and mothers to say by affidavit, and to prove, "I do not have a cent in the world. I do not have a thing in the world on which to live. I must take the pauper's oath in order to get $6.16 a month." Of course, it is the intention of the administration that the procedure shall be kindlier, and I suppose it is. I voted for the improvement in the law relating to that matter. I shall vote for every amendment which will improve the law and provide a better and a more adequate old-age pension for old people.

Mr. President, I did not build any of the great buildings in the United States. I did not build any of the great industries. Not many other Senators did. In the years we have lived we may have contributed to creating the wealth in America. The economists estimate the assessed wealth in the United States at $450,000,000,000. I suppose I have contributed very little of that; and persons younger than I have contributed still less.

Mr. President, who erected these buildings? Who built America? Who cut down the timber and cleared the land? Who broke the sod? The old people in this country made this country the great Nation it is today. They have served; they have worked; they have toiled; they have foregone pleasures; they have foregone necessities.

The first time I remember gazing on western Oklahoma I was looking out of the back end of a covered wagon. That little hole where the wagon sheets come together was just big enough for my head. There was an old hound dog trotting under the coupling pole, and the wagon tongue was pointing west. Father drove the wagon. We were driving from Pauls Valley, Indian Territory, to a new strip in western Oklahoma. We drove there, and we dug a hole in the ground and we lived in it. I saw other settlers come. I saw them pick up sod as the sod plow turned it over. I saw them lay it in long strips, one layer on top of another, until they built what we called sod shanties. Then I saw them break out a little strip of land. They would haul water in times of drought. Then they would dig down to get "gyp" water. We lived out there as best we could.

Mr. President, I think we never would have settled western Oklahoma if it had not been for prairie dogs. We did not eat the prairie dogs—at least I do not think we did—but the prairie dogs destroyed the crops, and at Hobart, the county seat of Kiowa County, they offered a bounty for every prairie dog we would kill and take in to the county seat. At Cordell, the county seat of Washita County, a bounty was offered for every prairie dog we killed and took to the county seat.

Mr. President, every westerner is a good shot, and the dogs accumulated faster than they could be taken care of. Finally, the county authorities said, "Do not bring the whole dog. Just bring in his head or his tail, or some part of him to show you killed him." That was done at Hobart, and it was also done at Cordell in Washita County. We soon got onto that. We took the tails to Kiowa County and the heads to Washita County, and we settled western Oklahoma on heads and tails. [Laughter.]

The old pioneers developed that country. Later I went back and I saw the fields of alfalfa growing there. Then I have seen the hot winds sweep over that country and blight the crops.

Not long ago I was in western Oklahoma. I attended a meeting where there were many old-age pensioners. There I saw some of the men whom I had known years ago when they were young, when their muscles were hard and strong, when their eyes were quick and clear. There they were in a mass meeting, begging for enough money to live on until the Grim Reaper should take them away. There they were, silver-crowned mothers; there they were, the first citizens of Oklahoma, gray-bearded fathers who had made Oklahoma one of the great empires of the Nation. They had toiled; they had worked; they had labored; they had hoped, and they had nothing to live on until they died. They were asking for a pension as dividends for services already rendered.

Mr. President, I say it is not charity. It is not a gift. It is a delayed annuity. It is dividends on labor already accomplished.

Our Government is already committed to such a policy. We have passed a law called the wage-hour law which limits the number of hours that people may work. Why? Because we have more workers than we have jobs. Therefore we are cutting down on the hours. Then it is sensible to cut off employment at both ends. We have an N. Y. A. program, a youth program which gives employment to young people and takes them out of competition with regular wage earners. Then why not offer some inducement and some incentive to the old people to surrender jobs which they are no longer able to perform, and make more room at the top as well as at the bottom of the scale, thereby increasing employment?

We are already committed to a limitation on hours. My amendment would simply further that program by cutting off employment at the top, or at the bottom, whichever way one looks at it, and making more jobs available for young people, paying to the old people a delayed accumulation of their dividends from the wealth of America, which they have helped to create and accumulate.

It may be said, "But that is a compulsory insurance policy."

That is exactly what it is; and the Government has a precedent for it. During the war we passed the War Risk Insurance Act, under which the Government said to every mother's son who went to war, "You must take out an insurance policy. We will take the premiums out of your soldier's pay. We will insure you." My proposal is that the Government, through whatever tax program Congress deems advisable, raise the money from those who are able to pay, at a time in their lives when they are earning enough to pay a part of the premium and store up for themselves an annuity to be paid in their old age. That is what the proposal amounts to. It is an old-age annuity, to begin at the age of 60, and pay $40 a month as long as the beneficiary lives.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on this question. Let us show by our votes whether we are rendering only lip service, or whether we are willing to face the music and go on record for an old-age pension.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

During the delivery of Mr. LEE's speech,

THE JUDICIARY—ELMER D. DAVIS

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oklahoma yield to me? As the Senator knows, I am on a committee which will have to leave the city in a few minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. LEE. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask unanimous consent, as in executive session, that the nomination of Elmer D. Davies to be United States district judge for the middle district of Tennessee be considered at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I understand the exigencies of the occasion which cause the request for unanimous consent. For my part, I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent also that the President be notified of the confirmation of this nomination.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the President will be notified.

SAM E. WHITAKER—NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. McKELLAR. As in executive session, I also ask unanimous consent that the President be notified of the confirmation yesterday of the nomination of Sam E. Whitaker to be judge of the United States Court of Claims.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the President will be notified of the confirmation of the nomination of Mr. Whitaker.

After the conclusion of Mr. LEE's speech,

AMENDMENT OF SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6635) to amend the Social Security Act, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. LEE].

Mr. LEE. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Downey	King	Schwollenbach
Austin	Ellender	La Follette	Sheppard
Barbour	Frazier	Lee	Shipstead
Barkley	George	Lodge	Slattery
Bilbo	Gerry	Lucas	Smith
Bone	Gibson	Lundeen	Taft
Borah	Green	Maloney	Thomas, Okla.
Bridges	Guffey	Mead	Thomas, Utah
Bulow	Gurney	Minton	Tobey
Burke	Hale	Neely	Townsend
Byrd	Harrison	Norris	Vandenberg
Capper	Hatch	Nye	Van Nuys
Chavez	Hayden	O'Mahoney	Wagner
Clark, Idaho	Herring	Overton	Walsh
Clark, Mo.	Hill	Pittman	Wheeler
Connally	Holman	Radcliffe	White
Danaher	Hughes	Reynolds	Wiley
Davis	Johnson, Calif.	Russell
Donahey	Johnson, Colo.	Schwartz

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado in the chair). Seventy-four Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. LEE]. The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I understand the yeas and nays have been ordered on this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. HARRISON. I merely wish to make the statement that representatives of the Social Security Board inform me that the amendment, if adopted, would cost approximately $5,000,000,000 at the very outset.

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. LEE. Will the Senator give us the figures upon which he bases his estimate?

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator gave figures which were based upon the census for 1930.

Mr. LEE. Have we had any census since that time?

Mr. HARRISON. The figures which I have given are based on the latest obtainable figures from the Social Security Board. The Senator will realize that over a period of 9 years there has been a large increase in the number of persons in the United States over 60 years of age.

Mr. LEE. There has been no official census, though, since 1930.

Mr. HARRISON. No; there has been no official census since then.

Mr. LEE. The estimate of the Bureau of the Census places the figure on July 1938 at 12,450,000.

Mr. HARRISON. I may say to the Senator that I desired to call attention before the vote is taken to the fact that the figures given by me are the latest that could be procured by the Social Security Board. The Board states that the Lee amendment would probably cost about $5,000,000,000 a year at the very outset, and the sum would increase in future years, due to the increase in the number of the aged.

The figures as given in the committee report and as furnished by the Advisory Council on Social Security show that of persons 65 years of age and over, there are now in the United States about 8,200,000, and that in 1980 there will be 22,000,000 such persons. It is perhaps a peculiar thing, but the number of old people increases proportionately greater than the number of the young people. So the Board states there will be in 1940 over 13,000,000 persons aged 60 and over. About 4,500,000 of this number are estimated to be gainfully employed, but a large percentage of these persons earn less than $480 per year and would be encouraged to withdraw from gainful employment to accept the pension proposed by the Senator from Oklahoma. It is reasonable to assume, therefore, that 10,000,000 persons could qualify for pensions in the first year at a cost of $4,800,000,000. Since the number of persons aged 60 and over will double within the next 40 years, such a pension will eventually cost the Federal Government a minimum of $10,000,000,000 a year.

Mr. BARKLEY. Did the Senator say "ten million" or "ten billion"?

Mr. HARRISON. I said "$10,000,000,000 a year."

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes.

Mr. LEE. First, I cannot accept those figures. They are based on estimates, and I feel that they do not come from a sympathetic source. Then, I wish to state that, according to the only official figures I can obtain, in round numbers, the cost will be $3,000,000,000, and that a gross-income tax of 1 percent or a transaction tax of 1 percent, if the estimates furnished in the hearings of the House are correct, would pay that amount.

Mr. HARRISON. I ask permission to insert in the RECORD at this point a table giving the actual and estimated number of persons aged 60 and over and aged 65 and over compared to total population, 1860-1980. These estimates were made by the President's Committee on Economic Security. As indicated in the table, the figures for 1860 to 1930, inclusive, are actual; those for 1940-80 are estimates.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Actual and estimated number of persons aged 60 and over and aged 65 and over, compared to total population, 1860-1980<sup>1</sup>

Year	Total population	Population aged 60 and over		Population aged 65 and over

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I am opposed to the amendment, and I hope the Senate will vote it down.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote! Vote!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. LEE], on which the yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HALE (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES]. I understand that, were he present, he would vote as I intend to vote. I therefore am at liberty to vote, and vote "nay."

Mr. HOLMAN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the distinguished Senator from Tennessee [Mr. STEWART], who has been called away to attend the funeral of the late Representative McReynolds of Tennessee. I do not know how the Senator from Tennessee would vote, if present. If I were permitted to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. SHIPSTEAD (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS]. I am informed that if present he would vote as I intend to vote. I am therefore free to vote, and vote "nay."

Mr. TOWNSEND (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR]. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. HARRISON (after having voted in the negative). I transfer my general pair with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY] to the senior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] and allow my vote to stand.

Mr. DAVIS (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN]. Not knowing how he would vote if present, I withdraw my vote.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] are detained on important public business. I am informed that if present and voting, these Senators would vote "nay."

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. GILLETTE] and the Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY] have been called to Government departments and are unable to be present for the vote.

The Senators from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR and Mr. STEWART], the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER], and the Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN] are members of the committee to attend the funeral of the late Representative McReynolds, and are, therefore, necessarily absent.

The Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN], the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN], and the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN] are detained on important public business.

The Senator from Florida [Mr. ANDREWS] is attending a meeting of the Committee on the Judiciary.

The Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] is absent on official business. He has a pair with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS]. I am informed that if present and voting, the Senator from Florida would vote "yea," and the Senator from Maryland would vote "nay."

The Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS] are detained from the Senate because of illness in their families.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce that the Senator from Kansas [Mr. REED] is detained on official business. He has a general pair with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN].

The result was announced—yeas 16, as follows:

YEAS—16

Bilbo	Donahay	Lee	Schwartz

So Mr. LEE's amendment was rejected.

AMENDMENT OF BANKRUPTCY LAW RELATIVE TO CARRIERS

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5407) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. WHEELER. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, agree to the request of the House for a conference, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. WHEELER, Mr. BONE, Mr. TRUMAN, Mr. AUSTIN, and Mr. TOBEY conferees on the part of the Senate.

AMENDMENT OF SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6635) to amend the Social Security Act, and for other purposes.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 59, between lines 5 and 6, it is proposed to insert the following new subsection:

(c) Section 521 (a) of such act is amended by striking out $1,500,000 and inserting in lieu thereof $1,510,000.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, a brief explanation.

When the Finance Committee adopted the amendments increasing the authorizations for work for the promotion of maternal and child health, through an inadvertence the fact was overlooked that in the House bill Puerto Rico had been designated as a State. The only effect of this amendment is to provide $10,000 for Puerto Rico in conformity with the action of the House in describing Puerto Rico as a State under the provisions of these titles of the Social Security Act.

In view of the action taken by the Senate on yesterday, I feel sure that there will be no objection to the amendment.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, it was thought that this provision was carried in the bill; but, as stated by the Senator from Wisconsin, it was inadvertently omitted. I can see no objection to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I offer another amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the end of the bill it is proposed to insert the following new section:

Sec. 908. All functions of the Social Security Board shall be administered by the Social Security Board under the direction and supervision of the Federal Security Administrator.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, a brief word of explanation in regard to this amendment.

When the reorganization order was drawn the language affecting the Social Security Board—through, I am certain, an inadvertence or an oversight—was different than that relating to the other agencies which were consolidated under the order. This is a clarifying amendment in connection with the amendments to the Social Security Act, and will make the phraseology of the order in that respect conform to governing all the other agencies which were thus consolidated into the agency created by the reorganization order.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I hope the amendment will be agreed to. It removes some ambiguities which are in the law that we passed regarding reorganization and places the Social Security Board on the same basis as the Public Health Service and others that were reorganized.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, I send to the desk Senate bill 750, the text of which I offer as an amendment to the pending measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to insert, at the proper place in the bill, the following:

That, effective January 1, 1940, clause (7) of section 2 (a) of the Social Security Act is amended to read as follows:

"(7) provide that, if the State or any of its political subdivisions collects from the estate of any recipient of old-age assistance any amount with respect to old-age assistance furnished him under the plan, the net amount so collected shall be prorated between the United States and the State in the proportion that the amount the United States contributed to such old-age assistance during the year next preceding the year such net amount was collected bears to the amount the State contributed during such year and the amount due the United States shall be promptly paid to the United States. Any payment so made shall be deposited in the Treasury to the credit of the appropriation for the purposes of this title."

SEC. 2. Effective January 1, 1940, section 3 (a) of such act is amended to read as follows:

"(a) From the sums appropriated therefor, the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay to each State which has an approved plan for old-age assistance, for each quarter, beginning with the quarter commencing January 1, 1940, (1) an amount, which shall be used exclusively as old-age assistance, of $30 per month, with respect to each aged needy individual who, at the time of such expenditure, is 65 years of age or older, and is not an inmate of a public institution, and (2), 5 percent of such amount, which shall be used for paying the costs of administering the State plan or for old-age assistance, or both, and for no other purpose: Provided, That no amount for old-age assistance shall be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury to any State which shall contribute for old-age assistance during any quarter an amount smaller than the amount contributed by the State during the quarter beginning January 1, 1939. Any individual entitled to Federal old-age benefits under title II of this act may elect to receive in lieu thereof old-age assistance under the State plan for old-age assistance as provided in title I of this act."

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, there are two divisions of this amendment.

The first division merely provides that all amounts recovered from the estates of deceased recipients of old-age assistance shall be divided in proportion to the amounts contributed by the State and by the Federal Government. The present law provides that the amounts so recovered shall be evenly divided between the State and the Federal Government.

The second division of the amendment merely provides for the substitution of a pension of $30 per month to those who are eligible under the present set-up.

There is quite a difference between the amendment offered by the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. LEE] and the one I am offering. He proposed to give $40 per month to all old persons 60 years of age or over unless they were self-sustaining; and, as he himself admitted, over $3,000,000,000 would be required to pay the pensions. My amendment is based upon the enrollments shown by the records of the Social Security Board. Under the amendment I have offered the cost to the Federal Government will be about $400,000,000 more than the present appropriation, or about $550,000,000 or $600,000,000 altogether.

Mr. President, this is not a raid on the Treasury. This is an obligation which the United States Government owes to the old and needy people of the country 65 years of age or older. I disagree with some of the Senators who have expressed themselves on this legislation. Some insist that the obligation is a local one, a State obligation. Others insist that it is a dual obligation. Personally, I think old-age assistance is a Federal obligation which should be met by the Government doing business in the city of Washington.

Pensions to soldiers are paid by the Federal Government. This is a pension, not for soldiers of war but for soldiers of peace. They have fought the battles of the country in times of peace as well as those who fought its battles in time of war. As the Senator from Florida [Mr. ANDREWS] announced on yesterday, and again today, the Supreme Court of the United States by a practically unanimous decision has held that this is a Federal obligation which should be met by the United States Government.

You have heard a great deal about the Townsend plan, and the great demand on the part of many persons for the enactment of the Townsend plan. I want to warn you that if the Senate does not do something that is decent in providing pensions for the old people of the country who are in need, sooner or later you will get the Townsend plan whether you like it or not.

My goal for a pension is $60 per month. My amendment provides that the Federal Government shall put up $30 per month; and I safeguard the amount of money which the States are now contributing to old-age pensions by providing in the amendment that no State shall be permitted to desert the field that it has already undertaken, because my amendment requires that the States shall continue to appropriate as much as and never less than they are now appropriating for old-age pensions. In other words, if this amendment should be agreed to, the old people of the United States who are now eligible and on the rolls and certified as needy would receive $30, plus what the States throughout the United States, are now appropriating.

For instance, in my State, where the payments are the lowest in the Union, the State appropriates a little over $3 per capita. That is the average. If this amendment should be agreed to the old people in Mississippi would receive $33 a month.

In the great State of California, where the old people are receiving $32, the State government of California putting up today the difference between $32 and $15, or $17, under my amendment the people of California would receive $30 plus the $17. So all that is necessary in order to find out what the people of a State would receive is to find out what the legislature is appropriating.

I do not think the amount I have suggested is excessive. I know there is a growing demand for an increase in the pensions to the old people of this country, and there are enough old people, with their friends and their relatives, and others who honestly believe in old-age pensions, to hold the balance of power in the coming election. If we, the party in power, are not willing to do what they want, they are going to try some other party which will, and when it comes to making promises, my colleagues know how wonderfully successful the Republican Party has been in the past. They will make more promises in the next convention of the Republican Party than the Democrats will make, and even if we should make better promises and more promises, we would not be believed, because we are on the job, we have the majority, we have the administration, we can pass a bill, and if we refuse to do so no one will believe our promises.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me to ask a question for information?

Mr. BILBO. Certainly.

Mr. KING. I desire to be sure that I properly interpret the amendment which the Senator has offered. As I read and interpret it, it means that if Mississippi, for instance, should put up $3 per capita for all those receiving old-age pensions, then the Federal Government would have to put up $30.

Mr. BILBO. Yes.

Mr. KING. And if Mississippi put up $10, then the Federal Government would still put up $30?

Mr. BILBO. Yes.

Mr. KING. And if California put up $35, the Federal Government would have to put up $30?

Mr. BILBO. Yes.

Mr. KING. That is the proper interpretation?

Mr. BILBO. That is the proper interpretation. That is what I intended by the amendment.

Mr. KING. I may say that I am very much opposed to it.

Mr. BILBO. So far as the generosity and liberality of the State is concerned, the sky is the limit. But each and every aged person who has been certified as eligible for old-age assistance, no matter in which State he may live, would receive $30 from the Federal Government in Washington.

Mr. President, I have not much patience with some who are economical, especially when it comes to appropriations for the welfare of the suffering citizens of this country. I was rather astounded, indeed, I was rather amused, by the most wonderful speech made this morning by the distinguished junior Senator from Virginia in the interest of balancing the Budget—whatever that means—and of economy.

The thing which surprised me about the speech was that he was so late in making such a good speech, because during this session of Congress we have appropriated nearly $10,000,000,000, and when the time comes to take up the cause of the old men and women of this country who are suffering because of want, and poverty, and need, the distinguished Senator proposes to "take it out" on the old folks, when we have been voting day after day, not millions, not hundreds of millions, but billions for the Army and the Navy and every other purpose on earth. If we are to economize anywhere, God forbid that we should economize at the expense of the old people, who cannot help themselves, and who need and deserve the discharge of this just obligation from their Government.

A remark was made on the floor this morning to the effect that this obligation should be met by the States and could be better met by the States, and should not be a Federal obligation, because the States are able to take care of the obligation. If we examine the statistics, we find that the per capita income in 30 of the 48 States is below the national income per capita. Four hundred and thirty-two dollars is the per capita income from the national standpoint, the income over the whole Nation, yet there are 30 States whose per capita income is lower than $432.

I do not like to admit it but my State stands at the bottom, with a per capita income of only $170. Yet the State of Mississippi, with a per capita income of $170, against $900 in some other States, is expected to be able to appropriate $15 a month in order that we may get our share of the money being offered by the Federal Government for the benefit of the old people of the country.

I confess, frankly, that my State is not able to make the contribution. Yet the old people of my State are as much entitled to this Federal bounty or Federal appropriation as an old man or an old woman in Massachusetts or California is entitled to it. We pay taxes. It is not our fault that we are poor. It is not our fault that our per capita income is so low. For the last 50 years we have been the victims of policies of government, and of rules and regulations and laws which are responsible for the condition of my people.

It is not that this country is poor. This is the richest country on earth. We have more resources; we have more wealth and more power than any other nation on earth. Yet it is said that we cannot pay a pitiful $30 a month to the needy old people of this Republic.

We are not consistent. Consider the 300,000 enrollees of the C. C. C. I wish to say that I think that agency of the Government is doing some of the best work being performed by the New Deal for the youth of this country, but Senators are willing to vote $73 a month for the 300,000 boys in the C. C. C. Consider the relief rolls. Senators are willing to vote $61 a month to every man and woman in the country on the relief rolls. Yet they hesitate to vote $30 a month for the old people of this country.

Why not be fair? Do not my colleagues know that the old men and women have given their lives for the welfare of this country, that they have lost their earning capacity, that they are no longer wanted anywhere, so far as jobs are concerned, and have only a few more years to spend on earth? Is it not much better to give them at least $30 than to spend $73 on the young of the country? There is more humanity in it. I would not discount the splendid work the C. C. C. is doing. I should like to see that organization made permanent. The only regret I have about it is that we have not encouraged military training. I think we are losing a splendid opportunity to give these boys proper training and discipline by enforcing military regulations.

I repeat, Mr. President, this is not a billion-dollar proposition I am offering. I am merely suggesting an increase of about $400,000,000. I am asked, "Where are you going to get the money?" We can get it from the same source where we are to get the $10,000,000,000 we have already appropriated.

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BILBO. I am glad to yield.

Mr. LEE. I understood some of the Senators who voted against the amendment which I offered a while ago and which was defeated, to console themselves by saying, "Well, Josh, I would have voted for your amendment if you had had a tax provision included in it for raising the money." According to that philosophy, if they follow the same reasoning, they will have to vote against the pending bill, because there is not included in it a tax provision for raising the money that is being paid under the present plan, or that will be paid under the amended bill. I imagine the proposal of the Senator from Mississippi would fall in the same category. Some will ask, "Where are you going to get the money?" My answer would be, "At the same place from which the money which is being used to pay under the present plan is coming."

I intend to support the Senator's amendment. I think it is a good one, and I believe that if we should adopt the amendment, as would have been true if we had adopted the other one, the Finance Committee would report a tax bill, as they are going to have to do anyway, to meet the deficit.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator from Mississippi yield?

Mr. BILBO. I am glad to yield.

Mr. KING. As a member of the Committee on Finance, I can assure the Senator from Oklahoma, although I cannot speak for all of the members of the committee, but I can speak for a majority of them, I believe that the Finance Committee would report a bill to raise $5,000,000,000, in addition to the $6,200,000,000 of taxes we have already imposed on the people. If we continue these outrageous expenditures, these profligate expenditures, obviously we will soon have inflation, and our economic system will be destroyed.

Mr. BILBO. I am sure the Senator is speaking his honest conviction. I am indebted to the Senator from Oklahoma for his observation on the pending amendment.

I wish to urge my colleagues to give serious consideration to this proposal. No one wants to spend the money of the taxpayers ruthlessly and criminally, but I dare say that the taxpayers of the United States would justify and would honor Senators for voting to provide $30 per month for the old people of the United States.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado in the chair). Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. BILBO. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. How much would the Senator's amendment cost approximately?

Mr. BILBO. My estimate is that the amendment would cost between $350,000,000 and $400,000,000, in addition to what the present set-up on old-age assistance will cost.

Mr. LUNDEEN. If the Senator will further permit, I should like to say that that will not be any more money than it will cost to build the two 45,000-ton battleships which we read about in the newspapers this morning, which, I take it, are in addition to two other 45,000-ton battleships previously ordered to be constructed, and in addition to the 1940 Navy appropriation, the greatest peacetime Navy appropriation we have ever had in the history of the United States, and in addition to the $1,000,000,000 we voted last year, which was in addition to the regular appropriation of last year. Each battleship costs between $90,000,000 and $100,000,000. Then there must be spent another $90,000,000 or $100,000,000 to build submarines, destroyers, and aircraft to prevent this dinosaur of the deep, this dreadnaught of the sea, from being sunk. For every dollar spent for the construction of the giant battleships an equal amount must be spent to provide protecting ships. So, if upward of $100,000,000 is spent for a battleship, we must count on a total of $200,000,000 for that ship and its protecting ships. Besides all that, hundreds of millions will be expended for their imperial upkeep, and so on, all because our internationalists itch to meddle in Europe—are afflicted by a world-saving mania and other illusions and delusions. I understand the able Senator's proposal will cost less than that.

Mr. BILBO. Yes.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I think we have gone a little far in building armaments and in interfering in the quarrels of other continents, and we had better pay more attention to our folks at home—our fine, patriotic, old folks at home—those who have helped build America.

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, I am indebted to the Senator from Minnesota for his contribution.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, is not the Senator in error concerning the cost under his proposal? As I understand, he proposes to give $30 a month, which is $360 a year.

Mr. BILBO. Yes.

Mr. BYRD. He proposes to give that amount to approximately 2,000,000 of those receiving old-age assistance?

Mr. BILBO. About 1,800,000.

Mr. BYRD. The list has the figure of 1,900,000. If that be multiplied by $360, the result is a cost of over $700,000,000.

Mr. BILBO. No; after subtracting the amount which the present set-up now will cost from the total under the proposal of $30 per month, I think the Senator will find it is between $350,000,000 and $400,000,000 in addition to the cost of the present set-up.

Mr. BYRD. Is it not the plan of the Senator to pay $30 a month, and add to it whatever the States may pay?

Mr. BILBO. Yes.

Mr. BYRD. Then it will cost $360 a year to the Federal Government for each person on relief.

Mr. BILBO. Yes, $360.

Mr. BYRD. It will make about $700,000,000, if the number of those receiving old-age assistance is multiplied by $360.

Mr. BILBO. It would be between $650,000,000 and $675,000,000. I have no reference to the amounts the States are contributing. I am talking now about what Congress will have to appropriate. I wish to say there is not one State in the Union that will not profit by this, and it will be interesting, if Senators will take the list showing the amount that each State contributes, to see what they will be able to receive.

I have a suspicion that when Senators get back home and the people look at the monthly check they are receiving, when those in Georgia receive $8.14, whereas they had an opportunity of receiving $34.14 by voting for this simple amendment, Senators will have some explaining to do.

In South Carolina the payment is $3.90, and that is matched by the Federal Government. In other words, South Carolina is getting only $3.90 per capita for her old people who are listed on the rolls. Under my amendment they would get $30 per capita plus the $3.90 they are now receiving, which would give the old people of South Carolina $33.90 a month.

In North Carolina—I think that is a State in the Union—

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BILBO. I shall be delighted to yield.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I wish to say to the Senator that North Carolina is the finest State in the Union.

Mr. BILBO. And well represented.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Excellently represented.

Mr. HUGHES. I should like to say that the State of Delaware is the first State in the Union.

Mr. BILBO. The State of North Carolina today pays her old people an average of $9.57. It is receiving from the Government $4.78. The old people of California are getting $15 out of the Treasury of the United States. The old people of Massachusetts are receiving from $14 to $15.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BILBO. I yield.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I take it that a few minutes ago the Senator from Mississippi agreed with the Senator from North Carolina that North Carolina was at least one of the finest States in the Union. I should like to have the Senator from Mississippi explain why it is that one of the finest States in the Union—and I have been very much enamored of the eloquence of the Senator from North Carolina, particularly when speaking about Asheville, "the little gem city of the mountains"—I should like to have the Senator explain why it is that that great State which produces such a large percentage of the tobacco of the country and is so wealthy, pays only a very small amount to its aged people. I think that perhaps one of the great national organizations we have heard about recently, which is interested in a great many other things, might interest itself in taking care of that problem in North Carolina.

Mr. BILBO. I shall be glad to yield to the Senator from North Carolina in order that he may answer this very embarrassing question.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I wish to say to the Senator that it is not embarrassing to me at all. As a matter of fact, I am very rarely embarrassed. [Laughter.]

I am very unhappy that North Carolina has not provided more generously for its citizens from a standpoint, particularly, of providing for its elderly and its aged. I am very happy indeed to be able to report that we no longer have poorhouses or county homes in North Carolina. We have in the past endeavored as best we could to provide for our aged, because we of North Carolina recognize, with the able Senator from the great Commonwealth of Mississippi, that the aged now were the youthful in years gone by, and that the aged now are the ones who have made North Carolina a great and a prosperous and a grateful State.

Mr. President, I am going to vote for the amendment which has been offered by the Senator from Mississippi, because he tells us that it will cost the taxpayers of the United States of America only approximately $300,000,000 or $400,000,000. As a matter of fact, the way we are digging into the pockets of the taxpayers of America and are continuing to dig into the pockets of the taxpayers of America, that is merely a drop in the bucket. We have appeased every one upon the face of the earth with the exception of the elderly people of America.

A few months ago, as the result of propaganda which swept this country from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to Mexico, there was a great hue and cry that we should provide for ourselves an adequate national defense. The Senator from Mississippi knows, as well as the Senator from North Carolina knows, that there is just about as much likelihood of any country in the world attacking the United States of America as there was likelihood of Al Smith bringing the Pope and putting him in the White House in 1928, as suggested by our friendly enemies.

We have appeased the people of this country who are afraid of being attacked by the enemies from abroad by appropriating billions upon billions of their hard-earned dollars. That was one appeasement.

Mr. President, I say that the time has arrived when we must do a little appeasing for the elderly of our country. The very able Senator from Minnesota [Mr. LUNDEEN] a moment ago made mention of the fact that 45,000-ton battleships cost today under present conditions $90,000,000 each. I read a statement in one of the local newspapers only a few days ago to the effect that under present conditions those ships in contemplation would cost no less than $100,000,000 apiece, and I think there are some three or four or five on order. For the amount of money spent on those ships we could take care of the old people of the United States, as was suggested by the Senator from Mississippi.

As I mentioned a moment ago in private conversation with the Senator from Minnesota, we must not only consider the initial cost of the ships but we must consider also the upkeep and the maintenance of those ships.

As a matter of fact, we never recover the initial cost. We never collect any of it. If we can remain so big-hearted as to permit countries abroad to fail to pay their debts to the United States of America, as I suggested on the floor of the Senate a moment ago; if we can afford to give to the European countries $13,000,000,000, after having already given them $13,000,000,000 when we cut the war debts immediately following the Great War, certainly we can afford to give a few million dollars to the aged who actually constructed this country and made it the greatest and most powerful nation on the face of the earth.

A moment ago the Senator mentioned the young men in the C. C. C. camps of the country. It is my recollection that today we have in the C. C. C. camps more than 300,000 young, able-bodied men.

Mr. BILBO. Costing $73 a month each.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Costing $73 a month each. I inquire of the able Senator what the annual total is. It is 300,000 times 73 times 12. As a matter of fact, it costs almost as much to house, clothe, and feed those young men annually as it would cost to take care of the old people under the Senator's amendment. Is not that true?

Mr. BILBO. That is correct.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I am very happy that we are able to care for the young men of the country, particularly in view of the fact that $25 out of every $30 derived by the 300,000 young men monthly is in turn delivered to their dependents and aged parents. If we can take care of those young men, surely we can take care of the others. I do not know where the money is coming from. But do we know where the money is coming from for any of the terrific appropriations we have made in the present session of the Congress? I say that if we can vote billions upon billions of dollars for sundry items, we can certainly afford to open up our hearts and take care of the old people of the country. In order to do that, and with that in view, so far as the junior Senator from North Carolina is concerned, I shall support the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, I am indebted to the Senator from North Carolina for developing that idea. We are appropriating more than $200,000,000 to take care of only 300,000 of the boys in the C. C. C. For twice that amount we should be able to bring happiness, peace, comfort and joy to 1,800,000 old people in the country.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BILBO. I yield.

Mr. REYNOLDS. In view of the fact that the Senator again made mention of the C. C. C. camps, I should like to state that although we are spending more than $200,000,000 annually to take care of those worthy young men, and although we have appropriated billions and billions to provide a national defense to appease the people of the country, we have not enforced military training in C. C. C. camps, which I think we should have done.

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, I am ready to proceed further. I should like to ask permission to continue my address tomorrow at the beginning of the session.

I now yield to the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY].

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator realizes that we are anxious to conclude consideration of the pending measure. Other legislation is waiting on it. We do not wish to delay it any longer than necessary. We had hoped to conclude consideration of the bill today.

Mr. BILBO. I understand it will be impossible to conclude it on account of the address of the Senator from California [Mr. DOWNEY] which will consume possibly 2 or 3 hours.

Mr. BARKLEY. Whatever is agreeable to the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] is agreeable to me.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I wonder if it will be agreeable to vote on the pending amendment not later than 1 o'clock tomorrow.

Mr. BARKLEY. It is agreeable to me. Is it agreeable to the junior Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. BILBO. That is agreeable, provided I may begin speaking at 12 o'clock.

Mr. HARRISON. I understand my colleague has the floor. I have no objection to his having the floor tomorrow to continue his remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. BILBO] that he be recognized tomorrow to resume his remarks? The Chair hears none, and the request is granted.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that tomorrow, not later than 5 minutes past 1, the Senate vote on the amendment offered by my colleague [Mr. BILBO], and that 5 minutes be given to some member of the committee to speak in opposition to the amendment, if desired.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the senior Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. President, the agreement extends merely to voting on the pending amendment, does it not?

Mr. HARRISON. Only on the pending amendment.

Mr. DOWNEY. And not on the measure itself?

Mr. HARRISON. No; merely on the pending amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the senior Senator from Mississippi? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

PROMOTION OF OFFICERS IN THE NAVY

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4929) to amend the act of June 23, 1938 (52 Stat. 944), and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. WALSH. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, agree to the request of the House for a conference, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. WALSH, Mr. TYDINGS, and Mr. HALE conferees on the part of the Senate.

INTERSTATE OIL COMPACT TO CONSERVE OIL AND GAS

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I wish to take up an emergency matter by unanimous consent.

I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 155, consenting to an interstate oil compact to conserve oil and gas. The joint resolution provides for the continuation of the present oil compact. The present oil compact is an agreement among six or seven States which produce oil. The compact will expire on the 1st day of September, unless extended. The joint resolution simply proposes to extend the compact for another period of 2 years.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for an inquiry?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. Is there anything in the compact which conflicts with the Federal policy respecting commerce in oil?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, the Federal policy has never been expressed in law. The compact is a treaty among the oil-producing States. There has been no Federal legislation affecting oil interests. The joint resolution merely grants the permission of Congress for the oil States to get together to handle their own affairs in their own best interests.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, in general I have reason to be very sympathetic with any section of the United States where States endeavor to solve their sectional problems by compacts. I would not interfere with that effort on the part of the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS] in behalf of his State and the surrounding States.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 155) consenting to an interstate oil compact to conserve oil and gas was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby given to an extension and renewal for a period of 2 years from September 1, 1939, of the interstate compact to conserve oil and gas, executed in the city of Dallas, Tex., the 16th day of February 1935, by the representatives of the States of Oklahoma, Texas, California, and New Mexico, and thereafter recommended for ratification by the representatives of the States of Arkansas, Colorado, Illinois, Kansas, and Michigan, and subsequently ratified by the States of New Mexico, Kansas, Oklahoma, Illinois, Colorado, and Texas, which said compact was deposited in the Department of State of the United States, and thereafter such compact was, by the President, presented to the Congress and the Congress gave consent to such compact by House Joint Resolution 407, approved August 27, 1935 (Public Res. No. 64, 74th Cong.), and which said compact was thereafter extended and renewed for a period of 2 years from September 1, 1937, by an agreement executed in New Orleans, La., the 10th day of May 1937, by the representatives of the States of Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, and New Mexico, and was duly ratified by the States of Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, New Mexico, Illinois, and Colorado, and was deposited in the Department of State of the United States, and thereafter such extended and renewed compact was, by the President, presented to the Congress, and the Congress gave consent to such extended and renewed compact by Senate Joint Resolution 183, approved August 10, 1937 (Public Res. No. 57, 75th Cong.). The extended and renewed compact, dated the 5th day of April 1939, duly executed by the representatives of the States of Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, New Mexico, Colorado, and Michigan, and duly authorized and ratified by the said States of Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, New Mexico, Colorado, and Michigan, and which extended and renewed compact has been deposited in the Department of State of the United States, reads as follows:

"ARTICLE I

"This agreement may become effective within any compacting State at any time as prescribed by that State, and shall become effective within those States ratifying it whenever any three of the States of Texas, Oklahoma, California, Kansas, and New Mexico have ratified and Congress has given its consent. Any oil-producing State may become a party hereto as hereinafter provided.

"ARTICLE II

"The purpose of this compact is to conserve oil and gas by the prevention of physical waste thereof from any cause.

"ARTICLE III

"Each State bound hereby agrees that within a reasonable time it will enact laws, or if laws have been enacted, then it agrees to continue the same in force, to accomplish within reasonable limits the prevention of—

"(a) The operation of any oil well with an inefficient gas-oil ratio.

"(b) The drowning with water of any stratum capable of producing oil or gas, or both oil and gas in paying quantities.

"(c) The avoidable escape into the open air or the wasteful burning of gas from a natural-gas well.

"(d) The creation of unnecessary fire hazards.

"(e) The drilling, equipping, locating, spacing, or operating of a well or wells so as to bring about physical waste of oil or gas or loss in the ultimate recovery thereof.

"(f) The inefficient, excessive, or improper use of the reservoir energy in producing any well.

"The enumeration of the foregoing subjects shall not limit the scope of the authority of any State.

"ARTICLE IV

"Each State bound hereby agrees that it will, within a reasonable time, enact statutes, or if such statutes have been enacted, then that it will continue the same in force, providing in effect that oil produced in violation of its valid oil and/or gas conservation statutes or any valid rule, order, or regulation promulgated thereunder, shall be denied access to commerce; and providing for stringent penalties for the waste of either oil or gas.

"ARTICLE V

"It is not the purpose of this compact to authorize the States joining herein to limit the production of oil or gas for the purpose of stabilizing or fixing the price thereof, or create or perpetuate monopoly, or to promote regimentation, but is limited to the purpose of conserving oil and gas and preventing the avoidable waste thereof within reasonable limitations.

"ARTICLE VI

"Each State joining herein shall appoint one representative to a Commission hereby constituted and designated as the Interstate Oil Compact Commission, the duty of which said Commission shall be to make inquiry and ascertain from time to time such methods, practices, circumstances, and conditions as may be disclosed for bringing about conservation and the prevention of physical waste of oil and gas, and at such intervals as said Commission deems beneficial it shall report its findings and recommendations to the several States for adoption or rejection.

"The Commission shall have power to recommend the coordination of the exercise of the police powers of the several States within their several jurisdictions to promote the maximum ultimate recovery from the petroleum reserves of said States, and to recommend measures for the maximum ultimate recovery of oil and gas. Said Commission shall organize and adopt suitable rules and regulations for the conduct of its business.

"No action shall be taken by the Commission except: (1) By the affirmative votes of the majority of the whole number of the compacting States, represented at any meeting and (2) by a concurring vote of a majority in interest of the compacting States at said meeting, such interest to be determined as follows: Such vote of each State shall be in the decimal proportion fixed by the ratio of its daily average production during the preceding calendar half-year to the daily average production of the compacting States during said period.

"ARTICLE VII

"No State by joining herein shall become financially obligated to any other State, nor shall the breach of the terms hereof by any State subject such State to financial responsibility to the other States joining herein.

"ARTICLE VIII

"This compact shall expire September 1, 1937. But any State joining herein may, upon sixty (60) days' notice, withdraw herefrom.

"The representatives of the signatory States have signed this agreement in a single original which shall be deposited in the archives of the Department of State of the United States, and a duly certified copy shall be forwarded to the Governor of each of the signatory States.

"This compact shall become effective when ratified and approved as provided in article I. Any oil-producing State may become a party hereto by affixing its signature to a counterpart to be similarly deposited, certified, and ratified.

"Done in the city of Dallas, Tex., this 16th day of February 1935. "Whereas said interstate compact was heretofore duly renewed and extended for 2 years from September 1, 1937, its original expiration date, to September 1, 1939; and

"Whereas it is desired to again extend and renew said interstate compact to conserve oil and gas for another period of 2 years from September 1, 1939, its present expiration date, to September 1, 1941: Now, therefore, this writing witnesseth:

"It is hereby agreed that the said compact entitled 'An interstate compact to conserve oil and gas,' executed in the city of Dallas, Tex., on the 16th day of February 1935, and now on deposit with the Department of State of the United States, a correct copy of which appears above, be, and the same hereby is, extended for a period of 2 years from September 1, 1939, its present date of expiration, this agreement to become effective within those States joining herein when executed by any three of the States of Texas, Oklahoma, California, Kansas, and New Mexico, and consent thereto is given by Congress.

"The signatory States executed this agreement in a single original which shall be deposited in the archives of the Department of State of the United States and a duly certified copy thereof shall be forwarded to the Governor of each of the signatory States.

"Executed as of this the 5th day of April 1939 by the several undersigned States, at their several capitols, through their proper officials thereunto duly authorized by statutes, resolutions, or proclamations of the several States."

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal the provisions of section 1 is hereby expressly reserved.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Calloway, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had disagreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6577) to provide revenue for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; that the House further insisted upon its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the bill; asked a still further conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. NICHOLS, Mr. RANDOLPH, Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland, Mr. DIRKSEN, and Mr. BATES of Massachusetts were appointed managers on the part of the House at the further conference.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado in the chair) laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. HATCH (for Mr. ASHURST), from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of Benjamin J. McKinney, of Arizona, to be United States marshal for the district of Arizona.

Mr. WALSH, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported favorably the nominations of sundry officers for promotion in the Marine Corps.

He also, from the same committee, reported favorably the nominations of sundry noncommissioned officers to be second lieutenants in the Marine Corps.

He also, from the same committee, reported favorably the nominations of sundry citizens to be second lieutenants in the Marine Corps.

Mr. HARRISON, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, reported favorably, without reservation, the following treaties and conventions, and submitted reports thereon:

Executive D, Seventy-sixth Congress, first session, a consular convention between the United States of America and Liberia, signed at Monrovia on October 7, 1938 (Exec. Rept. No. 10);

Executive E, Seventy-sixth Congress, first session, a treaty of friendship, commerce, and navigation between the United States of America and Liberia, signed at Monrovia on August 8, 1938 (Exec. Rept. No. 11);

Executive F, Seventy-sixth Congress, first session, an extradition treaty between the United States of America and Liberia, signed at Monrovia, on November 1, 1937 (Exec. Rept. No. 12);

Executive G, Seventy-sixth Congress, first session, a treaty of commerce and navigation between the United States of America and the King of Iraq, signed at Baghdad, on December 3, 1938 (Exec. Rept. No. 13);

Executive H, Seventy-sixth Congress, first session, a convention between the United States of America and the Republic of Finland, signed at Helsinki on January 27, 1939, regulating the military obligations of persons possessing the nationality of both the high contracting parties (Exec. Rept. No. 14);

Executive I, Seventy-sixth Congress, first session, an extradition treaty between the United States of America and Monaco, signed at Monaco on February 15, 1939 (Exec. Rept. No. 15); and Executive M, Seventy-sixth Congress, first session, a convention on interchange of publications signed at the Inter-American Conference for the Maintenance of Peace at Buenos Aires on December 23, 1936, by the plenipotentiaries of the United States of America and the respective plenipotentiaries of the other American republics (Exec. Rept. No. 16).

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, earlier in the day reported favorably the nominations of sundry postmasters.

He also, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported favorably the nomination of Aubrey W. Williams, of Wisconsin, to be National Youth Administrator (reappointment).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reports will be placed on the Executive Calendar.

If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will state the nominations on the calendar.

FEDERAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATOR—PAUL V. McNUTT

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Paul V. McNutt to be Federal Security Administrator.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, before the nomination of Mr. McNutt is acted upon I desire to occupy a few moments of the time of the Senate to make some appropriate remarks about Mr. McNutt.

I send to the desk a resolution and ask that it be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be read.

The resolution (S. Res. 161) was read, as follows:

Whereas Paul V. McNutt, if confirmed by the Senate to the office of Federal Security Administrator, to which office he has been nominated by the President, will have authority and executive control over the following agencies, to wit: The Civilian Conservation Corps, the Office of Education, the Public Health Service, the National Youth Administration, and the Social Security Board; and

Whereas Paul V. McNutt, as Governor of the State of Indiana was alleged to have been instrumental in forming the so-called Two Percent Club made up of State employees and officeholders of that State, whereby the said employees and officeholders were required to contribute 2 percent of their salaries for political purposes: Therefore be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that Paul V. McNutt shall not be permitted, while serving as Federal Security Administrator, to establish a so-called Two Percent Club of employees of the above-named agencies for the purpose of assessing their salaries for political purposes.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be considered and acted upon at this time.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I move that the resolution be laid on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, inasmuch as the resolution has been laid on the table, and the Democratic Members of the Senate have therefore gone on record as favoring the Two Percent Club of Indiana as established by Mr. McNutt, then Governor of Indiana, I think it is very appropriate, before he is put in charge of one of the most important agencies of the Government, that the people of the country have some knowledge of the Two Percent Club of Indiana, what it is, what it stands for, and Mr. McNutt's connection with it.

I have known Mr. McNutt for a number of years. He served as Governor of Indiana during the time I had the privilege of serving as Governor of New Hampshire. I think he is a nice fellow. I have nothing personally against him. He is a handsome man. He has many fine qualities. But the Two Percent Club that is so closely associated with Mr. McNutt and Mr. McNutt's history and political life smells. It not only smells but its odor could be described by even a stronger term.

What is the Two Percent Club?

Shortly after Mr. McNutt took office as Governor of Indiana, he put into effect a 2-percent regulation, assessing the wages and the salaries of all the officials of the State of Indiana for political purposes; and during the years he served as Governor of Indiana that assessment was in force. The protests became so severe, and the criticism so widespread, that in 1937 the McNutt machine in Indiana, then headed by Governor Townsend of that State, legalized it. The McNutt machine put through an act of the legislature legalizing a 2-percent assessment on all State employees for the benefit of the Democratic Party—one of the most brazen political acts ever put across in this Nation. The act exempted this 2-percent fund from the application of the Corrupt Practice Act of the State.

This 2-percent assessment was applied regardless of the ability to pay of the employee or official. According to various estimates, this assessment raised somewhere around $300,000 a year. The treasurer of the Two Percent Club in Indiana was a man by the name of Bowman Elder.

In this new job Mr. McNutt will have charge of the Social Security Commission. He will have charge of the National Youth Administration. He will have charge of the Office of Education, the Civilian Conservation Corps, and various other units, many of them agencies dealing with the unfortunates of the country and the youth of the country.

My reason for offering the resolution at this time was to call attention to this situation. Let us go back to 1932. In 1932 Mr. McNutt belonged to the "Stop Roosevelt" movement. He was working against the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt at Chicago. Finally Mr. Farley, by his very astute methods, secured some support for Mr. Roosevelt in Indiana; but I am given to understand that there has always been a sort of distant feeling between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. McNutt, and particularly has there been a strong feeling between Mr. Farley and Mr. McNutt. Now, Mr. McNutt comes home in all his grandeur and is appointed to a new post, one of the best jobs in the Government.

There is a great question in my mind and in the minds of the people of the country, whether Mr. McNutt has been taken in by the New Deal and President Roosevelt, or whether he has swallowed the New Deal. I do not know which is the case. There is some question of the New Deal's interest in McNutt's political future, because Mr. McNutt no doubt is going forward with his campaign for the Presidency, at the same time being entrusted with the care of the youthful citizens of our country and many of the unfortunate citizens of our country in the various agencies. He will have a twofold job to make himself the nominee of his party for President and to administer this new agency.

I have before me an article written by some Washington columnists to which I wish to refer.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. Certainly.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I inquire whether or not this speech by the Senator from New Hampshire is an indication that he is opposed to Mr. McNutt for President; or, let me limit the question to the Democratic nomination for President.

Mr. BRIDGES. I do not think the Senator needs to make that inquiry, because my answer would be in the affirmative; but not only am I opposed to Mr. McNutt for President but I am opposed to him for the particular post to which the gentleman in the White House has just appointed him.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I should like to say to the Senator from New Hampshire that I know of no better recommendation that Mr. McNutt or anybody else could get, so far as the Democratic Party is concerned, than to have the vigorous opposition of the Senator from New Hampshire. [Laughter.]

Mr. BRIDGES. I take that as a great compliment. I thank the Senator for it.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. Certainly.

Mr. HARRISON. Why did the Senator vote for the confirmation of Mr. McNutt as High Commissioner of the Philippines?

Mr. BRIDGES. I cannot recall the circumstances when that matter first came up. I do not think there was a record vote, and I do not think my voice was raised very loudly in the affirmative at that time. That is a reasonable question, however.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. Certainly.

Mr. LUCAS. Was the 2-percent club in existence at that time?

Mr. BRIDGES. I understand that it was going in full force at that time.

Mr. LUCAS. At the time Mr. McNutt was confirmed as High Commissioner to the Philippines?

Mr. BRIDGES. Yes. I should like to point out to the Senator from Illinois that in serving as High Commissioner to the Philippines Mr. McNutt, of course, would not have the same opportunity of putting political assessments into force that he will in dealing with some 40,000,000 American citizens who will be under his supervision as head of the Federal Security Administration, many of them the poor people of the country, many of them the unfortunate, many of them the youth of the Nation, many of them persons who can ill afford to make such a contribution.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. Certainly.

Mr. BARKLEY. Is this speech a sort of preliminary canter looking forward to the Senator's own nomination on the Republican ticket as candidate for President?

Mr. BRIDGES. No; this speech deals exclusively with Democratic politics. I rather expected that I might get some help from the distinguished leader from Kentucky, because I understand that sometimes the sun from the White House shines on his fair head as to his own candidacy for the Presidency, and I did not know but that he might join in a wholehearted drive here to stop the McNutt nomination. [Laughter.]

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, in reply I will say to the Senator from New Hampshire that I am not a candidate; but if I could be assured that the Senator from New Hampshire would be nominated by the Republican Party, I should be tempted to run. [Laughter.]

Mr. BRIDGES. I cannot think of a greater delight than for the Senator from New Hampshire to take part in any contest in opposition to the Senator from Kentucky. I will say that I am going down to Kentucky next Saturday to talk to the young Republican State convention there.

Mr. BARKLEY. I hope both of those present will enjoy the speech. [Laughter.]

Mr. BRIDGES. I do not doubt that those present will enjoy the speech; and I do not doubt that a great many persons in Kentucky may enjoy a few remarks I intend to make relative to some of the things which occurred in the last campaign, and some of the methods used by the supporters of the Senator from Kentucky to obtain for him the nomination for United States Senator against the Governor of the State, Mr. Chandler. At that time I propose to tell a few of the things that have come to my attention about the methods used in W. P. A. circles, which the Senator from Kentucky may have known very little about, but which nevertheless probably very effectively contributed to his nomination and his return to the United States Senate.

I read from this article in the Evening Star by Joseph Alsop and Robert Kintner:

The strong Hoosier flavor has faded from the Washington air; the Indiana job holders have returned to their desks in the Government departments, and the 3-day wonder of Paul V. McNutt is over. Now that comparative calm has been restored it's interesting to know who paid for the McNutt ruckus, what sort of man it's about, and how long it's likely to continue.

The people who paid for the grandiose launching of the McNutt candidacy for the Presidency of the United States are, presumably, the employees of the Indiana State government and the businessmen of Indiana. It seems unlikely that Senator SHERMAN MINTON had such an attack of hospitality that he gave a party for 4,000 people himself, and thus far no generous political angels are understood to be backing Mr. McNutt.

That leaves us the McNutt Two Percent Clubs, and the imitation of the recent Democratic campaign books lately prepared for publication by the McNutt master mind, Frank McHale.

The Two Percent Clubs, a feature of the McNutt machine's iron-clad Indiana dictatorship, which have been much talked of but little understood, are simple, if rather brutal, institutions. Pretty nearly anyone who wants to keep a job with the State of Indiana has got to belong to them. Their chief function is the collection of 2 percent of the salary of everyone with a government job.

The Two Percent Clubs have locals, chiefly consisting of a sharp-eyed treasurer, in all the large agencies of the State government. Every pay day the treasurers collect their 2 percent and turn it over to the treasury chest of the McNutt machine. Thus the funds of the taxpayers of Indiana were really the source most heavily drawn on for the cocktails, canapes, and sandwiches at the McNutt reception.

The Two Percent Clubs are understood to gather in something like $150,000 a year, which is not bad, everything considered. It does not seem to have been enough, however; no doubt because parties for 4,000 people and Presidential candidacies, run like a three-ring circus, cost a great deal of money. Fortunately the new imitation of the Democratic campaign book is likely to make up any deficits.

His administration was notable for three things. The 2-percent clubs were established. The Governor exhibited a curious fondness for marching the National Guard about the State, declaring martial law at the drop of a picket sign in labor disputes. And a McNutt-conceived reorganization of the State government was put through, which brought the State of Indiana as tightly under McNutt's control as Louisiana ever was under Long's. These three things led Norman Thomas to describe the new Presidential candidate as the Hoosier Hitler.

Lest it seems strange that a statesman of such attainments as Paul V. McNutt should be treated with occasional coldness by the national administration, it ought to be pointed out that McNutt made the single important mistake of his career back in 1932.

Not only was he not for Franklin Delano Roosevelt before Chicago; he was positively rude about it. He earned the undying dislike of Postmaster General James A. Farley, and he did not endear himself to the President. Since then the President has occasionally been ready to relent, but Jim Farley has kept his memories of Chicago refreshingly green.

Then Mr. McNutt was sent to the Philippines as high commissioner.

It will be recalled that when he went to the Philippines the first thing we heard about him was news of a big rumpus about whether Mr. McNutt should be toasted first as the high commissioner to the Philippines, or whether the President of the Philippine Commonwealth should be first toasted. Mr. McNutt worked hard on this matter. He threw his great power as high commissioner behind his demands and he won. He is a very persevering gentleman.

My point in bringing up this matter about Mr. McNutt is easily explained. I like the gentleman personally; I have no objection of a personal nature to him, but I do think that a man who has been associated with the Two Percent Club in Indiana, one of the most brazen samples of political racketeering I know of in the entire Nation, should not go unchallenged when he is appointed to head one of the great governmental agencies of this country, where he will have under his charge the young and the old and the unfortunate of the Nation.

Mr. President, I hope that, based upon his past record, the nomination of Mr. McNutt will not be confirmed by the Senate.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, I know of no one who knows less about Paul McNutt and Indiana politics than Joe Alsop, unless it be the Senator from New Hampshire. The Senator from New Hampshire has called attention, through the medium of a resolution which the Senate promptly laid on the table, to the fact that the Democratic organization in Indiana, when McNutt became Governor in 1933, established a so-called Two Percent Club.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MINTON. I yield.

Mr. BRIDGES. The Senator admits the Two Percent Club was established by Paul McNutt?

Mr. MINTON. No; I do not admit anything of the kind. If the Senator will be seated for a moment, I will try to give him the first bit of facts he apparently has had about this situation. Judging by his speech, he has never been in possession of any of the facts, and if the Senator will indulge me just a few minutes, I will give him some information.

It is true the Two Percent Club was established by the Democratic organization—the Democratic employees, if you please—not by McNutt. The Senator from New Hampshire says that McNutt issued the order establishing the Two Percent Club. No such thing happened. The Democratic employees of the State administration organized their own Two Percent Club and placed upon themselves a voluntary obligation to contribute 2 percent of their earnings, if they received over a hundred dollars a month, to the Two Percent Club to help defray the expenses of the Democratic organization of the State of Indiana.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MINTON. I yield.

Mr. BRIDGES. Not only did they establish this voluntarily, I suppose, but when they failed to make their voluntary contributions they voluntarily fired themselves; did they? [Laughter.]

Mr. MINTON. No one was ever fired; and that is another statement by the Senator from New Hampshire which cannot be borne out by the facts. The fact of the matter is that these people put this obligation upon themselves voluntarily, and it worked so well—they were so proud of it—they were glad to pay the 2 percent; and no one was fired in the State of Indiana, and no one ever has been fired because he did not pay the Two Percent Club 2 percent of his salary. The Senator cannot cite a case of anyone in the State of Indiana, since the McNutt administration went into authority, who was fired because he did not pay the 2 percent to the Two Percent Club.

I was a member of that State administration before I came to the Senate, and I paid my 2 percent every month. I paid it voluntarily, and I paid it gladly, and everyone else who paid did likewise. But everyone in the State house did not pay it. I know the judges never would pay. They never thought they should pay, and nobody ever asked them to pay. I know that certain others in the State house never did pay.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MINTON. I yield.

Mr. BRIDGES. It would be impossible for the Governor to fire a judge, would it not?

Mr. MINTON. Pardon me.

Mr. BRIDGES. The Senator said the judges never did pay, and I inquired whether or not it was possible for the Governor to fire a judge.

Mr. MINTON. No, he could not fire a judge, but he could have a great deal to do with whether the judge would be renominated if he wanted to, because that would all come before the State convention, and the State organization, as the Senator knows, is quite powerful in State conventions.

But as I said, no one ever lost his job in Indiana because he did not contribute to the 2-percent fund. So that is just another erroneous statement made by the Senator from New Hampshire.

So far as the legalizing act went, it simply provided that the Two Percent Clubs are exempted from the Corrupt Practices Act for an accounting of their funds. Why? Because the Two Percent Clubs can, under the act, contribute its money only to a political party or a political campaign committee, and either that party or its campaign committee must account under the Corrupt Practices Act for every nickel it gets. So there was no sense in the Two Percent Club making an accounting and then the campaign committee also making an accounting of the same money.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MINTON. I yield.

Mr. BRIDGES. If 2-percent contributions are working so satisfactorily in Indiana, did they ever consider making it 4 percent, or 5 percent, or any higher percent?

Mr. MINTON. No; the Republicans did that.

Mr. BRIDGES. The Republicans have not been in power in Indiana for some time.

Mr. MINTON. They did it before the Democrats went in. And I am coming to that in a moment.

I now wish to say to the Senate that that organization was not established, as the Senator from New Hampshire said it was, it was not operated as the Senator from New Hampshire said it was, and it has no purposes such as the Senator from New Hampshire has attributed to it.

Let us take a look at the philosophy that is back of this Two Percent Club.

Mr. BRIDGES. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. MINTON. I yield.

Mr. BRIDGES. Does the Senator mean to say that it is not political in character?

Mr. MINTON. No; it is political. Oh, it is a Democratic organization, and the purpose of it is to keep the Republicans out of power in Indiana, and may God prosper it.

Mr. BRIDGES. Will the Senator allow me to amend that statement a little? Is it not more to keep the McNutt machine in power than to keep the Republicans out of power?

Mr. MINTON. Well, the two are synonymous, and as long as the McNutt crowd has been in power in Indiana we have managed to keep the Republicans wandering in the wilderness and I hope we will continue to do so.

Let us now take a look at this Two Percent Club which the Senator has seen fit to characterize as political racketeering. We all know that in running a political party you must have the wherewithal to do it. You have to have sinews of war. You must have money with which to conduct a political campaign. In all seriousness I ask Senators, "Where do you want to get your money? You have got to get it some place. Where do you want to turn to get it?" The Democratic Party simply says, "We elect to go to our people who hold offices under the Democratic Party and who are responsible for the administration in the Democratic Party's lease of power, and ask them to contribute of their funds in order to defray the expenses of the Democratic Party." What could be fairer than that, Mr. President? For instance, when I run for the Senate in Indiana my party assesses me $2,500. Everyone here who runs for office in his State knows that his political party assesses him in his State something or other to go on the ticket.

I have put up $2,500 under the rules of the Democratic Party in my State. Every man who runs for county clerk or township trustee is assessed by the political party a certain sum of money to help defray the expenses of that party in that township, in that county, in that State, or in the Nation.

We have been getting money, as I said, from the office-holders and the people who hold office under those who run for office. We believe that that is an honest, honorable, straightforward way of getting money to finance a campaign. We know and have told the people of Indiana that that is the honest way to do it.

How did the Republicans do it out in Indiana when they were in power? I will give the Senator from New Hampshire a little bit of enlightenment about the way things were run when the Republicans were in. One way was to pass the hat around to these boys that had keys to the side door of the Governor's office. The corporation's representatives got the hat filled by the corporations who received quid pro quo.

Mr. President, it is a notorious fact that before the Democrats came into power in Indiana the group representing the Republican machine gave to the representatives of the utilities and the lobbyists over in the statehouse in Indianapolis keys to the side door to the office of the Governor of the State of Indiana, who was then a Republican. And when McNutt came in the keys to the Governor's office were all taken up, and were held by him and not by the representatives of Insull and the utilities in the State of Indiana.

Another way that Republicans operated in Indiana at that time was not to let them pay 2 percent a month, but to assess them 5 or 6 percent for every primary and every election campaign that came on.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MINTON. Yes; I yield to the Senator.

Mr. BRIDGES. Do I understand the statement that everyone who receives pay from the State is assessed, means that the people on relief and the people who are needy, the blind, the underprivileged, are also assessed?

Mr. MINTON. Absolutely not. No one on relief in Indiana is assessed.

Mr. BRIDGES. Where do they draw the line of distinction?

Mr. MINTON. Those who are on the State pay roll holding a State job, who receive a salary of $100 a month or more, are the people who contribute to the Two Percent Club in the State of Indiana. No relief, no one holding a Federal position is asked to belong to the Two Percent Club.

It is a State organization, maintained by the State employees of the State of Indiana. It has worked so well, however, that the State employees have carried the message back to the people in their own communities, and the cities have established their Two Percent Clubs in the cities in the State of Indiana.

Not only have the Democrats established such clubs but the Republicans have followed suit in Indiana, and cities in Indiana today which are run by the Republican Party have Two Percent Clubs assessing the workers in the cities of the State of Indiana 2 percent on their salaries. But that was not the way they did it before they learned a little from the Democrats. Before the Democrats came in the Republicans did it this way. And I quote from an article by Herbert H. Evans, who was during the last session of the legislature in Indiana the Republican floor leader, and who for many years has been a member of the State legislature in Indiana. Mr. Herbert Evans had an article in Outdoor Life in October of 1930, and the Republicans in the State of Indiana at that time operated after this fashion. They would send out this kind of a letter:

Warden—

Referring to a game warden.

I suppose that you boys have been expecting this letter for some time, knowing that the campaign time is about here, so I am writing now to ask each of you for a donation to the campaign fund. I want $25 from men receiving $125 a month and $15 from men receiving $100 a month. Make the checks payable to Richard Lieber and mail to the office as soon as possible.

R. D. FLEMING, Captain of Wardens.

Here is the response of one of these wardens to Mr. Evans' letter. He says:

I was a warden for 4 years, and I know that I contributed to the campaign fund every election.

Here is a letter from a man by the name of Gardner, who was on the warden's staff. He writes to Mr. Evans:

Lieber * * * had sent his captain of the game warden service out to collect $25 from each warden for a campaign fund before the primary 2 years ago.

Now, mark you, that was the primary, so they came around with the hat again for the general election. So $25 was assessed from the fellows who received $125 a month for the primary and $25 for the election, which made $50, or far beyond 2 percent. That is what the Republicans were taking. They were not only taking it from the game wardens; over in the highway department they issued an order—and I am in possession of the order, a copy of it at least—assessing the employees of the Highway Commission of the State of Indiana not 2 percent, as we Democrats did.

Oh, no; they took 5 percent. And you had to lay it on the line. That is the way they operated their campaigns in the State of Indiana under the Republican administration.

That was not the only way. As I said a while ago, they passed the hat around to the corporations, and the Democrats never could get any big money in Indiana, because they never would deal with the privileged element in Indiana which wanted to run the State for its own aggrandizement. We have never dealt with the Insulls. We have never had a Governor sent to the penitentiary, as did the Republicans. We have never had a Governor plead the statute of limitations in Indiana to keep from going to the penitentiary, as did the Republicans. We have never had a State chairman go to the penitentiary, as did the Republicans. We have never had a Congressman go to the penitentiary, as did the Republicans. We have never had a mayor of the great city of Indianapolis go to jail, as did the Republicans. I do not know of anyone who was prominent in the Republican Party in Indiana who at some time or other was not either indicted or convicted.

That is the kind of politics we have been used to in Indiana, and that is the kind of thing upon which the Republicans turned their backs in 1930 and 1932 in the great State of Indiana.

As I said a while ago, we in Indiana believe that the honorable way to raise money to finance a political campaign is to get it from those who profit by success at the polls. As I say, the Republicans do not believe in that philosophy. They believe in passing around the hat and getting it from the rich fellows; and then they believe in delivering their quid pro quo. They believe in paying off the rich fellows who contribute handsomely to the Republican campaign fund. Let us see how they operate.

The CONGRESSIONAL RECORD was filled with the facts prior to the campaign of 1932. If the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] wants to know who financed Republican campaigns in days gone by, I will tell him it was the United States Treasury. I refer him to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of July 15, 1932, pages 15516 and 15517, at which place Representative Garrett of Texas laid the figures before the House, and showed that Andrew Mellon, when he was Secretary of the Treasury, and could not obtain from Congress an act which would reduce the income taxes to the point where he wanted them, persuaded Congress to enact a law providing for a refund of taxes without the necessity of the taxes having been paid under protest. That opened the door wide for Andrew Mellon to lay down liberal regulations, and in marched those from whose pockets Woodrow Wilson had taxed the war profits. Andrew Mellon gave them back $4,000,000,000.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MINTON. Just a moment. I want to develop the technique of the Republicans. I want to develop the methods they used to collect campaign funds, and to show what was given in return.

How did the system operate? The companies obtained enormous returns, but they obtained them only after they had made campaign contributions. How did the Republicans make sure of receiving the contributions? They had a man by the name of Robert Lucas who was collector of Internal Revenue. He was placed as an executive officer in the Republican National Committee. He knew whom the Treasury Department had taken care of. He knew who received the big refunds in taxes from the Treasury of the United States. Bob was placed in the Republican National Committee to see that the boys did not forget their duty. This is the way the contributions came in to the Republicans in that campaign. Here they are:

Harry Guggenheim contributed $25,000 and received a tax refund of $210,555.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MINTON. Just a moment. Jeremiah Milbank contributed $25,000, and received a tax refund of $891,443.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MINTON. I yield.

Mr. BONE. What was his business?

Mr. MINTON. I think he was a banker.

Mr. BONE. I wondered what connection these gentlemen might have had with war-time activities.

Mr. MINTON. They all lined their pockets.

Mr. BONE. I was wondering just how much profit we taxed out of them by our so-called war-profits tax.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MINTON. Just a moment. I want the Senator to hear these names. He probably never heard of them before.

John N. Willys contributed $25,000, and received a tax refund of $677,567. In addition, he was appointed Ambassador to Poland. Mr. Guggenheim went to Cuba.

W. R. and H. M. Timken contributed $10,000, and they received a tax refund of $370,031.

O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen contributed $32,500 each, and obtained tax refunds of $353,364.

Here is an old fellow who knows how to trade. Here is a fellow who never casts his bread upon the waters without getting back a grain elevator and a flour mill [laughter]. John D. Rockefeller and John D. Rockefeller, Jr., gave $25,000, and they received tax refunds of $8,545,309.

Herbert N. Straus gave $25,000, but he received a tax refund of only $86,736.

William Nelson Cromwell gave $25,000, and received tax refunds of $222,652.

J. R. Nutt—that is not McNutt; just Nutt—treasurer of the Republican National Committee, gave $25,000. He received tax refunds of only $83,669.

Harvey S. Firestone gave $25,000, and he received tax refunds of $2,960,000.

And so it goes. In the case of the United States Steel Corporation, of course, the corporation could not contribute anything, but Mr. Baker—

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. MINTON. Mr. George F. Baker, who is deeply interested, gave $20,000; and the United States Steel and other corporations in which Mr. Baker was a director received tax refunds approximating $100,000,000.

So all along the line the great corporations and moneyed interests of the country poured money into the coffers of the Republican campaign committee, and received in return millions and millions of dollars—yes, billions of dollars—as shown in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of July 15, 1932, to which I have referred.

The Senator from New Hampshire talks about a Two Percent Club! The Republicans shake down the contributors and then pay off, unabashed and unashamed, in the form of tax refunds.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MINTON. I yield.

Mr. BRIDGES. Inasmuch as the Senator has so clearly and without qualification stated that a political party may not accept contributions from corporations, I should like to have him explain how the Democratic National Committee, in the campaign of 1936, sold campaign books to many of the corporations in the country, some of them big, some of them little, many of them corporations seeking favors from the administration; and how, when certain individuals failed to subscribe to such campaign publications, certain penalties took place, certain individuals arrived to look at their tax records, and so forth. I should like to have the Senator explain why when Mr. Snell, then minority leader in the House of Representatives, submitted that information to the House and to the Attorney General, then Mr. Cummings, the Attorney General said it was without the sphere of the Department of Justice, and that the Department could not investigate the matter. The names were published. The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Holt] last year put into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD hundreds and hundreds of names of corporations which had contributed to the Democratic National Committee in the form of subscriptions to campaign books. Inasmuch as the Senator from Indiana is entering the national field, I should like to have him explain that situation which to me smells.

Mr. MINTON. Does the Senator refer to the advertising space that was bought in the convention books by corporations and other business people? Is that what the Senator refers to?

Mr. BRIDGES. No; I refer to the books that were sold as souvenirs, containing the autograph of the President of the United States, Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Mr. MINTON. There was no law against it. If anybody was willing to buy one of them and pay for it, it was perfectly all right for him to do so. There is no law against it; and, as I understand, the Republicans are not a bit squeamish about doing such things.

Mr. BRIDGES. It was a violation of the law.

Mr. MINTON. It was not a violation of the law. If it had been a violation of the law, the Senator could have appeared before a grand jury, or his party's representatives could have appeared before a grand jury, and had somebody indicted. Why did you not do it? Because you knew it was not against the law. There was no violation of the law. The Democrats did what was a perfectly legal thing, and they did what the Republicans did with reference to advertising in their convention book. The same outfit, the same corporation that put out the Democrats' book for the convention in 1936, put out the Republicans' book, and put it out on the same basis, although they did not make quite as much money by it, because nobody was much interested in the losing cause of the Republicans in that year.

Mr. BRIDGES. Does the Senator say that the Republican National Committee sold for any amount campaign books containing anybody's autograph?

Mr. MINTON. I did not say anything of the kind. There was not anybody in the Republican Party at that time whose autograph was worth a thin dime. [Laughter.] Therefore they did not use that method. What I did say was that the Republican Party used the same method that the Democratic Party used about getting out a convention book, and the Republicans used the same corporation to get out the book, collected money in the same way, and paid the corporation on the same basis.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MINTON. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. BRIDGES. The Senator is certainly making an incorrect statement when he says the Republicans used the same method. The Republicans, in no instance, sold to great corporations campaign publications containing the autograph of the President of the United States. When the Senator says they proceeded by the same method he is making an incorrect statement.

Mr. MINTON. The Senator does not think anybody paid for Hoover's autograph; does he? [Laughter.]

Mr. BRIDGES. Let me tell the Senator something. I had too high a regard for Herbert Hoover when he was President to think he would sell his autograph in a campaign publication for a campaign contribution.

Mr. MINTON. He sold it for a good deal less, according to the books that have been written about him. I do not know about the matter; but a number of books have been written about him and circulated in this country, and he has never prosecuted anybody for libel.

Mr. President, as I was saying before I was interrupted by the Senator from New Hampshire, there is no evidence in the record that if a corporation did buy a Democratic convention book, the trail led to the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, let me answer that statement and say that I have not the list at hand; but I am certain that some of the persons who purchased campaign publications—I shall be glad to get the list and give the Senator tomorrow the names—had matters of interest before this administration in Washington.

Mr. MINTON. Yes; and then the Senator ought to do what I did, set down what this administration gave them in return. The Senator from New Hampshire cannot do it, because the Democratic Party never has been guilty of that kind of conduct in all its long and glorious history.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MINTON. Yes; I yield to the Senator.

Mr. BRIDGES. The Senator might perhaps explain some of the activities of a man by the name of Chip Robert, treasurer of the Democratic National Committee.

Mr. MINTON. I have heard of a fellow by the name of Fall, and a fellow by the name of Daugherty, and fellows like that, whom I might discuss here at great length; but at Chip Robert's door has never been laid a scandal, or a fraud, or anything at all that he could be indicted for under the law of the land.

Mr. President, I know the Senate wants to go home, and does not want to hear about this contest between the Senator from New Hampshire and me. I should like to have the Senator from New Hampshire, who finds fault with the method of Indiana in raising campaign funds, tell the Senate how he is raising the money to conduct his campaign for the Presidential nomination on the Republican ticket. I dare say the Senator from New Hampshire is not paying it out of his salary. I dare say that the man he has employed in his office to write his speeches, and dig up this stuff that he spews out here on the floor of the United States Senate, is not paid for out of the Senator's salary. What 2-percent club or what other racketeering political organization lines the pockets of the Senator from New Hampshire to send out his material for his political campaign for the Republican nomination for President of the United States? Let him tell his colleagues. Let him tell the Republican Party how he finances his campaign. Do not come to the Democratic Party of Indiana and try to cast any reflections upon it when it goes about in its little, humble way, collecting nickels and dimes among its own workers. Let the Senator from New Hampshire explain his own methods before he casts a stone at somebody else.

Mr. BRIDGES. In due course I will explain that to the Senator from Indiana or anybody else when I become a candidate for any office. Let me say that I do not approve of the 2-percent method, the McNutt method, or the method used by the Democratic National Committee of getting funds by selling books to corporations or unethical methods used by any person or committee whether they be Democrats or Republicans.

Mr. MINTON. Perhaps the Senator is not a candidate; but is he not angling just a little for the nomination—just a little bit? [Laughter.] I take it from the Senator's silence that that gives consent. I hope the Republican Party, which furnished him with the resolution he introduced, the party of the reactionary press that he always speaks for, will take note that they now have a candidate. By his silence here on the floor of the United States Senate he has given his blessing to the campaign of letter-writing and post cards that sent out the questionnaire: "Who is this fellow who has been Governor, who has been on the Public Service Commission, who is now in the United States Senate, who is a staunch Republican? Who is this fellow? Who is he? Does he not fit the specifications? Is he not just the fellow for whom we are looking for the Presidency of the United States, for our candidate on the Republican ticket?" Who is paying for those postcards? Who is sending them out? Where does the money come from? Let the Senator from New Hampshire tell us.

So, Mr. President, I conclude, with the observation that it is more honorable—and I say it with all sincerity—for a political party to go out among its own workers, openly and aboveboard, collecting a dollar here and a dollar there, than it is to pass around the hat among the great corporations and the rich people of the country who expect to be paid off, as they were paid off under the Republican administration to the tune of $4,000,000,000 out of the Treasury of the United States. So, when you consider the methods, ask yourselves honestly the question, How do you want your party to raise its money—by honest, voluntary contributions by the workers in the party itself, or by the privileged interests that want to get something from the Government because they gave something to the political party which they placed in power?

ELMER D. DAVIES

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President, I was detained from the Chamber, speaking to a caller from my State in the ante-room, just before the executive session was announced by the bells. I actually entered while the bells were still ringing. The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] had just taken the floor, and in the meantime there has been this rather long, spirited, and interesting interchange over the nomination of Mr. Paul V. McNutt between the Senator from New Hampshire and the Senator from Indiana.

As I entered the Chamber I was surprised to note that the confirmation of the Federal Security Administrator, Mr. McNutt, was the one that was being discussed. I must ask the Chair what happened in respect to the nomination of Elmer D. Davies as United States district judge for the middle district of Tennessee? Was that nomination passed over? It was the first on the list. Why was it not taken up first?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from New Jersey that, because of the fact that the two Senators from Tennessee were leaving on a committee to attend the funeral of a Member of the House, the late Representative McReynolds, the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR] earlier in the afternoon asked that that nomination be confirmed, and it was confirmed.

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President, I do not charge that there was anything underhanded or any connivance or anything of that sort. I do not charge that, but certainly I expected, and had a right to expect, that the nomination of Elmer D. Davies would be brought up during the regular executive session and not out of order earlier in the day.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator from New Jersey yield?

Mr. BARBOUR. I am glad to yield to my good friend from Vermont.

Mr. AUSTIN. I should like to say for the benefit of the Senator from New Jersey that when this matter arose I was present and knew of the exigency of the circumstances, but did not know there was any occasion for delay or that there was any opposition to the confirmation of the nomination. Therefore I did not object to the procedure out of order.

Mr. BARBOUR. That is perfectly true, I am sure, Mr. President. I would have objected to the confirmation of Mr. Davies had I known it was coming up out of order earlier, and I would have spoken to either the Senator from Oregon, if he had been present, or, in his absence, to the Senator from Vermont. It is perfectly true that the Senator from Vermont had no knowledge that I had any interest in the matter, and I did not advise anyone of my objection, for, of course, I expected that this nomination, like all the others on the Executive Calendar, would be reached when the Executive Calendar was called, and when the name thus would be reached in the ordinary way. Now, I must ask unanimous consent to have the vote confirming the nomination reconsidered.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, in view of the fact that the two Senators from Tennessee are away on official business, attending a funeral, I think that ought not to be agreed to at this time. The two Senators will be back Friday morning.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair calls attention to the fact that the President was notified of the confirmation.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is true. I had overlooked the fact that the senior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR] asked that the President be notified, and he has already been notified of the confirmation.

Mr. BARBOUR. There was certainly a great deal of hurry about this particular confirmation, it seems to me. As I have said, I do not make any charges, for I accept the explanation of the majority leader, the distinguished Senator from Kentucky, but I find myself, through no fault of my own, in what I feel to be both an embarrassing position and a handicapped position, and I am compelled to move a reconsideration of the vote by which the nomination was confirmed.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I have no desire to embarrass the Senator from New Jersey. At the same time, I do not want any advantage taken of the two Senators from Tennessee, at whose instance the nomination was confirmed, and, without objection, the President notified. I do not know that the President may not have issued the commission by this time. Of course, the Senator from New Jersey understands that the requirement that 2 days shall elapse after a nomination before the President is notified is for the purpose of giving opportunity to move a reconsideration if anyone wishes to make such a motion, and when, by unanimous consent, the President is notified at once, the 2-day period is waived.

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President, I know how absolutely fair the majority leader, the distinguished Senator from Kentucky, is, and I am not inferring that there has been anything underhanded or surreptitious, as I have said before, but I do say that under the circumstances, certainly in view of the fact that the nomination was brought up out of the regular order, before either I, or, I am sure, many other Senators expected it would come up, there should be a reconsideration. That is only fair.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator is not a member of the Committee on the Judiciary, I believe.

Mr. BARBOUR. I am not.

Mr. BARKLEY. I understand the nomination was unanimously reported by the Committee on the Judiciary after an investigation which they conducted.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I desire to propound a parliamentary inquiry. Is there any reason why the Chair should not put the motion?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator can make a motion to reconsider the vote by which the nomination was confirmed, and should couple with that a motion to recall from the White House the resolution of confirmation.

Mr. AUSTIN. I feel some responsibility for this awkward situation, and therefore I make the motion that the resolution of confirmation be recalled.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I understand a subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary held hearings on the nomination, which I suppose were full hearings. I should like to ask the Senator from New Jersey whether he appeared before the subcommittee to make any objection.

Mr. BARBOUR. No, Mr. President; I did not. I knew nothing about the hearings before the subcommittee, and I am perfectly willing to admit that perhaps I should have known about them; but I did not. All I want to do now, and I must do it, is to have the resolution of confirmation recalled. I am, of course, perfectly willing that a vote be taken now on my motion. But I insist on a vote. I move that the resolution of confirmation be recalled. I realize how this has all come about, but I must insist that the Senate vote on my motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands the motion to be that the notification of confirmation sent to the President shall be recalled from the White House.

Mr. BARBOUR. That is correct. I understand that is the first move I should take to prevent the confirmation of this nomination.

Mr. LUCAS. A parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. LUCAS. As I understand, both the proposals are in the same motion?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The rule states that the motion for a recall of the notification must be coupled with a motion for reconsideration, and voted on separately.

Mr. LUCAS. Only one motion is to be voted upon?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The two motions are to be voted upon separately.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I understand the motion made was to recall the notification and to reconsider the action of the Senate in confirming the nomination.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is to recall the notification.

Mr. BARBOUR. I make the motion, and I insist it be voted on.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is one matter, and of course the other is a separate proposition.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Whether the nomination will come back or not is a question.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, I do not express any opinion on that. The absence of the Senators from Tennessee on an official mission is responsible, of course, for the present situation. The nomination would not have been brought up except at the regular executive session except for the fact that the two Senators were appointed on the committee to attend the funeral of the late Representative McReynolds, of Tennessee, and had to leave at 4:50 o'clock this afternoon, before the Senate held an executive session. In view of the length of time which has elapsed between the occurrence of the vacancy in the judgeship and the appointment, it was desired that action be taken at once.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I suggest to the Senator from Kentucky that if the motions are voted upon separately, and the first motion is merely to recall the notification, under all of the circumstances the Senators from Tennessee, who made the request I am informed—I did not happen to be present—would not lose anything except the elimination of the waiver of the 2 days which ordinarily would elapse before the President would be notified. If merely the motion to recall the notification should be voted upon and carried, the vote to reconsider would not be acted on before the return of the Senators from Tennessee and there would be an opportunity for the Senator from New Jersey to present his objections.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the notification should be recalled from the President it would still be in order for the Senator to move to reconsider on Friday, when the Senators from Tennessee will have returned.

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President, I would not feel justified in presenting the two motions at the same time now. In the light of what has just been stated, and because it might appear to be unfair to the two Senators from Tennessee in their absence, I feel I should only press in the first instance my motion for the recall of the notification to the President. I am perfectly willing to abide by the vote of the Senate at this time. If I am voted down, of course I will have failed. But I feel I will not be voted down under all the circumstances, and on Friday I can move to reconsider the vote by which the nomination was confirmed.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, the Senate cannot vote on a motion to reconsider the confirmation until the notification is returned to the Senate. What the Senator from New Jersey is seeking to do now is all he can do now anyway.

Mr. BARBOUR. In the light of the parliamentary situation as outlined by the distinguished Senator from Kentucky, I am not suggesting that right now, Mr. President. I will make that motion Friday. However, now I do make the motion that the Senator from Wisconsin spoke of and ask that it be voted on.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the Senator's motion is to recall the resolution of confirmation from the President?

Mr. BARBOUR. That is correct.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BARBOUR].

The motion was agreed to.

FEDERAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATOR—PAUL V. McNUTT

The Senate resumed the consideration of the nomination of Paul V. McNutt, of Indiana, to be Federal Security Administrator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to this nomination?

The nomination was confirmed.

Mr. HARRISON. I move that the President be notified of the action of the Senate in confirming the nomination of Mr. McNutt.

The motion was agreed to.

DIPLOMATIC AND FOREIGN SERVICE

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Diplomatic and Foreign Service.

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the nominations in the Diplomatic and Foreign Service be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed en bloc.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Tony T. Turk to be postmaster at Falls Creek, Pa., which had been reported adversely.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to this nomination?

The nomination was rejected.

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask that the nominations of postmasters, with the exception of the one just acted upon, be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations of postmasters, with the exception noted, are confirmed en bloc.

That completes the calendar.

RECESS

Mr. BARKLEY. As in legislative session, I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 6 o'clock and 2 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Thursday, July 13, 1939, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

WEDNESDAY, JULY 12, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, we praise Thee that the sun of life, with its quickening rays, has again shed upon our path the glow of another day. Thy merciful love and care, our Father, are as constant as the stars that never set, as the mountains that never move, and as the tides that never forget to ebb and flow. Glory be to Thy holy name, O Lord, most high. Continue to shelter us with Thy gracious providence, uplifting and transfiguring us with the sublime consciousness of a personal God. Inspire us to love Thee with a whole heart, to serve man and hate only sin. As the custodians of a glorious heritage, grant that the might of a great purpose may surge through the halls of our being. Search us, O God, and know our hearts; see if there is any wicked way in us and lead us in the way everlasting. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6577) entitled "An act to provide revenue for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes."

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendments of the House to bills of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 955. An act creating the City of Dubuque Bridge Commission and authorizing said Commission and its successors to purchase and/or construct, maintain, and operate a bridge or bridges across the Mississippi River at or near Dubuque, Iowa, and East Dubuque, Ill.; and

S. 1575. An act to provide that the annual registration of motor vehicles in the District of Columbia shall be for the period from April 1 in each year to March 31 in the succeeding year.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 1384) entitled "An act for the relief of Egon Karl Freiherr von Mauchenheim and Margarete von Mauchenheim," with an amendment.

The message also announced that the Senate had adopted the following resolution:

Senate Resolution 159

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES,
July 11 (legislative day, July 10), 1939.

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with profound sorrow the announcement of the death of Hon. SAM D. McREYNOLDS, late a Representative from the State of Tennessee.

Resolved, That a committee of six Senators be appointed by the Presiding Officer to join the committee appointed on the part of the House of Representatives to attend the funeral of the deceased Representative.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased Representative the Senate do now take a recess until 12 o'clock meridian tomorrow.

The message also announced that pursuant to the foregoing resolution the Presiding Officer had appointed Mr. McKELLAR, Mr. STEWART, Mr. CONNALLY, Mr. RUSSELL, Mr. BURKE, and Mr. MILLER as members of said committee on the part of the Senate.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT BUILDING COMMISSION

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 341) to dissolve the United States Supreme Court Building Commission.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, we would like to know what the joint resolution is.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the United States Supreme Court Building Commission, having fully executed all the duties imposed upon it by law, accomplished the purposes for which it was created, settled all accounts, and submitted its final report to Congress, is hereby dissolved and the members of such Commission discharged from any further duties in connection with the matters heretofore committed by law to such Commission.

Sec. 2. All the books, papers, documents, and other records of such Commission shall be transferred to such permanent agencies of the United States, including the Supreme Court of the United States, as the Chief Justice of the United States shall deem appropriate.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD at this point with reference to the resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, the Supreme Court Building Commission has completed its work and submitted its report to the Congress. The pending resolution provides, accordingly, that the Commission be discharged. It is unnecessary to recite here the legislative provisions governing the labors of the Commission as they are all set out in the report to the Congress.

Through the years of its service, the Commission has worked diligently and has had many problems to solve. The efficiency of that service in its financial features is reflected in the fact that out of the funds provided for the construction of the building the Commission has also furnished the building and is returning more than $95,000 to the Treasury of the United States. [Applause.]

The building houses one of the three coordinate branches of the Government in its highest tribunal. Naturally, it is designed primarily for the conduct of the business of the Court, with proper facilities for litigants and attorneys. However, it is provided also with ample corridors and conveniences for the general public, and accommodations for visitors to the courtroom are much more numerous and satisfactory than in the crowded quarters formerly occupied by the Supreme Court in the Capitol.

The resolution provides also for the deposit of the records of the Commission by its Chairman, the Chief Justice of the United States, in a proper place, and it is believed that a perusal of these records will attest the care and diligence with which the Commission has discharged its duties and also allay the criticism of any who may be disposed to find fault with details. It is believed that the structure is well adapted to the particular purposes for which it was intended.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute on this subject.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I desire to take issue with the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM] on what the Supreme Court Building Commission has done. It has taken care of the Supreme Court judges all right; but, so far as the convenience of the public is concerned, the present Supreme Court Building and its surroundings are far from perfect.

I know the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM] is not responsible for these conditions; he inherited them from a former administration. But they ought to be corrected if it is possible to correct them at this late date.

In front of the building they made no provision whatever to take care of the water. The water that falls in front of the Supreme Court Building runs 79 yards before it reaches the street, after flowing across the sidewalk, and everybody who walks along that sidewalk in front of the building has to wade that water day in and day out because of lack of some provision to take care of it.

Again, at the back of the building on Second Street, in order that the Supreme Court judges might not be jolted, they cut the sidewalk in two twice and cut the pavement down about 6 or 8 inches, so that old persons who walk along there do so at the risk of limb, due to the fact that they are likely to step off and fall and break some of their bones. I understand several have already been injured by unwittingly stepping off into these architectural driveways.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 more minute.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Reserving the right to object, are you going to turn off the rain or fix the building? [Laughter.]

Mr. RANKIN. Of course, we cannot stop the rains. I think all the membership know that, with the possible exception of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN].

But there are some other things about this building the House ought to know.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, they made absolutely no provision for the public to get into and out of the building. They seemed to think when they house the nine Supreme Court Justices their job was done. They made no provision for a public driveway, such as we have at both wings of the Capitol. As a result every day the Supreme Court meets there are probably 1,000 visitors, including lawyers, litigants, witnesses, and spectators, all American citizens, who come there to hear the arguments before and the decisions of the Supreme Court. If it is raining when they leave the Supreme Court, they have to go out in the rain, because they made no provision whatever for a drive-in except for the judges themselves. They have to walk the entire distance of 79 yards through the rain down to First Street and there wait in the rain for a streetcar or a taxicab to come by. As a result, every day the Supreme Court meets the people who go there are subjected to these inconveniences.

In addition to that, the Supreme Court room is too small to accommodate the public. There is a large hall with magnificent columns that could have been added to the Supreme Court room which would have furnished ample space for all visitors without crowding them. But somebody, in their evident desire for what they thought was architectural perfection, or artistic excellence, shut this vast hall off from the main auditorium and thereby made it impossible for large numbers of people to ever attend the sessions of the Supreme Court.

The lights in the building were so bad that it took at least a year or two to get them adjusted so the Justices on the bench could read their manuscripts; and I am not sure they are satisfactorily adjusted yet.

Instead of a wall behind the Justices' seats that would reflect the sound, they provide a large curtain that absorbs the sound. This, together with the miserable acoustics of the building, renders it almost impossible to hear some of the Justices throughout the small Supreme Court room that has been provided.

This is no criticism of the Supreme Court, for I dare say that no member of the present Court is in any way responsible for this condition.

I understand that a majority of the members who are now on the bench, and who were serving at the time they moved into this building, voted against doing so. I am told that on the proposition of moving into this building the Court did so by a divided vote of 5 to 4.

Personally, I think now, and I thought then, that it was a mistake to move the Supreme Court out of the Capitol. In my opinion, there was ample room in this building for that august tribunal, and I believe it would have been much better for the Court, for the country, and for the amicable relations that should exist between the legislative and the judicial branches of this Government for the Court to remain in the Capitol.

I am told that there are 37 guards employed in the Supreme Court Building. Certainly that expense would have been obviated if the Court had remained in the Capitol where, in my opinion, the Fathers of this Republic intended it to remain.

But be that as it may, the complaint I am making is at the manner in which the public was ignored in the construction of this building which, from their standpoint, I must say, is a superb model of inconvenience.

Mr. RICH. Is that the reason the administration wanted to make everybody a judge?

Mr. RANKIN. No; a Republican administration constructed this building at a cost of about $12,000,000, and made a mess of it. [Laughter and applause.]

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in order to give the House more information on the inconveniences of the Supreme Court Building.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

ADDITIONAL CLERK HIRE IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 6205) to provide for additional clerk hire in the House of Representatives, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman from North Carolina a few questions in reference to this bill, if I may.

The first one relates to the number of new clerks that are going to be required by the other body for the conduct of their business, which, in their judgment, they deem necessary. How many additional clerks does this bill carry?

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, as previously stated, I have no interest whatever in this legislation, and I make this request only because I am sure that if the gentleman will reflect, it is a matter of comity between the two Houses, and certainly a matter of courtesy to agree to the conference asked by the Senate. I assume that I shall be one of the three conferees along with the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COCHRAN] and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WOLFENDEN]. As far as I am concerned, without consulting them, there are at least two of the Senate amendments that I shall insist upon being deleted. Regardless of what we do about this matter, I call the attention of the House to this situation.

I have already been informed upon reliable authority that the Senate will do all of these things covered by their amendments to this bill, if we do not see fit to send this bill to conference and have final action on it, out of their own contingent fund. Since 1935 each Senator has had an additional clerk at the rate of $1,800 a year, paid for out of their contingent fund, without the question ever even coming to the House of Representatives. Therefore, when they seek to make that permanent, I do not think they are really creating a new place. In addition to that, they also follow our example and have a new clerk at the rate of $1,500 a year. Also in addition to that, they have allowed one clerk to each Senator whose State has a population exceeding 3,000,000. There are 10 States in the Union that have a population exceeding 3,000,000, and that would mean 20 additional clerks for these Senators. Also, they have added an amendment which would give the majority and the minority leaders of the Senate an expert, or a statistician, in the form of a clerk at the rate of $5,000 a year. We have no such position as that in the House. Frankly, if this bill goes to conference I shall insist that that go out. Then there is another provision that the employees of a Senator shall remain on the pay roll for 6 months after the Senator has either died or resigned. The House has such a provision as that, because it generally requires about 6 months to have a special election, and if there is a special election before that then, of course, the House clerks serve only until the successor has qualified. There is no such occasion for a provision as that in the Senate as I see it, because a Senator is usually immediately appointed by the Governor of the State when one dies or resigns, and if this goes to conference, I shall insist that those two items be stricken out. In any event, the House will have an opportunity to vote up or down the conference report, but I do think that as a matter of courtesy, as a matter of comity, that this bill ought to go to conference, although I have no interest whatever in it.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, the House adds one additional clerk at the rate of $1,500 a year. The Senate has one clerk in the bill at $1,800 a year.

Mr. WARREN. That is the same clerk that they have had all of the time.

Mr. RICH. One clerk at $1,500, and then an additional clerk for the Senators from each State that has over 3,000,000 population.

Mr. WARREN. I do not think the gentleman should count the $1,800 clerk, because they have had that all of the time.

Mr. RICH. There are really two clerks in the bill. It is just like this. There are Senators from States that have populations that are but one-third of the population of my district. I know that I can get along with two clerks. The Senators now have many more than that. There are times probably when you need them for a short while, but if you give the membership of the Senate the right to appoint these clerks, they are going to make the appointments, and that is as natural as anything can be, and I have seen it happen ever since I came to Washington. Whenever we give an appointment to a man, he makes that appointment. They do not limit the cost, it seems to me.

Mr. WARREN. That is correct.

Mr. RICH. And if you permit those Senators that have States with 100,000 population to put in two additional clerks, there is no rhyme or reason or sense in it and I do not care if it is at the other end of the Capitol, or in this House, it is not good business sense.

There are 15 States with less than 1,000,000 people living in them. There are 8 States with less than 500,000 people living in them. There are 3 States with less than 300,000 people living in them.

Two Senators to a State if they each took one-half the people to look after, I am sure the 30 Senators representing the 15 States would have no more use for additional clerks. If that is the case why let them put people on the pay roll when they are not necessary? The taxpayers have to pay the bill and where are they going to get the money? Did you ever think of that.

There is a way to do this, and the way is to bring these things in here so that we know who has responsibility for this legislation—get a vote on it. I do not want to assume the responsibility, but if I let this go to conference, then I am responsible for some of these acts of spending, spending, and spending, and I do not want to have it charged to me. I do not propose to let it go to conference today in this manner, but let them bring it in in a way so that we will know who is responsible for this legislation—that the Members be recorded. I am going to have to object to this at this time being brought in here in this way.

Mr. COCHRAN. Will the gentleman withhold his objection for a moment?

Mr. RICH. I will withhold the objection.

Mr. COCHRAN. I do not question the gentleman's sincerity, but if this bill goes to conference we are likely to get more for the Government by reason of a conference than we will if this bill fails, for this reason: All the Senate has to do in order to get what it wants is to pass a Senate resolution granting themselves additional clerk hire with instructions to pay it out of the contingent fund, and the House does not have anything to say about it. The responsibility is on the Senate, not the House, for the increase in Senate expenses.

Mr. RICH. Let me say to the gentleman from Missouri last year we went in the red seven and one-half million dollars a day. Beginning July 1 you have gone in the red at the rate of $36,345,000 a day. The Senators seem to care not for this from their actions, as they have increased greatly each appropriation bill. It is up to the red-blooded American people to stop some of these expenditures that are going on, and I am going to be one to try to do it. I have not had much success, however, with the deal in cutting down expenses. I object, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania objects to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina.

REVENUE FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. NICHOLS, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, submitted a conference report and statement on the bill (H. R. 6577) to provide revenue for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to announce that later on today I shall ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the conference report.

THE LATE HON. SAM D. McREYNOLDS

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, I was called from the floor yesterday while resolutions were being passed and tribute paid to our late colleague, Judge SAM McREYNOLDS, of Tennessee. I want the RECORD also to show the great personal loss I feel on account of his death. He was one of my most intimate and highly valued friends. Being a native son of Tennessee myself, I came to know him shortly after I entered this body. He showed me many courtesies, but our acquaintance for a few years was slightly more than casual. After our trip to the inauguration of the Philippine Government that friendship ripened into an intimate one not only for us but for our wives. I have never known a more honorable or dependable man. It could be truly said of him that his word was as good as his bond. He had his convictions on all personal and political questions and was willing to defend them. He was a fair but hard fighter for the things in which he believed. His influence was felt on great national and international questions. In addition to his fine legal ability and his great judicial and legislative mind he had character of the highest order. I shall miss him more than I know how to express. I am sure his devoted wife and daughter have the sympathy of every Member of this House.

RESIGNATION FROM COMMITTEE

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following resignation from committee:

JULY 12, 1939.

HON. WILLIAM B. BANKHEAD,
Speaker, House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. SPEAKER: I herewith tender my resignation as a member of the following committee:

Committee on War Claims.

Sincerely yours,

JOSHUA L. JOHNS,
Member of Congress, Eighth District, Wisconsin.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the resignation is accepted.

There was no objection.

APPOINTMENT OF FUNERAL COMMITTEE

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to House Resolution 254, the Chair appoints the following Members as a committee to attend the funeral of the late Sam D. McReynolds: Mr. COOPER, Mr. CHANDLER, Mr. PEARSON, Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee, Mr. GORE, Mr. COURTNEY, Mr. BLAND, Mr. BLOOM, Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON, Mr. THOMASON, Mr. RICHARDS, Mr. SHANLEY, Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee, Mr. PLUMLEY, and Mr. STEARNS of New Hampshire.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that following the legislative program for today and any other special orders that may have been entered, the gentleman from California [Mr. LELAND M. FORD] may be allowed to speak for 20 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ELECTION TO COMMITTEE

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution (H. Res. 255), which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 255

Resolved, That JOSHUA L. JOHNS, of Wisconsin, be, and he is hereby, elected to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors of the House of Representatives.

The resolution was agreed to.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MARTIN J. KENNEDY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and include an address by Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward, of the United States Navy, delivered at New York on June 29.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN J. KENNEDY. Mr. Speaker, I make a similar request, to include a speech delivered by Maj. Gen. Hugh S. Drum, made at the same time.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

AMENDING TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY ACT

Mr. MAY, from the Committee on Military Affairs, submitted a conference report and statement on the bill S. 1796, an act to amend the Tennessee Valley Authority Act of 1933.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include therein a statement by Herbert S. Salmon, of Alabama, in connection with the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

WILLIAM E. HULL LOCK AND DAM

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, for 10 years, the Honorable William E. Hull, of Peoria, Ill., represented the Sixteenth Congressional District of Illinois in the Congress. He was my predecessor. When he came here, he became a member of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and labored unceasingly and indefatigably for the improvement of the water courses of the Nation and for the development of inland waterway navigation. Not only was he an active member of the Rivers and Harbors Congress of the United States, but served as an official of that organization as well. As the Illinois member on the Committee on Rivers and Harbors he devoted himself with vigor and determination to the development of the 9-foot waterway in the Illinois River which would bring the great inland metropolis of Chicago and the States of the great land-locked empire of the Middle West closer to the seaboard States and to the ports of the world. Through his diligent and untiring efforts, that 9-foot waterway became a reality. Adequate water level in the Illinois River was made possible by the construction of three locks and dams. The first of these is located at Alton on the Mississippi River. The second is located at Versailles, and the third is located at Peoria, Ill. These locks and dams break the Illinois River into a series of three pools, each of which is about 80 miles in length. The lock and dam at Peoria, Ill., is now in operation and already there has been a stimulation of water commerce. I deem it timely and proper in view of the devotion and untiring efforts of Congressman Hull to the effectuation of this project that the lock and dam at Peoria, Ill., near his home city, be named in his honor. This day I have introduced a bill to designate this lock and dam as the William E. Hull Lock and Dam.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SECCOMBE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and to include therein an address made by Hon. Herbert E. Hoover at the International Convention of Christian Endeavor in Cleveland, Ohio.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. PLUMLEY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit two requests.

I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. PLUMLEY. I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an article from this morning's New York Times.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks and to include therein a brief analysis of H. R. 5254, and a letter.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. GEHRMANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a radio address I made recently on the neutrality bill passed by the House a few days ago.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. GERLACH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a resolution adopted by the Travelers' Protective Association in a national convention at San Antonio, Tex.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

THE CENSUS

Mr. YOUNGDAHL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. YOUNGDAHL. Mr. Speaker, within the next few months between 150,000 and 175,000 men and women will be put to work taking the 1940 census. I believe in the taking of this census. I believe it furnishes valuable information for the guidance of Government and of business.

But as we approach the hiring of these people by the Government, we must at the same time be cognizant of the fact that upward of 10,000,000 Americans are still without employment, that hundreds of thousands of good American citizens are necessarily being furnished with the necessities of life through public relief and work relief.

I have today introduced a bill for the consideration of this House providing that preference in the hiring of all census supervisors, enumerators, clerks, tabulators, and other temporary employees, other than those under civil service and veterans' preference, be given to persons certified as in need of public relief.

This bill would take the hiring of these people, temporary though their employment may be, out of the class of political patronage and place it under the regulation of the Commissioner of Work Projects.

It seems only logical to me, Mr. Speaker, that with the Government facing the necessity of hiring close to 175,000 men and women and at the same time furnishing relief to thousands of others, that we should use these needy people for this work.

That there are thousands of persons well qualified and able to perform this work who are badly in need of assistance, I think would be admitted by everyone.

I respectfully urge that this House give serious consideration to this measure.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. LELAND M. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD, and to include therein a resolution received by me from Dr. Kress, secretary of the California Medical Association, opposing the bill S. 1620, known as the Wagner health bill.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

THE HOUSE VOTE ON NEUTRALITY

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, for sake of accuracy, and to keep the record clear, I take this occasion to emphasize the fact that the arms embargo was approved in the House of Representatives by a vote of 214 to 173, or a majority of 41. Many of the eastern newspapers and columnists opposed to the embargo have been giving out misleading information that it was only adopted by a majority of 2 votes.

It is my belief that this is a studied attempt to deceive the public, and it is my conviction that if in the future the issue is again brought back to the House we would not lose any of the 41 majority and would probably increase it by another 20 votes.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an article from the New York Times.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. ANGELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a short editorial from the Portland Journal on the question of sugar production in the State of Oregon.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon?

There was no objection.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a short editorial from the Journal-Every Evening, of Wilmington, Del.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Delaware?

There was no objection.

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD by inserting a radio address delivered by me last evening.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maine?

There was no objection.

Mr. GILLIE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD upon two subjects and to include therein three brief newspaper articles and one editorial from the News-Sentinel of Fort Wayne.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD by inserting a speech I made over the radio last week.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, it was my privilege to spend yesterday and the day before in Harlan County, Ky., the county misnamed "Bloody Harlan," where I visited several mines, talked with miners at work, with miners who were not working but who wanted to work; talked with mine operators who were losing money while continuing to give employment.

From personal observation it was evident that if left to themselves the people of that county and city would get along as well, if not better, than the people of the average American county and city; that the trouble and persecution from which they suffer is brought to them by "outsiders," in particular by John L. Lewis and his tribute-levying agents who insist that all who work in the mines of that county pay tribute to him. So far, notwithstanding the assistance of the National Labor Relations Board, the so-called La Follette Senate Civil Liberties Committee and the Department of Justice, he has been unable to forge his shackles upon these liberty-loving Americans.

But under the National Labor Relations Act he is continuing his drive. Last Sunday Turnblazer, head of the local United Mine Workers, called for pickets to stop operations in the mines. Golden, attorney for the union, called upon the pickets to make it cost the operators $25 a ton to mine coal. The pickets answering these calls, and most of them are not employees of these mines but come in from outside, made an attempt to carry out those suggestions.

The pickets armed themselves and, following Turnblazer's and Golden's suggestions made at the prior meeting, to prevent the operations of the mines, attempted to pull miners from a man-trip car.

Captain Hanberry, with 15 soldiers, was guarding the miners who were attempting to enter the pits of the Mahan-Ellison Coal Co. at Stanfill, 9 miles southwest of Harlan, early this morning.

When Captain Hanberry attempted to protect the miners in the car he was shot down, then drew his pistol and returned the fire. The result of this armed attack upon defenseless miners and upon the National Guardsmen of the State of Kentucky was that Captain Hanberry, of Hopkinsville, Ky., shot through the abdomen, was seriously wounded and may die; four of the pickets were wounded, and one of them, Dock Caldwell, 31, union miner of Wilson-Berger, died in a Harlan hospital.

Daniel Noe, 37, of Elcomb, a striker, was shot through the abdomen. Noble Bowman, 29, of Chevrolet, was shot through the side. John Kennedy, 30, of Gulston, was wounded in the knee. Frank Laws, 39, of Crummies, had a fractured skull, and Pvt. W. T. Mason, of Hopkinsville, had eye lacerations. All of those injured, except the two members of the National Guard, were identified as members of the United Mine Workers and were members of the picket line.

So once more we have men belonging to John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers, following the advice of their officers; of Turnblazer, who might very well be charged with inciting the riot and with contributing to the death of Caldwell, defying the law, attempting to carry out Lewis' suggestion, bringing bloodshed and death to a community which otherwise would be peaceful.

Once before, in June of '22, Lewis wired his associates to treat men who were working as scabs, and his orders were followed at Herrin, Ill., by the death, by shooting and hanging, of more than 20 men.

Does he intend the same bloody killings to follow at Harlan? Are the dues which he might be able to collect by forcing these men into his union so precious to him that he will follow a course which will result in murder?

And are we to sit here, let the Labor Committee of the House continue its hearings, and do nothing to amend the act; to abolish the Board which does so much to encourage him in denying to workers the right to a job, the right to bargain through representatives of their own choosing?

Let us bring this so-called Wagner Act before the House for amendment. Let us do what we can to end this industrial strife, to free the American worker from the chains which Lewis is forging upon him.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a communication from Raymond G. Carroll, a newspaperman.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. CULKIN]?

There was no objection.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein a resolution passed by the Disabled American Veterans paying tribute to the memory of Bert E. Lord, formerly a Member of this body.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. CULKIN]?

There was no objection.

ALLOWANCES FOR EMPLOYEES OF VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE]?

There was no objection.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, during consideration of the independent offices appropriation bill, a great many Members were concerned with the provisions for the Veterans' Administration and the question of charges for quarters, subsistence, and laundry. The chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM], stated that the subcommittee had discussed this matter with General Hines, Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, and that steps would be taken to deal with the situation.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to place in the Appendix of the RECORD the letter from the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, stating the progress that has been made in this matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE]?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Friday next, after the disposition of business on the Speaker's table and at the conclusion of any special orders heretofore made, I may address the House for 20 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. VAN ZANDT]?

There was no objection.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, on last Monday I obtained unanimous consent to address the House on tomorrow for 20 minutes. I will be out of the city tomorrow and for this reason I desire to withdraw my request for tomorrow and renew the request that I may be permitted to address the House on next Tuesday for 20 minutes after the disposition of business on the Speaker's table.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. TAYLOR]?

There was no objection.

INCREASED PROSPERITY

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington [Mr. LEAVY]?

There was no objection.

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Speaker, I wonder what the critics of the New Deal and its spending program would say if they were to pick up one of the most conservative, yet one of the most reliable newspapers in America, and read headlines, such as the following:

Business Far Ahead of Stock Market.
National Income Up 11 Percent From Levels Year Ago.
New Investing Firm Starts Operations.
Bank Loans Register Substantial Gain During the Week.
Bond Prices Improve Fractions to Point on Broad Front.
Dividends Announced.
New York Gets Favorable Rate on Big Issue.
Remington Rand Sales Sharply Above 1938.
Steel Casting Orders Increased During May.
Daily Oil Output up 82,440 Barrels in Latest Week.
Huge Copper Exports Indicated by Heavy Foreign Buying.
Capital Store Sales 4.4 Percent Above 1938 in Half.
Wholesale Commodity Index Gains Slightly.
Big Gain Shown in United Fruit Earnings.
Studebaker Sales Set Best Mark Since 1928.
Output of Rectified Spirits Shows Gain.
Stock Leaders Score Advances Ranging Point or More.
Silver Prices up Fractionally at London.
Talcott Volume Hits $45,311,000 in Half.
Steady Climb Seen in Life Insurance Co. Assets.
B. & O. Loadings Hold Well Above a Year Ago.
Paper Output Rises Far Above 1938 Mark.

All of this appeared in the Washington Evening Star of last night, July 11, and will be found on pages A-12, 13, 14, 15. The Washington Evening Star is recognized as a Republican paper and no one has ever charged it with New Deal leanings. It is a dependable newspaper and throughout the Nation is recognized as one of America's greatest daily newspapers. A careful reading of each of the articles under the headlines just quoted, will show that the material in the articles in every way bears out the headline.

Mr. Speaker, the substance of what has just been given to the House can be found in similar form in the newspapers during the last 30 days, and will doubtless be found in the issue of the Washington Evening Star tonight. It is difficult to understand why the membership of this House, irrespective of party labels, and preconceived political notions, does not unanimously look toward those cheering, promising, and worthwhile reports on national recovery, instead of constantly seeking something to criticize and something to complain about. In other words, we would experience a rapid recovery if the Congress and the critics would show a willingness to do teamwork and become affirmative rather than negative.

I suggest that those who are skeptical read the financial pages of their daily papers, and if they are open-minded, they will become convinced that the New Deal is working. Signs of the times, as evidenced by that which I have just given you, clearly indicate that we are rapidly moving along the road of business recovery and toward a solution of our more fundamental economical and social problems. [Applause.]

AMENDMENT TO ACT OF JUNE 23, 1938 (52 STAT. 944)

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 4929) to amend the act of June 23, 1938 (52 Stat. 944), with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments and ask for a conference.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. VINSON]?

There was no objection, and the Chair appointed the following conferees: Mr. VINSON of Georgia, Mr. DREWRY, and Mr. MAAS.

GENERATION AND DISTRIBUTION OF ELECTRICITY AT BONNEVILLE (OREGON)

Mr. PIERCE of Oregon. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. PIERCE]?

There was no objection.

Mr. PIERCE of Oregon. Mr. Speaker, there is a question in the Pacific Northwest that seems to be agitating the whole section. I refer to the distribution of electricity being generated at Bonneville Dam. Public-utility districts are being organized or attempting to be organized. They are being opposed vigorously by the various private utilities. Many cities are being asked to renew private-utility franchises where the franchises do not run out for some time.

Mr. Speaker, I have made an extensive study of electric rates, not only in the Pacific Northwest but throughout the country. I am replying in this speech directly to our friend and colleague, the gentleman from Michigan, who some time ago gave some figures here showing why people were not investing in private-utility stocks today. I am answering those figures and showing, from my viewpoint, why people are not investing and the difficulties in the situation.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. PIERCE of Oregon asked and was given permission to revise and extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein a brief editorial dealing with mining.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arizona?

There was no objection.

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein a memorial tribute to our deceased colleague Hon. Ben Craven, of Arkansas.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. HART. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an address recently delivered by the Speaker of the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

AMENDMENT OF THE NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS ACT

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, I wish to reply especially to the insinuation of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN] in relation to the Labor Committee. No committee in this House has been more industrious, more fair, or more continuously in session than the Labor Committee of this House. We are hearing everyone who wants to be heard and who ought to be heard in relation to the Wagner Labor Relations Act. We are hearing everybody for it and everybody against it. When we have completed these hearings we will make a report to this House that will be to the liking of every man and every woman who wants a fair and honest report made.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KELLER. I will yield in just a minute.

Those who are making other statements are doing so from a lack of understanding, because there has not only been no idea of preventing the making of a report and no attempt to do so but there has been no lack of hearing everybody who wants to be heard, and we have asked that everybody who wants to be heard come and be heard and have their testimony heard fairly and squarely. I believe the will of the House is that it shall be done well and truly.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. KELLER. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. COX. But there has been no intention on the part of the committee to report anything during the present session of Congress.

Mr. KELLER. The gentleman is entirely wrong, as he generally is on labor subjects. Every man who is interested in labor ought to know that.

[Here the gavel fell.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and include therein a letter of Mr. T. J. Kidd, of Birmingham.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

COMMITTEE ON INDIAN AFFAIRS

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a subcommittee of the Committee on Indian Affairs be permitted to sit during the session of the House this afternoon.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record by inserting an article on the late Admiral Mark Bristol.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the Record.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I am glad to see you have returned to the Speaker's chair, and I hope you are well and happy. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. LEAVY] made a statement a few moments ago about the condition of the country. I should like to know why the gentleman did not make a statement about the 11,000,000 unemployed, the great number of strikes that are taking place—it does not look as if everything is happy and rosy in the country—and the reason why we do not change the Wagner Labor Relations Act and the National Labor Relations Board. I should also like to ask why we are going into the red since the 1st of July at the rate of $36,345,000 a day. You spent forty billion more than you received the past 6 years, and getting worse off each day. Where are you going to get the money? Do you ever think of that?

I wish to say to you, Mr. Speaker, we are glad to see you back. We hope you will take some action to cut down this reckless expenditure of Government funds, because we know you would have a great influence with the Congress in bringing that about.

[Here the gavel fell.]

CALENDAR WEDNESDAY

The SPEAKER. This is Calendar Wednesday. The Clerk will call the roll of committees.

AUTHORIZING THE SECRETARY OF WAR TO FURNISH CERTAIN MARKERS FOR CERTAIN GRAVES

Mr. MAY (when the Committee on Military Affairs was called). Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Military Affairs, I call up the bill (H. R. 985) to authorize the Secretary of War to furnish certain markers for certain graves, and ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain the bill before we grant this request?

Mr. MAY. This is a bill to authorize the Secretary of War to furnish certain markers for graves of persons who are entitled to have them. Under the statute they are bronze markers or stone markers.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. MAY. To what is the gentleman objecting?

Mr. HOBBS. I am objecting to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. MAY. Then I move, Mr. Speaker, that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is of the opinion that could not be permitted under the rules of the House. The gentleman may submit a unanimous-consent request, but not a motion.

The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent to consider the bill in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

Mr. HOBBS. I object, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. This bill is on the Union Calendar.

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 985) to authorize the Secretary of War to furnish certain markers for certain graves, with Mr. TARVER in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MAY. How much time is allowed under existing circumstances to each side for debate on this measure?

The CHAIRMAN. The time allowed under the rules of the House is 1 hour on each side.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the time for debate on this bill be limited to 30 minutes on each side.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FADDIS].

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Chairman, this bill (H. R. 985) is a bill which the various organizations of ex-service men throughout the United States have been very much interested in for several years.

As you are all aware, cemeteries, like other institutions, change with the times and during the past 10 or 15 years the perpetual-care cemetery has come into being. In these cemeteries upright tombstones are not allowed because they interfere with the mowing of the grass and the care of the grounds of the cemetery. In order that veterans may be buried in these perpetual-care cemeteries, it is necessary, if their graves are to receive a marker—and, of course, their graves must be marked—that the marker be of a variety that will lie flat on the ground or, in other words, it must be a flat marker.

The Federal Government has throughout the years been accustomed to furnishing upright markers for the graves of veterans. These upright markers are made in various parts of the United States to the extent of about 30,000 each year; in other words, there are about 30,000 veterans buried in the United States each year, to the families of whom the Government furnishes a marker. A stone marker will not give good service if placed flat on the ground, because the grain of the stone runs in the wrong direction, it weathers, and soon you are unable to tell the inscription on the stone due to deterioration.

In order that the graves of those buried in these perpetual-care cemeteries may be properly marked, it is necessary that they have a bronze marker. Therefore the veterans' organizations, believing that the veterans of the United States have as much right to be buried in a perpetual-care cemetery as they have in any other cemetery, and believing if the relatives of the veterans desire to bury them in a perpetual-care cemetery, they are entitled to bury them there and are entitled to a gravestone for that grave, have asked that a bill be introduced providing that the Government may furnish a bronze grave marker for these graves.

This bill has been brought up on the Consent Calendar several times and has been objected to by various Members of the House for the principal reason that they have within their districts an industry which at the present time furnishes these stone markers. I do not blame anyone for looking after the interests of his district, of course; but, after all, this is a rather small matter, because 30,000 gravestones distributed throughout the United States is not a very large item, and whatever percent of these gravestones are displaced by the bronze markers, or whatever percentage of that displacement would come out of the district of any man in this House, would certainly be immaterial.

The evidence before the committee shows that the stone marker furnished by the Government costs in the neighborhood of $7.51. Evidence was also presented to the committee that these bronze markers can be furnished at a cost of $7.25 each, and in the Senate bill a provision has been written that in no case shall the Government pay over $9 apiece for these grave markers.

We ask the favorable consideration of the Committee here today for this piece of legislation, because it is something that the veterans have been asking for for quite a long time. It is only a matter of simple justice that they should be furnished a gravestone that will permit them to be buried in perpetual-care cemeteries on the same basis as they are buried in any other cemetery.

If anyone has any questions now, I shall be pleased to answer them.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FADDIS. Yes.

Mr. COOPER. May I inquire whether an optional privilege of the next of kin or the relative of a deceased veteran may be exercised as to a choice of markers?

Mr. FADDIS. Yes; that is the object of the legislation.

Mr. COOPER. In other words, the family of the deceased veteran may exercise their choice as to which type or form of marker may be provided.

Mr. FADDIS. That is it exactly.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FADDIS. Yes.

Mr. MAY. I call the gentleman's attention to what is apparently an error in the language of the bill, which I think should be amended or corrected. The gentleman is familiar with the legislation—in fact, is the author of it. I refer to line 5, page 1, where the following language occurs, after providing what the Secretary of War shall furnish:

A flat stone grave marker, a standard flat bronze marker, and an upright stone grave marker or headstone.

I think the word "and" should be stricken out and the word "or" substituted.

Mr. FADDIS. Yes; that is correct. That is a mistake in the printing of the bill.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FADDIS. Yes.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Has the gentleman any idea of the cost of the grave marker now furnished by the Government?

Mr. FADDIS. About $7.51.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. If this bill becomes a law, will the Government be put to any additional expense in furnishing bronze grave markers?

Mr. FADDIS. As far as the furnishing of the marker is concerned, the testimony before the committee would indicate that the expense would be less. However, the Veterans' Bureau has advanced the argument their administrative expenses will be increased because of the passage of this legislation. I cannot see where that will be necessary, because it is not going to complicate their bookkeeping or their administrative methods. I think that is an unjust claim and that they are merely in opposition to the bill because they do not want to be disturbed in their present status, as far as we could tell from any evidence presented.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. The gentleman mentioned the veterans' organizations were actively behind this legislation. Is it not true that for years the several veterans' organizations have taken this up with their national conventions and unanimous adopted resolutions favoring these bronze markers?

Mr. FADDIS. Every convention for years has adopted this resolution.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FADDIS. Yes.

Mr. KELLER. Is there any reason why provision should not be made for an upright bronze marker as well as an upright stone marker?

Mr. FADDIS. I see no reason it should not, but it is not included in the bill. Of course, there would be one valid objection that an upright marker of bronze would be much more expensive than an upright stone marker.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FADDIS. Yes.

Mr. TREADWAY. Will this prevent the Secretary of War furnishing stone markers in any other cemeteries than those controlled by the Secretary of War?

Mr. FADDIS. No; it will not.

Mr. TREADWAY. I read from line 10:

Provided, That the Secretary of War shall furnish the upright stone marker authorized by section 4877 of the Revised Statutes for cemeteries under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of War.

Mr. FADDIS. Yes.

Mr. TREADWAY. Suppose a cemetery is not under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of War, must a bronze marker be used?

Mr. FADDIS. No; it is optional with the family of the deceased. The bronze markers are not used in the cemeteries under the control of the Secretary of War. The upright stone marker is used.

Mr. TREADWAY. That would refer to such a cemetery as Arlington, where there are thousands and thousands of upright stone markers.

Mr. FADDIS. Yes.

Mr. TREADWAY. And they are to be continued as such?

Mr. FADDIS. Yes.

Mr. TREADWAY. The only difference being under the provisions of this bill, that if the family of the deceased veteran prefers it, a bronze marker may be provided in a private cemetery?

Mr. FADDIS. That is it exactly.

Mr. TREADWAY. I am particularly interested to know about this detail and that is why I am asking the question.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 2 minutes additional.

Mr. TREADWAY. I am particularly interested because a contract has been held for many years with the Government by a marble concern in my district. It is not a monopoly, because there are other quarries that provide stone markers, but I would not like to see anything done, naturally, that would be inimical to the business that is being carried on.

Mr. FADDIS. That is true, and what small business will be displaced by the bronze marker will not amount to much in any section of the country.

Mr. TREADWAY. There is no danger of such a cemetery as Arlington being changed in its present method of markers?

Mr. FADDIS. No, sir; because they will undoubtedly continue the present style of marker in those cemeteries.

Mr. TREADWAY. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FADDIS. I yield.

Mr. BROOKS. This bill is designed, is it not, to permit the use of the type of marker in certain private cemeteries which the Secretary of War now is not able to furnish?

Mr. FADDIS. That is true.

Mr. BROOKS. In order to conform to the local rule of those cemeteries; is that correct?

Mr. FADDIS. That is correct.

Mr. BROOKS. Now, the veteran who dies, whose body would be placed in a private cemetery and whose family want it marked by a stone or a marker officially authorized by the United States Government is unable to obtain that marker and place it there; is that not right?

Mr. FADDIS. That is true at the present time without this legislation.

Mr. GEYER of California. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FADDIS. I yield.

Mr. GEYER of California. At least, in my section of the country practically all private cemeteries are using this type of marker. It seems to me this is just conforming to the trend of the times.

Mr. FADDIS. It is merely justice to the veteran.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, as far as I know, there is no opposition to the passage of this bill on the minority side, nor do I have any requests for time. I am glad to yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBBS], and I hope that with the conclusion of his remarks we can conclude the debate.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I also yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Alabama.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, of course none of us has any personal interest in this matter. I have the highest regard for the distinguished membership of the Committee on Military Affairs and its distinguished chairman, which committee, I understand, unanimously reported this bill. I did not think it should be considered under unanimous consent, because I am seriously of the opinion that the veterans themselves and their organizations have been misled by commercial propaganda of the bronze manufacturers, and that when they rightly understand the bill they will not desire that this extension of a so-called privilege should become law.

If the House, after debating this bill and after hearing the reasons against it, should pass the bill, it will be perfectly agreeable to all of us, I am sure.

For years and years and years there has been provision made for the marking of every grave of a veteran. A veteran of each war has a distinctive type of marker. After many experiments the division of the War Department that has this matter in charge, has come to the conclusion that the best marker, all things considered—beauty, dignity, markability, permanence, and price—is a white marble stone. They have an upright marker which is several feet high. They have a flat marker which can be set on a level with the sod. At any rate, no matter which type may be selected, whenever you see one of those characteristic white marble grave markers, you know that a grateful Government has set it there in honor of one of its heroes. It is distinctive. It is honorable. It is of a shape which differs from any other type of marker in any cemetery, and it can be used in any cemetery, because it can be put either flush with the ground or stand upright to conform with cemetery requirements. Each family is given choice of the kind preferred.

Now a word about the commercial possibilities in this matter. From time immemorial the marble producers of the Nation have furnished the material for these veterans' headstones free. All that they get is a sufficient amount to cut the stone and fashion it into the prescribed form which the Government has established for each of the various wars that have been fought, and the cost of polishing that marble and carving the service emblem or insignia and the name of the veteran as well as of the outfit in which he served.

Now, it is not of any serious commercial interest to the marble fraternity, but it is to the bronze fraternity. That commercial interest is the reason back of this bill.

I respectfully submit that it is an injustice to the soldiers of our several wars who lie buried all over this country, and whose dust hallows the ground in which they repose, to change our long-established and thoroughly satisfactory policy of our Government, and, for no weighty reason, give them an inferior marker. The distinguished chairman of the Committee on the Library of this House asked a very significant question: "Why not an upright marker in bronze?" Because, my dear friend, as the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FADDIS] so well said, its cost would be prohibitive. They do not propose to give a marker comparable in size, dignity, or distinction with the traditional marble ones. They do not propose to give anything that either identifies or honors. All they propose to do is to give a little thin bronze disc, or plate, those I have seen being about two or three times the size of a dollar, set in wrought concrete, flush with the ground. This bill would substitute a marker which does not mark for one that does; a manufactured product for a God-made stone, taken from the breast of the land the soldier loved; one that could be seen, or its inscription read, only with difficulty, for one that can be seen and its inscription read easily and from a distance, and which has proudly stood the test of time.

Throughout the years there has grown up around the grave markers, the headstones, that have been furnished by the Government a tradition; and the tradition is that nothing of a similar kind should ever be erected by anybody but the Government; that no private marble concern or monument manufacturer would ever imitate these designs, or make anything so near it as to detract from the distinction that the marble markers give to the graves of those we would honor. That is why it is standard; that is why it is used. Because of our desire to let every passerby know that this marks the grave of a hero. These are some of the reasons why the authorities in our Government having this matter in charge are opposed to this bill.

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOBBS. Gladly; for any question.

Mr. KEEFE. Is the gentleman aware of the fact that there are in this country hundreds of memorial parks, the most beautiful cemeteries in the country? I speak with some interest, because I happen to be the head of one of them. These memorial parks do not permit the erection of any memorials except those that lie flush with the ground.

Mr. HOBBS. Of course, I know of them.

Mr. KEEFE. There has been developed in this country a standard bronze memorial which is referred to in this bill as a standard flat bronze grave marker, which, in the minds of the people of this country, is far preferable to the type of marker the gentleman has described.

Would the gentleman deny the veteran who is buried in one of these cemeteries which does not permit the erection of an upright memorial because it would destroy the beauty of the park, deny him the right to have his grave marked with the type of memorial that is standard in that cemetery, made of bronze?

We have a number of veterans buried in the memorial park I am interested in, and they have a right to have their graves marked with the standard marker. When the gentleman says that the standard marker is just a little disk, the gentleman is very much in error; it is a beautiful marker, one which permits the erection of a flag or star upon the marker—a marker far superior in beauty to these cold marble slabs we see in these other cemeteries.

Mr. KELLER. How large is this marker?

Mr. KEEFE. It is about 28 inches long. It sets flush with the ground and is embedded in 3 feet of concrete, anchored into it with bronze anchors. It is a standard marker.

Mr. HOBBS. I shall be pleased to answer the gentleman's questions.

I am perfectly familiar with the rules of the cemeteries the gentleman has described. There is nothing in those rules that would proscribe the use of a marble marker set flush with the ground. There may have been a change in the design of the bronze marker since the last ones I saw, but you cannot for any such amount as $9 get anything in bronze that is really handsome and in keeping with the dignity which I believe, and which many of us think, should go with the marking of the graves of our veterans.

As far as the proposed bronze marker is concerned, except for the fixtures or gadgets the gentleman described, the grave might as well be unmarked, for there is nothing about it to call attention to the fact that there lies a veteran. The same gadgets could just as easily be placed on marble markers, no doubt.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOBBS. It gives me pleasure to yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. The gentleman from Alabama in his remarks stated that veterans' organizations are being misled. Does the gentleman realize that the veteran organizations at their national conventions year after year discussed and thoroughly analyzed this problem based on their own experiences back home? Does not the gentleman feel his charge to the effect they are being misled is erroneous at this time?

Mr. HOBBS. No, sir; I do not think so. I think that the veterans' organizations have based all of their considerations of this measure upon an unsound premise, to wit: That marble markers could not be used in certain cemeteries, and that therefore, unless bronze was used, the graves of veterans in those cemeteries would be unmarked. This is not so. There may be isolated cases, but the rule is otherwise. Nor do I think the veterans' organizations have taken into account the reasons for marble advanced by the Government in support of its time-honored policy.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That notwithstanding any provision of existing law, the Secretary of War is directed to furnish a flat stone grave marker, a standard flat bronze grave marker, and an upright stone grave marker or headstone for the grave of any deceased person for which the Secretary of War is authorized to furnish a marker or headstone. Either of the above shall be furnished at the option of the relative or representative of the deceased war veteran: Provided, That the Secretary of War shall furnish the upright stone marker authorized by section 4877 of the Revised Statutes for cemeteries under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of War.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MAY: Page 1, line 5, strike out the word "and" and insert the word "or."

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, while rising technically in opposition to the amendment for the purpose of gaining the floor, I really rise in support of the bill, because I have had some personal experience with veterans' organizations in reference to this particular proposition.

I feel that a thing of this sort should be separated from a commercial proposition. It is something entirely too hallowed to be dealt with in commercial figures at all.

The real question, to my mind, is what the veteran's family really wants in the nature of a marker. In my section of the country we had some of these private burial parks which prohibit the use of upright markers as prescribed by the United States Government and as allowed by Congress in cases of death of veterans. As the situation is now, Mr. Chairman, when a veteran dies, if his family desires his body to repose in one of these burial parks, the family is immediately confronted with the rules of the park and the question immediately arises as to whether the Government marker can be used. Oftentimes these veterans' organizations have found that the rules will not permit the use of the upright Government markers. I think this is most unfortunate in those cases where a veteran's family desires the use of an official Government marker, but the rules of the cemetery will not permit its use on account of elevation and other factors.

This bill, in my opinion, will relieve that situation. It will give the family of the veteran the option which the family deserves and is entitled to and which will conform also to the rules of the cemetery.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROOKS. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. The standard bronze grave marker being used today by the several veterans' organizations is nothing more than a replica of the World War veterans' discharge button. Is it not true this bronze marker is furnished free by the veterans' organizations where the use of a Government headstone is not permissible due to cemetery regulations? In other words, the veterans' organizations furnish the bronze marker when the Government should and will if this bill becomes a law.

Mr. BROOKS. Yes: It is a small marker about this size.

Mr. HARE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROOKS. I yield to the gentleman from South Carolina.

Mr. HARE. Is there any reason why this new design could not be furnished in marble as well as in bronze?

Mr. BROOKS. It may be possible. I know nothing about that. In answer to the gentleman's question, may I say that I believe the veteran's family ought to be given the option and should be permitted to receive a type of marker that will conform to the rules of the ordinary cemetery.

Mr. HARE. I understand that; but the point I want to get at is this: Is there any reason why a changed design could not be perfected so that it would meet the requirements of these cemeteries, a design in marble? I see no reason why we should change from marble to bronze.

Mr. BROOKS. I hold no brief for either marble or bronze. I am speaking today on behalf of the family of the veteran which wants an official grave marker at that grave, and I think they are entitled to that marker.

Mr. HARE. I agree with the gentleman.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HARE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I am very much interested in these markers, because I recall several years ago when I had the honor and distinction of cooperating with the gentleman from California, Mr. Barbour, in providing markers for the first time in history to the graves of Confederate soldiers. That agreement was reached between the gentleman from California, who happened to be the son of a Union officer, and myself, who happened to be the son of a private Confederate soldier. I always thought it was a gracious and commendable act on the part of the Government to provide these markers, and I think they ought to be continued. I have no objection whatever to providing a suitable marker to mark the resting place of the heroes of our wars, and I can see the wisdom of providing a marker that will meet the rules and regulations of various cemeteries. But the question that arises in my mind is whether it would be possible to make a marker out of marble that would meet these rules and regulations. If so, I think it would be better to enact legislation giving the War Department authority to change the design of marble markers so it will comply with such rules and regulations. To go ahead and change from marble to bronze, I think possibly we might be doing something that would show partiality to those who are to come after as compared with those who have gone before, and my primary reason in rising at this time is to inquire whether or not it might be possible for the War Department under appropriate legislation to prepare a design in marble that would meet the requirements of the cemeteries referred to and not change to a more expensive material, such as bronze.

Mr. KEEFE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARE. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. KEEFE. May I say to the gentleman, to start with, that there are many cemeteries in this country that have been in existence for a number of years which absolutely prohibit the erection of a marble memorial. I mean by that large memorials. These marble stones do not stand the weather, they become broken, the inscriptions become obliterated in the process of time, they crack and chip.

Mr. HARE. May I ask this question: Would those rules prohibit the installation of a marble stone or monument the same size or the same design as bronze?

Mr. KEEFE. Absolutely, because the bronze memorials are required to rest flush with the ground. In a park-plan cemetery, you cannot spoil the beauty of the cemetery by the erection of every type of memorial; consequently, if you take a marble slab, put an inscription upon it, lay it flat on the ground, the first time a freeze takes place, such as up in my country, your marble slab would become cracked and broken and the inscription would be gone in no time. It is just impracticable. It cannot be done.

Mr. HARE. Do I understand the gentleman to answer my question by saying it would not be possible to arrange a marble design that would serve the same purpose as the bronze design?

Mr. KEEFE. It would not. In the cemeteries with which I am associated, we have a rule and regulation prohibiting the use of that type of marble in the cemetery.

Mr. HARE. Does the gentleman think it would be wise in this bill to confine these markers to cemeteries where they object to marble?

Mr. KEEFE. The gentleman will observe that this bill does provide that the Secretary of War shall furnish this standardized, upright little marble marker in all the national cemeteries which are under the control of the Secretary of War. They may still use that type in all those cemeteries.

Mr. HARE. Another thing I am afraid of is that if you use bronze in place of marble the families of deceased veterans who have marble markers may complain by saying that Congress is discriminating between those who are already dead and those who may die hereafter. Of course, if there is to be an option and there will be no danger of this criticism I can see no valid reason for not enlarging the authority of the War Department to place such markers in cemeteries where the present designed marker is prohibited, provided the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FADDIS] is correct in saying the cost of the two types will be approximately the same.

The pro forma amendments were withdrawn.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAY].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with an amendment, with the recommendation that the amendment be agreed to and that the bill, as amended, do pass.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and, the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. TARTER, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 985) to authorize the Secretary of War to furnish certain markers for certain graves, had directed him to report the bill back to the House with an amendment, with the recommendation that the amendment be agreed to and that the bill, as amended, do pass.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill and amendment to final passage.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The bill was passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ACQUISITION OF ADDITIONAL LAND FOR MILITARY PURPOSES

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Military Affairs, I call up the bill (H. R. 5735) to authorize the acquisition of additional land for military purposes, and ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to acquire, in such order or priority as he may determine, title to additional land, or interest therein, or rights pertaining thereto, to the extent of the approximate areas hereinafter set forth, for the establishment, enlargement, and essential improvement of the following military reservations, posts, and facilities:

Fort Ethan Allen Artillery Range, Vt., 4,451 acres.
Antiaircraft firing range, Mohave Desert, north of Barstow and Baker, Calif., 749,440 acres.
Fort Bliss, Tex., 51,300 acres.
Fort Devens, Mass., 6,448 acres.
Fort Dix, N. J., 1,750 acres.
Fort Knox, Ky., 51,342 acres.
Leon Springs, Tex., 13,253 acres.
Camp McCoy, Wis., 1,000 acres.
Fort George G. Meade, Md., 10,000 acres.
Pine Camp, N. Y., 1,670 acres.
Seventh Corps Area Training Center, south-central Iowa, 40,000 acres.

Sec. 2. In order to accomplish the purposes of this act there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War, the sum of $5,000,000, approximately one-half of which is authorized to be appropriated in each of the fiscal years 1941 and 1942.

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Speaker, I plan to offer an amendment to one item in this bill. I am opposed to that item which refers to the acquisition of 40,000 acres of land in the State of Iowa for the use of the Seventh Corps Area. You will find that item on page 2, line 17. My amendment would strike out the words "south central Iowa" and insert in lieu thereof the words "northeastern Nebraska."

In order to explain the amendment to the House and acquaint the Members with the true situation, I may say that as long ago as 1923, at a time when General Duncan was the commanding general of the Seventh Corps Area, the War Department requested an investigation of a suitable site for a training field for the Seventh Corps Area, and an investigation was made. General Duncan caused a careful investigation to be made in the State of Nebraska, recommending to the War Department that an area of about 40,000 acres of land located near the towns of Norfolk, Pierce, and Battle Creek met the essential requirements "better than any other ground that could be acquired, having the advantage of an eastern location." The site is near the geographical center of the Seventh Corps Area and very satisfactory and suitable for a firing range for artillery of all calibers. It is centrally located, has adequate and pure water, and marginal land is procurable cheaply, without involving the withdrawal of good agricultural land from cultivation. There are railroads and wonderful highway facilities. In view of the fact that the former commander of the Seventh Corps Area recommended this particular field in Nebraska, I am constrained to offer this amendment.

After General Duncan made these recommendations, I was in communication with the late Secretary of War, Mr. Dern, who sent me a letter dated May 16, 1935, indicating that it was considered at that particular time there was no necessity for an artillery range or a training field in the Seventh Corps Area. I personally talked with Mr. Dern about this field. However, incident to the current year's expansion of the national-defense program, the War Department has suddenly requested legislative authorization for the acquisition of land at about a dozen points throughout the United States. They suddenly disregard General Duncan's recommendations and select higher-priced land in Iowa.

Mr. HARRINGTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEFAN. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. HARRINGTON. In what part of Nebraska is this area located?

Mr. STEFAN. Northeastern Nebraska.

Mr. HARRINGTON. What counties?

Mr. STEFAN. Pierce, Madison, and probably part of Antelope.

Mr. HARRINGTON. How many acres would be set aside for this purpose?

Mr. STEFAN. About 40,000 acres.

I may say to the gentleman from Iowa, who is very much interested in the acquisition of the Iowa land, that this land in Nebraska as recommended by General Duncan can be bought much more cheaply than similar land can be bought in Iowa. In my opinion, General Duncan knows best. If you procure this land in Iowa, the price of the land will go up. You watch the price of that land go up in Iowa if this bill is passed. I predict you will be forced to pay $40 to $50 an acre for that land in Iowa, maybe more. This Congress is entitled to know what is being done here, and I will not yield to any man here my right to fight for my district. Here are some facts you should know. This is an omnibus bill. That means that this Iowa field is not in it alone. It contains authorization for the acquisition of land for 10 other fields. I am not concerned so much about those other fields in which I know a score of Members here are interested because these fields are in their districts. It means that if they vote against this bill they would vote against all of the fields included in the bill. It is one way we have here to push through certain legislation and gain support from Members who are directly interested. Let me assure you the amendment I am introducing will not affect any of you gentlemen, nor will it affect any of your particular fields. It will only affect the Iowa location. If you vote for my amendment it will mean that the War Department will put the training field in northeast Nebraska, where General Duncan and other Army officers, after a careful study of many years, said it should go. A location which they decided after many years of serious study said was the best possible field for the training of the Seventh Corps Area.

Do not take my word for this statement. Let me quote from General Duncan's own report. I quote:

(1) Search has been made throughout the corps area for a tract of land that could be used for mobilization and training of field artillery under war conditions and that could also be used as a general replacement training center as provided in War Department mobilization plans.

(2) Such a tract must meet the following requirements:

(a) Sufficient size and character for use as a firing range by artillery of all calibers.

(b) Tract should be centrally located within the corps area and have good railroad connections.

(c) Adequate and pure water supply available, and possible means of sewage disposal.

(d) Land should be of poor or sand soil so as to be cheap in price and to avoid withdrawal of good agricultural land from cultivation.

(3) Land has been found in eastern Nebraska which will, in my opinion, meet the above requirements. The land is located approximately 10 miles from the town of Norfolk, Nebr., and from 5 to 7 miles from the smaller towns of Pierce and Battle Creek. There are three railroad lines or systems running into Norfolk from five directions, viz, Chicago & North Western, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Oregon, and Union Pacific. There would be no difficulty in running spur tracks from these lines onto the tract for mobilization purposes. In time of peace, a camp at the southeastern end of the reservation could be supplied by trucks from Norfolk.

(4) On account of its railroad connections and central location, Omaha was designated as the replacement training center for this corps area, but considerable ground will be required for such a training center and all land in the vicinity of Omaha is very expensive, so it is far more preferable to obtain a comparatively inexpensive tract of land which could be used for general training purposes for artillery and other arms in time of peace and for general replacement training center in time of war.

With this foregoing report General Duncan submitted to the War Department blueprint maps showing the proposed tract of land, also report of water supply, and General Duncan summarized his investigation as follows:

I have examined the whole tract myself and believe it meets the requirements above listed better than any other ground that could be acquired, having advantage of eastern location.

This language represented his evaluation of the tract of land in the vicinity of Norfolk, Nebr. Since that report by General Duncan, I have no information that the War Department is opposed to the Nebraska site. But without giving real reasons for its action the War Department is proceeding in this manner, in an omnibus bill, with the acquisition of land for the same purpose located in Iowa, where we are told the land is more costly and not as suitable as the Nebraska land.

I hope Members of this House have the picture now and that you will support my amendment. I do in no way cast any reflections on the experts of the War Department who have written this bill. I assume they are military experts and know what kind of a field they should select. But I give you the word of Army experts who have already made the investigation and who have made their report on the Nebraska field in writing. I could give you many verbal statements I have received from other Army experts on these fields, but I dare not do that. So I merely quote from written statements. This bill is going to put the Army in the land-buying business, and we people from Iowa and Nebraska know that the Iowa land in question is going to cost more than the once-recommended Nebraska land. If the Army experts say the Nebraska site is suitable for the purpose required and the Nebraska land is cheaper, why not consider the taxpayer and buy the Nebraska land previously decided upon? I ask my colleagues from Iowa to be considerate of my earnest endeavor to secure for my district this Army site, which we have worked for during the past 10 years and which has once been approved. I ask my Nebraska colleagues to join me in this fight for Nebraska, and I ask the other Members of the House to be fair in considering this measure and vote for the amendment which I shall presently offer. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment.

Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Members of the House realize that you are providing for the purchase of nearly 1,000,000 acres of ground under this bill? That is just what you are doing, authorizing an appropriation of $5,000,000 to buy nearly 1,000,000 acres of ground. I predict if you buy this 1,000,000 acres of ground you will be back here increasing this authorization from year to year until it will jump to about $25,000,000. Further, you are not taking into consideration the cost of putting this ground into condition for military purposes, and that, too, will mean many, many millions.

It was only a few years ago a movement was on foot to close up many Army posts in this country. As I recall, a board of officers recommended that a large number of camps in this country be closed, but we never closed them.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. In just a moment.

You have scattered all over this country, especially in the West, camps that should no longer be in existence. We should combine the activities of our Army in a few places rather than increase the size of these posts.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. I only have 5 minutes; the gentleman can get in under the 5-minute rule.

There is nothing in this report to indicate the cost of this land. I do not know whether any figures have been submitted to the committee, but I say you are treading on very dangerous ground when you give the War Department power to contract for the purchase of nearly a million acres of ground adjoining existing Army posts. The ground is not valueless when it is right alongside of an existing Army post. I know this because there is a large post in the county adjoining my city, St. Louis. I insist you are never going to buy this amount of ground for the authorization contained in this bill. This is one of those omnibus bills where you put them all in one measure so that the Members from all the States affected will be voting for the bill, because if they vote against one item they will be voting against their own provision.

I think each authorization should have stood on its own bottom, and every one of them should have been in here separately, after we had an estimate from the War Department as to the cost of the additional ground of each camp, as well as the need for it. That is the proper way to legislate.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. THOMASON. If the gentleman will read the hearings on this bill (H. R. 5735) he will find that the officers of the War Department representing what is known as the land-acquisition board, gave the exact price and need for every tract that is proposed in this bill.

Mr. COCHRAN. May I ask the gentleman whether or not the Government has an option on the ground?

Mr. THOMASON. Not a foot of it that I know about.

Mr. COCHRAN. You bet the Government has not, and as soon as the owners find out this bill is law up goes the price.

Mr. THOMASON. The Government does not have to buy it because the land is left for appraisal by a board appointed by the Federal judge or the United States attorney. Condemnation suits would be filed.

Mr. COCHRAN. What happened to the bill under which you authorized purchase of additional land at West Point? You told them they could buy 15,000 acres, for which, I believe, they got another $1,500,000.

Mr. FISH. That is very valuable land up there.

Mr. COCHRAN. What happened?

Mr. FISH. They ought to have had twice that amount.

Mr. COCHRAN. Yes. Instead of getting the 15,000 acres for the authorization you got about 5,000 acres, and that is exactly what is going to happen here. They are coming back to ask you for more money to buy the land at West Point if they want the entire 15,000 acres.

Mr. FISH. They ought to have twice as much or three times as much. That land is in my district.

Mr. THOMASON. The gentleman cannot complain when he states there is an authorization of $5,000,000 to buy 1,000,000 acres of land.

Mr. COCHRAN. Oh, if I thought it would buy the 1,000,000 acres of land, I doubt if I would say a word about the bill. Mr. Speaker, I do not like omnibus bills. You get better legislation when you consider each item on its merits. I doubt the wisdom of passing this bill in its present form.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Speaker, I offer the amendment to which I have referred.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. STEFAN: On page 2, lines 17 and 18, after the comma in line 17, strike out the words "South Central Iowa" and insert in lieu thereof the words "Northeastern Nebraska."

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, I do not want to be understood as trying to be the arbiter between our friends from Nebraska and Iowa on where the training area for that corps area should be. I feel that is up to them and up to the War Department to select the proper land; but in answer to my able friend from Missouri I would like to give you the exact status of this matter as shown by the record. This bill is an authorization—and that is all it is—for $5,000,000 to buy additional land at 11 Army posts scattered throughout the country, and I believe there is not a Member of this House who does not have implicit confidence in the judgment and the ability and the fairness of Gen. Malin Craig, who is just about to retire as Chief of Staff. General Craig and the War Department officials were unanimous in bringing in this recommendation which appears here in the report, and they say that an actual necessity exists for the purchase of this additional land at these 11 posts.

Mr. LELAND M. FORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMASON. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LELAND M. FORD. Is it not a fact, in connection with much of this land in the western country, that it is already owned by the United States; that it can be segregated and withdrawn from entry and thereby come to the Federal Government with little or no cost?

Mr. THOMASON. Yes; and in the gentleman's own State of California the hearings on this matter show that a considerable portion of land selected is owned by the Government in the Mojave Desert and much of it that is not owned by the Government can be bought for 30 cents an acre; and may I say to my friend from Missouri that this bill seeks to do the very thing he argues for, and that is to get rid of a lot of the undesirable posts, so as to provide for modern-day guns and training. In other words, a whole lot of this bill carries with it provisions for antiaircraft. That takes a big country. It requires a lot of cheap land where no people reside. The result is that the War Department, acting through its land-acquisition board, went out and made a study of the entire country and came back with this recommendation. I invite the attention of Members to the rather exhaustive hearings had on this bill that show the estimated cost of each piece of land and the necessity for it.

Mr. HARTER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMASON. Yes.

Mr. HARTER of Ohio. At the instance of the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. DEMPSEY], who has been called from the Chamber, I rise to ask the gentleman whether any of the land authorized to be purchased is included in the State of New Mexico?

Mr. THOMASON. No land in New Mexico is authorized to be purchased by this bill. It does authorize the purchase of land up to the New Mexico line, and high officials of the War Department express the hope that the time is not far distant when they may use some of the public lands in the State of New Mexico for their training purposes or antiaircraft and I join in that hope. The gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. DEMPSEY] is one of my best friends. He and I work in complete harmony in all matters affecting the mutual welfare of El Paso and west Texas. I hope to work out an arrangement with him and the War Department together with other State and Federal officials in New Mexico by which we may develop one of the greatest training areas for the Army in all the country. We have the climate. We have the cheap land, and we have the great Fort Bliss as a base for supplies and operations.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMASON. In a moment.

Mr. TERRY. Mr. Speaker, I notice on page 2 there is an item for an antiaircraft firing range in the Mohave Desert by the purchase of 749,440 acres of land. Last year an appropriation was made for the purchase of land known as Muroc Lake area in California for the purpose of bombing practice by the Air Corps. This was represented to be a large desert area of sufficient size to enable the Air Corps to have bombing practice. I would like to know whether or not that Muroc Lake region could also be used as an antiaircraft firing range.

Mr. THOMASON. I regret to say that I cannot answer the gentleman from Arkansas but the gentleman from California [Mr. COSTELLO] can, and I yield to him for that purpose.

Mr. COSTELLO. That is not of sufficient size to allow them to use antiaircraft guns. In other words, the range of fire is so great that they need a tremendous area designated here of over 700,000 acres.

Mr. TERRY. Does the gentleman remember the size of the Muroc Lake area?

Mr. COSTELLO. Approximately 20 miles square.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMASON. Yes.

Mr. COCHRAN. The gentleman invited attention to the hearings. I notice in the hearings there is an item for the purchase of 4,451 acres at Fort Ethan Allen artillery range in Vermont. The gentleman from Vermont [Mr. PLUMLEY] was on the stand, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FADDIS] asked him the question what land is worth in that country, and the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. PLUMLEY] replied:

Well, our first price is about $500 an acre, but we will cut it for cash.

Mr. THOMASON. I imagine that same sort of condition existed when the gentleman from Missouri was getting the land for the Jefferson Memorial in St. Louis.

Mr. COCHRAN. The gentleman from Missouri did not get the land for the Jefferson Memorial.

Mr. THOMASON. My reply was made in jest, and I withdraw it. The first price was pretty high, but I will have to ask the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. LAMBERTSON] to give attention to that.

Mr. COCHRAN. We are not talking about the Jefferson Memorial now, we are talking here about a bill where you are authorizing an appropriation of $5,000,000 to buy land which I insist is far below the final cost if all the land mentioned in the bill is acquired.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes more.

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and seventy-eight Members—not a quorum.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 123]

Barnes	Englebright	Kleberg	Rabaut
Bloom	Evans	Larrabee	Reed, Ill.
Bolton	Fay	Lemke	Sasser
Buck	Fenton	McKeough	Schulte
Buckley, N. Y.	Fernandez	McMillan, Thos. S.	Simpson
Cartwright	Fitzpatrick	Maas	Smith, Conn.
Casey, Mass.	Flannery	Maciejewski	Smith, Ill.
Claypool	Folger	Marcantonio	Smith, Ohio
Cluett	Grant, Ala.	Martin, Colo.	Smith, Va.
Connery	Hartley	Martin, Ill.	Somers, N. Y.
Curley	Holmes	Mitchell	Sullivan
Dies	Kee	Murray	Sumners, Tex.
Ditter	Kelly	Myers	Thomas, N. J.
Eaton, Calif.	Kennedy, Michael	Norton	White, Idaho
Eaton, N. J.	Keogh	O'Toole
Edmiston	Kirwan	Pfeifer

The SPEAKER. On this roll call 368 Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

Without objection, further proceedings under the call will be dispensed with.

There was no objection.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for an additional 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, I just want the membership to understand that this bill was not initiated or requested by the Military Affairs Committee or any member of it. This bill came to the committee from the personal hands of General Craig, Chief of Staff. It was introduced at his request. I invite a reading of his message to the Committee on Military Affairs, which explains the situation far better and more forcefully than I or any member of the committee could do.

As I said, this provides for an authorization of only $5,000,000, with the War Department given full authority to spend all or any part of it, as it sees fit, on these different acquisitions, based on what they regard as the proper priorities.

I fully appreciate the position of the able gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COCHRAN] when he says that land prices might be advanced, but that is true every time the Government undertakes to buy land for a post office or every time a rivers and harbors bill is passed, or every time a national park is established, but that does not necessarily mean that simply because the owners of some land might start out by asking a large price the Government will buy it at that price, as all of you know, when the post-office sites are bought. It was testified in these hearings that if the War Department and the owners of the land cannot agree upon a fair and reasonable price the Federal court, acting through either the judge or the United States attorney, shall appoint disinterested appraisers. Condemnation suits would follow. Not only that, but the Appropriations Committee, of which the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. ENGEL] is a member, will also have a hand in that.

Mr. ENGEL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMASON. I yield.

Mr. ENGEL. Does the estimate of the War Department, $5,000,000, cover the estimated cost of the entire tract, or is it only the partial cost?

Mr. THOMASON. No. If the gentleman will read the testimony of the two officers who appeared representing the War Department and who are members of the Land Acquisition Board, Major Myers and Major Hodge, he will find that the appraisals which they have obtained on each one of these sites will not make a total of more than $5,000,000.

Mr. ENGEL. That is, the $5,000,000 authorized here will, if the War Department purchases this land at the estimated cost, purchase the entire tract?

Mr. THOMASON. Yes. I will say that the Land Acquisition Board of the War Department says it feels confident it can acquire all of this land for the $5,000,000.

I repeat what I said in my opening statement, that this is a new day and a new age in warfare. This is a day of aviation, of antiaircraft, so the result is that they need large bodies of cheap lands. I believe the records show that much of the tract which they propose to buy in California is worth about 30 cents an acre, and they propose to buy some land in my part of the country where the cost will be on an average of from $5 to $15 an acre. It is not high-priced land.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMASON. I yield.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. Does not the gentleman think that the purchase of 40,000 acres of land in south central Iowa will take approximately $4,000,000 alone?

Mr. THOMASON. I am not familiar with values in that section. I do not know.

I yield to the lady from Massachusetts.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. In the case of Fort Devens, in my district, it is an absolute necessity, because at the present time there is no tract large enough for target practice. They are likely to kill people if they do not have the proper amount of land.

Mr. THOMASON. They lady is absolutely right. This is a day of long-range guns and aviation and antiaircraft, so that they cannot do business on these small tracts of land.

Mr. SHORT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMASON. I yield.

Mr. SHORT. This bill is not only desirable but it is absolutely necessary?

Mr. THOMASON. That is true. I agree with the gentleman. That is exactly what General Craig said, and I trust General Craig as much or more than any man with whom I have ever come in contact in the United States Army. He is a credit to the Army and his country. This country has no finer citizen. He says it is a necessity. [Applause.]

Mr. SHORT. I think we will all agree with that statement, and I trust the Members on the floor will not object to this bill.

Mr. THOMASON. General Craig and his assistants testify this land is needed. This bill came out of the Military Affairs Committee of the House with a unanimous report. I do hope that you do not begin amending the bill. If there is anything wrong about it, let it go to conference. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I offer a substitute amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska as a substitute for the amendment offered by Mr. STEFAN: On page 2, lines 17 and 18, strike out "south central Iowa" and insert "Iowa or Nebraska."

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I offer this amendment for the purpose of making it possible for the War Department to save a few million dollars in the acquisition of land. I think all will agree that in south central Iowa the land would be worth at least $100 an acre.

Mr. GILCHRIST. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. Briefly.

Mr. GILCHRIST. Not a foot of land could be got for that price in that area.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, my colleague the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. STEFAN] offered an amendment to strike out "south central Iowa" and substitute in lieu thereof "northeastern Nebraska." My amendment seeks to make it possible for the War Department to select this 40,000 acres of land either in Nebraska or Iowa as they see fit. My reason for that is this: The War Department should give some consideration to the thousands of acres of submarginal land that has been purchased by the Resettlement Administration near Fort Robinson, Nebr., up in the northwestern part of the State, where it could get the 40,000 acres of land at a very small cost. This area is served by two railroads and is an ideal location for a training center for the Seventh Corps Area.

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. I yield.

Mr. STEFAN. The reason for my writing "northeastern Nebraska" into my amendment was because the former commander of the Seventh Corps Area had recommended "northeastern Nebraska." My amendment would take in Iowa and also Nebraska. What assurance would we have that the War Department would give Nebraska any further consideration, in view of the fact that they have given no consideration to the recommendation of the former commander of the Seventh Corps Area?

I do not believe the gentleman's amendment is satisfactory.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. Under my amendment there will be an opportunity for Nebraska to be given some consideration; otherwise the bill provides the 40,000 acres must be purchased in "south central Iowa." You know and I know that 40,000 acres of land in south central Iowa is going to cost almost as much as provided in this bill for all the projects. Let us give the War Department an opportunity to investigate the possibilities to use some of this land already owned by the Government in Nebraska. The War Department will make the final selection in the end, anyway.

Let me say further that Fort Robinson, Nebr., is one of the outstanding remount stations in this country. At the present time over 23,000 acres belong to that military reservation, and near the reservation are some 30,000 acres of land that have been purchased by the Federal Government under the submarginal land purchase program that would be available without any cost to the War Department.

Mr. Speaker, I hope this amendment will be adopted in the interest of economy.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Speaker, ordinarily no one has higher regard for the War Department and its recommendations than I. However, I submit that the substitute amendment proposed by my colleague, the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. COFFEE], meets the situation and should have the serious and favorable consideration of this body.

This bill calls for the acquisition of 40,000 acres of land for training purposes, and it binds the War Department to the selection of that land in south central Iowa. With all respect to the War Department I submit to this body that the War Department must not have taken into consideration all of the facts when it made this recommendation. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LeCOMPTE] who appeared before the Military Affairs Committee, as you will see from the hearings, indicated that he did not believe that the War Department could acquire 40,000 acres of land in Iowa within the limit of the funds available for use in the purchase of land by the War Department in this legislation.

This bill does not affect the district I represent because there is not available land in that district. I speak in support of the substitute amendment of my colleague and I hope it will be adopted. In the State of Nebraska we have many areas where 40,000 acres of land in one body could be acquired and could be used to great advantage for military purposes under the provisions of this act. I have had some practical experience with military training areas in this country. During the war as an artillery officer I was stationed for some time at the artillery school of fire in the training area at Fort Sill, Okla. I think I know something about what it takes to fit the needs of the War Department for military training grounds, and I know that they selected Fort Sill, Okla., because of its varied terrain and the varied character of that land. I know that in parts of Nebraska we have that identical type of land which can be acquired at a very reasonable cost.

This is not a fight between the State of Nebraska and the State of Iowa. It is merely an occasion when this Congress has the right to indicate to the War Department that it believes that Department should exercise discretion and that it should choose between the lands offered and available in the State of Iowa and in the State of Nebraska which are both in the Seventh Corps Area.

Nebraska offers land which can be purchased within the costs outlined and within the appropriation authorized, but I submit Iowa does not, as the record of the hearings shows.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. I shall be pleased to yield to my colleague from Nebraska.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. I submit that land around Fort Robinson, Nebr., can be purchased at a price of approximately $5 an acre.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. I thank my colleague for his contribution. The gentleman's substitute amendment affords an opportunity to the Congress to exercise economy and to save a great deal of money by following the plan suggested by him rather than the recommendation of the War Department of limiting itself rigidly to the purchase of land in south central Iowa.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. May I ask the gentleman if the purpose is to limit the discretion of the Army officers to the States of Nebraska and Iowa only?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. I think in this instance it would be well to do that for the reason they are adjoining States. The War Department has made a general indication of the location it desires and it would be proper to allow the Department to choose land in either of the two States.

Mr. CURTIS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. CURTIS. May I make the observation that generally speaking in this territory the further east you go the more valuable the land becomes.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Yes. As you go farther east the cost of the land becomes higher and higher, and a smaller amount of land may be purchased for the same amount of money.

Mr. CURTIS. If the gentleman will yield further, may I call attention to the statement of General Duncan, when he said in his report:

On account of its railroad connections and central location, Omaha was designated as the replacement training center for this corps area, but considerable ground will be required for such a training center and all land in the vicinity of Omaha is very expensive, so it is far more preferable to obtain a comparatively inexpensive tract of land which could be used for general training purposes for artillery and other arms in time of peace and for general replacement training center in time of war.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. That is correct. Omaha is the headquarters of the Seventh Corps Area. As I have said, there is not available land in the Second Congressional District of Nebraska in which Omaha is located. However, there is available land in other parts of Nebraska which suits the purposes of this bill and the intention of the War Department. I trust the amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska will be adopted.

Mr. LeCOMPTE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Speaker, the bill H. R. 5753, provides for training areas for the whole of the United States and to take out an area that has been selected and designated after careful survey by the War Department simply emasculates the bill. I am opposed to the substitute amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska, and I am opposed to the original amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. STEFAN].

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LeCOMPTE. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. I think the gentleman stated this was a bill providing for a training center for the whole of the United States. Is it not true this is for a training center for the Seventh Corps Area only?

Mr. LeCOMPTE. This provision is for the Seventh Corps Area. There are seven States in the Seventh Corps Area. At the present time there is no training area for troops stationed in the States of Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, Arkansas, the Dakotas, Nebraska, and Kansas, I believe. The War Department, after surveying the whole field, selected an area in south central Iowa, in Decatur County, overlapping slightly into Missouri, on account of several considerations.

There are paved highways already in existence from every direction and troops can be transported into this area at a minimum of expense. In addition to that, this point will be equidistant from all the principal Army posts. Fort Des Moines would be 68 miles; Fort Omaha, 175 miles; St. Louis about 300 miles; and Kansas City about 185 miles. The area was chosen because it has direct connection with Fort Snelling where are located a large number of troops in Minnesota. Not only is it true that there are transportation facilities direct to this proposed area from all points in the Seventh Corps Area, but it is also true that the existing railroad facilities would enable the movement of troops, artillery, and munitions from every direction—North, South, East, and West. I told the committee that land in Iowa could not be bought for $16 an acre. There is not any $16-an-acre land in Iowa, where we have the best agricultural region in the world, and the Government nor anyone else can buy Iowa land for $16 an acre. It is probably true that one acre of Iowa land will produce what a half dozen acres of the northwestern Nebraska land might produce.

Mr. STEFAN. How about northeast Nebraska?

Mr. LeCOMPTE. We will still be ahead on the production of corn and other agricultural products when the returns come in this fall.

Mr. Speaker, not only does this area have railroad and highway facilities, but the region generally will supply adequate feed, grain, and forage for all the animals which may be used by the War Department in moving the troops in and out for summer training.

Mr. HARRINGTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LeCOMPTE. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. HARRINGTON. Is not the reason this area was selected because a survey had been made by the Army engineers and they felt this was the most practical site?

Mr. LeCOMPTE. This was the ideal, practical site for the Seventh Corps Area. It would not do for any other area.

Mr. HARRINGTON. It is centrally located.

Mr. LeCOMPTE. Yes; it is centrally located. It is well supplied with railroad and highway facilities. We have an adequate water supply right in the region that has been approved by the State health board.

Mr. HARRINGTON. Is it not a further fact that if the land cannot be purchased, possibly it could be leased for 100 years or more?

Mr. LeCOMPTE. Yes; it might be possible to lease it.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. ENGLE. Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion. The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. ENGLE moves that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken out.

Mr. ENGLE. Mr. Speaker, I take this time to ask a few questions. As pointed out by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COCHRAN] this bill provides for the purchase of approximately 1,000,000 acres of land; in other words, an area involving approximately 1,500 square miles.

One item in the bill provides for the purchase of an anti-aircraft firing range in the Mojave Desert, consisting of nearly 1,200 square miles. I doubt very much, speaking from my experience on the War Department Subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee, that they will purchase this land for $5,000,000. Two years ago the War Department Subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee had before it the consideration of the purchase of some lands at Muroc Lake. If I remember correctly, and I believe I am correct, we were told that land could be purchased for 50 cents an acre. I find on page 10 of the hearings, which have just been turned over to me, that they purchased 60,000 acres from the Southern Pacific Railway Co. at $2.25 an acre, and that the remaining land has not been purchased. Lieutenant Colonel Valliant testified:

At Muroc we met and are meeting with organized opposition, so that we have had to go into court and condemn all of the private land.

In the first place, to see if my understanding is correct, I should like to ask the gentleman from Texas a question. If this bill is passed it merely authorizes the purchase of that land, and the War Department cannot make the actual purchase of the land until Congress has appropriated the money for a particular item?

Mr. THOMASON. I think that would be unquestioned in any such case. Certainly they could not buy the land without some money, and this is only an authorization.

Mr. ENGEL. Of course, under the bill as written the War Department, if the Appropriations Committee and Congress should authorize it, could pay the entire $5,000,000 for any one item in the bill. Of course they would not do that, but they could. That is true, is it not?

Mr. THOMASON. That is true. I am sure they will not, but they would have that authority.

Mr. ENGEL. But the War Department Subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee would have the final say-so as to recommending to the House what should be appropriated and spent for each particular item?

Mr. THOMASON. The gentleman of course speaks with more authority than I as to what procedure the Appropriations Committee would follow in the break-down.

Mr. ENGEL. Subject to the approval of the full committee and the House, of course.

Mr. THOMASON. It is true that the Appropriations Committee has to make the appropriation. Just exactly what the break-down would be, I think, would depend on the actions of the Appropriations Committee.

Mr. ENGEL. It would be within the authority of the Appropriations Committee to say what item should be allowed and the amount for that item.

Mr. THOMASON. That is my construction of it.

Mr. ENGEL. If this bill were an actual appropriation, giving the War Department authority without any check on spending the entire amount on any one item, I would be opposed to it, but the bill apparently is an authorization and the Appropriations Committee will have a check on the spending. Therefore, I shall support the bill.

Mr. THOMASON. Then we can count on the gentleman's support, because that is my construction of it.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ENGEL. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. If the War Department should spend $100 an acre for 40,000 acres of land in Iowa, that would be $4,000,000, and very little money would be left over for all the rest of these projects.

Mr. ENGEL. As one member of the Subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee I shall oppose the spending of $100 an acre for land out there for that purpose.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ENGEL. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. COCHRAN. The gentleman realizes that if this bill passes, amendments offered to a War Department appropriation bill on the floor of this House are germane as long as they stay within the $5,000,000 authorization. Do not get away from that. The Appropriations Committee has its check. It can recommend the appropriation in any amount up to $5,000,000 as it sees fit, but once the authorization bill passes, an amendment offered from the floor of this House is always germane to a War Department appropriation bill. So if your committee says no then you will have an amendment offered from the floor.

Mr. ENGEL. The House then has an opportunity to vote and to say whether or not the amendment carries by a majority of the Members of the House and of the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ENGEL. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. MAY. Of course, the gentleman understands this is merely an authorization, and that the War Department representatives will go out and ascertain the value of these lands. They will buy the lands if they are cheap enough, but if they are not cheap enough they will not buy them.

Mr. ENGEL. They will buy the lands if the Appropriations Committee and the House finally allow the appropriations with which to buy them, and in amounts they can buy them with.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ENGEL. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. CURTIS. Has any attempt been made to ascertain if any submarginal land that meets the requirements for these areas is owned by the Government?

Mr. ENGEL. I am not on the Committee on Military Affairs, so I cannot say.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my motion to strike out the enacting clause.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the substitute amendment.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation was prepared by the War Department because of the many millions of dollars which have been appropriated to enlarge the Army and enlarge the range of the big guns that are now used in the Army. I wish to quote just a word from a letter of General Craig, in which he says:

This bill is the result of an exhaustive investigation of peacetime Army needs; it includes only the most urgent requirements for training purposes.

Further in the communication to the Speaker of the House, General Craig uses this language:

Increased ranges of modern weapons and ammunition demand the expansion of existing target ranges in order to safeguard life and property.

Further, he states:

Lack of suitable target ranges and training areas situated reasonably close to garrisoned posts results in excessive annual troop movements.

I just want to say, in a word, with the millions of dollars appropriated for the enlargement of the Army it seems that we will be unable to get the full benefit of these appropriations unless we enlarge these grounds and provide an opportunity for this use.

So far as the substitute is concerned, I wish to say that the Army selected this location in Iowa because of the railroad and highway facilities and because of the further fact that Iowa has located close to this 40,000 acres of land, one of the finest Army posts in the United States. These long-range guns cannot be utilized as extensively as they might be if this range were extended with safety to life and property.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOWELL. I yield for a short question.

Mr. CURTIS. You have at your disposal a report from the Army that recommends this place in Iowa?

Mr. DOWELL. Yes; it is written in the bill.

Mr. CURTIS. I find one in the hearings in reference to the Nebraska site, but there is no report approving the Iowa site.

Mr. DOWELL. I think there is no report filed, except the bill, but the testimony before the committee during the hearings states very specifically where this is to be located. There has been no one, so far as I know, interested in the purchase of this land in Iowa except the Army itself.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOWELL. I yield.

Mr. CULKIN. And the purchase of this land meets the necessity for modern training conditions?

Mr. DOWELL. Absolutely.

Mr. CULKIN. And it is absolutely essential in view of the development of artillery fire.

Mr. DOWELL. General Craig has so stated in his letter to the Speaker of the House, saying that this is necessary for the longer-range guns now being operated by the Army.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to the substitute amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MUNDT to the substitute offered by Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska: Strike out the words "Iowa or Nebraska."

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield so I may propound a unanimous-consent request?

Mr. MUNDT. Yes.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 5 minutes.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like 3 or 4 minutes after the gentleman from South Dakota finishes.

Mr. COSTELLO. Then, Mr. Speaker, I modify my request and ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the modified request?

There was no objection.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Speaker, I believe this body does not want to undertake the responsibility of voicing a distinction between Nebraska and Iowa and being responsible for locating this particular project in favor of one of those good States and against the other by a direct vote, and we now find ourselves facing that dilemma.

The amendment I have offered to the substitute will remove us from that embarrassing position and will place the Army in an advantageous spot where it can bargain for the best possible tract of land in the entire Seventh Corps Area.

Coming as I do from South Dakota, I am sure you cannot blame me for calling attention to the fact that the very sound, logical, and intriguing arguments advanced by the gentleman from Nebraska hold true with equal and extended force with respect to land in South Dakota, where we have an abundance of highly useful land which can be purchased at an economical price, where the rural credits department of the State of South Dakota owns big blocks of this land which it will be willing to work on under a contract with the Federal Government, so as to give the Army the best possible price in a consolidation of the type of land it wants.

I think since we have now arrived at the point where the logical thing for this body to do is to adopt my amendment to the substitute amendment and leave it to the Army to determine where, in the entire Seventh Corps training area, they are going to locate this particular project. Under my amendment South Dakota and other States in the area can present their most attractive propositions, and the Army and our taxpayers will receive the benefits of such possible savings.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MUNDT. I yield to my colleague from South Dakota.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I just want to commend the gentleman's suggestion. This is the practical thing to do. It does not tie the hands of the Army. It allows them to buy this land within the corps area where they can make the best purchase and suit the needs of the Army the best. This will also avoid any attempt to determine this matter in the House here this afternoon.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MUNDT. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. COSTELLO. I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that the purpose of this bill is to give the War Department authority to make purchases of land in these sections that they consider desirable for the purpose they have in mind. They have already made the study that the gentleman would have them make and have already determined upon the area in which they would like to locate this particular field, and I may also call the gentleman's attention to the fact that "the tentative area selected is badly eroded, submarginal land in south-central Iowa, which can be purchased cheaply," according to the testimony of Major Myers, who appeared before the committee and stated that the War Department has already made such a study as the gentleman suggests.

Mr. MUNDT. If the Army has arrived at that conclusion, and if its conclusion will stand up under the scrutiny of closer examination, and if they can find no better place in which to locate this project, my amendment will not change the situation one iota, because it gives to the Army the full right and privilege to locate the project at any place within the Seventh Corps training area. Consequently this would relieve the House of the embarrassment of having to decide with one group of our splendid colleagues against another group from another State, and reposes in the Army the responsibility which it should exercise to place this project where it can do so most advantageously.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. And gives the Army adequate protection against any possible advance in price.

Mr. MUNDT. Yes; it enables them to drive the best possible bargain.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. And is it not a fact that unless you do amend this section the Army will have no opportunity to make any other selection?

Mr. MUNDT. Precisely.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. And is it not a fact that the Army has not investigated many of these positions in these other States?

Mr. MUNDT. That is correct. In other words, by this amendment we will untie the hands of the Army rather than tie their hands.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Speaker, I shall not use the 5 minutes allotted to me. It is regrettable that this friendly contest has developed between Iowa and Nebraska. I merely wish to see those neighbors dwell together in peace and amity, for I love them both.

It seems to me supreme folly for anyone to object to the passage of this bill that carries $5,000,000 only. And this sum is an authorization and not an appropriation. We have voted at this session hundreds of millions of dollars to build airplanes and battleships and tanks and to purchase war materials, and then when we come in here at the suggestion of the Chief of Staff of the United States Army, whose ability or integrity has never been questioned by anyone, and ask for an authorization of $5,000,000, which is an infinitesimal amount when we compare it with the whole sum that is being expended for national defense, I think those who oppose this measure are simply straining at a gnat and swallowing the camel. The vast sums of money we already have voted for national defense will be wasted if we do not have adequate training grounds for the personnel of our Army and the testing of the modern weapons of war. And because of the very nature of the case, the General Staff of the United States Army is better qualified than Congress to select the proper sites. I sympathize with my friend from Nebraska [Mr. STEFAN], who has put up a valiant fight for a field in his district and State. I would like to have one for my own, but in this instance I am constrained to follow the recommendation of the Chief of Staff. We have made a mountain out of a molehill this afternoon, and we have wasted precious moments. I trust the membership of the House will follow the recommendations of General Craig and uphold the unanimous report of the Committee on Military Affairs by voting this bill as reported. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment to the substitute offered by the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. MUNDT].

The question was taken, and the amendment to the substitute was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question now is on the substitute offered by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. COFFEE].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska) there were—ayes 17, noes 117.

So the amendment to the substitute was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question now is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. STEFAN].

The question was taken, and on a division (demanded by Mr. STEFAN) there were—ayes 15, noes 94.

So the amendment was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last three words. My distinguished friend from Missouri [Mr. SHORT] does not understand why anybody should question the advisability of passing this bill. He referred to General Craig's recommendation. As far as General Craig is concerned let me say he comes from my own State. He has been a personal friend of mine for many years, and the other day he visited my office to bid me goodbye, as he was leaving the service, about to retire after a distinguished service. I have as high a regard for General Craig as anyone in this House.

I have been simply commenting in reference to what is going to happen under this bill, as I see it. Let us look at the record—the hearings. I did not have a copy of the hearings at the outset. Let us see about this land we are going to buy in California. Now, the Government already owns 660,000 acres of the land in that State and, according to the testimony, it is worth 30 cents an acre. We are going to buy 78,000 acres adjoining the Government-owned land, and we are going to pay $3.20 an acre for it, according to the testimony of Army officers before the committee. If we own 660,000 acres of land and it is in the hands of the Interior Department, why can we not transfer that to the War Department and stop at the 660,000 acres, without taking in an additional 78,000 acres of land?

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. In just a moment. Let us now go to Fort Devens, Mass. A representative of the Army testifying before the committee says the assessed value of the land is $270,000. What are we going to pay for it? The Army officer says we are going to pay $580,000 for it. Here they admit they are going to pay more than double the assessed value.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. In just a moment. Yes; we are going to pay $580,000 for that land that is assessed at $270,000 and your Army officials frankly admit that. That supports my statement when I say you are now going to buy the acreage named in this bill for $5,000,000. That is absolutely true, and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHORT] nods his head and agrees with me, that you are not going to do it. He realizes I am correct.

Now, I do not feel anyone should be criticized for commenting on a bill that includes 11 separate items with 11 States interested. Naturally, the Members from each of the 11 States, including some of our large delegations, are going to support the bill and the bill is going to pass, the bad will go along with the good. You know some of these projects would not stand up if voted on separately.

Surely we are entitled, without being subject to criticism, to the right to express ourselves with reference to a measure being considered in the House, that is going to cost the taxpayers much more than the $5,000,000 authorized in the bill. We have a right to our views even if in disagreement with yours.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. I yield.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Are you familiar with the values of the property to which you referred?

Mr. COCHRAN. No; I am taking the testimony in the hearings which I have just read.

Mr. SHEPPARD. The gentleman stated it was no good. Does not the gentleman realize that we raise the finest and largest jack rabbits in the world on that property? [Laughter.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Fine. What is the Army going to do—use jack rabbits for target practice?

Mr. SHEPPARD. And send them down to the gentleman's district for food.

Mr. COCHRAN. I should say not. Anything California wants to give away Missouri has no use for.

This 660,000 acres you can get for nothing from the Department of the Interior, if you can get Mr. Ickes to transfer it to the Army.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 additional minute in order that I may answer the question of the lady from Massachusetts.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. The gentleman has spoken of Fort Devens. Does the gentleman realize there is quite a valuable property there, and there is great danger if you do not have sufficient land? How would you like to have people shooting over your land, and your animals were in danger of being killed, to say nothing of your children? [Applause.] The Army needs it desperately. It has to come to the House for an appropriation, and you can take it by condemnation if necessary; or, if it is decided that the price asked for the land is too high—

Mr. COCHRAN. I will say to the lady in reply that I realize the value of the land adjoining Army reservations; I know it will cost a great amount, and that is the reason I am trying to impress upon you now that you will not buy the land enumerated in this bill for anything like $5,000,000.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. But if you have a fort, you have to have land in order to make it safe for target practice, and to have adequate training ground. Fort Devens, when completed, will be one of the finest training grounds in the country. Approximately $6,000,000 have already been expended in improving it. Stationed there at the present time are 47 officers and 1,174 enlisted men. In the summer it is used by the R. O. T. C., the C. M. T. C., and various units from other forts. Strategically it is an ideal location as a protection to the industrial Northeast. Transportation facilities are the best. For years I have been trying to secure this additional land in order to have adequate facilities for target practice and training. It has been approved by the War Department, but the Budget Bureau has not given its approval until this year. It is a great joy to me that this much-needed improvement to Fort Devens will take place. I have spent many hours of work to bring it about, and I am extremely grateful to the members of the Committee on Military Affairs for cooperating in bringing it about. During the war Fort Devens was selected as an ideal location for a training station. At that time the War Department owned some of the land now in question. Unfortunately, after the war the Department sold some of that land. Now Fort Devens is again considered as an extremely necessary part of our national defense.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has again expired.

The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The bill was passed. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RETIREMENT OF OFFICERS WHO SERVED IN THE WAR WITH SPAIN

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Military Affairs, I call up the bill (S. 839) to amend the Retirement Act of April 23, 1904, and I ask unanimous consent that the same be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act of Congress approved April 23, 1904, authorizing the retirement to the next higher grade of officers of the United States Army who served in the Civil War is hereby extended to include those officers not above the grade of colonel who served in the War with Spain between April 21, 1898, and April 11, 1899.

That the advance in grade herewith provided shall be without any additional pay above that of the grade held by them at the date of retirement.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 8, after the figures, insert a colon and the following proviso: "Provided, That the advanced rank on the retired list shall be extended in like manner to those officers of the Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard, who have been retired, or may be retired, in accordance with existing law for retirements in these respective services."

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order on the committee amendment that it is not germane to the bill.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Kentucky desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. MAY. I do not, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The Chair sustains the point of order.
Mr. HARTER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.
The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HARTER of Ohio: In line 7, page 1, after the word "colonel", insert "with not less than 30 years' service."

Mr. HARTER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, this amendment is for the purpose of clarifying this act, which applies to all veterans of the Spanish-American War. The bill is modeled after an act passed some 40 years after the Civil War, and at that time the requirement was 40 years' service before one could retire from the Army. The present rule is 30 years, and the bill is made to conform to the situation at present.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio.

The amendment was agreed to.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend the remarks I made on the bill previously passed and include certain letters dealing with the subject matter under consideration.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HARE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HARRINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and include a certain letter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

PROVIDING A RIGHT-OF-WAY

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Military Affairs, I call up the bill (H. R. 4784) to provide a right-of-way, and I ask unanimous consent that the same be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered, under such terms and conditions as are deemed advisable by him, to grant to the Atlantic Refining Co., its successors and/or assigns, an easement for the right-of-way for oil-pipe lines over, across, in, and upon the Fort Mifflin Military Reservation, in the State of Pennsylvania: Provided, That such right-of-way shall be granted only upon a finding by the Secretary of War that the same will be in the public interest and will not substantially injure the interest of the United States in the property affected thereby: Provided further, That all or any part of such right-of-way may be annulled and forfeited by the Secretary of War if the property is needed for governmental purposes or for failure to comply with the terms or conditions of any grant hereunder, or for nonuse or for abandonment of rights granted under authority hereof.

PROVIDING A RIGHT-OF-WAY

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Military Affairs, I call up the bill (H. R. 4783) to provide a right-of-way, and I ask unanimous consent that the same may be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered, under such terms and conditions as are deemed advisable by him, to grant to Keystone Pipe Line Co., its successors and/or assigns, an easement for a right-of-way for oil-pipe lines over, across, in, and upon the Middletown Air Depot Military Reservation, in the State of Pennsylvania: Provided, That such right-of-way shall be granted only upon a finding by the Secretary of War that the same will be in the public interest and will not substantially injure the interest of the United States in the property affected thereby: Provided further, That all or any part of such right-of-way may be annulled and forfeited by the Secretary of War if the property is needed for governmental purposes or for failure to comply with the terms or conditions of any grant hereunder, or for nonuse or for abandonment of rights granted under authority hereof.

REPUBLIC OF PANAMA HIGHWAY

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Military Affairs, I call up S. 2163, to authorize an appropriation to meet such expenses as the President, in his discretion, may deem necessary to enable the United States to cooperate with the Republic of Panama in completing the construction of a national highway between Chorrera and Rio Hato, Republic of Panama, for defense purposes, and ask that it may be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Whereas the United States now has under lease an area of about 19,000 acres in the vicinity of Rio Hato, Republic of Panama, a distance of approximately 70 miles west of the Canal Zone, which is being developed and used as a landing field, bombing range, and training center for the Air Corps units established in the Canal Zone; and

Whereas the present road facilities between Chorrera and Rio Hato, Republic of Panama, are inadequate to accommodate the heavy traffic necessary in event of hostilities: Therefore

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated the sum of not to exceed $1,500,000, to meet such expenses as the President, in his discretion, may deem necessary to enable the United States to cooperate with the Republic of Panama in connection with the construction of a highway between Chorrera and Rio Hato, in the Republic of Panama: Provided, That the expenditure of such sum shall be subject to the receipt of assurances satisfactory to the President from the Government of the Republic of Panama of its cooperation in such construction.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, and was read the third time.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the preamble of the bill be stricken out.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The bill was passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

WAIVER OF AGE LIMIT OF CERTAIN SECOND LIEUTENANTS, AIR CORPS, UNITED STATES ARMY

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Military Affairs, I call up the bill (H. R. 6925) to waive the age limit for appointment as second lieutenant, Regular Army, of certain persons now on active duty with the Air Corps, and ask that it may be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That notwithstanding any provision of law which prohibits the appointment as a second lieutenant in the Air Corps, Regular Army, of a person above the age of 30 years, any Reserve officer of the Air Corps now on extended active duty with the Air Corps who on the date of enactment of this act has served not less than a total of 2 years on such extended active duty or on duty as an enlisted pilot, or both, and who on the date of enactment of this act is over 30 years of age by a period not in excess of the total such active duty performed by him, and any warrant officer and enlisted man now in the active service in the Regular Army who is a qualified pilot, shall be eligible, if otherwise qualified, to be appointed in the fiscal year 1940 as a second lieutenant, Air Corps, of the Regular Army: Provided, That vacancies in the Air Corps, Regular Army, which are to be filled in the fiscal year 1940 upon the basis of competitive examinations held in the fiscal year 1940, shall be apportioned to applicants under this act in the ratio that the number of such applicants bears to the total number of applicants for appointment in the Air Corps, Regular Army, under other provisions of law: And provided further, That applicants for appointment under this act shall be given qualifying examinations separate and distinct from those given to other applicants for commission.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ALLOWANCES FOR CERTAIN OFFICERS OF THE RESERVE CORPS

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Military Affairs, I call up the bill (H. R. 3321) to provide allowances for inactive-status training and for uniforms and equipment for certain officers of the Officers' Reserve Corps.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House bill may be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

Mr. PACE. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill may be passed over until the other bills on the calendar have been considered.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky withdraws the bill from present consideration.

OTIS M. CULVER ET AL.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 1882) for the relief of Otis M. Culver, Samuel E. Abbey, and Joseph Reger, with a Senate amendment, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend the title so as to read: "An act for the relief of Otis M. Culver, Samuel E. Abbey, Joseph Reger, and August H. Krueger."

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RANK AND TITLE OF LIEUTENANT GENERAL, REGULAR ARMY

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill H. R. 7093, to provide for the rank and title of lieutenant general of the Regular Army, and ask unanimous consent that this bill may be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAY]?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the major generals of the Regular Army specifically assigned by the Secretary of War to command the four armies of the United States Army shall have the rank and title of lieutenant general while so serving: Provided, That major generals, while holding the rank and title of lieutenant general under the foregoing provisions, shall be entitled to receive the pay and allowances of a major general and, in addition, shall be entitled to receive the same personal money allowances as are now, or may hereafter be, prescribed by law for vice admirals of the Navy: Provided further, That should an officer, while serving in the rank of lieutenant general be retired from active service, he shall be retired with the lineal rank and the retired pay to which he would be entitled had he not been serving in the rank of lieutenant general, the provisions of section 1254, Revised Statutes (10 U. S. C. 1025), to the contrary notwithstanding.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROBATIONARY APPOINTMENT OF OFFICERS IN THE REGULAR ARMY

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Military Affairs, I call up the bill (H. R. 3654) to provide for probationary appointments of officers in the Regular Army, and ask unanimous consent that it may be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAY]?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I may say that I have an amendment which I am going to offer.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. I will reserve the right to object. What is the purpose of the bill, to prevent these officers from getting married?

Mr. MAY. Yes; for a certain period of time. We have provided a 1-year limitation.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. What is the necessity for such a piece of legislation?

Mr. MAY. The practice has grown up in the Army where young fellows come out of the academy, get married and get into all kinds of difficulties. They get hard up, and after awhile they get into trouble with the regulations of the Army.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. You want to pass legislation which will encourage them to run around?

Mr. MAY. No. We are trying to pass legislation which will keep them from running around.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to substitute the Senate bill (S. 1155) to provide for probationary appointments of officers in the Regular Army, for the House bill.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAY]?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 23 of the National Defense Act, as amended by the act of June 4, 1920 (41 Stat. 771), be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

SEC. 23. Original appointments to be probationary: The Secretary of War, under such regulations as he may prescribe, may hereafter revoke the commission of any officer on the active list, initially commissioned after the date of this act, who, at the date of said revocation, has had less than 3 years of continuous service as a commissioned officer of the Army, and each officer whose commission is so revoked shall be discharged from the Army: Provided, however, That marriage shall not constitute cause for revocation of a commission under this act.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MAY: Page 1, line 13, after the word "Army", strike out the remainder of the bill and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Provided, That until July 1, 1942, the marriage of an officer shall not be a cause for revocation of commission but that after that date, under regulations issued pursuant to the authority contained in this act, marriage may be a cause for revocation of commission only in the event that the officer marries within 1 year subsequent to the date of his original commission."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, this concludes the business of the Committee on Military Affairs.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, further business in order on Calendar Wednesday will be dispensed with.

There was no objection.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA REVENUE BILL

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table for immediate consideration the conference report accompanying the bill (H. R. 6577) to provide revenue for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6577) to provide revenue for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"APPLICATION OF TITLE

"SECTION 1. The provisions of this title shall apply to the taxable year 1939 and succeeding taxable years, except that in the case of a taxable year beginning in 1938 and ending in 1939 the income taxable under this title shall be that fraction of the income for the entire fiscal year equal to the number of days remaining in the fiscal year after January 1, 1939, divided by three hundred and sixty-five: Provided, however, That if the taxpayer's records properly reflect the income for that part of the fiscal year falling in the calendar year 1939, then the portion of the fiscal year's income taxable hereunder shall be the portion received or accrued during the calendar year 1939.

"IMPOSITION OF TAX

"Sec. 2. (a) Tax on individuals: There is hereby levied for each taxable year upon the taxable income of every individual domiciled in the District of Columbia on the last day of the taxable year a tax at the following rates:

- "One per centum on the first $5,000 of taxable income.
- "One and one-half per centum on the next $5,000 of taxable income.
- "Two per centum on the next $5,000 of taxable income.
- "Two and one-half per centum on the next $5,000 of taxable income.

"Three per centum on the taxable income in excess of $20,000.

"(b) Tax on corporations: There is hereby levied for each taxable year upon the taxable income from District of Columbia sources of every corporation, whether domestic or foreign (except those organizations expressly exempt under paragraph (d) of this section), a tax at the rate of 5 per centum thereof.

"(c) Definition of 'taxable income': As used in this section, the term 'taxable income' means the amount of the net income in excess of the credits against net income provided in section 9 of this title.

"(d) Exemptions from tax: There shall be exempt from taxation under this title the following organizations: Corporations, including any community chest, fund, foundation, cemetery, association, teachers' retirement fund association, church, or club, organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, educational, or social purposes, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual and no substantial part of the activities of which is carrying on propaganda, or otherwise attempting to influence legislation; and labor organizations, trade associations, boards of trade, chambers of commerce, citizens' associations or organizations, not organized for profit and no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual; banks, insurance companies, building and loan associations, and companies, incorporated or otherwise, which guarantee the fidelity of any individual or individuals, such as bonding companies, all of which pay taxes upon gross premiums or earnings under existing laws of the District of Columbia; and voluntary employees' beneficiary associations providing for the payment of life, sick, accident, or other benefits to the members of such association or their dependents, if (1) no part of their net earnings inures (other than such payments) to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual, and (2) 85 percent or more of the income consists of amounts collected from members for the sole purpose of making such payments and meeting expenses.

"NET INCOME"

"Sec. 3. Definition: The term 'net income' means the gross income of a taxpayer less the deductions allowed by this title.

"GROSS INCOME AND EXCLUSIONS THEREFROM"

"Sec. 4. (a) Of individuals: The words 'gross income', as used in this title, include gains, profits, and income derived from salaries, wages, or compensation for personal services of whatever kind and in whatever form paid, including salaries, wages, and compensation paid by the United States to its officers and employees to the extent the same is not immune from taxation under the Constitution, or income derived from professions, vocations, trades, businesses, commerce, or sales or dealings in property, whether real or personal, growing out of the ownership, or use of, or interest in, such property; also from rent, royalties, interest, dividends, securities, or transactions of any business carried on for gain or profit, or gains or profits, and income derived from any source whatever.

"(b) Of corporations: In the case of any corporation, gross income includes only the gross income from sources within the District of Columbia. The proper apportionment and allocation of income with respect to sources of income within and without the District may be determined by processes or formulas of general apportionment under rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioners.

"(c) Exclusions from gross income: The following items shall not be included in gross income and shall be exempt from taxation under this title:

"(1) Life insurance: Amounts received under a life-insurance contract paid by reason of the death of the insured, whether in a single sum or otherwise (but if such amounts are held by the insurer under an agreement to pay interest thereon, the interest payments shall be included in gross income).

"(2) Annuities, and so forth: Amounts received (other than amounts paid by reason of the death of the insured and interest payments on such amounts and other than amounts received as annuities) under a life-insurance or endowment contract, but if such amounts (when added to amounts received before the taxable year under such contract) exceed the aggregate premiums or consideration paid (whether or not paid during the taxable year) then the excess shall be included in gross income. Amounts received as an annuity under an annuity or endowment contract shall be included in gross income; except that there shall be excluded from gross income the excess of the amount received in the taxable year over an amount equal to 3 per centum of the aggregate premiums or consideration paid for such annuity (whether or not paid during such year), until the aggregate amount excluded from gross income under this title in respect to such annuity equals the aggregate premiums or consideration paid for such annuity. In the case of a transfer for a valuable consideration, by assignment or otherwise, of a life-insurance, endowment, or annuity contract, or any interest therein, only the actual value of such consideration and the amount of the premiums and other sums subsequently paid by the transferee shall be exempt from taxation under paragraph (1) or this paragraph.

"(3) Gifts, bequests, and devises: The value of property acquired by gift, bequest, devise, or inheritance (but the income from such property shall be included in gross income).

"(4) Tax-free interest: Interest upon (A) the obligations of a State, Territory, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia; or (B) obligations of a corporation organized under Act of Congress, if such corporation is an instrumentality of the United States; or (C) the obligations of the United States or its possessions.

"(5) Compensation for injuries or sickness: Amounts received, through accident or health insurance or under workmen's compensation acts, as compensation for personal injuries or sickness, plus the amount of any damages received, whether by suit or agreement on account of such injuries or sickness.

"(6) Ministers: The rental value of a dwelling house and appurtenances thereof furnished to a minister of the gospel as part of his compensation.

"(7) Income exempt under treaty: Income of any kind to the extent required by any treaty obligation of the United States.

"(8) Dividends from China Trade Act corporations: In the case of a person, amounts distributed as dividends to or for his benefit by a corporation organized under the China Trade Act, 1922, if, at the time of such distribution, he is a resident of China, and the equitable right to the income of the shares of stock of the corporation is in good faith vested in him.

"(9) Income of foreign governments.

"DEDUCTIONS FROM GROSS INCOME"

"Sec. 5. (a) Items of deduction: In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions:

"(1) Expenses: All the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business, including a reasonable allowance for salaries or other compensation for personal services actually rendered; traveling expenses (including the entire amount expended for meals and lodging) while away from home in the pursuit of a trade or business; and rentals or other payments required to be made as a condition to the continued use or possession, for purposes of the trade or business, of property to which the taxpayer has not taken or is not taking title or in which he has no equity.

"(2) Interest: All interest paid or accrued within the taxable year on indebtedness.

"(3) Taxes: Taxes paid or accrued within the taxable year, except—

"(A) income taxes;

"(B) estate, inheritance, legacy, succession, and gift taxes;

"(C) taxes assessed against local benefits of a kind tending to increase the value of the property assessed; but this paragraph shall not exclude the allowance as a deduction of so much of such taxes as is properly allocable to maintenance or interest charges; and

"(D) taxes paid to any State or Territory on property, business, or occupation the income from which is not taxable under this title.

"(4) Losses in trade or business: Losses sustained during the taxable year and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise, if incurred in trade or business, the income from which is subject to taxation under this title.

"(5) Losses in transactions for profit: Losses sustained during the taxable year and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise, if incurred in any transaction entered into for profit would be subject to taxation under this title, though not connected with the trade or business.

"(6) Intercompany dividends: In the case of a corporation, the amount received as dividends from a corporation which is subject to taxation under this title.

"(7) Bad debts: Debts ascertained to be worthless and charged off within the taxable year or, in the discretion of the assessor, a reasonable addition to a reserve for bad debts; and when satisfied that a debt is recoverable only in part, the assessor may allow such debt, in an amount not in excess of the part charged off within the taxable year, as a deduction.

"(8) Insurance premiums: All fire-, tornado-, and casualty-insurance premiums paid during the taxable year in connection with property held for investment or business.

"(9) Depreciation: A reasonable allowance for exhaustion, wear, and tear of property used in the trade or business, including a reasonable allowance for obsolescence; and including in the case of natural resources allowances for depletion as permitted by reasonable rules and regulations which the Commissioners are hereby authorized to promulgate.

"(10) Charitable contributions: Contributions or gifts actually paid within the taxable year to or for the use of any corporation, or trust, or community fund, or foundation, maintaining activities in the District of Columbia and organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, military, or educational purposes, no part of the net income of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual: Provided, That such deductions shall be allowed only in an amount which in all of the above cases combined does not exceed 15 per centum of the taxpayer's net income as computed without the benefit of this subparagraph.

"(11) Wagering losses: Losses from wagering transactions shall be allowed only to the extent of the gains from such transactions.

"(b) Allocation of deductions: In the case of a taxpayer, other than an individual, the deductions allowed in this section shall be allowed only for and to the extent that they are connected with income arising from sources within the District and taxable under this title to a nonresident taxpayer; and the proper apportionment and allocation of the deductions with respect to sources of income within and without the District shall be determined by processes or formulas of general apportionment under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Commissioners. The so-called charitable contribution deduction allowed by subparagraph (10) of paragraph (a) of this section shall be allowed whether or not connected with income from sources within the District.

"(c) Corporations and nonresident individuals to file return of total income: A corporation shall receive the benefits of the deductions allowed to it under this title only by filing or causing to be filed with the assessor a true and accurate return of its total income received from all sources, whether within or without the District.

"GAINS OR LOSSES FROM SALE OF ASSETS"

"Sec. 6. (a) Gain or loss in capital assets not recognized: No gain or loss from the sale or exchange of a capital asset shall be recognized in the computation of net income under this title. For the purposes of this title, 'capital assets' means property held by the taxpayer for more than two years (whether or not connected with his trade or business) but does not include stock in trade of the taxpayer or other property of a kind which would properly be included in the inventory of a taxpayer if on hand at the close of the taxable year, or property held by the taxpayer primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of his trade or business.

"(b) Gain or loss in assets other than capital: Gains or losses from the sale or exchange of property other than a capital asset shall be treated in the same manner as other income or deductible losses, and the basis for computing such gain or loss shall be the cost of such property or, if acquired by some means other than purchase, the fair market value thereof at the date of acquisition.

"EXCHANGES

"SEC. 7. Where property is exchanged for other property, the property received in exchange for the purpose of determining the gain or loss shall be treated as the equivalent of cash to the amount of its fair market value; but when in connection with the reorganization, merger, or consolidation of a corporation a taxpayer receives, in place of stock or securities owned by him, new stock or securities of the reorganization, merged, or consolidated corporation, no gain or loss shall be deemed to occur from the exchange until the new stock or securities are sold or realized upon and the gain or loss is definitely ascertained, until which time the new stock or securities received shall be treated as taking the place of the stock and securities exchanged; provided such reorganization, merger, or consolidation is a 'reorganization' within the meaning of the term 'reorganization' as defined in section 112 (g) of the Federal Revenue Act of 1936.

"DEDUCTIONS NOT ALLOWED

"SEC. 8. (a) General rule: In computing net income no deductions shall be allowed in any case in respect to—

"(1) personal, living, or family expenses;

"(2) any amount paid out for new buildings or for permanent improvements or betterments, made to increase the value of any property or estate;

"(3) any amount expended in restoring property or in making good the exhaustion thereof for which an allowance is or has been made; and

"(4) premiums paid on any life-insurance policy covering the life of any officer or employee or of any person financially interested in any trade or business carried on by the taxpayer when the taxpayer is directly or indirectly a beneficiary under such policy.

"(b) Holders of life or terminable interest: Amounts paid under the laws of any State, Territory, District of Columbia, possession of the United States, or foreign country as income to the holder of a life or terminable interest acquired by gift, bequest, or inheritance shall not be reduced or diminished by any deduction for shrinkage (by whatever name called) in the value of such interest due to the lapse of time, nor by any deduction allowed by this Act (except the deductions provided for in subsections (l) and (m) of section 23 of the Federal Revenue Act of 1926 as amended) for the purpose of computing the net income of an estate or trust but not allowed under the laws of such State, Territory, District of Columbia, possession of the United States or foreign country for the purpose of computing the income to which such holder is entitled.

"PERSONAL EXEMPTIONS AND CREDIT FOR DEPENDENTS

"SEC. 9. (a) Credits: There shall be allowed to individuals the following credits against net income:

"(1) Personal exemption: In the case of a single person or married person not living with husband or wife, a personal exemption of $1,000; in the case of the head of a family or a married person living with husband or wife, a personal exemption of $2,500; a husband and wife living together shall receive but one personal exemption, the amount of such personal exemption shall be $2,500. If such husband and wife make separate returns the personal exemption may be taken by either or divided between them.

"(2) Credit for dependents: $400 for each person (other than husband or wife) dependent upon and receiving his chief support from the taxpayer if such dependent person is under eighteen years of age or is incapable of self-support because mentally or physically defective.

"(b) Change of status: If the status of the taxpayer, insofar as it affects personal exemption or credit for dependents, changes during the taxable year, the personal exemption and credit shall be apportioned under rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioners, in accordance with the number of months before and after such change. For the purpose of such apportionment a fractional portion of a month shall be disregarded unless it amounts to more than half a month in which case it shall be considered as a month.

"(c) In return for fractional part of year: In the case of a return made for a fractional part of a year, the personal exemption and credit for dependents shall be reduced respectively to amounts which bear the same ratio to the full credits provided as the number of months in the period for which the return is made bears to twelve months.

"ACCOUNTING PERIODS

"SEC. 10. The net income shall be computed upon the basis of the taxpayer's annual accounting period (fiscal year or calendar year, as the case may be) in accordance with the method of accounting regularly employed in keeping the books of such taxpayer; but if no such method of accounting has been so employed, or if the method employed does not clearly reflect the income, the computation shall be made in accordance with such method as in the opinion of the assessor does clearly reflect the income. If the taxpayer's annual accounting period is other than a fiscal year as defined in section 43 or if the taxpayer has no annual accounting period or does not keep books, the net income shall be computed on the basis of the calendar year. If the taxpayer makes a Federal income-tax return, his income shall be computed, for the purposes of this title, on the basis of the same calendar or fiscal year as in such Federal income-tax return.

"PERIOD IN WHICH ITEMS OF GROSS INCOME INCLUDED

"SEC. 11. The amount of all items of gross income shall be included in the gross income for the taxable year in which received by the taxpayer unless, under methods of accounting permitted under section 10, any such amounts are to be properly accounted for as of a different period. In the case of the death of a taxpayer there shall be included, in computing net income for the taxable period in which falls the date of his death, amounts accrued up to the date of his death if not otherwise properly includible in respect to such period or a prior period.

"PERIOD FOR WHICH DEDUCTIONS AND CREDITS TAKEN

"SEC. 12. The deductions and credits provided for in this title shall be taken for the taxable year in which 'paid or accrued' or 'paid or incurred', dependent upon the method of accounting upon the basis of which the net income is computed unless, in order to clearly reflect the income, the deductions or credits should be taken as of a different period. In the case of the death of a taxpayer there shall be allowed as deductions and credits for the taxable period in which falls the date of his death, amounts accrued up to the date of his death if not otherwise properly allowable in respect to such period or a prior period.

"INSTALLMENT BASIS

"SEC. 13. (a) Dealers in personal property: Under regulations prescribed by the Commissioners, a person who regularly sells or otherwise disposes of personal property on the installment plan may return as income therefrom in any taxable year that proportion of the installment payments actually received in that year which the gross profit realized or to be realized when payment is completed bears to the total contract price.

"(b) Sales of realty and casual sales of personalty: In the case of (1) a casual sale or other casual disposition of personal property (other than property of a kind which would properly be included in the inventory of the taxpayer if on hand at the close of the taxable year) for a price exceeding $1,000, or (2) of a sale or other disposition of real property, if in either case the initial payments do not exceed 30 per centum of the selling price, the income may, under regulations prescribed by the Commissioners, be returned on the basis and in the manner above prescribed in this section. As used in this section the term 'initial payments' means the payments received in cash or property other than evidences of indebtedness of the purchaser during the taxable period in which the sale or other disposition is made.

"(c) Change from accrual to installment basis: If a taxpayer entitled to the benefits of subsection (a) elects for any taxable year to report his net income on the installment basis, then in computing his income for the year of change or any subsequent year, amounts actually received during any such year on account of sales or other disposition of property made in any prior year shall not be excluded.

"(d) Gain or loss upon disposition of installment obligations: If an installment obligation is satisfied at other than its face value or distributed, transmitted, sold, or otherwise disposed of, gain or loss shall result to the extent of the difference between the basis of the obligation and (1) in the case of satisfaction at other than face value or a sale or exchange—the amount realized, or (2) in case of a distribution, transmission, or disposition otherwise than by sale or exchange—the fair market value of the obligation at the time of such distribution, transmission, or disposition. Any gain or loss so resulting shall be considered as resulting from the sale or exchange of the property in respect to which the installment obligation was received. The basis of the obligation shall be the excess of the face value of the obligation over an amount equal to the income which would be returnable were the obligation satisfied in full. This paragraph shall not apply to the transmission at death of installment obligations if there is filed with the assessor, at such time as he may by regulation prescribe, a bond in such amount and with such sureties as he may deem necessary, conditioned upon the return as income, by the person receiving any payment in such obligations, of the same proportion of such payment as would be returnable as income by the decedent if he had lived and had received such payment.

"INVENTORIES

"SEC. 14. Whenever in the opinion of the assessor the use of inventories is necessary in order clearly to determine the income of any taxpayer, inventories shall be taken by such taxpayer upon such basis as the assessor may prescribe as conforming as nearly as may be to the best accounting practice in the trade or business and as most clearly reflecting the income.

"INDIVIDUAL RETURNS

"SEC. 15. (a) Requirement: The following individuals shall each make under oath a return stating specifically the items of his gross income and the deductions and credits allowed under this title and such other information for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this title as the Commissioners may by regulations prescribe:

"(1) Every individual having a net income for the taxable year of $1,000 or over, if single, or if married and not living with husband or wife;

"(2) Every individual having a net income for the taxable year of $2,500 or over, if married and living with husband or wife; and
 "(3) Every individual having a gross income for the taxable year of $5,000 or over, regardless of the amount of his net income.

"(b) Husband and wife: If a husband and wife living together have an aggregate net income for the taxable year of $2,500 or over, or an aggregate gross income for such year of $5,000 or over—

"(1) Each shall make a return, or

"(2) The income of each shall be included in a single joint return, in which case the tax shall be computed on the aggregate income.

"(c) Persons under disability: If the taxpayer is unable to make his own return, the return shall be made by a duly authorized agent or by the guardian or other person charged with the care of the person or property of such taxpayer.

"(d) Fiduciaries: For returns to be made by fiduciaries, see section 23.

"CORPORATION RETURNS

"Sec. 16. Every corporation not expressly exempt from the tax imposed by this title shall make a return and pay a filing fee of $25 which shall be credited against the tax. Such returns shall state specifically the items of its gross income and the deductions and credits allowed by this title, and such other information for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this title as the Commissioners may by regulations prescribe. The return shall be sworn to by the president, vice president, or other principal officer, and by the treasurer, assistant treasurer, or chief accounting officer. In cases where receivers, trustees in bankruptcy, or assignees are operating the property or business of corporations, such receivers, trustees, or assignees shall make returns for such corporations in the same manner and form as corporations are required to make returns. Any tax due on the basis of such returns made by receivers, trustees, or assignees shall be collected in the same manner as if collected from the corporations of whose business or property they have custody and control.

"TAXPAYER TO MAKE RETURN WHETHER RETURN FORM IS SENT OR NOT

"Sec. 17. Blank forms of returns for income shall be supplied by the assessor. It shall be the duty of the assessor to obtain an income-tax return from every taxpayer who is liable under the law to file such return; but this duty shall in no manner diminish the obligation of the taxpayer to file a return without being called upon to do so.

"TIME AND PLACE FOR FILING RETURNS

"Sec. 18. All returns of income for the preceding taxable year shall be made to the assessor on or before the 15th day of March in each year, except that such returns, if made on the basis of a fiscal year, shall be made on or before the 15th day of the third month following the close of such fiscal year, unless such fiscal year has expired in the calendar year 1939 prior to the approval of this Act, in which event returns shall be made on or before the 15th day of the third month following the approval of this Act.

"EXTENSION OF TIME FOR FILING RETURNS

"Sec. 19. The assessor may grant a reasonable extension of time for filing income returns whenever in his judgment good cause exists and shall keep a record of every such extension. Except in case of a taxpayer who is abroad, no such extension shall be granted for more than six months, and in no case for more than one year. In the event time for filing a return is deferred, the taxpayer is hereby required to pay, as a part of the tax, an amount equal to 6 per centum per annum on the tax ultimately assessed from the time the return was due until it is actually filed in the office of the assessor.

"ALLOCATION OF INCOME AND DEDUCTIONS

"Sec. 20. In any of two or more organizations, trades, or businesses (whether or not incorporated, whether or not organized in the District of Columbia, and whether or not affiliated) owned or controlled directly or indirectly by the same interests, the assessor is authorized to distribute, apportion, or allocate gross income or deductions between or among such organizations, trades, or businesses, if he determines that such distribution, apportionment, or allocation is necessary in order to prevent evasion of taxes or clearly to reflect the income of any of such organizations, trades, or businesses. The provisions of this section shall apply, but shall not be limited in application to any case of a common carrier by railroad subject to the Interstate Commerce Act and jointly owned or controlled directly or indirectly by two or more common carriers by railroad subject to said Act.

"PUBLICITY OF RETURNS

"Sec. 21. (a) Secrecy of returns: Except to any official of the District, having a right thereto in his official capacity, it shall be unlawful for any officer or employee of the District to divulge or make known in any manner the amount of income or any particulars set forth or disclosed in any report or return under this title.

"(b) When copies may be furnished: Neither the original nor a copy of the return desired for use in litigations in court shall be furnished where the District of Columbia is not interested in the result whether or not the request is contained in an order of the court: Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed to prevent the furnishing to a taxpayer of a copy of his return upon the payment of a fee of $1.

"(c) Reciprocal exchange of information with States: Notwithstanding the provisions of this section, the assessor may permit the proper officer of any State imposing an income tax or his authorized representative to inspect income-tax returns, filed with the assessor or may furnish to such officer or representative a copy of any income-tax return provided such State grants substantially similar privileges to the assessor or his representative or to the proper officer of the District charged with the administration of this title.

"(d) Publication of statistics: Nothing herein shall be construed to prohibit the publication of statistics so classified as to prevent the identification of particular reports and the items thereof, or of the publication of delinquent lists showing the names of taxpayers who have failed to pay their taxes at the time and in the manner provided by law, together with any relevant information which in the opinion of the assessor may assist in the collection of such delinquent taxes.

"(e) Penalties for violation of this section: Any offense against the provisions of this section shall be a misdemeanor and shall be punishable by a fine not exceeding $1,000 or imprisonment for six months, or both, in the discretion of the court.

"RETURNS TO BE PRESERVED

"Sec. 22. Reports and returns received by the assessor under the provisions of this title shall be preserved for six years and thereafter until the assessor orders them to be destroyed.

"FIDUCIARY RETURNS

"Sec. 23. (a) Requirement of return: Every fiduciary (except a receiver appointed by authority of law in possession of part only of the property of an individual) shall make under oath a return for any of the following individuals, estates, or trusts for which he acts, stating specifically the items of gross income thereof and the deductions and credits allowed under this title and such other information for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this title as the Commissioners may by regulations prescribe:

"(1) Every individual having a net income for the taxable year of $1,000 or over, if single, or if married and not living with husband and wife;

"(2) Every individual having a net income for the taxable year of $2,500 or over, if married and living with husband or wife;

"(3) Every individual having a gross income for the taxable year of $5,000 or over, regardless of the amount of his net income;

"(4) Every estate or trust the net income of which for the taxable year is $1,000 or over;

"(5) Every estate or trust the gross income of which for the taxable year is $5,000 or over, regardless of the amount of the net income.

"(b) Joint fiduciaries: Under such regulations as the Commissioners may prescribe, a return by one of two or more joint fiduciaries and filed in the office of the assessor shall be sufficient compliance with the above requirement. Such fiduciary shall make oath (1) that he has sufficient knowledge of the affairs of the individual, estate, or trust for which the return is made, to enable him to make the return, and (2) that the return is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, true and correct.

"(c) Law applicable to fiduciaries: Any fiduciary required to make a return under this title shall be subject to all the provisions of law which apply to individuals.

"ESTATES AND TRUSTS

"Sec. 24. (a) Application of tax: The taxes imposed by this title upon individuals shall apply to the income of estates or of any kind of property held in trust, including—

"(1) income accumulated in trust for the benefit of unborn or unascertained person or persons with contingent interests, and income accumulated or held for future distribution under the terms of the will or trust;

"(2) income which is to be distributed currently by the fiduciary to the beneficiaries, and income collected by a guardian of an infant which is to be held or distributed as the court may direct;

"(3) income received by estates of deceased persons during the period of administration or settlement of the estate; and

"(4) income which, in the discretion of the fiduciary, may be either distributed to the beneficiaries or accumulated.

"(b) Computation of tax: The tax shall be computed upon the net income of the estate or trust, and shall be paid by the fiduciary, except as provided in paragraph (e) of this section (relating to revocable trusts) and paragraph (f) of this section (relating to income for benefit of the grantor).

"(c) Net income: The net income of the estate or trust shall be computed in the same manner and on the same basis as in the case of an individual, except that—

"(1) there shall be allowed as an additional deduction in computing the net income of the estate or trust the amount of the income of the estate or trust for its taxable year which is to be distributed currently by the fiduciary to the beneficiaries, and the amount of the income collected by a guardian of an infant which is to be held or distributed as the court may direct, but the amount so allowed as a deduction shall be included in computing the net income of the beneficiaries whether distributed to them or not. Any amount allowed as a deduction under this paragraph shall not be allowed as a deduction under subsection (2) of this section in the same or any succeeding taxable year;

"(2) in the case of income received by estates of deceased persons during the period of administration or settlement of the estate, and in the case of income which, in the discretion of the fiduciary, may be either distributed to the beneficiary or accumulated, there shall be allowed as an additional deduction in computing the net income of the estate or trust the amount of the income of the estate or trust for its taxable year, which is properly paid or credited during such year to any legatee, heir, or beneficiary, but the amount so allowed as a deduction shall be included in computing the net income of the legatee, heir, or beneficiary;

"(3) there shall be allowed as a deduction (in lieu of the deductions for charitable contributions authorized by section 5 (a) (10)) any part of the gross income, without limitation, which pursuant to the terms of the will or deed creating a trust, is during the taxable year paid or permanently set aside for the purposes and in the manner provided in section 5 (a) (10) or is to be used exclusively for the purposes enumerated in section 5 (a) (10).

"(d) Different taxable year: If the taxable year of a beneficiary is different from that of the estate or trust, the amount which he is required, under subparagraph (1) of paragraph (c) of this section, to include in computing his net income, shall be based upon the income of the estate or trust for any taxable year of the estate or trust ending within or with his taxable year.

"(e) Revocable trusts: Where at any time the power to revest in the grantor title to any part of the corpus of the trust is vested—

"(1) in the grantor, either alone or in conjunction with any person not having a substantial adverse interest in the disposition of such part of the corpus or the income therefrom; or

"(2) in any person not having a substantial adverse interest in the disposition of such part of the corpus or the income therefrom, then the income of such part of the trust shall be included in computing the net income of the grantor.

"(f) Income for benefit of grantor: Where any part of the income of a trust—

"(1) is, or in the discretion of the grantor or of any person not having a substantial adverse interest in the disposition of such part of the income may be, held or accumulated for future distribution to the grantor; or

"(2) may, in the discretion of the grantor or of any person not having a substantial adverse interest in the disposition of such part of the income, be distributed to the grantor; or

"(3) is, or in the discretion of the grantor or of any person not having a substantial adverse interest in the disposition of such part of the income may be applied to the payment of premiums upon policies of insurance on the life of the grantor (except policies of insurance irrevocably payable for the purposes and in the manner specified in section 5 (a) (10), relating to the so-called 'charitable contribution' deduction); then such part of the income of the trust shall be included in computing the net income of the grantor.

"(g) Definition of 'in discretion of grantor': As used in this section, the term 'in the discretion of the grantor' means 'in the discretion of the grantor, either alone or in conjunction with any person not having a substantial adverse interest in the disposition of the part of the income in question.'

"(h) Income from intangible personal property held by trust: Income from intangible personal property held by any trust company or by any national bank situated in the District (with or without an individual trustee, resident or nonresident) in trust to pay the income for the time being to, or to accumulate or apply such income for the benefit of any nonresident of the District, shall not be taxable hereunder if—

"(1) such beneficial owner or cestui que trust was at the time of the creation of the trust a nonresident of the District; and

"(2) the testator, settlor, or grantor was also at the time of the creation of the trust a nonresident of the District.

"PARTNERSHIPS

"SEC. 25. (a) Partners only taxable: Individuals carrying on business in partnership shall be liable for income tax only in their individual capacity, and no income tax shall be assessable hereunder upon the net income of any partnership. All such income shall be assessable to the individual partners; it shall be reported by such partners as individuals upon their respective individual income returns; and it shall be taxed to them as individuals along with their other income at the rate and in the manner herein provided for the taxation of income received by individuals. There shall be included in computing the net income of each partner his distributive share, whether distributed or not, of the net income of the partnership for the taxable year; or if his net income for such taxable year is computed upon the basis of a period different from that upon the basis of which the net income of the partnership is computed, then his distributive share of the net income of the partnership for any accounting period of the partnership ending within the taxable year upon the basis of which the partner's net income is computed.

"(b) Partnership return: Every partnership shall make a return for each taxable year stating specifically the items of its gross income and the deductions allowed by this title, and shall include in the return the names and the addresses of the individuals who would be entitled to share in the net income if distributed, and the amount of the distributive share of each individual. The return shall be sworn to by any one of the partners.

"PAYMENT OF TAX

"SEC. 26. (a) Time of payment: The total amount of tax imposed by this title shall be paid on the 15th day of March following the close of the calendar year, or, if the return should be made on the basis of a fiscal year, then on the 15th day of the third month following the close of the fiscal year, except a fiscal year which expired in the calendar year 1939 prior to the approval of this Act, in which event the tax shall be paid on the 15th day of the third month following the approval of this Act.

"(b) Extension of time for payments: At the request of the taxpayer the assessor may extend the time for payment by the taxpayer of the amount determined as the tax, for a period not to exceed six months from the date prescribed for the payment of the tax or an installment thereof. In such case the amount in respect to which the extension is granted shall be paid on or before the date of the expiration of the period of the extension.

"(c) Voluntary advance payment: A tax imposed by this title, or any installment thereof, may be paid, at the election of the taxpayer, prior to the date prescribed for its payment.

"(d) Fractional part of cent: In the payment of any tax under this title a fractional part of a cent shall be disregarded unless it amounts to one-half cent or more, in which case it shall be increased to 1 cent.

"(e) Payment to collector and receipts: The tax provided under this title shall be collected by the collector and the revenues derived therefrom shall be turned over to the Treasury of the United States for the credit to the District in the same manner as other revenues are turned over to the United States Treasury for the credit to the District. The collector shall, upon written request, give to the person making payment of any income tax a full written or printed receipt therefor.

"TAX A PERSONAL DEBT

"SEC. 27. Every tax imposed by this title, and all increases, interest, and penalties thereof, shall become, from the time it is due and payable, a personal debt, from the person or persons liable to pay the same to the District, and shall be entitled to the same priority as other District taxes, and the taxes levied hereunder and the interest and penalties thereon shall be collected by the collector of taxes in the manner provided by law for the collection of taxes due the District on personal property in force at the time of such collection.

"INFORMATION FROM THE BUREAU OF INTERNAL REVENUE

"SEC. 28. The Bureau of Internal Revenue of the Treasury Department of the United States is authorized and required to supply such information as may be requested by the Commissioners relative to any person subject to the taxes imposed by this title.

"ASSESSOR TO ADMINISTER

"SEC. 29. (a) Duties of assessor: The assessor is hereby required to administer the provisions of this title. The assessor shall prescribe forms identical with those utilized by the Federal Government, except to the extent required by differences between this title and its application and the Federal Act and its application. He shall apply as far as practicable the administrative and judicial interpretations of the Federal income-tax law so that computations of income for purposes of this title shall be, as nearly as practicable, identical with the calculations required for Federal income-tax purposes. As soon as practicable after the return is filed the assessor shall examine it and shall determine the correct amount of the tax.

"(b) Statements and special returns: Every taxpayer liable to any tax imposed by this title shall keep such records, render under oath such statements, make such returns, and comply with such rules and regulations as the Commissioners from time to time may prescribe. Whenever the assessor judges it necessary he may require any taxpayer, by notice served upon him, to make a return, render under oath such statements, or keep such records as he deems sufficient to show whether or not such taxpayer is liable to tax under this title and the extent of such liability.

"(c) Examination of books and witnesses: The assessor, for the purpose of ascertaining the correctness of any return filed hereunder, or for the purpose of making an estimate of the taxable income of any taxpayer, is authorized to examine any books, papers, records, or memoranda of any person bearing upon the matters required to be included in the return and may summon any person to appear and produce books, records, papers, or memoranda bearing upon the matters required to be included in the return, and to give testimony or answer interrogatories under oath respecting the same, and the assessor shall have power to administer oaths to such person or persons. Such summons may be served by any member of the Metropolitan Police Department. If any person having been personally summoned shall neglect or refuse to obey the summons issued as herein provided, then, and in that event, the assessor may report that fact to the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, or one of the justices thereof, and said court or any justice thereof hereby is empowered to compel obedience to such summons to the same extent as witnesses may be compelled to obey the subpoenas of that court. Any person in custody or control of any books, papers, records, or memoranda bearing upon the matters required to be included in such returns, who shall refuse to permit the examination by the assessor or any person designated by him of any such books, papers, records, or memoranda, or who shall obstruct or hinder the assessor or any person designated by him in the examination of any books, papers, records, or memoranda, shall upon conviction thereof be fined not more than $300. All prosecutions under this section shall be brought in the police court of the District of Columbia on information by the corporation counsel of the District of Columbia in the name of the District of Columbia.

"(d) Return by assessor: If any person fails to make and file a return at the time prescribed by law or by regulations made under authority of law, or makes, willfully or otherwise, a false or fraudulent return, the assessor shall make the return from his own knowledge and from such information as he can obtain through testimony or otherwise. Any return so made and subscribed by the assessor shall be prima facie good and sufficient for all legal purposes.

"ASSESSMENT AND COLLECTION OF DEFICIENCIES"

"Sec. 30. Definition of 'deficiency': As used in this title in respect of a tax imposed by this title 'deficiency' means—

"(1) the amount by which the tax imposed by this title exceeds the amount shown as the tax by the taxpayer upon his return; but the amount so shown on the return shall first be increased by the amounts previously assessed (or collected without assessment) as a deficiency, and decreased by the amounts previously abated, credited, refunded, or otherwise repaid in respect of such tax; or

"(2) if no amount is shown as the tax by the taxpayer upon his return, or if no return is made by the taxpayer, then the amount by which the tax exceeds the amounts previously assessed (or collected without assessment) as a deficiency; but such amounts previously assessed, or collected without assessment, shall first be decreased by the amounts previously abated, credited, refunded, or otherwise repaid in respect of such tax.

"DETERMINATION AND ASSESSMENT OF DEFICIENCY"

"Sec. 31. If a deficiency in tax is determined by the assessor, the taxpayer shall be notified thereof and given a period of not less than thirty days, after such notice is sent by registered mail, in which to file a protest and show cause or reason why the deficiency should not be paid. Opportunity for hearing shall be granted by the assessor, and a final decision thereon shall be made as quickly as practicable. Any deficiency in tax then determined to be due shall be assessed and paid, together with any addition to the tax applicable thereto, within ten days after notice and demand by the collector. The taxpayer may appeal from such assessment to the Board of Tax Appeals for the District of Columbia in the same manner and to the same extent as set forth in sections 3, 4, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, and 12 of title VI of an Act to amend the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, and for other purposes, approved May 16, 1938.

"JEOPARDY ASSESSMENT"

"Sec. 32. (a) Authority for making: If the assessor believes that the collection of any tax imposed by this title will be jeopardized by delay, he shall, whether or not the time otherwise prescribed by law for making return and paying such tax has expired, immediately assess such tax (together with all interest and penalties, the assessment of which is provided for by law). Such tax, penalties, and interest shall thereupon become immediately due and payable, and immediate notice and demand shall be made by the collector for the payment thereof. Upon failure or refusal to pay such tax, penalty, and interest, collection thereof by distraint shall be lawful.

"(b) Bond to stay collection: The collection of the whole or any part of the amount of such assessment may be stayed by filing with the collector a bond in such amount, not exceeding double the amount as to which the stay is desired, and with such sureties as the collector deems necessary, conditioned upon the payment of the amount, the collection of which is stayed, at the time at which, but for this section, such amount would be due.

"PERIOD OF LIMITATION UPON ASSESSMENT AND COLLECTION"

"Sec. 33. (a) General rule: Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this section—

"(1) The amount of income taxes imposed by this title shall be assessed within two years after the return is filed, and no proceeding in court without assessment for the collection of such taxes shall be begun after the expiration of such period.

"(2) In the case of income received during the lifetime of a decedent, or by his estate during the period of administration, or by a corporation, the tax shall be assessed, and any proceeding in court without assessment for the collection of such tax shall be begun, within twelve months after written request therefor (filed after the return is made) by the executor, administrator, or other fiduciary representing the estate of such decedent, or by the corporation, but not after the expiration of two years after the return is filed. This subparagraph shall not apply in the case of a corporation unless—

"(A) such written request notifies the assessor that the corporation contemplates dissolution at or before the expiration of such twelve-month period; and

"(B) the dissolution is in good faith begun before the expiration of such twelve-month period; and

"(C) the dissolution is completed.

"(3) If the taxpayer omits from gross income an amount properly includible therein which is in excess of 25 per centum of the amount of gross income stated in the return, the tax may be assessed, or a proceeding in court for the collection of such tax may be begun without assessment, at any time within five years after the return was filed.

"(4) For the purposes of subparagraphs (1), (2), and (3), a return filed before the last day prescribed by law for the filing thereof shall be considered as filed on such last day.

"(b) False return: In the case of a false or fraudulent return with intent to evade tax or of a failure to file a return, the tax may be assessed, or a proceeding in court for the collection of such tax may be begun without assessment, at any time.

"(c) Waiver: Where before the expiration of the time prescribed in paragraph (a) for the assessment of the tax, both the assessor and the taxpayer have consented in writing to its assessment after such time, the tax may be assessed at any time prior to the expiration of the period agreed upon. The period so agreed upon may be extended by subsequent agreements in writing made before the expiration of the period previously agreed upon.

"(d) Collection after assessment: Where the assessment of any income tax imposed by this title has been made within the period of limitation properly applicable thereto, such tax may be collected by distraint or by a proceeding in court, but only if begun (A) within three years after the assessment of the tax or (B) prior to the expiration of any period for collection agreed upon in writing by the assessor and the taxpayer before the expiration of such three-year period. The period so agreed upon may be extended by subsequent agreements in writing made before the expiration of the period previously agreed upon.

"REFUNDS"

"Sec. 34. Except as otherwise provided in section 31 of this title, where there has been an overpayment of any tax imposed by this title, the amount of such overpayment shall be refunded to the taxpayer. No such refund shall be allowed after two years from the time the tax is paid unless before the expiration of such period a claim therefor is filed by the taxpayer. The amount of the refund shall not exceed the portion of the tax paid during the two years immediately preceding the filing of the claim, or, if no claim was filed, then during the two years immediately preceding the allowance of the refund. Every claim for refund must be in writing, under oath; must state the specific grounds upon which the claim is founded, and must be filed with the assessor. If the assessor disallows any part of a claim for refund, he shall send to the taxpayer by registered mail a notice of the part of the claim so disallowed. Within ninety days after the mailing of such notice, the taxpayer may file an appeal with the Board of Tax Appeals for the District of Columbia, in the same manner and to the same extent as set forth in sections 3, 4, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, and 12 of title IX of an Act to amend the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, and for other purposes, approved May 16, 1938. The remedy provided to the taxpayer under this section shall not be deemed to take away from the taxpayer any remedy which he might have under any other provision of law; but no suit by the taxpayer for the recovery of any part of such tax shall be instituted in any court if the taxpayer has elected to file an appeal in accordance with this section.

"CLOSING AGREEMENTS"

"Sec. 35. The assessor is authorized to enter into an agreement with any person relating to the liability of such person (or of the person or estate for whom he acts) in respect of any income tax for any period ending prior to the date of the agreement. If such agreement is approved by the Commissioners within such time as may be stated in such agreement, or later agreed to, such agreement shall be final and conclusive and except upon a showing of fraud or malfeasance, or misrepresentation of a material fact—the case shall not be reopened as to the matters agreed upon or the agreement modified; and in any suit or proceeding relating to the tax liability of the taxpayer such agreement shall not be annulled, modified, set aside, or disregarded.

"COMPROMISES"

"Sec. 36. (a) Authority to make: Whenever in the opinion of the Commissioners there shall arise with respect of any tax imposed under this title any doubt as to the liability of the taxpayer or the collectibility of the tax for any reason whatsoever the Commissioners may compromise such tax.

"(b) Concealment of assets: Any person who, in connection with any compromise under this section or offer of such compromise or in connection with any closing agreement under this title or offer to enter into any such agreement, willfully (1) conceals from any officer or employee of the District of Columbia any property belonging to the estate of the taxpayer or other person liable with respect of the tax, or (2) receives, destroys, mutilates, or falsifies any book, document, or record or makes under oath any false statement relating to the estate or the financial condition of the taxpayer or to the person liable in respect of the tax, shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned for not more than 1 year, or both.

"(c) Of penalties: The Commissioners shall have the power for cause shown to compromise any penalty arising under this title.

"FAILURE TO FILE RETURN"

"Sec. 37. In case of any failure to make and file a return required by this title, within the time prescribed by law or prescribed by the Commissioners in pursuance of law, 25 per centum of the tax shall be added to the tax, except that when a return is filed after such time and it is shown that the failure to file it was due to reasonable cause and not due to willful neglect, no such addition shall be made to the tax. The amount so added to any tax shall be collected at the same time and in the same manner and as a part of the tax unless the tax has been paid before the discovery of the neglect, in which case the amount so added shall be collected in the same manner as the tax.

"INTEREST ON DEFICIENCIES"

"Sec. 38. Interest upon the amount determined as a deficiency shall be assessed at the same time as the deficiency, shall be paid upon notice and demand from the collector, and shall be collected as a part of the tax, at the rate of 1 per centum per month from the date prescribed for the payment of the tax (or, if the tax is paid in installments, from the date prescribed for the payment of the first installment) to the date the deficiency is assessed.

"ADDITIONS TO THE TAX IN CASE OF DEFICIENCY"

"Sec. 39. (a) Negligence: If any part of any deficiency is due to negligence, or intentional disregard of rules and regulations but without intent to defraud, 5 per centum of the total amount of the deficiency (in addition to such deficiency) shall be assessed, collected, and paid in the same manner as if it were a deficiency.

"(b) Fraud: If any part of any deficiency is due to fraud with intent to evade tax, then 50 per centum of the total amount of the deficiency (in addition to such deficiency) shall be so assessed, collected, and paid.

"ADDITIONS TO THE TAX IN CASE OF NONPAYMENT

"SEC. 40. (a) Tax shown on return:

"(1) General rule: Where the amount determined by the taxpayer as the tax imposed by this title, or any installment thereof, or any part of such amount or installment, is not paid on or before the date prescribed for its payment, there shall be collected as a part of the tax, interest upon such unpaid amount at the rate of 1 per centum a month from the date prescribed for its payment until it is paid.

"(2) If extension granted: Where an extension of time for payment of the amount so determined as the tax by the taxpayer, or any installment thereof, has been granted, and the amount the time for payment of which has been extended, and the interest thereon determined under section 41 is not paid in full prior to the expiration of the period of the extension, then, in lieu of the interest provided for in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, interest at the rate of 1 per centum a month shall be collected on such unpaid amount from the date of the expiration of the period of the extension until it is paid.

"(b) Deficiency: Where a deficiency, or any interest or additional amounts assessed in connection therewith under section 38, or under section 39, or any addition to the tax in case of delinquency provided for in section 37 is not paid in full within ten days from the date of notice and demand from the collector, there shall be collected, as part of the tax, interest upon the unpaid amount at the rate of 1 per centum a month from the date of such notice and demand until it is paid.

"(c) Fiduciaries: For any period an estate is held by a fiduciary appointed by order of any court of competent jurisdiction or by will, there shall be collected interest at the rate of 1 per centum per month in lieu of the interest provided in subparagraphs (a) and (b) of this section.

"TIME EXTENDED FOR PAYMENT OF TAX SHOWN ON RETURN

"SEC. 41. If the time for payment of the amount determined as the tax by the taxpayer, or any installment thereof, is extended under the authority of section 26 (c), there shall be collected, as a part of such amount, interest thereon at the rate of 1 per centum per month from the date when such payment should have been made if no extension had been granted, until the expiration of the period of the extension.

"PENALTIES

"SEC. 42. (a) Negligence: Any person required under this title to pay or collect any tax, or required by law or regulations made under authority thereof to make a return, keep any records, or supply information, who fails to pay or collect such tax, to make such return, to keep such records, or supply such information, at the time or times required by law or regulations shall, upon conviction thereof (in addition to other penalties provided by law), be fined not more than $300 for each and every such failure, and each and every day that such failure continues shall constitute a separate and distinct offense. All prosecutions under this paragraph shall be brought in the police court of the District of Columbia on information by the corporation counsel or his assistants in the name of the District of Columbia.

"(b) Willful violation: Any person required under this title to pay or collect any tax, or required by law or regulations made under authority thereof to make a return, keep any records, or supply any information, for the purposes of this title, who willfully refuses to pay or collect such tax, to make such returns, to keep such records, or to supply such information, or who willfully attempts in any manner to defeat or evade the tax imposed by this title, shall, in addition to other penalties provided by law, be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both, together with costs of prosecution.

"(c) Definition of 'person': The term 'person' as used in this section includes an officer or employee of a corporation, or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under duty to perform the act in respect to which the violation occurs.

"DEFINITIONS

"SEC. 43. For the purpose of this title and unless otherwise required by the context—

"(1) The word 'person' means an individual, a trust or estate, a partnership, or a corporation.

"(21) The word 'collector' means the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia.

"TITLE III—FEES AND FINES

"On and after July 1, 1939, there shall be credited to the District of Columbia that proportion of the fees and fines collected by the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, including fees and fines collected by the offices of the clerk of that court and of the United States marshal for the District of Columbia, as the amount paid by the District of Columbia toward salaries and expenses of such court and of the offices of the United States district attorney for the District of Columbia and of the United States marshal for the District of Columbia bears to the total amount of such salaries and expenses; and such proportion of the fees and fines, if any, collected by the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, including fees and fines, if any, collected by the office of the clerk of that court, as the amount paid by the District of Columbia toward the salaries and expenses of such court bears to the total amount of such salaries and expenses.

"TITLE IV—AMENDMENTS TO AND REPEAL OF PRIOR ACTS

"INTANGIBLE PERSONAL PROPERTY

"SEC. 1. The tax on intangible personal property imposed by any law relating to the District shall not apply with respect to any year subsequent to the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939.

"TAX ON CERTAIN UTILITIES

"SEC. 2. (a) Paragraph 5 of section 6 of the Act entitled 'An Act making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and three, and for other purposes,' approved July 1, 1902, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"PAR. 5. Each national bank as the trustee for its stockholders, through its president or cashier, and all other incorporated banks and trust companies in the District of Columbia, through their presidents or cashiers, and all gas, electric lighting, and telephone companies, through their proper officers, shall make affidavit to the board of personal-tax appraisers on or before the 1st day of August each year as to the amount of its or their gross earnings or gross receipts, as the case may be, for the preceding year ending the 30th day of June, and each national bank and all other incorporated banks and trust companies respectively shall pay to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia per annum 6 per centum on such gross earnings and each gas company, electric lighting company, and telephone company shall pay to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia per annum 4 per centum on such gross receipts, from the sale of public utility commodities and services within the District of Columbia. And in addition thereto the real estate owned by each national or other incorporated bank, and each trust, gas, electric-lighting, and telephone company in the District of Columbia shall be taxed as other real estate in said District: Provided, That street-railroad companies shall pay 3 per centum per annum on their gross receipts and other taxes as provided by existing law, and insurance companies shall continue to pay the 2 per centum on premium receipts as provided by existing law. Each gas, electric-lighting, telephone and street railroad company shall pay, in addition to the tax herein mentioned, the corporate income tax imposed by title II of the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1939, and the personal property tax on merchandise stock in trade. So much of the Act approved October 1, 1890, entitled "An Act to provide for the incorporation of trust, loan, mortgage, and certain other corporations within the District of Columbia" as is inconsistent with the provisions of this section is hereby repealed."

"(b) This section shall not apply to gross earnings or gross receipts for any fiscal year ending the 30th day of June prior to the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940. Taxes shall be levied and collected for the fiscal years preceding the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, under said paragraph 5 of section 6 of said Act of July 1, 1902, as if this title had not been enacted."

"(c) Section 6 of the Act of July 1, 1902, (c. 1352, 32 Stat. 619), is amended by striking out paragraph 8, so that the corporate excess tax therein provided shall become inoperative."

"TAX ON REAL PROPERTY"

"SEC. 3. Title VII of the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, as amended, is amended to read as follows: 'For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, the rate of taxation imposed on real and tangible personal property in the District of Columbia shall be 1.75 per centum of the assessed value of such property.'

"TAXABLE STATUS OF MOTOR VEHICLES AS TANGIBLE PERSONAL PROPERTY"

"SEC. 4. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the tangible personal-property tax on motor vehicles, except when consisting of stock in trade of merchants, shall be prorated according to the number of months such property has a situs within the District; and all such motor vehicles shall be assessed at their value as of April 1 each year: Provided, however, That where a motor vehicle shall be registered in the District of Columbia for the first time on a date between April 1 of one year and April 1 of the succeeding year, such motor vehicle shall be assessed, for taxation for the period ending with the succeeding April 1, at its value as of date of application for such first registration."

"TAX APPEALS"

"SEC. 5. (a) The first sentence of the second paragraph of section 2 of title IX of the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, as amended by the Act approved May 16, 1938, is amended to read as follows: 'The salary of such person so appointed shall be $8,000 per annum.' This amendment shall be effective on and after July 1, 1939."

"(b) Section 3 of title IX of the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, as amended, is amended as follows:

"Sec. 3. Any person aggrieved by any assessment by the District against him of any personal-property, inheritance, estate, business-privilege, gross-receipts, gross-earnings, insurance-premiums, or motor-vehicle-fuel tax or taxes, or penalties thereon, may, within ninety days after notice of such assessment, appeal from such assessment to the Board, provided such person shall first pay such tax, together with penalties and interest due thereon, to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia under protest in writing. The mailing to the taxpayer of a statement of taxes due shall be considered notice of assessment with respect of such taxes. The Board shall hear and determine all questions arising on said appeal and shall make separate findings of fact and conclusions of law, and shall render its decision thereon in writing. The Board may affirm, cancel, reduce, or increase such assessment."

"(b) Subsections (a), (b), and (c) of section 5 of title IX of the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, as amended, are amended to read as follows:

"(a) The assessor and deputy assessor of the District and the board of all the assistant assessors, with the assessor as chairman, shall compose a Board of Equalization and Review, and as such Board of Equalization and Review they shall convene in a room to be provided for them by the Commissioners, on the first Monday of January of each year, and shall remain in session until the first Monday in April of each year, after which date no complaint as to valuation as herein provided shall be received or considered by such Board of Equalization and Review. Public notice of the time and place of such session shall be given by publication for two successive days in two daily newspapers in the District not more than two weeks or less than ten days before the beginning of said session. It shall be the duty of said Board of Equalization and Review to fairly and impartially equalize the value of real property made by the board of assistant assessors as the basis for assessment. Any five of said Board of Equalization and Review shall constitute a quorum for business, and, in the absence of the Assessor, a temporary chairman may be selected. They shall immediately proceed to equalize the valuations made by the board of assistant assessors so that each lot and tract and improvements thereon shall be entered upon the tax list at their value in money; and for this purpose they shall hear such complaints as may be made in respect of said assessments, and in determining them they may raise the valuation of such tracts or lots as in their opinion may have been returned below their value and reduce the valuation of such as they may believe to have been returned above their value to such sum as in their opinion may be the value thereof. The valuation of the real property made and equalized as aforesaid shall be completed not later than the first Monday of May annually. The valuation of said real property made and equalized as aforesaid shall be approved by the Commissioners not later than July 1 annually, and when approved by the Commissioners shall constitute the basis of taxation for the next succeeding year and until another valuation is made according to law, except as hereinafter provided. Any person aggrieved by any assessment, equalization, or valuation made, may, within ninety days after October 1 of the year in which such assessment, equalization, or valuation is made, appeal from such assessment, equalization, or valuation in the same manner and to the same extent as provided in sections 3 and 4 of this title: Provided, however, That such person shall have first made his complaint to the Board of Equalization and Review respecting such assessment as herein provided."

"(b) Annually, on or prior to July 1 of each year, the board of assistant assessors shall make a list of all real estate which shall have become subject to taxation and which is not then on the tax list, and affix a value thereon, according to the rules prescribed by law for assessing real estate; shall make return of all new structures erected or roofed, and additions to or improvements of old structures which shall not have been theretofore assessed, specifying the tract or lot of land on which each of such structures has been erected, and the value of such structure, and they shall add such valuation to the assessment made on such tract or lot. When the improvements on any lot or tract of land shall become damaged or be destroyed from any cause, the said board of assistant assessors shall reduce the assessment on said property to the extent of such damage: Provided, That the Board of Equalization and Review shall hear such complaints as may be made in respect of said assessments between September 1 and September 30 and determine the same not later than October 15 of the same year. Any person aggrieved by any assessment or valuation made in pursuance of this paragraph may, within ninety days after October 15 of the year in which said valuation or assessment is made, appeal from such assessment or valuation in the same manner and to the same extent as provided in sections 3 and 4 of this title: Provided, however, That such person shall have first made his complaint to the Board of Equalization and Review respecting such assessment as herein provided."

"(c) In addition to the annual assessment of all real estate made on or prior to July 1 of each year there shall be added a list of all new buildings erected or under roof prior to January 1 of each year, in the same manner as provided by law for all annual additions; and the amounts thereof shall be added as assessment for the second half of the then current year payable in the month of March. When the improvements on any lot or tract of land shall become damaged or be destroyed from any cause prior to January 1 of each year the said board of assistant assessors shall reduce the assessment on said property to the extent of said damage for the second half of the then current year payable in the month of March. The Board of Equalization and Review shall hear such complaints as may be made in respect of said assessments for the second half of said year between March 1 and March 31 and determine said complaints not later than April 15 of the same year. Any person aggrieved by any assessment made in pursuance of this paragraph may, within ninety days after April 15 of the year in which such assessment is made, appeal from such assessment in the same manner and to the same extent as provided in sections 3 and 4 of this title: Provided, however, That such person shall have first made his complaint to the Board of Equalization and Review respecting such assessment as herein provided."

"(c) Title IX of the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, as amended, is amended by adding thereto a new section reading as follows:

"Sec. 13. In any matter affecting taxation, the determination of which is by law left to the discretion of the Commissioners, the Commissioners may, if they so elect, refer such matter to the Board to make findings of fact and submit recommendations, such findings of fact and recommendations, if any, to be advisory only and not binding on the Commissioners, and shall be without prejudice to the Commissioners to make such further and other inquiry and investigation concerning such matter as they in their discretion shall consider necessary or advisable."

"TANGIBLE PERSONAL PROPERTY STORED IN TRANSIT"

"SEC. 6. Nothing in this Act contained, nor shall any prior Act of Congress relating to the District of Columbia be deemed to impose upon any person, firm, association, company, or corporation a tax based upon tangible personal property owned and stored by such person in a public warehouse in the District of Columbia for a period of time no longer than is necessary for the convenience or exigencies of reshipment and transportation to its destination without the District of Columbia."

"TITLE V—INHERITANCE AND ESTATE TAXES"

"Title V of the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, as amended by an Act entitled 'An Act to amend the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, and for other purposes,' approved May 16, 1938, is amended to read as follows:

"Taxes shall be imposed in relation to estates of decedents, the shares of beneficiaries of such estates, and gifts as hereinafter provided:

"ARTICLE I—INHERITANCE TAX"

"SEC. 1. (a) All real property and tangible and intangible personal property, or any interest therein, having its taxable situs in the District of Columbia, transferred from any person who may die seized or possessed thereof, either by will or by law, or by right of survivorship, and all such property, or interest therein, transferred by deed, grant, bargain, gift, or sale (except in cases of a bona fide purchase for full consideration in money or money's worth), made or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment after the death of the decedent, or made in contemplation of death, to or for the use of, in trust or otherwise (including property of which the decedent has retained for his life or for any period not ascertainable without reference to his death or for any period which does not in fact end before his death (1) the possession or enjoyment of, or the right to the income from such property or (2) the right, either alone or in conjunction with any person, to designate the persons who shall possess or enjoy the property or the income therefrom), to the father, mother, husband, wife, children by blood or legally adopted children, or any other lineal descendants or lineal ancestors of the decedent, shall be subject to a tax as follows: 1 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $5,000 and not in excess of $50,000; 2 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $50,000 and not in excess of $100,000; 3 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $100,000 and not in excess of $500,000; 4 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $500,000 and not in excess of $1,000,000; 5 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $1,000,000.

"(b) So much of said property so transferred to each of the brothers and sisters of the whole or half blood of the decedent shall be subject to a tax as follows: 3 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $2,000 and not in excess of $25,000; 4 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $25,000 and not in excess of $50,000; 6 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $50,000 and not in excess of $100,000; 8 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $100,000 and not in excess of $500,000; 10 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $500,000.

"(c) So much of said property so transferred to any person other than those included in paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section and all firms, institutions, associations, and corporations shall be subject to a tax as follows: 5 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $1,000 and not in excess of $25,000; 7 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $25,000 and not in excess of $50,000; 9 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $50,000 and not in excess of $100,000; 12 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $100,000 and not in excess of $500,000; 15 per centum of so much of said property as is in excess of $500,000.

"(d) Executors, administrators, trustees, and other persons making distribution shall only be discharged from liability for the amount of such tax, with the payment of which they are charged, by paying the same as hereinafter described.

"(e) Property transferred exclusively for public or municipal purposes, to the United States or the District of Columbia, or exclusively for charitable, educational, or religious purposes within the District of Columbia, shall be exempt from any and all taxation under the provisions of this section.

"(f) Where any beneficiary has died or may hereafter die within six months after the death of the decedent and before coming into the possession and enjoyment of any property passing to him, and before selling, assigning, transferring, or in any manner contracting with respect to his interest in such property, such property shall be taxed only once, and if the tax on the property so passing to said beneficiary has not been paid, then the tax shall be assessed on the property received from such share by each beneficiary thereof, finally entitled to the possession and enjoyment thereof, as if he had been the original beneficiary, and the exemptions and rates of taxation shall be governed by the respective relationship of each of the ultimate beneficiaries to the first decedent.

"(g) The provisions of article I of this title shall apply to property in the estate of every person who shall die after this title becomes effective.

"(h) The transfer of any property, or interest therein, within 2 years prior to death, shall, unless shown to the contrary, be deemed to have been made in contemplation of death.

"(i) All property and interest therein which shall pass from a decedent to the same beneficiary by one or more of the methods specified in this section, and all beneficial interests which shall accrue in the manner herein provided to such beneficiary on account of the death of such decedent, shall be united and treated as a single interest for the purpose of determining the tax hereunder.

"(j) Whenever any person shall exercise a general power of appointment derived from any disposition of property, made either before or after the passage of this title, such appointment, when made, shall be deemed a transfer taxable, under the provisions of this title, in the same manner as though the property to which such appointment relates belonged absolutely to the donee of such power; and whenever any person possessing such power of appointment so derived shall omit or fail to exercise the same, within the time provided therefor, in whole or in part, a transfer taxable under the provisions of this title shall be deemed to take place to the extent of such omissions or failure in the same manner as though the person or persons thereby becoming entitled to the possession or enjoyment of the property to which such power related had succeeded thereto by the will of the donee of the power failing to exercise such power, taking effect at the time of such omission or failure.

"(k) The doctrine of equitable conversion shall not be invoked in the assessment of taxes under this article.

"Sec. 2. The tax provided in section 1 shall be paid on the market value of the property or interest therein at the time of the death of the decedent as appraised by the assessor, or, in the discretion of the assessor, upon the value as appraised by the probate court of the District. The taxable portion of real or personal property held jointly or by the entireties shall be determined by dividing the value of the entire property by the number of persons in whose joint names it was held.

"Sec. 3. The appraisal thus made shall be deemed and taken to be the true value of the said property or interest therein upon which the said tax shall be paid, and the amount of said tax and the tax imposed by article II of this title shall be a lien on said property or interest therein for the period of ten years from the date of death of the decedent: Provided, however, That such lien shall not attach to any personal property sold or disposed of for value by an administrator, executor, or collector, of the estate of such decedent appointed by the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia or by a trustee appointed under a will filed with the register of wills for the District or by order of said court, or his successor approved by said court, but a lien for said taxes shall attach on all property acquired in substitution therefor for a period of ten years after the acquisition of such substituted property: And provided further, That such lien upon such substituted property shall, upon sale by such personal representatives, be extinguished and shall reattach in the manner as provided with respect of such original property.

"Sec. 4. The personal representative of every decedent, the gross value of whose estate is in excess of $1,000, shall, within fifteen months after the death of the decedent, report under oath to the assessor, on forms provided for that purpose an itemized schedule of all the property (real, personal, and mixed) of the decedent, the market value thereof at the time of the death of the decedent, the name or names of the persons to receive the same and the actual value of the property that each will receive, the relationship of such persons to the decedent, and the age of any persons who receive a life interest in the property, and any other information which the assessor may require. Said personal representative shall, within eighteen months of the date of the death of the decedent and before distribution of the estate, pay to the collector of taxes the taxes imposed by section 1 upon the distributive shares and legacies in his hands and the tax imposed by section 1 hereof against each distributive share or legacy shall be charged against such distributive share or legacy unless the will shall otherwise direct.

"Sec. 5. The personal representative of the decedent shall collect from each beneficiary entitled to a distributive share or legacy the tax imposed upon such distributive share or legacy in section 1 hereof, and if the said beneficiary shall neglect or fail to pay the same within fifteen months after the date of the death of the decedent such personal representative shall, upon the order of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, sell for cash so much of said distributive share or legacy as may be necessary to pay said tax and all the expenses of said sale.

"Sec. 6. Every person entitled to receive property taxable under section 1 hereof, which property is not under the control of a personal representative, and is over $1,000 in value, shall, within six months after the death of the decedent, report under oath to the assessor, on forms provided for that purpose, an itemized schedule of all property (real, personal, and mixed) received or to be received by such person; the market value of the same at the time of the death of the decedent and the relationship of such person to the decedent; and any other information which the assessor may require. The tax on the transfer of any such property shall be paid by such person to the collector of taxes within nine months after the date of the death of the decedent: Provided, however, That with respect to real estate passing by will or inheritance such report shall be made within fifteen months after the death of the decedent, and the tax on the transfer thereof shall be paid within eighteen months after the date of the death of the decedent.

"Sec. 7. In the case of any grant, deed, devise, descent, or bequest of a life interest or term of years, the donee for life or years shall pay a tax only on the value of his interest, determined in a manner as the Commissioners by regulation may prescribe, and the donee of the future interest shall pay a tax only on his interest as based upon the value thereof at the time of the death of the decedent creating such interest. The value of any future interest shall be determined by deducting from the market value of such property at the time of the death of such decedent the value of the precedent life interest or term of years. Where the future interest is vested the donee thereof shall pay the tax within the time in which the tax upon the precedent life interest or term of years is required to be paid under the provisions of sections 4 and 6 of this article, as the case may be. Where the future interest is contingent the personal representative of such decedent or the persons interested in such contingent future estate shall have the option of (1) paying, within the time herein provided for the payment of taxes due upon vested future interests, a tax equal to the mean between the highest possible tax and the lowest possible tax which could be imposed under any contingency or condition whereby such contingent future interest might be wholly or in part created, defeated, extended, or abridged; or (2) paying the tax upon such transfer at the time when such future interest shall become vested at rates and with exemptions in force at the time of the death of the decedent: Provided, That the personal representative or trustee of the estate of the decedent or the persons interested in the future contingent interest shall deposit with the assessor a bond in the penal sum of an amount equal to twice the tax payable under option (1) hereof. Such bonds shall be payable to the District and shall be conditioned for the payment of such tax when and as the same shall become due and payable. The tax upon the transfer of future interests or remainders shall be a lien upon the property or interest transferred from the date of the death of the decedent creating the interests and shall remain in force and effect until ten years after the date when such remainder or future interest shall become vested in the donee thereof. If the tax upon the transfer of a contingent future interest is paid before the same shall become vested, such tax shall be paid by the personal representative out of the corpus of the estate of the decedent, otherwise by the person or persons entitled to receive the same.

"ARTICLE II—ESTATE TAXES

"SEC. 1. In addition to the taxes imposed by article I, there is hereby imposed upon the transfer of the estate of every decedent who, after this title becomes effective, shall die a resident of the District, a tax equal to 80 per centum of the Federal estate tax imposed by subdivision (a) of section 301, title III, of the Revenue Act of 1926, as amended, or as hereafter amended or reenacted.

"SEC. 2. There shall be credited against and applied in reduction of the tax imposed by section 1 of this article the amount of any estate, inheritance, legacy, or succession tax lawfully imposed by any State or Territory of the United States, in respect of any property included in the gross estate for Federal estate-tax purposes as prescribed in title III of the Revenue Act of 1926, as amended, or as hereafter amended or reenacted: Provided, however, That only such taxes as are actually paid and credit therefor claimed and allowed against the Federal estate tax may be applied as a credit against and in reduction of the tax imposed by section 1.

"SEC. 3. In no event shall the tax imposed by section 1 of this article exceed the difference between the maximum credit which might be allowed against the Federal estate tax imposed by title III of the Revenue Act of 1926, as amended, or as hereafter amended or reenacted, and the aggregate amount of the taxes described in section 2 of this article (but not including the tax imposed by section 1) allowable as a credit against the Federal estate tax.

"SEC. 4. The purpose of section 1 of this article is to secure for the District the benefit of the credit allowed under the provisions of section 301 (c) of title III of the Revenue Act of 1926, as amended, or as hereafter amended or reenacted, to the extent that the District may be entitled by the provisions of said Revenue Act, by imposing additional taxes, and the same shall be liberally construed to effect such purpose: Provided, That the amount of the tax imposed by section 1 of this article shall not be decreased by any failure to secure the allowance of credit against the Federal estate tax.

"SEC. 5. A tax is hereby imposed upon the transfer of real property or tangible personal property in the District of every person who at the time of death was a resident of the United States but not a resident of the District, and upon the transfer of all property, both real and personal, within the District of every person who at the time of death was not a resident of the United States, the amount of which shall be a sum equal to such proportion of the amount by which the credit allowable under the applicable Federal revenue Act for estate, inheritance, legacy, and succession taxes actually paid to the several States exceeds the amount actually so paid for such taxes, exclusive of estate taxes based upon the difference between such credit and other estate taxes and inheritance, legacy, and succession taxes, as the value of the property in the District bears to the value of the entire estate, subject to estate tax under the applicable Federal revenue Act.

"SEC. 6. Every executor or administrator of the estate of a decedent dying a resident of the District or of a nonresident decedent owning real estate or tangible personal property situated in the District, or of an alien decedent owning any real estate, tangible or intangible personal property situated in the District, or, if there is no executor or administrator appointed, qualified, and acting, then any person in actual or constructive possession of any property forming a part of an estate subject to estate tax under this title shall, within sixteen months after the death of the decedent file with the assessor a copy of the return required by section 304 of the Revenue Act of 1926, verified by the affidavit of the person filing said return with the assessor, and shall, within thirty days after the date of any communication from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, confirming, increasing, or diminishing the tax shown to be due, file a copy of such communication with the assessor. With the copy of the Federal estate-tax return there shall be filed an affidavit as to the several amounts paid or expected to be paid as taxes within the purview of section 2 of this article: Provided, however, That in any case where the time for the filing of such return as required by section 304 of the Revenue Act of 1926 is extended without penalty by the Bureau of Internal Revenue, then the copy thereof verified as aforesaid may be filed with the assessor within thirty days after the expiration of said extended period.

"SEC. 7. The assessor shall, upon receipt of the return and accompanying affidavit, assess such amount as he may determine, from the basis of the return, to be due the District. Upon receipt of a copy of any communication from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, herein required to be filed, the assessor shall make such additional assessment or shall make such abatement of the assessment as may appear proper.

"SEC. 8. The estate taxes imposed by this article shall be paid to the collector of taxes within seventeen months after the death of the decedent: Provided, however, That in any case where the time for the payment of taxes imposed by subdivision (a) of section 301, title III, of the Revenue Act of 1926, is extended by the Bureau of Internal Revenue, then the tax imposed by this article shall be paid within sixty days after the expiration of such extended period, together with interest as provided in section 4 of article IV of this title: Provided further, That any additional assessment found to be due under section 7 of this article shall be paid to the collector of taxes within thirty days after the determination of such additional assessment by the assessor.

"ARTICLE III—GENERAL

"SEC. 1. The bond of the personal representative of the decedent shall be liable for all taxes and penalties assessed under this title, except inheritance taxes and penalties imposed in relation to the transfer of property not under the control of such personal representative: Provided, That in no case shall the bond of the personal representative be liable for a greater sum than is actually received by him.

"SEC. 2. The register of wills of the District shall report to the assessor on forms provided for the purpose every qualification in the District upon the estate of a decedent. Such report shall be filed with the assessor at least once every month, and shall contain the name of the decedent, the date of his death, the name and address of the personal representative, and the value of the estate, as shown by the petition for administration or probate.

"SEC. 3. The Commissioners shall have supervision of the enforcement of this title and shall have the power to make such rules and regulations, consistent with its provisions, as may be necessary for its enforcement and efficient administration and to provide for the granting of extension of time within which to perform the duties imposed by this title. The assessor shall determine all taxes assessable under this title and immediately upon the determination of same, shall forward a statement of the taxes determined to the person or persons chargeable with the payment thereof and shall give advice thereof to the collector of taxes. The assessor is hereby authorized and empowered to summon any person before him to give testimony on oath or affirmation or to produce all books, records, papers, documents, or other legal evidence as to any matter relating to this title, and the assessor is authorized to administer oaths and to take testimony for the purposes of the administration of this title. Such summons may be served by any member of the Metropolitan Police Department. If any person having been personally summoned shall neglect or refuse to obey the summons issued as herein provided, then and in that event the assessor may report that fact to the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia or one of the justices thereof, and said court or any justice thereof hereby is empowered to compel obedience to said summons to the same extent as witnesses may be compelled to obey the subpoenas of that court.

"SEC. 4. If the taxes imposed by this title are not paid when due, 1 per centum interest for each month or portion of a month from the date when the same were due until paid shall be added to the amount of said taxes and collected as a part of the same, and said taxes shall be collected by the collector of taxes in the manner provided by the law for the collection of taxes due the District on personal property in force at the time of such collection: Provided, however, That where the time for payment of the tax imposed by this title is extended by the assessor or where the payment of the tax is lawfully suspended under the regulations for the administration of this title, interest shall be paid at the rate of 6 per centum per annum from the date on which the tax would otherwise be payable.

"SEC. 5. If any person shall fail to perform any duty imposed upon him by the provisions of this title or the regulations made hereunder the Commissioners may proceed by petition for mandamus to compel performance and upon the granting of such writ the court shall adjudge all costs of such proceeding against the delinquent.

"SEC. 6. Any person required by this title to file a return who fails to file such return within the time prescribed by this title, or within such additional time as may be granted under regulations promulgated by the Commissioners, shall become liable in his own person and estate to the District in an amount equal to 10 per centum of the tax found to be due. In case any person required by this title to file a return knowingly files a false or fraudulent return, he shall become liable in his own person and estate to the said District in an amount equal to 50 per centum of the tax found to be due. Such amounts shall be collected in the same manner as is herein provided for the collection of the taxes levied under this title.

"SEC. 7. Any person required by this title to pay a tax or required by law or regulation made under authority thereof to make a return or keep any records or supply any information for the purposes of computation, assessment, or collection of any tax imposed by this title, who willfully fails to pay such tax, make any such return, or supply any such information at the time or times required by law or regulation shall, in addition to other penalties provided by law, be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both.

"SEC. 8. When the assessor is satisfied that the tax liability imposed by this title has been fully discharged or provided for, he may, under regulations prescribed by the Commissioners, issue his certificate, releasing any or all property from the lien herein imposed.

"Sec. 9. No person holding, within the District, tangible or intangible assets of any resident or nonresident decedent, of the value of $300 or more, shall deliver or transfer the same or any part thereof to any person other than an executor, administrator, or collector of the estate of such decedent appointed by the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, unless notice of the date and place of such intended transfer be served upon the assessor of the District of Columbia at least ten days prior to such delivery or transfer, nor shall any person holding, within the District of Columbia, any assets of a resident or nonresident decedent, of the value of $300 or more, deliver or transfer the same or any part thereof to any person other than an executor, administrator, or collector of the estate of such decedent appointed by said District Court without retaining a sufficient portion or amount thereof to pay any tax which may be assessed on account of the transfer of such assets under the provisions of articles I and II without an order from the assessor of the District of Columbia authorizing such transfer. It shall be lawful for the assessor of the District, personally, or by his representatives, to examine said assets at any time before such delivery or transfer. Failure to serve such notice or to allow such examination or to retain as herein required a sufficient portion or amount to pay the taxes imposed by this title shall render such person liable to the payment of such taxes. The assessor of the District may issue a certificate authorizing the transfer of any such assets whenever it appears to the satisfaction of said assessor that no tax is due thereon: Provided, however, That any corporation, foreign or domestic to the District having outstanding stock or other securities registered in the sole name of a decedent whose estate or any part thereof is taxable under this title, may transfer the same, without notice to the assessor and without liability for any tax imposed thereon under this title, upon the order of an administrator, executor, or collector of the estate of such decedent appointed by the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, or by a trustee appointed under a will filed with the register of wills of the District, or appointed by said court, or his successor approved by said court: Provided further, That the lessor of a safe-deposit box standing in the joint names of a decedent and a survivor or survivors may deliver the entire contents of such safe-deposit box to the survivor or survivors, after examination of such contents by the assessor or his representative, without any liability on the part of the said lessor for the payment of such tax.

"Sec. 10. The Bureau of Internal Revenue of the Treasury Department of the United States is authorized and required to supply such information as may be requested by the Commissioners relative to any person subject to the taxes imposed under this title or relative to any person whose estate is subject to the provisions of this title.

"Sec. 11. If any return required by this title is not filed with the assessor when due, the assessor shall have the right to determine and assess the tax or taxes from such information as he may possess or obtain.

"Sec. 12. The assessor is authorized to enter into an agreement with any person liable for a tax on a transfer under article I of this title, in which remainders or expectant estates are of such nature or so disposed and circumstanced that the value of the interest is not ascertainable under the provisions of this title, and to compound and settle such tax upon such terms as the assessor may deem equitable and expedient.

"Sec. 13. In the interpretation of this title unless the context indicates a different meaning the term "tax" means the tax or taxes mentioned in this title.

"(a) The term "District" means the District of Columbia.

"(b) The term "Commissioners" means the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, or their duly authorized representative or representatives.

"(c) The term "assessor" means the assessor of the District of Columbia or his duly authorized representative or representatives.

"(d) The term "collector of taxes" means the collector of taxes for the District of Columbia, or his duly authorized representative or representatives.

"(e) The term "Metropolitan Police Department" means the Metropolitan Police Department of the District of Columbia.

"(f) The term "include" when used in a definition contained in this title, shall not be deemed to exclude other things otherwise within the meaning of the term defined.

"(g) The term "resident" means domiciled and the term "residence" means domicile.

"Sec. 14. The provisions of this title shall become effective at 12:01 antemeridian, the day immediately following its approval."

"TITLE VI—ADVANCEMENT OF MONEY BY TREASURY

"The Secretary of the Treasury, notwithstanding the provisions of the District of Columbia Appropriation Act, approved June 29, 1922, is authorized and directed to advance, on the requisition of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, made in the manner now prescribed by law, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary from time to time to meet the general expenses of said District as authorized by Congress, and such amounts so advanced shall be reimbursed by the said Commissioners to the Treasury out of taxes and revenue collected for the support of the government of the said District of Columbia.

"TITLE VII—JOINT SELECT COMMITTEE

"A joint select committee, composed of three Senators to be appointed by the President of the Senate, and three Representatives to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, is created and is authorized and directed to make a further study of the tax structure of the District of Columbia with the purpose in view of providing a permanent tax structure for said District, and to make a report of such study with recommendations to Congress.

"TITLE VIII—GENERAL PROVISIONS

"SEPARABILITY CLAUSE

"Sec. 1. If any provision of this Act or the application thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid, the remainder of the Act, and the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances, shall not be affected thereby.

"RULES AND REGULATIONS

"Sec. 2. The Commissioners shall prescribe and publish all needed rules and regulations for the enforcement of this Act."

And the Senate agree to the same.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6577) to provide revenue for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

Title I of the House bill provided for an income tax with the following principal features: (a) 1938 to be the first taxable year, with returns to be filed on October 15, following the end of the taxable year, and payment of the tax in two installments, namely, on October 15 following the end of the taxable year and on the following April 15; (b) the tax to be imposed on all residents of the District of Columbia, regardless of source of income, and on nonresident individuals and corporations on income from sources within the District, with provisions for tax paid in other jurisdictions to avoid double taxation; (c) the rate of taxation on individuals to be 2 percent on the first $1,000 of taxable income, 3 percent on the next $2,000, 4 percent on the next $2,000, 5 percent on the next $2,000, 6 percent on the next $2,000, and 7 percent on all taxable income in excess of $9,000, and the rate on corporations to be 5 percent of their taxable income; and (d) individuals to be allowed an exemption of $2,000 on earned income and $500 on unearned income, regardless of the marital status of the taxpayer. The Senate amendment contained no provision for an income tax. The conference agreement provides for an income tax with the following principal features: (a) 1939 is the first taxable year, with returns to be filed and the entire tax to be paid on March 15 following the close of the taxable year; (b) the tax is imposed on persons domiciled in the District on the last day of the taxable year, regardless of the source of income, and upon corporations on income from sources within the District, no tax is imposed on individuals domiciled without the District on income from sources within the District, and no provision is made for credit allowance to persons domiciled in the District for tax paid to other jurisdictions on income from sources therein; (c) the rate of taxation on individuals is 1 percent on the first $5,000 of taxable income, 1½ percent on the next $5,000, 2 percent on the next $5,000, 2½ percent on the next $5,000, and 3 percent on all taxable income in excess of $20,000, and the rate on corporations is 5 percent of their taxable income; (d) there is allowed the same personal exemptions and credit for dependents as is provided in the Federal income-tax law.

Title II of the House bill provided for the advancement during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, of money by the Secretary of the Treasury to the District, for general expenses of the District for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, to be repaid out of taxes and revenue collected for the support of the District. The Senate amendment provided likewise. The conference agreement removes the time restriction.

The House bill provided that after June 30, 1939, the contribution by the United States toward expenses of the District shall in no event be more than $5,000,000 for any one fiscal year. The Senate amendment provided for a formula based upon the land area in the District owned by the United States, the application of which under present conditions would result in the payment by the United States to the District of approximately $8,000,000, being an amount equal to approximately 20 percent of the general expenses of the District. The conference agreement provides that for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for each fiscal year thereafter, there shall be appropriated for the payment by the United States toward defraying the expenses of the District the sum of $6,500,000.

Title III of the House bill provided for a parking-lot tax imposed on the operators of all parking lots in the District amounting to 2 percent of the gross receipts derived therefrom. No comparable provision is found in the Senate amendment or in the conference report. Such tax would produce only a small amount of revenue, but result in an increased burden to users of parking lots.

Title IV of the House bill provided for the amendment and repeal of certain revenue acts relating to the District, for the most part administrative. The Senate amendment in title VI provided for the amendment and repeal of the same acts, except in the following respects: The House bill provided for the repeal of the law imposing an intangible personal-property tax. The Senate amendment had no comparable provision. The House bill provided for collection of taxes by the District in jurisdictions without the District. The Senate amendment had no comparable provision. The Senate amendment provided that no tangible personal-property tax shall be imposed on personal property stored in transit in the District. The House bill had no comparable provision. The conference agreement provides for the repeal of the law imposing a tax on intangible personal property, and specifically provides that the tax on real estate and tangible personal property for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, shall be 1.75 percent of the assessed value of such property. In other matters relating to the repeal and amendment of prior acts the conference agreement conforms to the Senate amendment.

Title V of the House bill provided for the amendment of title V of the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, as amended, and provided for a new tax, namely, a gift tax. The Senate amendment provided for the amendment to the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, as amended, but did not provide for the gift tax. The conference agreement adopts such provisions of the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment provided that there shall be credited to the District that proportion of the fines and fees collected by the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia and by the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia as the amount paid by the District toward the salaries and expenses of such court bears to the total amount of such salaries and expenses. The conference agreement adopts such provision.

The conference agreement provides for the creation of a joint select committee, consisting of three Members of the Senate and three Members of the House, to study the tax structure of the District and to make a report of such study, with recommendations, to Congress.

JENNINGS RANDOLPH,
AMBROSE J. KENNEDY,
EVERETT M. DIRKSEN,
GEORGE J. BATES,

Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, before I yield any time I wish to state to the House that I find myself in a rather peculiar position here, since I was chairman of the House conferees. This conference report comes back as the result of a conference between the House and Senate conferees, a conference at which I was not present by reason of my being in Oklahoma at the time. Although I am bringing this conference report to the floor for consideration, I find it necessary that I oppose the approval of the conference report by the House, and in the end I shall ask that the bill be sent back to conference for further consideration by the conferees.

Mr. Speaker, I now yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, conferences can be such very singular things, particularly so if there is divergent disagreement with the conferees at the other end of the Capitol, and also when they tenaciously cherish a position and will not relent. It is the purpose of a conference, of course, to harmonize the differences between the two bodies, to reflect no particular obstinacy, but to get what one can for his own body.

As I evaluate the conference report on the revenue bill for the District of Columbia, I may say that we came away with the lion's share and found it necessary to make at least some concession to the Senate of the United States in order to meet the objection made by one distinguished Member of that body that he cherished some doubt as to whether the Senate was still a part of the legislative branch of the Government.

As you recall, we brought the revenue bill here. It went to the Senate, and the Senate struck out all the provisions after the enacting clause and substituted virtually a new bill. Then, of course, began the real work of the conference committee. In brief compass, I can tell you what we brought back in the way of legislative bacon for the House of Representatives.

We brought back almost every position that the House took in the original bill and made a concession only with respect to the lump sum. In the House bill was an income tax. That has been retained. In the House bill was a provision for advances from the Treasury in order to tide over an emergent situation. That has been retained. In the House bill was a provision for a parking-lot tax. That has been retained. In the House bill was a provision to make the real-estate tax $1.75 per $100, in contradistinction to the position taken by the Senate that the tax ought to be $1.50.

Mr. NICHOLS. Is not my friend wrong? When the bill left the House it provided for a $1.50 minimum and a $1.75 maximum.

Mr. DIRKSEN. That is right.

Mr. NICHOLS. And the reduction was made to $1.50.

Mr. DIRKSEN. We are sustaining the position of the House there with a rate of $1.75.

We inserted a repealer to repeal the very obnoxious intangibles tax, and that appears in the conference report. There are provisions relating to the inheritance tax, the estate taxes, gift taxes, and general administrative provisions, all of which have been retained. When the bill went over on the Senate side they struck out the income tax and substituted that abomination—I call it an abomination—known as the business privilege tax. In the conference the Senate finally relented on its position. Therefore, you can see that the Senate yielded on the income tax, they yielded on the Federal-contribution formula, they yielded on repeal of the intangibles tax, they yielded on the real-estate tax, and they yielded on the business privilege tax. Two items were identical in both bills, one dealing with utilities and the other dealing with inheritances, gifts, and estates. The House yielded partly on the lump sum and on a provision for allocation and apportionment of fines and fees.

Let me say, with respect to the income tax, it has been changed and made, in my judgment, so palatable that there can be no objection. We had considerable discussion here at the time the bill was pending before this body relative to exemptions, exclusions, deductions, and so forth. We finally followed the pattern laid down in the Federal Act of 1913, making an exemption of $1,000 for single persons, $2,500 for married persons, and $400 for children. Other deductions and exemptions that are found in the Federal act are also incorporated in this bill.

The very explosive and controversial item relative to the applicability of the tax was finally resolved when we wrote a provision in the conference bill to the effect that it applies only to those who are legally domiciled in the District of Columbia on the last day of the taxable year. This takes out Members of Congress, it takes out Senators, and it takes out the employees who come and go from Washington, making the tax applicable only to those who are domiciled in the District of Columbia on the last day of the taxable year. I believe this meets the great objection that was made to this bill in the first instance.

We are ready now, in my judgment, to adopt the most palatable thing we could work out under the circumstances as a tax pattern for the District of Columbia, and it can be improved and amended and ironed out as the years go on. The Federal act has been on the books for 25 years. Almost every year there comes a revenue bill that changes and alters the pattern in some respect to meet emergent situations. We cannot hope to give you a perfect bill at the first writing. However, I am satisfied that as time goes on we shall find that with this principle engrossed in the tax structure of the District of Columbia we have made a tremendous forward stride in developing a pattern of taxation that is durable and justifiable and progressive.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. McCORMACK. The gentleman states that it applies to the employees or those who are legally domiciled in the District the last day of the calendar year.

Mr. DIRKSEN. That is right.

Mr. McCORMACK. Take a person working for the Federal Government in any capacity, but not in the legislative branch, has he the right of electing his domicile either in the District of Columbia or in the State where he is a citizen?

Mr. DIRKSEN. The matter will have to be controlled entirely by the legal definition of domicile, which, of course, embraces the whole matter of intent.

Mr. McCORMACK. Nevertheless, that phrase is capable of more than one meaning.

Mr. DIRKSEN. So it is.

Mr. McCORMACK. And then, of course, the intent of the Congress would play an important part.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes.

Mr. McCORMACK. Will the gentleman state what his understanding or intent or what the intent of the conference committee or the Congress is in that respect, taking the case, for instance, of an employee of the Federal Government, a civil-service employee, in the Department of Agriculture or any other department, for instance, who is employed steadily year after year. Could he register as his legal place of residence Massachusetts or Illinois on the last day of the calendar year, exercising an election in the matter?

Mr. DIRKSEN. My interpretation of the matter is that their right to vote back home is preserved under this bill by complying with tax requirements, by way of poll tax and otherwise; but if they are actually domiciled here, which means that they have a legal domicile here, they will be taxable in the District of Columbia.

Mr. McCORMACK. Does the gentleman realize the situation in which that places such an employee unless he gives up his right of suffrage or the exercise of his right of suffrage? He would have to pay an income tax in his own State, he would have to pay an income tax here, and he would have to pay an income tax to the Federal Government.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I do not so understand it. I think one can have a taxable domicile in the District of Columbia and still preserve his voting rights back home.

Mr. McCORMACK. If you have a residence for voting purposes, you have a domicile in the State in which you are voting, have you not?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I do not believe so.

Mr. McCORMACK. The gentleman, I am sure, does not want to put any employee of the Federal Government in a different position from that in which he places a Member of Congress.

Mr. DIRKSEN. That is quite true.

Mr. McCORMACK. I agree that a Member of Congress should not pay an income tax to the State, to the District, and to the Federal Government. The newspapers, unfortunately, and I assume in many cases unintentionally, have misstated the situation. However, the same thing applies, in my opinion, to the employees of the Federal Government; and if their legal domicile is in the District of Columbia, they are subject to the income tax. If they register in their home State, then, in my opinion, they are also subject to the income tax of the State and they are also subject to the income tax of the Federal Government.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I may say that is not my interpretation of it and neither is that the interpretation of the tax experts who worked with the committee on this subject.

Mr. McCORMACK. I think this is a point that should be cleared up. Suppose a person comes from Boston, and the same thing applies to any other city in the country or any other State like Massachusetts, and his yearly employment is in the District of Columbia. He is living here all the year, but he registers for voting purposes in Massachusetts. He cannot vote here and we all know the reasons why, but he wants to exercise his right of suffrage and if he registers in Massachusetts, does he still have to pay the income tax here?

Mr. DIRKSEN. That precise question was raised in the course of the conference.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I will say to the gentleman from Massachusetts that I raised that precise question in the course of the conference. We had it up at considerable length with all the tax advisers to this committee, as well as the conference committee, and we were of the opinion you could be taxed here, and yet you can vote back home because you have a taxable domicile in the District. It does not interfere with your right, if you pay your poll tax in Massachusetts, to vote back there and still pay your income tax here. The situation the gentleman alludes to might very conceivably arise in connection with the case of a family that has lived here for 20 or 30 years. They continue to vote back there; but is there any reason why it should not be held that they have a taxable domicile in the District of Columbia since this is the place where they live?

Mr. McCORMACK. I understand that, and I do not want to prolong my inquiry, although I consider it very important.

Mr. DIRKSEN. It is important.

Mr. McCORMACK. I think the conference committee has decidedly improved the bill over its condition as it passed the House and the Senate, but does the gentleman not think that the District of Columbia is peculiar? It is entirely different from any other political subdivision; it is entirely different from any other city in the country. People come here from all over the country, most of them employed by the Federal Government, and most of them thinking of home. They may stay here 20 or 25 years, thinking of retirement, and thinking finally of getting back home to Michigan or California or Texas or whatever the State may be from which they came.

If they are going to be subject to the State income tax and the District income tax and the Federal income tax, then we are subjecting them to three income taxes, and in order to avoid that they have only one thing to do and that is not to register for the purpose of voting, and if we compel them to do that, then we are compelling them to involuntarily give up the exercise of their suffrage. Whether or not they are to be taxed in the States is something that we cannot determine. That will be determined in accordance with State law, not by anything that we pass, or anything that the Commissioners of the District of Columbia may say.

Mr. DIRKSEN. All we can determine is that in every State there is a credit device whereby the charge that there may be triple taxation is avoided.

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes.

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. That particular point that my colleague from Massachusetts raises was made very pointedly in the committee of conference by both the gentleman from Illinois and myself. We raised that particular point because we are much concerned about how those who come from our States would be affected by the income-tax provisions of the new law, and it was distinctly understood that in this bill there should be no triple taxation, and I well recall Senator Tydings raising the point also.

Mr. DIRKSEN. There are two other things to which I wish to allude. The first is that this conference report as it is presented today has already been approved by the Senate. The second is with respect to the lump-sum payment. The House has gone on record several times for a lump sum not in excess of $5,000,000.

The Senate, on the other hand, followed out what is known as the so-called Overton formula, whereby the amount of the lump sum should be determined by the proportion which represented the ratio of land owned by the Federal Government in the District of Columbia, with some exceptions, to the whole amount of land area in the District of Columbia. That would have worked out to a sum of approximately $8,000,000. The ratio was to be apportioned and was to be applied to the general revenues instead of only to those revenues derived from real-estate sources. As I say, it would be between seven and three-quarter million and eight million dollars, so that at the low end of the bracket you had the House position of $5,000,000 and at the top end of the bracket you had the Senate position of seven and three-quarter million to eight million dollars. That is the only comfort that the Senate finally got out of this bill, and we were constrained, it seems to me, as a matter of courtesy, as a matter of seeking to develop harmony between the two sides of the conference, to give them something to take back to their own body.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has again expired.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 2 minutes more.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes. We therefore compromised on six and one-half million dollars.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Let me understand this, if I may. If a Member of Congress, we will say, of the Committee on Appropriations, comes to Washington and is here on the last day of December, he is domiciled in Washington for the purpose of taxation?

Mr. DIRKSEN. No; he is not, definitely not. It requires something more than merely coming here.

Mr. BULWINKLE. What does it require?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I am sure my colleague is familiar with the legal definition of the word domicile. It is a combination of the act and of the intent. Certainly when you come here on business that is in pursuit of your elective occupation on the last day of the taxable year, obviously there is no attempt on your part to establish a domicile here, and I think every decision—every precedent I know anything about—is fairly clear that that does not establish domicile.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman permit me to read the legal definition of the word "domicile"?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. NICHOLS. Since the question of the effect of the word "domicile" in this act has been raised, I think the House would probably like to have the legal definition read:

Domicile is the place where one has his true, fixed, permanent home and principal establishment and to which, whenever he is absent, he has the intention of returning, and where he exercises his political rights. * * * There must exist in combination the fact of residence and animus manendi—which means residence and his intention to return; so that under this definition he could certainly live in the District of Columbia and have his legal domicile in any other State in the United States.

Mr. DIRKSEN. He might have, but it is the true, fixed, permanent abode. Certainly when you come here on the last day of the taxable year, by no stretch of the imagination could one ever determine legally that it is his true, fixed, permanent place of abode.

Mr. REED of New York. And also the courts have held that it is a matter of intent.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Almost invariably the matter of intent governs when a question of that kind arises.

As I survey the labors of the conference committee, I may say with some pride that the House conferees not only maintained the position of the House with respect to most of the major items in the bill but asserted their position with respect to the lump sum until such time as it was manifest that the conferees could reach no agreement without some compromise on this item.

We insisted on the House position of $5,000,000. The Senate insisted on $8,000,000. As a last resort, both Senate and House conferees agreed to split that sum and make it $6,500,000.

Let me emphasize the fact that the Senate has already adopted this report by a unanimous vote. Let me submit also that this is an emergent matter, since the business-privilege tax expired on June 30 and the new revenue measure contained in this report should have been in operation by the first day of July. Time is of the essence and the provisions of this measure should be made effective without delay.

We therefore submit what we deem to be an acceptable conference report for the disposition of this body.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] has expired.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and fifty-three Members are present, not a quorum.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House. A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 124]

Allen, Pa.	Duncan	Kennedy, Md.	Rockefeller
Anderson, Mo.	Eaton, Calif.	Kennedy, Michael	Sasser
Barry	Eaton, N. J.	Keogh	Schiffler

Dies	Jacobsen	O'Toole	Winter
Dingell	Kee	Pfeifer
Dittler	Kelly	Rabaut

The SPEAKER. On this roll call 334 Members have answered to their names; a quorum is present.

Without objection, further proceedings under the call will be dispensed with.

There was no objection.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I am disappointed that the conference committee has brought in this report increasing the amount of the Federal contribution to the District of Columbia to $6,500,000. That amount has remained at $5,000,000 and a little more, as I remember it, for a great many years. A review of the situation by an expert appointed by the President resulted in the determination that the Federal Government should only pay $3,700,000. I for one do not propose to be guilty of a breach of faith to my people back home, who are burdened with taxes at least three times as much as the people of the District of Columbia pay, in order that the District of Columbia may get along without paying its fair share of the operating expenses of the District of Columbia. I hope that this House will take a positive and definite position in favor of keeping the amount of the Federal contribution at the place it is now. [Applause.] I do not see why we should quit. [Applause.]

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Does the gentleman have any estimate as to the enormous amount of money that the Government pays out in this District every year?

Mr. TABER. Ninety percent of the inhabitants of the District are on the Federal pay roll and paid by the Government of the United States.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. As a matter of fact, is it not true that hundreds of millions of dollars are paid out in this District which is expended here and which helps support this population?

Mr. TABER. That is true, and they have no relief problem of any kind whatever, only that which is imported, and it would not be imported if they operated the thing properly.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Does the gentleman have any estimate as to the amount of taxes that they do not pay, which are assessed throughout the States generally and in other cities?

Mr. TABER. They do not pay anything like what we pay at home. They get out of every bit of taxes they can get out of. I do not see why we should wilt at this time. I think the House should stick to its position and reject this conference report.

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. I thoroughly agree with the gentleman from New York.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. With respect to the $6,500,000, I invite the gentleman's attention to the fact that this is the most unusual provision that has ever been submitted to this body in a legislative bill. The bill provides "for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for each fiscal year thereafter there shall be appropriated." This is not an appropriation bill. This is an appropriation made in a legislative bill in violation of the rules of the House and should properly be voted down. I would have made the point of order against the appropriation, but I discovered the language too late, as the report is not printed.

Mr. TABER. It is absolutely in violation of the rules. We should stick to our position and stand by the people who sent us here. I do not see any possible reason for the adoption of this report. I am sure that intelligence will prevail at the other end of the Capitol if we reject this report on a roll call vote. I, for one, propose to ask for that roll call vote. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE].

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, the House has already gone on record on this matter. We did when the conference report on the District appropriation bill was brought in here just shortly before the close of the fiscal year. At that time by a vote of 216 to 12, a roll-call vote, this House went on record as asking the conferees to insist upon its position that the lump sum appropriation should not exceed $5,000,000.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Gladly.

Mr. DIRKSEN. The figures of the gentleman from South Dakota are exactly right. By a vote of 216 to 12 the House insisted on $5,000,000. By a vote of 71 to 1 the Senate insisted on $8,000,000. The conferees in good faith brought back to the House a provision calling for $6,500,000, which, we felt, was a fair compromise with the Senate.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. The gentleman is mixing the action of two different committees, District appropriations and the District legislative. No; I cannot yield further. The gentleman can get his own time in which to make a speech.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I yield.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Is it not true that for years the figure has stood at $5,000,000?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Yes; and that is more than double what the Jacobs report said was a fair share for services rendered.

Mr. DIRKSEN. But it must be remembered that there are times in a conference over differing viewpoints when the conferees must make some concession. That is the only concession the House conferees made.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. The gentleman is speaking of the tax conferees, of course. The appropriation conferees did yield on a number of items but declined to yield on items that were inserted by the other body without Budget approval. And without them, there is no need to increase taxes on the country for the benefit of the District.

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I yield.

Mr. ENGEL. Does not the conferees' report provide for a continuing appropriation of $6,500,000 each year by this Congress?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. It seeks to do just that. Moreover, if we accept this sum, it will be interpreted as a precedent and will be interpreted as acceptance in principle of the Overton formula by a compromise based on that formula. This House should know what it is doing if it proposes to accept the Overton formula.

The Overton formula, if accepted in principle, means that the Government is going to be called upon to pay a proportionate rate of taxation in every State according to the ratio of public land therein. As far as I am concerned, if the Congress wants to take that position, it would benefit my State considerably, but I am opposed to doing it first for the spot in the country that needs it least. And before that is done, we should know what it will cost. We have no such information before us, and until we are ready to apply the principle throughout the country, it certainly is unfair to ask those other parts of the country, already much heavier taxed than the District of Columbia—it is unfair to tax them even more heavily to provide funds for District appropriation items that do not have Budget approval.

The only sensible thing for the House to do is to stand by its position which it took by the overwhelming vote of 216 to 12 on a roll-call vote. The amendments were added by the other body of Congress. In the face of a record vote, it is customary for the body that offers an amendment to recede. That tradition should certainly be followed in this instance when the only need for an increase in the Federal contribution is to make an appropriation for items that do not have Budget approval.

If this House believes in the integrity of its action, it will stand by its former position in this matter. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. COLLINS].

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Speaker, there are several ways of considering fiscal relations between the District of Columbia and the Federal Government. The first way I shall present to you is the way the Jacobs report considered them—that was to estimate the value of the services each government rendered to the other. The Federal Government renders certain services to the District government, and the District government on the other hand renders certain services to the Federal Government. That plan would estimate the cost of each and strike a balance. According to the Jacobs report there was a $1,848,014 balance in favor of the District of Columbia. Adding a capital-outlays balance of $224,023 in favor of the District to that figure would give a balance to the District of $2,072,037.

This House definitely discarded the Jacobs formula 3 years ago and provided a lump-sum appropriation of $5,000,000, and based it upon this proposition: Take all of the federally owned property in the District of Columbia, less the types that you find in other comparable cities in the United States such as the Capitol, post-office buildings, customhouses, deduct excess park areas, and figure all real estate at the current rate here of $1.75. According to this second method the Federal Government should pay approximately $4,500,000 to $5,000,000.

The third well-known way of figuring fiscal relations is to ascertain whether or not the taxes in the District of Columbia are higher or lower than elsewhere, and when rates of taxation are higher than in other comparable jurisdictions then the Federal Government must pay all over and above reasonable tax burdens. That was the principle largely followed in the Mapes report. That report recommended a sum not in excess of $6,500,000. But that is not all. I read the following statement from the Mapes report:

The committee feels that for the present at least the Federal Government should continue to contribute something toward the expenses of the District, the Capital of the Nation; that to do so is perhaps wise public policy and in accordance with the public sentiment of the country, but with the constant increase in value of privately owned property within the District it becomes progressively more easy for the District to meet the expenses of the District government as the years go by without undue burdens or any increases in the general property tax. The time may come when the District should in all conscience meet the total normal budget of the district government.

That report was made in 1933. Six years have elapsed and privately owned property values are much larger now than then. I regret I cannot go longer into this discussion, but my time is up. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTINGTON].

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, it strikes me this report should not be approved. In the first place the conference report has not been printed and is not now available to the membership of the House.

May I call attention to the fact that the very first section of this bill, which would be approved by the adoption of the conference report, appropriates $6,500,000 as the Federal Government's share to the District expenses, as I previously stated. This is a legislative committee. This is legislation that has not been carefully drawn and should only authorize the amount that we are to contribute. It is unprecedented for a legislative committee to make an outright appropriation. This is evidence that the conference report was not carefully considered.

Mr. Speaker, when this bill left the House there were expressly exempted Senators, Representatives, and their employees. This language has been stricken from the bill and it is now asserted by those who favor the adoption of this conference report that the insertion of the following language at another point in the same section after the word "individual," to wit, "domiciled in the District of Columbia on the last day of the taxable year" covers Senators, Representatives, and civil-service employees. When this bill left the House no one would contend that civil-service employees were exempt from the payment of the tax. I assert that the language "domiciled in the District on the last day of the taxable year" cannot possibly cover Senators and Representatives, which was stricken from the bill, and at the same time cover employees who are working in the District of Columbia for a salary. It may be granted that the language quoted would exempt Senators and Representatives, but it by no means follows that it would exempt all civil-service employees unless they have a domicile in the State to which they could return, especially if they owned and lived in their homes in the District. I submit the mere citation of those provisions shows that the bill has not been properly considered, and it should be sent back to conference.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. BATES].

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, at the outset I want to call the attention of the Members of the House to the very critical situation in which the District of Columbia, as a governmental entity, finds itself at the present time. I do not know of any problems that have given me more concern and that have taken more of my time during the last 3 years than have the problems confronting the District of Columbia. For the past 4 months, on the question of the revision of the tax structure in the District of Columbia, a subcommittee of the District Committee has given unstintingly of its time and it has tried to come to a just conclusion with reference to a fair tax structure for the District. I am somewhat mindful of what the responsibilities of the Members of Congress are to the taxpayers and residents of the District of Columbia, and also the character of the services that the District government has to render under the law. To that end we have given a good deal of our time and effort to the solution of a very distressing problem in the District of Columbia, and relating to the tax situation.

The question was whether we would proceed with temporary stopgap tax measures or embark on a permanent tax structure for the District of Columbia. Your committee brought in a report, which was ultimately adopted by the House with some substitutions, providing for an income tax and also for the elimination of the intangible and business-privilege taxes. Those two taxes, that were eliminated on my recommendation and that of other Members of the House, have been a source of great annoyance to the taxpayers of the District of Columbia during the last 2 or 3 years particularly. The elimination of those two taxes were also recommended by the tax experts who studied the District tax structure. There was a crying demand for repeal of both of these taxes. The House adopted an income-tax provision also.

The bill went to the Senate and the Senate overturned practically the entire House bill. It reinserted in the measure the intangible and business-privilege taxes and inserted also the Overton formula, so-called, namely, a Federal contribution of $8,000,000.

Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that we ought to be somewhat concerned about the situation today, because on Saturday of this week every individual working for the District of Columbia in all probability will go payless. Under the law, there is no provision for paying these salaries unless we pass some kind of an appropriation bill. The establishment of a tax structure, as I understand it, will have to be accomplished before anything of that sort will happen. This is necessary because the appropriation bill for the District is now in conference and the conferees, before agreement, should know the amount of the Federal contribution which the House finally approves.

A good deal has been said about the real-estate tax in the District. Let me call attention to a study and survey that was made by a special board of tax experts, pursuant to a resolution of the Congress a year or so ago. In their report they say that in 12 States that they examined the average property tax constituted 61.76 percent of the entire tax in those respective States, while in the District of Columbia it is 67.81 percent.

The Senate has adopted this conference report. They have yielded to us on practically every phase of the House bill with the exception of the allocation of Federal funds. The Senate bill called for $3,000,000, the House bill $5,000,000. In view of the Senate conferees agreeing to practically all the demands of the House committee, we finally agreed to compromise on the Federal grant, namely $6,500,000. You Members who have read the reports in the papers of the Overton plan can well appreciate that the Overton plan called for a Federal contribution of $8,000,000. The House conferees feel that under the circumstances it was better to accept a compromise on this matter of a Federal grant. Let me call attention especially of the new Members to the fact that from the very beginning of the organization of the Government in 1790 up to the present time, the Federal Government, in varying amounts, has contributed toward the cost and expenses of the District government.

From 1790 to 1879 the Federal contributions averaged annually 38 percent of the cost of the District government. In 1878 the Congress provided for contributions from Federal funds of 50 percent of the expenses of the District government. This 50-50 basis remained in effect for 42 years; that is, from 1879 to 1920. This latter year, 1920, the Federal contribution was $9,559,000. In 1921 it went on a 60-40 basis. In that year the Federal Government contributed $9,218,000. In 1923 it contributed $8,910,000. In 1925 it abolished the plan providing for a fixed amount to be given and substituted instead what is now generally known as the lump-sum basis. Upon this basis the Federal contribution varied from year to year, reaching a high in 1931 when the contribution was $9,500,000 and a low of $5,000,000 in the fiscal years 1938 and 1939. In 1935 and 1936 the contribution was $8,000,000.

The conference report is now before the House for consideration. As a result of several days' discussion with the Senate conference committee, we finally agreed that if they would incorporate the provisions of the House bill, we would go along and recommend to the House the adoption of the Federal contribution of $6,500,000, which was a compromise on the basis of the Overton formula.

I plead with you because of the time we have given to this subject and the effort we have put into trying to create a scientific tax structure to adopt the conference report.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Is it not true that we rejected the Overton formula entirely and struck a compromise figure between the $5,000,000, provided by the House, and the $8,000,000, provided by the Senate, namely, $6,500,000, and that is the only concession, virtually, that we made to the Senate in this whole bill?

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. That is right. The House committee succeeded in having practically the entire House bill, with the exception of the Federal-contribution provision and some minor changes, accepted by the Senate conference committee.

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. ENGEL. Does not this constitute a continuing appropriation year after year of $6,500,000 a year, without further legislation?

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. At any time the Congress wishes to repeal the law insofar as the $6,500,000 is concerned the Congress has that right. What the committee is interested in is retaining a fair real-estate tax and establishing a scientific tax structure for the District of Columbia.

Mr. ENGEL. This would require payment without any action by the Committee on Appropriations, and takes the entire matter out of the hands of that committee.

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. Under the provisions of this bill, the joint committee is to be continued, and at the next session of Congress they are to report to the Congress the results of their further study. In the meantime they will be able to determine the amount of income from income-tax sources.

Mr. ENGEL. It will require action of both Houses and the signature of the President of the United States to change it once it is passed and signed, will it not?

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. That is true; but on the other hand, as I said before, according to the provisions of the bill at the present time, what we are interested in is getting the income tax enacted into law, because it is fundamentally a sound tax.

I wish to call the attention of the Members of the House to this situation existing in the District.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. I do not have time to yield.

According to the returns of the Federal Income Tax Division, in 1937, on the basis of returns of 110,658 people in the District, a tax of $11,629,939 was paid to the Federal Government on an income of $329,915,913. It must be kept in mind that while we are providing for an income tax in this bill we are also wiping out two forms of very obnoxious taxes, namely, the tax on intangibles and the business-privilege tax.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. DIRKSEN. With respect to the observation made by the gentleman from Mississippi about striking the language referring to Senators and Representatives, is it not true that the conference committees were unanimous in the opinion that the word "domicile" would be ample, that this word was satisfactory to all the tax experts, and that the conference report has been approved unanimously by the Senate of the United States?

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. That was one of the main points of discussion, because we were particularly interested in the effect it would have on the people, including the Members of the House and Senate, who work in the District of Columbia but whose homes were back in our own States. With that in mind, we discussed it at quite some length with the experts who sat in with the conference committee, and determined according to that most expert advice that the word "domicile" would cover the point in which all Members of this House and the Senate are particularly interested.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. I yield to the gentleman from South Dakota.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Of course, the gentleman is aware of the fact that appropriations are supposed, under the Constitution, to originate in the House, and, further, that appropriations are primarily the concern of the Appropriations Committee, which conducts hearings on the needs of the District. The gentleman said he is interested in establishing a tax principle. The Appropriations Committee is not worried about that and are perfectly willing that the legislative committee shall establish a tax principle; but they do object to the legislative committee's attempting to write into a conference report a mandate on appropriations.

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. This is not the first time that has happened. It has happened from the beginning of the Government.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, I trust this conference report will be voted down. As soon as the conference report is voted down, if it is, I shall make a motion that the managers on the part of the House be instructed by the House to insist on two things, first, the $5,000,000 Federal contribution instead of the $6,500,000 contribution, and second, not to agree to the creation of a joint committee for further study of the tax problems of the District of Columbia. These two things I seriously object to.

I want to talk about this joint committee for a minute. If you will recall, last year we set up by a provision of the House bill a joint committee and appropriated either $5,000 or $10,000, I forget which, for that committee to make a study of the tax structure of the District of Columbia. That was a fine committee and they did a grand job. They employed as good experts, in my judgment, as it is possible to find. They wrote a very comprehensive report and made very definite recommendations for a tax structure for the District of Columbia. Their report was, by the Committee on the District of Columbia, kicked bodily out of the window.

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield at that point?

Mr. NICHOLS. I have given the gentleman a lot of time, and I have saved only 5 minutes for myself.

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. I believe the gentleman ought to correct himself on that point.

Mr. NICHOLS. Very well; then I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. Is it not true that the House bill as we passed it, with the exception of the elimination of the sales tax and the lowering of the brackets on the income tax, is exactly the report of that committee making a study of the tax structure?

Mr. NICHOLS. Yes; but the report was so made that it was a comprehensive plan, and to take out any portion of it destroyed the whole plan.

There have been tax studies made for the District of Columbia time and time again. There has never yet been a single report adopted favorably by either the District of Columbia Committee or the House of Representatives.

There are only two things in this bill which can affect materially your constituents or my constituents back home: One of them is the Federal contribution and the other is the amount of money appropriated to carry on further investigations of a subject that has already been overinvestigated.

Now, as to the contribution, this $5,000,000 is an arbitrary figure, the $6,500,000 is an arbitrary figure, and I submit that every expert who has been requested to fix a formula or a yardstick, with the exception of the distinguished Senator from Louisiana, if he can be called an expert, has fixed a figure less than $5,000,000 as the Federal contribution to the District of Columbia. In one report where it was proposed to pay the District of Columbia the difference between the value of services rendered by the Federal Government to the District government and by the District government to the Federal Government, that figure was less than 50 percent or about 50 percent of $5,000,000, the amount being $2,800,000, as I recall it. When it was proposed that a value be placed on federally owned tax-exempt property in the District of Columbia and that that property be assessed as business property and that the Federal Government pay a sum to the District government equal to the amount of money that would have been paid on Federal property assessed as business property, you got a figure considerably less than $5,000,000—$3,000,000-plus is my recollection.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 2 additional minutes.

Even with the Overton plan which raised $8,000,000, it was necessary to compel the Federal Government to pay a percentage of every kind of tax paid in the District of Columbia, including dog tax, and including even the $5,000,000 Federal contribution, and I know that the citizens of the District of Columbia do not want more than they are entitled to. I have been with this question for 5 years and nobody has ever been able to convince me that $5,000,000 is not just a little bit more than the District of Columbia is entitled to by way of contribution from the Federal Government, and I believe there should be some rhyme or reason to this thing, but since there is not and if we are going to fix an arbitrary figure, the best I am willing to do is to give them a little more than I believe they are entitled to.

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SIROVICH. A great deal of our time with District matters is taken up that ought to be given to national legislation. Why could not the distinguished gentleman prepare a bill that would transfer the District of Columbia to Maryland; give it congressional representation, enfranchise a disfranchised group so that we could attend to national affairs alone? [Applause.]

Mr. NICHOLS. The gentleman might be surprised to know that I, 2 years ago, introduced such a bill in the House of Representatives. It provided for the ceding of the District of Columbia back to Maryland [applause], and leaving in the control of the Federal Government only the federally owned property in the District of Columbia.

Mr. KITCHENS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield.

Mr. KITCHENS. I would like to submit to the gentleman the proposition that if you will move all this Government set-up down to Magnolia, Ark., we will be glad to pay all the taxes. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I hope the House will vote down this conference report.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma has expired.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. RANDOLPH].

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker—

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from West Virginia yield?

Mr. RANDOLPH. Yes; I yield.

Mr. COCHRAN. Would the gentleman tell the House whether the obnoxious business-privilege tax is in this conference report, a tax which is nothing more than a tariff on American citizens doing business in the District of Columbia.

Mr. RANDOLPH. I may say in answer to the question of my friend from Missouri that the business-privilege tax is entirely stricken from the report brought in by the conferees for your consideration this afternoon. I agree with the gentleman that the tax was an obnoxious one and I believe that we have upheld the position of this House in striking it from this report.

Mr. COCHRAN. I am very pleased to hear that.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I want to pay tribute in my introductory remarks to the conferees of the House who have worked honestly and industriously long hours to bring back to this body a conference report which we feel does not subtract from the action of the House on previous occasions, but actually adds to the House position when we consider all the factors that were necessary to be considered in the drafting of a final proposal for your approval. Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland, Mr. DIRKSEN, Mr. BATES of Massachusetts, and myself signed the report. Our chairman, Mr.

NICHOLS, has not joined us and yet I know his opposition is sincere.

I have a genuine regard for the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Appropriations for the District of Columbia [Mr. COLLINS]. He has just spoken here this afternoon of a situation relative to the payment by the Federal Government toward the running expenses of the District of Columbia government. I feel it is appropriate to direct your attention to the fact that in the report of a select committee on fiscal relations between the United States and the District of Columbia submitted by its chairman, the distinguished gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MAPES], on December 15, 1933, this language was included in that report:

Taking all the circumstances and conditions as they exist into consideration, as long as the fundamental factors in the District remain as they are, the committee recommends that the United States contribute annually toward the development and maintenance of the municipality of the District of Columbia a lump sum not to exceed $6,500,000.

That report was submitted by Representatives Carl E. Mapes, William P. Holaday, W. G. Sears, Erwin L. Davis, Ross A. Collins, and Wright Patman. I think it might be interesting in connection with that report of House Members, three of whom continue distinguished service in this House—Mr. MAPES, Mr. COLLINS, and Mr. PATMAN—that we recall that for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933, the National Government, through the Congress, realizing the sum set by those gentlemen for $6,500,000, appropriated as the annual payment to the District of Columbia from the Federal Government the sum of $7,775,000, that amount being in excess of the report by $1,275,000.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANDOLPH. Yes; I yield to my friend from Massachusetts.

Mr. McCORMACK. Can the gentleman state what was the amount appropriated for the total expenses of the District that year as compared with the coming fiscal year?

Mr. RANDOLPH. I cannot give the gentleman the figures, but I can say that the appropriations for the general fund were much less than the appropriations for the general fund in 1939.

Mr. McCORMACK. In other words, the appropriations for the coming fiscal year are much higher than in 1933?

Mr. RANDOLPH. That is true. Let us go into this matter of the Federal payment. Originally 50 percent of the expenses of operating the District were borne by the Federal Government. That has been brought out by an earlier speaker [Mr. BATES of Massachusetts]. Later it was changed to 40 percent, and in recent years the percentage to the general fund has been about 18 to 20 percent. To be specific, the Federal payment in 1920 was $9,953,000 when the total appropriations for the general fund in that year were $19,000,000, as contrasted with $5,000,000 against the general fund in 1939, of $39,000,000.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANDOLPH. Yes.

Mr. NICHOLS. I just want to read to the gentleman and the House the following paragraph from the Mapes report, to which the gentleman referred:

The committee feels that for the present, at least, the Federal Government should continue to contribute something toward the expenses of the District, the Capital City of the Nation; that to do so is perhaps wise public policy and in accordance with the public sentiment of the country, but with the constantly increasing values of privately owned property in the District, it becomes progressively more easy for the District to meet the expenses of the District government as the years go by, without undue burden or any increase in the general property tax. The time may come when the District should in all conscience meet the total normal budget of the District government.

Mr. RANDOLPH. I well know the words that the gentleman has quoted. I do call attention to this fact, however, that increasingly the Federal Government has expanded its holdings and its operations in the District of Columbia, taking out from taxable property in the District of Columbia large amounts each year.

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANDOLPH. Yes.

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. In 1935 the total amount of tax-exempt property in the District was $690,000,000. That was the total amount of tax-exempt property, and in 1938 that sum had reached $812,000,000.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANDOLPH. Yes.

Mr. DONDERO. Can the gentleman give the House comparable figures on the rate of taxation of cities around the same size as the city of Washington?

Mr. RANDOLPH. I would like to do that, but I do not have the time nor do I have the figures here; but in some instances Washington figures are higher and in other instances lower. I believe, although I do not say this as an absolute fact, that the study shows that the people are paying their fair share of the tax burden in the District of Columbia.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Could the gentleman state what has been the increase in the assessed valuation of the District in the same period of time?

Mr. RANDOLPH. I could not give the exact figures. I think the gentleman from Massachusetts has them there.

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. About $50,000,000.

Mr. RANDOLPH. I think that is about the figure.

Mr. POAGE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANDOLPH. Yes.

Mr. POAGE. I want to ask the gentleman two questions. First, does the Mapes report, which the gentleman quoted, recommend an appropriation of $6,500,000 or not to exceed $6,500,000?

Mr. RANDOLPH. Not to exceed $6,500,000.

Mr. POAGE. Now, will the gentleman make this clear? Just what towns of comparable size to the city of Washington pay less taxes than the people in the city of Washington?

Mr. RANDOLPH. Studies show that such is the case.

Mr. POAGE. Just what towns?

Mr. RANDOLPH. I cannot recall the names just now, but studies show such to be true, and the hearings on the last year's tax bill list the communities in question.

Mr. POAGE. I ask just what cities show that. Are there any towns in the Southwest that do? Can the gentleman name any such town?

Mr. DIRKSEN. As I recall, there was a study made of some 30 cities of comparable size. About half of them were above Washington and about half below.

Mr. POAGE. What cities paid less?

Mr. DIRKSEN. You can find them in the hearings on the tax bill last year. I do not happen to have those figures here. I shall be happy to put them in the RECORD, however.

Mr. RANDOLPH. I have attempted to be very fair in yielding to Members, and I should like to continue, as my time is short. Your conferees have worked, as I said at the beginning, diligently to bring back to this body a bill that can be supported. We have compromised, to be sure, but any conference committee of this House has to go to the conference table with a desire to compromise, give and take, and iron out differences, realizing that we are not alone in the closing days, perhaps, of this session, but more literally we are in critical hours and pressing hours, from the standpoint of the operation of the District of Columbia and from the standpoint of funds that are badly needed. I believe this House should stand by the conferees of its body, who have labored hard and have brought back to you a proposal which is fair and proper and needed at this time. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PATMAN). The time of the gentleman has expired. All time has expired.

The question is on the adoption of the conference report.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DIRKSEN. A vote "aye" is a vote to adopt the conference report and "no" is to reject it?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is correct.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. DIRKSEN) there were—ayes 36 and noes 131.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and sixty-seven Members are present, not a quorum.

The roll call is automatic. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—ayes 74, noes 238, not voting 116, as follows:

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.
A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.
The doors were opened.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House insist on its disagreement to the Senate amendments and return the bill to conference.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Oklahoma.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion which is at the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion of the gentleman from Oklahoma.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. NICHOLS moves that the managers on the part of the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on H. R. 6537 be instructed to insist on the House provision of $5,000,000 as the Federal contribution and that they shall not agree to any provision for a joint committee to study tax problems for the District of Columbia.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Oklahoma.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. DIRKSEN) there were—ayes 168 and noes 5.

So the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the Chair appoints the following conferees: Mr. NICHOLS, Mr. RANDOLPH, Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland, Mr. DIRKSEN, and Mr. BATES of Massachusetts.

There was no objection.

RATIFICATION OF COMPACT TO CONSERVE OIL AND GAS

Mr. COLE of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the resolution (H. J. Res. 329) consenting to an interstate oil compact to conserve oil and gas.

The Clerk read the title of the House joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Reserving the right to object, what is this compact about?

Mr. COLE of Maryland. The resolution is merely a renewal of a similar resolution passed in 1935, in 1937, and now, at the request of the President in a message which came to the Congress about 2 weeks ago, this resolution asks for a 2-year extension of the last compact. There is no opposition to it that I know of. The committee has unanimously reported it.

Mr. SHEPPARD. How much relation does this have to California's interests in tideland oil?

Mr. COLE of Maryland. Not a thing at all. This is a request from six of the major States producing oil.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I could not hear the colloquy on the other side of the aisle.

Mr. COLE of Maryland. The gentleman from California wanted to know, I may say to the gentleman from Michigan, what the resolution was about.

Mr. MAPES. It is simply the reenactment of an existing interstate compact with the exception of the addition of one or two States.

Mr. COLE of Maryland. That is right. The State of Michigan is embraced in the compact for the first time.

Mr. MAPES. The State of Michigan is embraced in the compact by the present resolution, but was not in the previous oil compacts.

Mr. COLE of Maryland. The gentleman is right. The gentleman is a distinguished member of the subcommittee, of which I am chairman, which considered the resolution and recommended it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby given to an extension and renewal for a period of 2 years from September 1, 1939, of the interstate compact to conserve oil and gas, executed in the city of Dallas, Tex., the 16th day of February 1935 by the representatives of the States of Oklahoma, Texas, California, and New Mexico, and thereafter recommended for ratification by the representatives of the States of Arkansas, Colorado, Illinois, Kansas, and Michigan, and subsequently ratified by the States of New Mexico, Kansas, Oklahoma, Illinois, Colorado, and Texas, which said compact was deposited in the Department of State of the United States, and thereafter such compact was, by the President, presented to the Congress and the Congress gave consent to such compact by House Joint Resolution 407, approved August 27, 1935 (Public Res. No. 64, 74th Cong.), and which said compact was thereafter extended and renewed for a period of 2 years from September 1, 1937, by an agreement executed in New Orleans, La., the 10th day of May 1937, by the representatives of the States of Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, and New Mexico, and was duly ratified by the States of Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, New Mexico, Illinois, and Colorado, and was deposited in the Department of State of the United States, and thereafter such extended and renewed compact was, by the President, presented to the Congress and the Congress gave consent to such extended and renewed compact by Senate Joint Resolution 183, approved August 10, 1937 (Public Res. No. 57, 75th Cong.).

The extended and renewed compact, dated the 5th day of April 1939, duly executed by the representatives of the States of Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, New Mexico, Colorado, and Michigan, and duly authorized and ratified by the said States of Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, New Mexico, Colorado, and Michigan, and which extended and renewed compact has been deposited in the Department of State of the United States, reads as follows:

"AN AGREEMENT TO EXTEND THE INTERSTATE COMPACT TO CONSERVE OIL AND GAS"

"Whereas, on the 16th day of February 1935, in the city of Dallas, Tex., there was executed 'An interstate compact to conserve oil and gas' which was thereafter formally ratified and approved by the States of Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico, Illinois, Colorado, and Kansas, the original of which is now on deposit with the Department of State of the United States, a true copy of which follows:

"AN INTERSTATE COMPACT TO CONSERVE OIL AND GAS"

"Article I"

"This agreement may become effective within any compacting State at any time as prescribed by that State, and shall become effective within those States ratifying it whenever any three of the States of Texas, Oklahoma, California, Kansas, and New Mexico have ratified and Congress has given its consent. Any oil-producing State may become a party hereto as hereinafter provided.

"Article II"

"The purpose of this compact is to conserve oil and gas by the prevention of physical waste thereof from any cause.

"Article III"

"Each State bound hereby agree that within a reasonable time it will enact laws, or if laws have been enacted, then it agrees to continue the same in force, to accomplish within reasonable limits the prevention of:

"(a) The operation of any oil well with an inefficient gas-oil ratio.

"(b) The drowning with water of any stratum capable of producing oil or gas, or both oil and gas in paying quantities.

"(c) The avoidable escape into the open air or the wasteful burning of gas from a natural-gas well.

"(d) The creation of unnecessary fire hazards.

"(e) The drilling, equipping, locating, spacing, or operating of a well or wells so as to bring about physical waste of oil or gas or loss in the ultimate recovery thereof.

"(f) The inefficient, excessive, or improper use of the reservoir energy in producing any well.

"The enumeration of the foregoing subjects shall not limit the scope of the authority of any State.

"Article IV"

"Each State bound hereby agrees that it will, within a reasonable time, enact statutes, or if such statutes have been enacted then that it will continue the same in force, providing in effect that oil produced in violation of its valid oil and/or gas-conservation statutes or any valid rule, order, or regulation promulgated thereunder, shall be denied access to commerce; and providing for stringent penalties for the waste of either oil or gas.

"Article V"

"It is not the purpose of this compact to authorize the States joining herein to limit the production of oil or gas for the purpose of stabilizing or fixing the price thereof, or create or perpetuate monopoly, or to promote regimentation, but is limited to the purpose of conserving oil and gas and preventing the avoidable waste thereof within reasonable limitations.

"Article VI"

"Each State joining herein shall appoint one representative to a commission hereby constituted and designated as 'The Interstate Oil Compact Commission,' the duty of which said Commission shall be to make inquiry and ascertain from time to time such methods, practices, circumstances, and conditions as may be disclosed for bringing about conservation and the prevention of physical waste of oil and gas, and at such intervals as said Commission deems beneficial it shall report its findings and recommendations to the several States for adoption or rejection.

"The Commission shall have power to recommend the coordination of the exercise of the police powers of the several States within their several jurisdictions to promote the maximum ultimate recovery from the petroleum reserves of said States, and to recommend measures for the maximum ultimate recovery of oil and gas. Said Commission shall organize and adopt suitable rules and regulations for the conduct of its business.

"No action shall be taken by the Commission except: (1) By the affirmative votes of the majority of the whole number of the compacting States, represented at any meeting, and (2) by a concurring vote of a majority in interest of the compacting States at said meeting, such interest to be determined as follows: Such vote of each State shall be in the decimal proportion fixed by the ratio of its daily average production during the preceding calendar half-year to the daily average production of the compacting States during said period.

"Article VII"

"No State by joining herein shall become financially obligated to any other State, nor shall the breach of the terms hereof by any State subject such State to financial responsibility to the other States joining herein.

"Article VIII"

"This compact shall expire September 1, 1937. But any State joining herein may, upon 60 days' notice, withdraw herefrom.

"The representatives of the signatory States have signed this agreement in a single original which shall be deposited in the archives of the Department of State of the United States, and a duly certified copy shall be forwarded to the governor of each of the signatory States.

"This compact shall become effective when ratified and approved as provided in article 1. Any oil-producing State may become a party hereto by affixing its signature to a counterpart to be similarly deposited, certified, and ratified.

"Done in the city of Dallas, Tex., this 16th day of February 1935.

"Whereas said Interstate Compact was heretofore duly renewed and extended for 2 years from September 1, 1937, its original expiration date, to September 1, 1939; and,

"Whereas it is desired to again extend and renew said Interstate Compact to Conserve Oil and Gas for another period of 2 years from September 1, 1939, its present expiration date, to September 1, 1941: Now, therefore, this writing witnesseth:

"It is hereby agreed that the said Compact entitled 'An Interstate Compact to Conserve Oil and Gas' executed in the city of Dallas, Tex., on the 16th day of February 1935, and now on deposit with the Department of State of the United States, a correct copy of which appears above, be, and the same hereby is, extended for a period of 2 years from September 1, 1939, its present date of expiration, this agreement to become effective within those States joining herein when executed by any three of the States of Texas, Oklahoma, California, Kansas, and New Mexico, and consent thereto is given by Congress.

"The signatory States executed this agreement in a single original which shall be deposited in the archives of the Department of State of the United States and a duly certified copy thereof shall be forwarded to the governor of each of the signatory States.

"Executed as of this the 5th day of April 1939, by the several undersigned States, at their several capitols, through their proper officials thereunto duly authorized by statutes, resolutions, or proclamations of the several States."

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal the provisions of section 1 is hereby expressly reserved.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD, and to include therein an address delivered this afternoon by an outstanding civic leader of this city on Washington; Its Problems, Its Future, and Its History.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein certain newspaper and magazine items.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I did not hear the gentleman's request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan will restate his request.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein certain clippings from newspapers and magazines.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. ELLIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an address I made on the Fourth of July at Springdale, Ark.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. HARRINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to renew an extension of remarks granted me on May 18.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. ALLEN of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and to include therein a portion of an address recently made by the national commander of the American Legion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HARRINGTON] may extend his remarks in the RECORD and include therein a statement on waterways development.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD a digest of an article which appeared in Collier's Weekly.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. COLLINS, Mr. BENDER, Mr. ALEXANDER, and Mr. JONES of Ohio asked and were given permission to revise and extend their own remarks.

RADIO CENSORSHIP

Mr. McLEOD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. McLEOD. Mr. Speaker, on June 2 last I had occasion to call to the attention of the House the adoption of certain regulations by the Federal Communications Commission relating to the broadcasting of international programs by radio. These regulations enjoin any international program from this country not deemed to reflect American culture or to promote international good will, understanding, and cooperation. They go further and say that on a commercially sponsored program, only the name of the sponsor shall be permitted.

Since that time, spokesmen in both Houses of Congress, several organizations, including the National Association of Broadcasters and the American Civil Liberties Union, and scores of daily newspapers in editorials have condemned this un-American censorship of radio by a Government agency which has moved heaven and earth to prevent the Congress from exposing its ruthlessness.

These regulations were adopted without the knowledge of the interested parties, without holding hearings to determine their views, and when an angry public reaction set in, the Commission back-tracked and granted a 1-day hearing and tearfully bemoaned the misunderstanding public. We had not thought of censorship, it cried. Now, gentlemen, it is futile to talk about motives when the thing already exists in fact. However, no one can make me believe that the Commission did not know that it was imposing censorship of the rankest kind and that it fully intended to impose such censorship.

This group down on Pennsylvania Avenue has long sought control of the air lanes, but each time its fingers tightened about the throat of the radio industry, an enlightened public defeated its purpose.

Encroachment of bureaucracy, however, is very persistent. Power grows by what it feeds upon. It is tormented by a chronic itch to extend and exercise itself.

So now we are faced with the fact that in flagrant violation of the Federal Communications Act and in spite of an aroused public opinion which it completely ignores, this thoroughly discredited Federal body imposes drastic censorship, which will, if allowed to stand, destroy the American system of broadcasting and substitute therefor the Hitler system, the Mussolini system, the Stalin system.

I say to you, gentlemen, that the Congress of the United States in face of the present situation must not be fooled by the bland assertion of the Federal Communications Commission that it intends no censorship. This is censorship, and we must face the challenge as our people expect us to face it—squarely and in the real American way. We know too much of the way of the totalitarian countries to imitate their methods or permit a branch of the Government to imitate them. We know that before dictatorships can survive, control of radio and the press must be achieved. And we know that dictatorships are repugnant to every American man, woman, and child.

There are resolutions pending in both Houses of Congress which call for a full investigation of the undemocratic Federal Communications Commission. Before we finish this session, I sincerely trust that one of these resolutions will be reported out under a special rule and that a committee of this body will be authorized during the recess to probe into the unhealthy conditions existing at the F. C. C. And I hope further that if this body does not immediately rescind these Nazi international broadcast regulations that its members be removed from office at once.

Under the circumstances the members of the Federal Communications Commission do not deserve any consideration. We must indict them for what they are—usurpers, law violators, and, worst of all, violators of their solemn oath to uphold the Constitution of the United States. [Applause.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HARRINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an article by Carl H. Wilken, of Sioux City, Iowa, entitled "The Key to the Economic Riddle."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous special order of the House, the gentleman from California, Mr. LELAND M. FORD, is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. LELAND M. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I wish to make a few remarks in connection with the item of $3,860,000,000 in spending for self-liquidating lending program, urged by the President.

Had we not better stop, get our feet on the ground, and do some real thinking about items such as these, particularly with their relation to the ability of the taxpayer to pay? Also, had we not better stop and do some real thinking about that day of reckoning which is bound to come, before it is too late?

So far as I am concerned, I do certainly believe there is going to be a day of reckoning, just as sure as there is a God in heaven, and I therefore think that we certainly should pause and ask ourselves a few questions, as follows:

Where are we going?

What are we doing?

What effect is this kind of spending going to have on our country, and what is it now doing to our country?

Do we want this country to remain an American democracy, or do we want to exchange our Constitution, with our Bill of Rights giving us our individual liberty, our other American institutions and ideals, for socialism, fascism, nazi-ism, or communism? I, for one, believe that we do not.

I believe if every Member of this House will properly weigh this question he will certainly find that there is no room for partisanship, and I believe he will agree that we must bury any considerations of party for that big consideration, namely, the welfare, safety, and preservation of this country above all else.

Every Member of this House knows that the total debt limit, at any one time, cannot now exceed $45,000,000,000, and that we now owe some $40,000,000,000.

Every Member of this House knows that so-called feelers have recently been put out to see whether this Congress would or would not acquiesce in the increase of that debt limit. Every Member of this Congress knows that the answer given to these feelers was a definite and positive "no."

Inasmuch as the answer was "no" when the matter was put up to Congress very plainly, it appears to me that the matter of raising this debt limit is now put up to us in a back-door method, and I think the answer should again be "no." I think that it is high time every Member of this Congress used his good, common, horse sense and that he not be carried away or misled by honeyed words, sugar-coated pills, or high-sounding phrases that are not what they appear to be.

So far as I am concerned I resent this new angle of approach, which, if its objects are acquired, will finally result in the spending of more billions of dollars. So far as I am again concerned, I think this is the time for us to call our debts in plain English by the name of debts and quit referring to them as investments. There is a vast difference between a debt, which is a liability, and an investment, which should be a resource, and it is high time that the highest governmental body in the United States recognized this and acted accordingly.

We are now approached with a high-sounding term called self-liquidating debts. To those who have been reading the world's news the word "liquidation" has now taken unto itself a very sinister meaning, and in certain European countries certain groups of people have been liquidated, the democratic form of government has been liquidated, all unions have been liquidated, religion has been liquidated, and business as we in America have come to know it has also been liquidated. Therefore I do not like this term "self-liquidating," for it is my opinion that if this tremendous program of spending is carried out it will be self-liquidating, and that same program will liquidate yourself, will liquidate myself, and will liquidate this Government, together with all the other things it has liquidated in Europe above mentioned.

In order to put into effect this vast $4,000,000,000 spending program, every one of you know, and I know, that money must be raised. This money does not grow on trees, and money cannot be had for the asking or without some form of effort or work. If it is not raised directly from the Treasury Department and the various other governmental departments do raise this money, as suggested by the President, we know that someone must put it up, and even if bonds are issued by departments or other agencies, and these same bonds are guaranteed by the United States Government, this then becomes a liability of the United States Government. This is, therefore, the indirect method used to automatically increase the total debt limit that may be in effect at any one time in this country. In other words, that is your back-door entrance and indirect method of doing that which Congress has refused knowingly and directly to do.

Let us recognize what is actually happening, and let us let it be known that the back door has the same kind of a lock on it that the front door has, and that so far as this Congress is concerned, from now on there will be no back-door entrance; that no more honeyed words or sugar-coated pills or high-sounding phrases to cover up objectives will be accepted. Let us begin to recognize these things for what they are, and call a spade a spade.

We have had much use of the words "social security." In my opinion, it is such expenditures as that above named that are undermining not only social security in this country but all other security. May I ask a question of those who expect social security? What is their position going to be on that day of reckoning when this Government has spent more money than it can pay back and finds itself in a bankrupt condition? How much security are these hundreds of thousands of people going to have under those conditions? How much in payments will they get? The answer is, "Nothing." How much security is there going to be for the remainder of the people in this country under such a program? How much security is there going to be for investment of any kind? How secure will any individual in this country be under a program that is now being carried on wherein the country is consistently, each year, not only spending more than it takes in but wherein each year's deficit is greater than that of the preceding year? These are questions that the people in this country must meet and that the Congress of the United States has eventually to answer and which cannot be sidestepped. I am going to say to you that we are no more secure than any person or any business who constantly extends credit to customers or clients who he knows cannot pay, or who spend more than they get in. We must not forget that the taxpayers and the citizens of this country are customers of this Government; that they are now approaching the limit of their ability to pay; and it must be recognized that the financial strength of this country is no greater than the financial ability of its citizens to pay taxes.

It is my opinion that the vast majority of our people are beginning to recognize that this country can no longer continue the spendthrift program that has been in effect.

We have come to a fork in the road and we must now take the road which will take us back to safety, solvency, and prosperity. This in turn will protect our democratic form of government, together with all of its American institutions, and not destroy them. This road is not the one of spending more billions. In this connection I might suggest that every Congressman read two articles in the last Reader's Digest, under date of July 1939, titled as follows: "Debt Threatens Democracy," and "You Can Make Your Government Save." In my opinion there is a great deal of vital information contained within these articles.

The mounting cost of government may be seen as follows:

1927.....	$3,000,000,000
1932.....	4,500,000,000
1934.....	6,000,000,000
1936.....	8,500,000,000
1939.....	9,500,000,000

This last figure of $9,500,000,000 will probably go over $10,000,000,000 by the time the unbudgeted items are taken into consideration.

Here is another table showing Federal receipts and disbursements, in millions of dollars, for recent years.

	Receipts	Expenditures	National debt end of year
Fiscal year—
1930.....	4,178	3,994	16,185
1931.....	3,190	4,092	16,801
1932.....	2,006	5,154	19,487
1933.....	2,080	5,143	22,539
1934.....	3,116	7,105	27,053
1935.....	3,800	7,376	28,701
1936.....	4,116	8,880	33,545
1937.....	5,294	8,105	36,427
1938.....	6,242	7,626	37,165
1939 <sup>1</sup> .....	5,520	9,492	41,132

It was said during these years that this spending program would end the depression and that it would end unemployment, but, as a matter of fact, for those who are willing and able to recognize the truth, the depression is still with us in a worse form than it ever was, and there are more people unemployed. I use the term, "the depression is worse than it ever was," purposely, believing the difference between now and those earlier years is: That the Government itself has been weakened by reason of the fact that the national debt is now some $40,000,000,000 instead of approximately some twenty billions, and we are worse off than when we started. Therefore, I consider the security of our people, the security of investment, the security of business, the security of industry, and the individual security of every person in the United States is not nearly so good as it was in those same earlier years. Cure-alls have been tried, quicker methods out of depression have been advocated and tried, business has been taxed, regulated, and chilled, Government is competing with business, Government is performing the functions that business should itself perform. Socialism is rapidly taking the place of our former American business. Confidence has gone out of business. Taxation is tremendously increased. The Government has gone into business and has spent billions; this, of course, increased the cost of government, which in turn brought this tremendous increase in taxes. Therefore, I can say that we are far worse off than we were in those preceding years.

No wonder that business and individuals no longer have confidence nor the incentive to go ahead and expand with this terrible load of taxation upon their shoulders.

Any businessman or thinking individual would hesitate, and would devote himself to serious thought when he finds that the total assessed valuation in this country is one hundred and thirty-nine billions, and that the Federal Government, by itself, owes some forty billions, with a prospect of owing more. These forty-odd billions do not take into consideration the debt owed by States, counties, cities, assessment districts, and so forth.

Further thought should be given to the fact that in 1928 new capital was going into private enterprise at a monthly average rate of $446,000,000, and that last year this amount had dropped to $70,000,000. In other words, in 1928, 75 percent of our new capital went into private enterprise and 25 percent went into Government. Last year 80 percent went into Government expenses and only 20 percent into private business. This will give the serious thinker a shock when he realizes that instead of 80 percent of our capital now going into private enterprise, which paid taxes, produced employment and prosperity, approximately the same 80 percent is now going into cost of government, which is constantly calling for more taxes, and is not a producing agency but a consuming one.

There never was a truer statement made than that in the Readers Digest, as follows: "Debt cannot be used as a substitute for growth or progress."

As long as we are lulled to sleep by honeyed words, sugar-coated pills, and high-sounding phrases, such as those referring to our investments instead of our debts, democracy is in a very dangerous position.

What is it that put Italy into the hands of an absolute ruler?

What is it that put Germany into the hands of an absolute ruler?

What is it that put Russia into the hands of an absolute ruler?

The answer is the same in all three instances, and can be answered in one word—debt. Therefore I ask the thinking men in this Congress the questions:

What are we doing?

Where are we going?

What effect is this kind of spending going to have on our country, and what is it doing to our country?

Bankruptcy for a nation is a terrible thing, and when a country begins to reach the point where they wonder whether or not they can pay their debts it is certainly time to think.

We of this generation have seen the debts in the various countries of Europe defaulted. It will be noted that some men are constantly reminding us and suggesting to us the things that are done in Europe, but upon careful perusal it will be found that they never mention what debt and inflation have done to Europe. Neither do they mention the conditions nor living standards under which the Europeans are now existing, and neither would they dare to make a true comparison of the condition of the average man in this country with the condition of that same average man in foreign countries.

The credit of this country has been good, but the reason it has been good is that it has kept itself solvent through its ability to pay its debts, and if this credit is going to be maintained the time has now come when this country not only has to start paying the debts it already owes, but it should be able to carry itself on current debts as well.

What is the reason that the Government is engaging in all of this business that should be carried on by private business? Is Government going to take the position that it is going to crowd private business out of the picture? If this is so, is not socialism being forced upon us? Is this the result of foreign propaganda which has been fed to us or the effect of the "boring from within" program? If socialism is being forced upon us and is, therefore, replacing our democratic form of government, is it not high time that we frankly recognize it and that those of us who do not want it put up a proper and real fight for democratic government?

This appears to me to be state socialism, for the Federal Government is stepping in and usurping the functions of what we have always known in America as the functions of private business. It is my further opinion that the Constitution of the United States never contemplated a socialistic form of government, wherein the Federal Government would go into competition with private business. This statement either is or is not true. Each Congressman in this House is going to have to answer that question for himself. Meantime, while these functions are being taken over by the Government, business is being chilled, confidence is being taken out of it, and unemployment is increasing. I think that if business were told that the Federal Government would not compete with it, would allow it to make a decent, honest profit, and would not enforce upon it many of the deterrent regulations, it could again be inspired with confidence to go ahead. That at least would be part of the cure of our unemployment situation. Then the unemployed could again have jobs back on the pay rolls of industry and could get off of what might be called a dole. I think, too, that if the Government would take this position labor would be one of the greatest beneficiaries by reason of the fact that if business again became prosperous they would participate in this prosperity that would be had under this proper expanding program.

I do not see how reasonable people can expect business to improve, unemployment to be helped, or labor to prosper under this terrible load of taxation, and the autocratic, socialistic, and bureaucratic regulations that are being placed upon it by a centralized and partly socialized government.

It is these things that have caused business and industry to slow up, and they would like the question answered, Just what is the intention of the Government? Is it the intention to drive industry and business out of existence and take over these functions itself and force upon us socialism? How can any sane person expect business to perform under these conditions of uncertainty? How can they expect capital to seek those avenues of investment when it is harried, harassed, overregulated, and threatened by the bureaucracy of a centralized set-up such as it now appears is being put upon them?

Inasmuch as I have asked some of these questions, and after all, they must be answered, I am going to ask one other very pertinent question. Does the Federal Government, or does it not, expect to pay its debts? That question must be answered in one way or the other. It either does or it does not.

Let us assume that it does expect to pay its debts, and in assuming this we must take a fair, square look at the situation. Owing some forty-and-odd billions of dollars, we have to assume that this is to be paid back. If this is paid back over a period of 33½ years, which is over three generations, it will be found that the amortization alone on this debt would amount to one billion two hundred and forty million per year if we do not increase it any, and I believe it will be found that the total charge for interest, including book-keeping, clerical work, and all connected with it, will certainly amount to 3 percent per year. This in itself creates another billion two hundred and forty million, so that these two items of overhead alone amount to $2,400,000,000, without taking into consideration whatsoever any of the normal costs of government, which certainly must include all the ordinary functions, and particularly those of defense.

It will be seen from this tremendous load that it is going to be a long, hard pull to carry our current expenses and pay that which we already owe without going any further into debt.

The question must be asked, and the answer is there, Where is the money coming from? The answer is, There is only one place where it can come from, and that is, every penny of it must come from the taxpayer. Following up every penny involved in Government expenditure, it will be found in the last analysis that although we get the money direct from the taxpayer, every penny of this money comes out of business in some of its ramifications. It does not make any difference whether you are a Federal employee on any governmental pay roll, whether you are retired, whether you are on aged aid or a pension, every dollar of this money must eventually come from some ramification of business. No one receives a penny of any kind that is not earned somewhere along the line that is not earned by himself or someone else in business, and it is high time that this Congress and all other governmental units recognize this, and also recognize the limit of the ability of the taxpayer to pay.

It is also high time that this Congress and all other governmental bodies recognize that industry and business cannot use the money for more than one purpose; that is, it cannot pay it out in the form of taxes and again pay it out in pay rolls. And I again state that if the unemployment problem is going to be permanently and properly solved, and if prosperity is going to return to this country, we must cease this tremendous program of expenditure, which in turn would permit the lowering of taxes on business.

It is my opinion that, if properly interpreted, some of the answers to our troubles may be had by a perusal of typical financial statements and financial reports wherein we will find items showing businesses which earned $2.10 per share that could be applied as dividends; and in the same statement we find that that same company will have paid as high as $7.90 per share in taxes. In other words, the Government, which has no actual capital invested in the business, has become a silent partner where a profit is earned and is taking out of the business approximately four times as much as those who have their money invested in it. It must not be forgotten that there are millions of people in this country who have saved their money in their early working days and have invested it in these companies. And, further, when they can no longer receive the earnings from these sources and become destitute, they then must also join that great army of destitute and unemployed and go upon the pay rolls of Government in the form of some kind of charitable aid.

In considering the things that the Government must do, if it is going to pay, I believe that all thinking people will come to the same conclusion—that they must quit spending these billions, such as this $3,860,000,000.

On the other hand, we ask the question, Is the Government not going to pay its bills? Let us consider this angle: If the Government is not going to pay its bill in full to the people to whom it owes this money, how will the matter be taken care of? So far as I can see, it might be taken care of through inflation, deflation, or actual repudiation. I think that the powers that be who have control of the policies of this Government should make a clear, concise, and definite statement with reference to what they propose to do in this connection. This statement should be made, because the Government itself, through the S. E. C. and other agencies, is demanding, and enforcing its demand, that not only securities and investments but thousands of commodities cannot be offered to the public under any form of misrepresentation of facts. If the Government is going to exemplify the laws that it is enforcing and not misrepresent the facts to our people in connection with the debt which it now owes, or proposes to owe them in the future, should not our people to whom this money is owed or may be owed in the future be given a clear, factual statement in connection with the payment of these debts and how and when the Government expects to pay them back?

If there is any secret policy of inflation, deflation, or repudiation, the country certainly should be told; and if that is the policy, how, then, does this Government expect to continue to sell bonds when the country knows that they never expect to pay them? Is it not honorable to tell people of that which they are buying? Is it not right that people should know that which they are buying in the same way that they should know it when they purchase a house, a piece of clothing, food, or any other commodity that they may purchase? Is it not proper that, if the Government is not going to pay these bonds, or if it is going to inflate or repudiate, the people of this country should buy them or not buy them knowing the truth? I think it would be highly dishonorable, and certainly highly unethical, for the Government to induce people to buy Government bonds or any other Government security when that Government knew that the people would not get full value back for that which they bought. How many bonds do you think the people of this country would buy if they thought they were going to lose their money? That answer is simple. They would quit buying bonds immediately.

Any decision not to pay full value on these debts, I think, would be unthinkable and abhorrent to the great majority of the American people; and I think that any policy that would incorporate the thought of inflation or deflation, thereby taking the people's money, would be equally unthinkable and abhorrent. Therefore, I say that a definite and positive statement should be made.

I am going to say to every Member of this Congress that if we are to continue as a democracy and to maintain the credit of this Government, that if we are going to bring back prosperity, that if we are going to decrease unemployment and maintain American institutions at all, we are going to have to say "no" to any such program as the spending of this $4,000,000,000 at this time. Most of this program should be taken up by private business under our form of government, where it properly belongs. And I am going to ask you to vote "no" when this matter comes up for decision. Further than that, I am going to ask every Congressman, both Democratic and Republican, to vote "no," not only on this item but on any other like item presented to us.

SENATE

THURSDAY, JULY 13, 1939

(Legislative day of Monday, July 10, 1939)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

The Chaplain, Rev. Z. Barney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O loving Father, who alone canst lead us in the way everlasting and dost quicken us with a hope that maketh not ashamed: Draw our hearts unto Thee at this altar of prayer, that, with true penitence, we may reveal our steadfast purpose of a new obedience.

In these testing times, when men's hearts are heated hot with burning fears, and they are afraid of the results of yesterday, the cares of today, and the problems of tomorrow, give us the fortitude to bear the name of Christian, for He who gave us His name summons us to sacrifice, calls us to comradeship, and beckons us to service in the fulfillment of our duties as leaders of the Nation.

In our prosperity may we always be thankful; in our adversity may we ever be patient, rejoicing only in that which brings us from Thee, and sorry for nothing save that which draws us from Thee. Keep us this day and in the days that lie ahead steadfast in Thy love. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. HARRISON, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Wednesday, July 12, 1939, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

THE SILK INDUSTRY

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, I present a letter from Representative GERLACH, of Pennsylvania, relative to the silk industry in the United States, and also copy of a proposed joint resolution by Mr. GERLACH. I ask that the letter and accompanying resolution may be printed in the body of the RECORD and appropriately referred.

There being no objection, the letter and accompanying draft of a joint resolution were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., July 13, 1939.

HON. JAMES J. DAVIS,
United States Senate.

DEAR SENATOR: The slowly dying silk industry in the United States has become a matter of great concern to me, because it directly affects a large group of workers in my district, and I think the monopolistic practices of the group controlling the industry should have the attention of Congress.

The manufacturers in my district inform me that in New York City there is a group of from eight to a dozen men who control the raw silk from the time it is imported until it is manufactured into the finished product. Their group shop around among the processing manufacturers, playing one against the other, until they beat down the price to the lowest figure possible, with the result that the silk worker who formerly received from $20 to $60 a week now is paid from $8 to $18, and more often $8 than $18. The manufacturers of silk who used to buy their raw material, process it, and sell the finished product to the retail trade are now known as commission weavers and throwsters, and the silk from the start to finish belongs to the small group who originally bought the raw product.

My home city of Allentown was the second largest silk center in the country when the manufacturer could go into the market and purchase his own raw material, manufacture it, and sell directly to the trade. They employed between fifteen and twenty thousand people. Today they employ less than 3,000 and not on full time. In this connection, I believe that half of the employees in the entire industry are employed in Pennsylvania.

As an illustration of what the manufacturer is up against: One mill in Allentown, the Maxwell Silk Co., after a number of telephone calls from this group in New York, was awarded a contract for one million and a half yards of silk to process at 40½ cents per yard. They started work and 5 days later they were advised by the New York group to stop operations on the contract immediately, that the contract was being given to a firm in Italy at 15 cents per yard plus 14 cents tax, making a total of 29 cents per yard against the 40½ cents which it would have cost to manufacture in this country. And let me stress this point that, based on the 40½ cents a yard, the wages paid the worker would have been only $18 per week. Since the contract was only a verbal one, the company was compelled to comply, and Italy got the work, and the plant is closed up tight today.

While I know the foregoing is more a tariff than a monopolistic matter, it helps to show just what the control of the raw silk by a small group can do to injure our own manufacturers and workers.

I am going to Allentown over the week end and have arranged for a meeting with our local manufacturers and hope to have more information when I return next week, which I shall forward to you promptly.

However, I think the situation I have described clearly indicates monopolistic practices and should come within the purview either of the Senate Monopoly Committee or the Federal Trade Commission.

Very sincerely yours,

CHARLES L. GERLACH.

Joint resolution directing the Federal Trade Commission to investigate the policies employed by importers and manufacturers in distributing imports of raw silk and manufactures thereof, and of the domestic silk industry, as these policies affect the public interest

Resolved, etc., That the Federal Trade Commission be, and is hereby, directed and authorized under the act entitled "An act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914, to investigate the policies as these policies affect the public interest.

The purpose of this investigation shall be to determine—

1. The extent of concentration of control and of monopoly in the manufacturing, warehousing, distribution, and sale of imports of raw silk and manufactures thereof, and of the domestic silk industry, including methods and devices used by importers and manufacturers for obtaining and maintaining their control or monopoly of such manufacturing, warehousing, distribution, and sale of such commodities, and the extent, if any, to which fraudulent combinations, monopolies, price fixing, or unfair trade practices exist;

2. The extent to which any of the antitrust laws of the United States are being violated; and

3. For the purpose of the investigation hereby directed and authorized, the Federal Trade Commission is given all the powers conferred upon it by the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Sec. 2. The Federal Trade Commission shall report its findings to the Congress of the United States within 1 year from date of enactment of this resolution, recommending whatever remedial legislation it deems necessary and proper.

Sec. 3. The sum of $50,000 is hereby authorized to be appropriated to the Federal Trade Commission for the purpose of making this investigation.

INTERSTATE OIL COMPACT TO CONSERVE OIL AND GAS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a joint resolution from the House of Representatives (H. J. Res. 329), consenting to an interstate oil compact to conserve oil and gas, which was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby given to an extension and renewal for a period of 2 years, from September 1, 1939, of the interstate compact to conserve oil and gas, executed in the city of Dallas, Tex., the 16th day of February 1935 by the representatives of the States of Oklahoma, Texas, California, and New Mexico, and thereafter recommended for ratification by the representatives of the States of Arkansas, Colorado, Illinois, Kansas, and Michigan, and subsequently ratified by the States of New Mexico, Kansas, Oklahoma, Illinois, Colorado, and Texas, which said compact was deposited in the Department of State of the United States, and thereafter such compact was, by the President, presented to the Congress and the Congress gave consent to such compact by House Joint Resolution 407, approved August 27, 1935 (Public Res. No. 64, 74th Cong.), and which said compact was thereafter extended and renewed for a period of 2 years from September 1, 1937, by an agreement executed in New Orleans, La., the 10th day of May 1937, by the representatives of the States of Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, and New Mexico, and was duly ratified by the States of Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, New Mexico, Illinois, and Colorado, and was deposited in the Department of State of the United States, and thereafter such extended and renewed compact was, by the President, presented to the Congress and the Congress gave consent to such extended and renewed compact by Senate Joint Resolution 183, approved August 10, 1937 (Public Res. No. 57, 75th Cong.).

The extended and renewed compact, dated the 5th day of April 1939, duly executed by the representatives of the States of Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, New Mexico, Colorado, and Michigan, and duly authorized and ratified by the said States of Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, New Mexico, Colorado, and Michigan, and which extended and renewed compact has been deposited in the Department of State of the United States, reads as follows:

"AN AGREEMENT TO EXTEND THE INTERSTATE COMPACT TO CONSERVE OIL AND GAS"

"Whereas on the 16th day of February 1935, in the city of Dallas, Tex., there was executed 'An interstate compact to conserve oil and gas' which was thereafter formally ratified and approved by the States of Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico, Illinois, Colorado, and Kansas, the original of which is now on deposit with the Department of State of the United States, a true copy of which follows:

"AN INTERSTATE COMPACT TO CONSERVE OIL AND GAS"

"ARTICLE I"

"This agreement may become effective within any compacting State at any time as prescribed by that State, and shall become effective within those States ratifying it whenever any three of the States of Texas, Oklahoma, California, Kansas, and New Mexico have ratified and Congress has given its consent. Any oil-producing State may become a party hereto as hereinafter provided.

"ARTICLE II"

"The purpose of this compact is to conserve oil and gas by the prevention of physical waste thereof from any cause.

"ARTICLE III"

"Each State bound hereby agrees that within a reasonable time it will enact laws, or if laws have been enacted, then it agrees to continue the same in force, to accomplish within reasonable limits the prevention of:

"(a) The operation of any oil well with an inefficient gas-oil ratio.

"(b) The drowning with water of any stratum capable of producing oil or gas, or both oil and gas in paying quantities.

"(c) The avoidable escape into the open air or the wasteful burning of gas from a natural-gas well.

"(d) The creation of unnecessary fire hazards.

"(e) The drilling, equipping, locating, spacing, or operating of a well or wells so as to bring about physical waste of oil or gas or loss in the ultimate recovery thereof.

"(f) The inefficient, excessive, or improper use of the reservoir energy in producing any well.

"The enumeration of the foregoing subjects shall not limit the scope of the authority of any State.

"ARTICLE IV"

"Each State bound hereby agrees that it will, within a reasonable time, enact statutes, or if such statutes have been enacted then that it will continue the same in force, providing in effect that oil produced in violation of its valid oil and/or gas-conservation statutes or any valid rule, order, or regulation promulgated thereunder, shall be denied access to commerce; and providing for stringent penalties for the waste of either oil or gas.

"ARTICLE V"

"It is not the purpose of this compact to authorize the States joining herein to limit the production of oil or gas for the purpose of stabilizing or fixing the price thereof, or create or perpetuate monopoly, or to promote regimentation, but is limited to the purpose of conserving oil and gas and preventing the avoidable waste thereof within reasonable limitations.

"ARTICLE VI"

"Each State joining herein shall appoint one representative to a commission hereby constituted and designated as 'The Interstate Oil Compact Commission,' the duty of which said Commission shall be to make inquiry and ascertain from time to time such methods, practices, circumstances, and conditions as may be disclosed for bringing about conservation and the prevention of physical waste of oil and gas, and at such intervals as said Commission deems beneficial it shall report its findings and recommendations to the several States for adoption or rejection.

"The Commission shall have power to recommend the coordination of the exercise of the police powers of the several States within their several jurisdictions to promote the maximum ultimate recovery from the petroleum reserves of said States, and to recommend measures for the maximum ultimate recovery of oil and gas. Said Commission shall organize and adopt suitable rules and regulations for the conduct of its business.

"No action shall be taken by the Commission except: (1) By the affirmative votes of the majority of the whole number of the compacting States, represented at any meeting, and (2) by a concurring vote of a majority in interest of the compacting States at said meeting, such interest to be determined as follows: Such vote of each State shall be in the decimal proportion fixed by the ratio of its daily average production during the preceding calendar half-year to the daily average production of the compacting States during said period.

"ARTICLE VII"

"No State by joining herein shall become financially obligated to any other State, nor shall the breach of the terms hereof by any State subject such State to financial responsibility to the other States joining herein.

"ARTICLE VIII"

"This compact shall expire September 1, 1937. But any State joining herein may, upon 60 days' notice, withdraw herefrom.

"The representatives of the signatory States have signed this agreement in a single original which shall be deposited in the archives of the Department of State of the United States, and a duly certified copy shall be forwarded to the Governor of each of the signatory States.

"This compact shall become effective when ratified and approved as provided in article 1. Any oil-producing State may become a party hereto by affixing its signature to a counterpart to be similarly deposited, certified, and ratified.

"Done in the city of Dallas, Tex., this 16th day of February 1935.

"Whereas said interstate compact was heretofore duly renewed and extended for 2 years from September 1, 1937, its original expiration date, to September 1, 1939; and

"Whereas it is desired, to again extend and renew said interstate compact to conserve oil and gas for another period of 2 years from September 1, 1939, its present expiration date, to September 1, 1941: Now, therefore, this writing witnesseth:

"It is hereby agreed that the said compact entitled 'An interstate compact to conserve oil and gas' executed in the city of Dallas, Tex., on the 16th day of February 1935, and now on deposit with the Department of State of the United States, a correct copy of which appears above, be, and the same hereby is, extended for a period of 2 years from September 1, 1939, its present date of expiration, this agreement to become effective within those States joining herein when executed by any three of the States of Texas, Oklahoma, California, Kansas, and New Mexico, and consent thereto is given by Congress.

"The signatory States executed this agreement in a single original which shall be deposited in the archives of the Department of State of the United States and a duly certified copy thereof shall be forwarded to the Governor of each of the signatory States.

"Executed as of this the 5th day of April 1939 by the several undersigned States, at their several capitals, through their proper officials thereunto duly authorized by statutes, resolutions, or proclamations of the several States."

Sec. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal the provisions of section 1 is hereby expressly reserved.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, late last night the Senate passed an identical joint resolution, known as Senate Joint Resolution 155. It seems that at the same time the House was considering this joint resolution, and it has now been messaged to the Senate.

I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House Joint Resolution 329. I shall follow that with a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate joint resolution passed, and then ask that the House return the Senate joint resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of House Joint Resolution 329. Is there objection?

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I should like to interrogate the Senator regarding the joint resolution.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It is identical with the joint resolution which the Senate passed late yesterday afternoon.

Mr. AUSTIN. Does it deal with the approval of compacts between States?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It does. It grants the consent of Congress to the making of this particular compact among, I think, seven States.

Mr. AUSTIN. I have no objection.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 329) consenting to an interstate oil compact to conserve oil and gas, which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which Senate Joint Resolution 155 was passed on yesterday; and I ask unanimous consent that the House be requested to return the joint resolution to this body.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The motion will be entered; and, without objection, the House will be requested to return the Senate joint resolution.

NOMINATION OF ELMER D. DAVIES

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair desires to make a statement. Yesterday the Senate gave unanimous consent that upon the meeting of the Senate today the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. BILBO] should be recognized. The Chair feels that he should recognize the Senator from Mississippi, who may yield to any Senator he desires.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President—

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from Arizona?

Mr. BILBO. I shall be glad to yield to the Senator.

Mr. ASHURST. On yesterday, when I was unfortunately absent by reason of illness in my family, a judicial nomination was brought up and confirmed, and the President was notified.

I attach no blame to any person. It is one of those unfortunate mistakes that occur in life. No bad faith was exhibited. All parties were under a misapprehension. There is tremendous opposition to that nomination. The committee had not concluded its investigation. In fact, witnesses sent a telegram this morning asking to be heard.

I understand—I wish to be corrected if I am in error—that a motion was made yesterday to request the Executive to return the nomination.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, a motion requesting the President to return the nomination unanimously prevailed. At the time of making the motion the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BARBOUR] stated that he would prefer not to proceed with the motion to reconsider the vote by which the nomination was confirmed until the two Senators from Tennessee could be present. That was for the reason that the nomination was confirmed out of order at their request and on the representation that it was necessary to consider it at that time if the Senators from Tennessee were to be consulted, because they were about to take a train to attend the funeral of a late colleague.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, again I say that I attach no blame to any person. An honest misapprehension existed, and I am able to understand how such an irregular procedure should take place as the confirmation of a nomination in the middle of a legislative session. I have no disposition to make criticism. Therefore, if and when the Executive returns the nomination, it will be in order to move—and if the Senator from New Jersey does not do so, I shall move—that the vote by which the nomination was confirmed be reconsidered and the nomination returned to the Judiciary Committee, so that they may continue their examination of the question.

The nomination to which I refer is that of Elmer D. Davies to be United States district judge for the middle district of Tennessee.

I conclude by saying that I attach no blame whatever and no criticism to the Senator from Tennessee or to any other person. It is one of those misadventures that take place in the rushing, roaring mill of a Congress which is anxious to adjourn.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President—

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. BILBO. I am glad to yield.

Mr. BORAH. I desire to ask the chairman of the Judiciary Committee a question. Did I correctly understand the chairman to say that there is tremendous opposition to this nomination?

Mr. ASHURST. There is.

Mr. BORAH. Was there tremendous opposition before the subcommittee?

Mr. ASHURST. Yes, sir. I have laid the telegrams before the subcommittee.

Mr. BORAH. There is something peculiar about that; because, so far as I know, the subcommittee considered everything that was brought before it.

Mr. ASHURST. Possibly I should withdraw the statement that there is "tremendous" opposition. I will speak for myself. I am opposed to the nomination, and other Senators are opposed to the nomination. I think rather I should not have used the word "tremendous."

I do not wish to detain the Senate. All I ask is that a roll call be had when the nomination is before the Senate. The last attitude I want to adopt—it does not become me—is that of a censor. I do not like a censorious attitude.

As to the rules of the Senate, in the first place, there is a rule which makes it the duty of the Presiding Officer, when a Senator is speaking, to refuse to entertain a motion to consider a nomination. Secondly, it is not good practice to bring up nominations when the Senate is not in executive session. It should not be done. It is not fair to the Senate; it is not fair to the country; it is not fair to the minority; it is not fair to ourselves; and let this be a lesson that hereafter nominations should go to the Executive Calendar and be printed.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I am not asking that the nomination not be returned and reconsidered, but I was on the subcommittee, and I cannot understand how it happened that we were not informed that there was further testimony to be heard.

Mr. ASHURST. I have been absent 3 days by reason of illness in my family, and as the telegrams and protests came in, I forwarded them to the clerk of the committee, Mr. Don J. Morgan. Mr. Morgan is a very competent and reliable young gentleman whom I have known since his birth time; he is from my home town of Prescott, Ariz., and I am sure he would lay any protest of any kind before the appropriate subcommittee. We all know the diligence of the able Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH], and we know the diligence of the chairman of the subcommittee, the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY].

I hope that this will be a warning, that we shall not take nominations up out of their regular order. The nomination of a marshal in the State of Arizona came in, and I insisted that it go through the regular order and be placed on the Executive Calendar.

Mr. BORAH. Was not this nomination considered by the committee as a whole after it was reported by the subcommittee?

Mr. ASHURST. I was not able to be present at the meeting of the committee on Monday morning.

Mr. BORAH. I understood that the subcommittee reported the nomination and that it was then reported by the committee as a whole.

Mr. ASHURST. That may be; I was not present at the meeting of my own committee Monday morning because of illness in my family. So long as we have assurance that the Senate will have an opportunity to vote on the nomination, that is all I ask.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Mississippi yielded to the Senator from Arizona, and the Senator from Arizona spoke about the Chair's lack of observance of the rule. The Senator states the rule correctly, but when the Senate gives unanimous consent for the confirmation of a nomination and notification to the President of the confirmation, as in executive session, the present occupant of the chair, although he was not in the chair at the time of the concurrence in question, would feel that he must abide by the direction of the Senate. It was by unanimous consent of the Senate that the confirmation of the nomination was had as in executive session, and the order to notify the President was by unanimous consent. So the Chair doubts whether the Presiding Officer at the time was to blame, the Senate by unanimous consent having taken the action referred to.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President—

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. BILBO. I yield.

Mr. HILL. I think the Senate ought to know that this nomination was on the Executive Calendar in regular form, having been duly reported from the Judiciary Committee. It was on the printed calendar for action yesterday, and before the Senate.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I had desired to ask the Senator from Mississippi to yield to me, but in view of the fact that there is to be a vote on his amendment at a certain time and he desires to speak on the amendment, I shall make my request after the vote upon his amendment.

AMENDMENT OF SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6635) to amend the Social Security Act, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. BILBO].

Mr. BILBO's amendment proposes to insert at the proper place the following:

That, effective January 1, 1940, clause (7) of section 2 (a) of the Social Security Act is amended to read as follows:

"(7) provide that, if the State or any of its political subdivisions collects from the estate of any recipient of old-age assistance any amount with respect to old-age assistance furnished him under the plan, the net amount so collected shall be prorated between the United States and the State in the proportion that the amount the United States contributed to such old-age assistance during the year next preceding the year such net amount was collected bears to the amount the State contributed during such year and the amount due the United States shall be promptly paid to the United States. Any payment so made shall be deposited in the Treasury to the credit of the appropriation for the purposes of this title."

Sec. 2. Effective January 1, 1940, section 3 (a) of such act is amended to read as follows:

"(a) From the sums appropriated therefor, the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay to each State which has an approved plan for old-age assistance, for each quarter, beginning with the quarter commencing January 1, 1940, (1) an amount, which shall be used exclusively as old-age assistance, of $30 per month, with respect to each aged needy individual who, at the time of such expenditure, is 65 years of age or older, and is not an inmate of a public institution, and (2), 5 percent of such amount, which shall be used for paying the costs of administering the State plan or for old-age assistance, or both, and for no other purpose: Provided, That no amount for old-age assistance shall be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury to any State which shall contribute for old-age assistance during any quarter an amount smaller than the amount contributed by the State during the quarter beginning January 1, 1939. Any individual entitled to Federal old-age benefits under title II of this act may elect to receive in lieu thereof old-age assistance under the State plan for old-age assistance as provided in title I of this act."

Mr. NORRIS and Mr. LA FOLLETTE addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Mississippi yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. BILBO. Before yielding I should like to state that yesterday, while discussing the amendment now pending, I acquiesced in a request for unanimous consent to vote on the amendment at 1 o'clock and 5 minutes today on condition that I be permitted to begin speaking at 12 o'clock. I desire to be courteous and kind to my colleagues, but there seems to be a disposition to consume all the time, and it is my fault, because I have yielded. So I now ask Senators to postpone whatever matters they desire to have put into the Record until I have occupied the few minutes left me before the vote on the amendment.

Mr. President, my amendment is an attempt to meet the demand of the American people as it has been evidenced by various polls taken by Mr. Gallup, as well as the sentiment expressed through the press of the country and by various and sundry organizations. It is an attempt to meet the recent demand that the Government of the United States assume its responsibility in making adequate provision for the needy aged who are 65 years of age or older.

I was present yesterday while the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. LEE] was discussing his amendment, and I heard a very interesting colloquy between the Senator from Oklahoma and the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG]. They were both in full sympathy with the sentiment that the American Congress should do something about the old-age pension problem, something substantial, something more than they have done, and make decent and adequate provision. But the trouble with my friend on the opposite side of the Chamber, the Senator from Michigan, was that the Finance Committee was having difficulty in finding new sources of revenue to supply the funds to take care of this pressing obligation.

It is passing strange that no anxiety has been expressed, nothing has been said since January, about the sources of the funds to be gathered in, the golden shekels to be placed in the coffers of the Government, while we have been appropriating almost $10,000,000,000 for the purpose of building ships and airplanes, and making needed improvements in our national defense, along with a great many other appropriations, totaling in the neighborhood of $10,000,000,000.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BILBO. I am delighted to yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I am sure the Senator wants the Record to be correct. He says nothing has been said from January to July upon this subject with respect to any of these other appropriations. I think he will find that I have spoken upon almost every one, and I call his attention particularly to the fact that I voted against the largest armament bill for the very reason indicated. So I am not guilty of the entire crime which the Senator assigns to me. I think I have been about as consistent in the matter as a man could be.

Mr. BILBO. The distinguished Senator from Michigan is an exception to the rule.

In this case I am asking for an additional appropriation of only $400,000,000 to take care of the old-age problem which confronts the American people. If this money is appropriated and spent for this purpose, it will be the best expenditure we can make to help the public welfare, because the money will be uniformly distributed to every nook and corner of this great Republic. It will increase purchasing power; it will give us that free distribution of wealth about which we have been hearing for so many years. It will put the money into the hands of people who will be forced to spend it, because their days on earth are few, and they lack the necessities of life. It will help everyone all along the line. It will help the merchant, the lawyer, the doctor, the teacher, and the preacher. It will help the bankers, it will help the community in general, because it will be uniformly distributed. It is not like spending a hundred million or two hundred million dollars on some dam in the West, when all the money is poured out at one spot. It is not like spending several hundred million dollars in the city of New York on municipal improvements, when the money is all poured out in one spot. But this additional $400,000,000 will go into every nook and corner of this great Republic, increasing the purchasing power in every community in America.

Furthermore, Mr. President, the amendment will do away with that unfair, unjust, and unrighteous provision of the present security law which requires the States to match Federal funds, which is so unrighteous that it is downright criminal. We have been told that the South is the country's economic problem No. 1. This matching provision is the reason why the South has been suffering.

From an examination of the statistics I have found that from 1862 to 1936 over $8,000,000,000 has been paid by the Federal Government in pensions, and of the $8,000,000,000 only $1,000,000,000 went to that great section known as the South. Seven billion dollars have been used to enrich the other sections of the country, so that today they are in a position to take advantage of the 50-percent matching scheme of the present social-security law; whereas the South and the West, which have not had an opportunity to share in the bounties of the billions taken from the Government in the way of pensions, are thus impoverished and are unable to meet the requirements of the 50-50 scheme of the present social-security law.

My amendment would correct the injustice under which the West and the South especially are suffering today, because the States in the West and the South are not able, as are the rich States of the North and East, where the wealth has been concentrated, to take advantage of the present arrangement.

Mr. President, I cannot understand why any Senator with a sense of fairness would want to impose upon the sections of the country which, through no fault of theirs, are unable to get their share of the money for the old men and women who are needy. An old man in New Mexico, an old man in Mississippi, or an old man in Alabama who has been a faithful citizen and contributed his bit to the success of our great Republic is just as much entitled to his $15, or his $20, as the bill is now amended, as is the man who lives in California, or in Massachusetts, or in New York, or in Illinois, where the wealth of the Nation has been concentrated during the last 75 years.

Mr. President, we in the States of the South and the West are not to blame for that condition. In other words, if this damnable scheme of the social-security set-up shall be continued as it is now it will do the same thing that has been done in the past with the pensions of the country; it will draw them all into one section of the country, a condition which has resulted in bringing prosperity to that section to the detriment of other sections.

Before a vote is taken on the amendment, perchance someone may say that my proposition was before the Finance Committee and was rejected, notwithstanding that some of the best authorities of the Republic have pronounced it to be the best solution of the old-age question. It may be argued that we must have the approval of the Finance Committee; we must follow the advice of Mr. Altmeyer; we must have a favorable recommendation from the Bureau of the Budget. That argument, however, cannot be used today, because yesterday, in the face of the action of the Finance Committee, of the ruling of the Bureau of the Budget and the recommendations of Mr. Altmeyer, the Senate adopted the amendment proposed by the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], which contained only a slight suggestion of improvement of the present situation.

It is needless to pay attention to what the Finance Committee has decided, or what Mr. Altmeyer has recommended, or what the Bureau of the Budget has ruled; the Senate has already acted in the face of those recommendations and rulings. The Senate has violated the rule in that respect. Now the Senate has a chance to do the right thing, the righteous thing, the just thing.

I wish to call attention to another matter. By the payment of the proposed $30 a month, reaching every section of our great country, social conditions will be improved and the W. P. A. will be released from a portion of its burden, because when $30 comes into the homes of the aged needy people of the country the result will be to lift the burden from the shoulders of the struggling sons and daughters of the old people, so that they may give better attention to the education and the welfare of their own children and families. It will result in a decrease in the burden placed on the W. P. A., because $30 a month going into every little community of the United States will improve conditions, so there will not be so much need for the aid rendered by the W. P. A. and the relief which is now being furnished.

I wish to say a word now to my Republican friends across the aisle. Next spring they will hold a Republican National Convention, and they will write a platform of promises, and in that platform they will want to implant a promise to the Townsends, to the old people of the United States, that if the Republicans are placed in power they will be faithful to the aged and the needy of the country and will do something in a substantial way for their relief in the way of pensions. I wish to say to my Republican colleagues on the other side of the Chamber that now they have a chance to show what they will do if they are placed in power, because I have a suspicion that, with their votes, there may be sufficient votes on this side of the Chamber possibly to adopt the amendment. But if the Republicans continue to vote against measures which mean so much to the old people of the country—and they have a chance to vote favorably for such an amendment now with the help of some humanitarians on this side of the Chamber, some who are not afraid of, and have not been influenced by, the economy cry and the economy campaign—if when they have a chance to render this service in 1939 and they decline or refuse to do it, they will be on the spot in 1940, because how can the people believe them when they realize they had a chance to do it and would not do it?

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. BILBO. I shall be glad to yield.

Mr. GEORGE. I wish to understand the amendment. Does the Senator from Mississippi propose to pay $30 per month from the Federal Treasury to each needy person on the rolls of the States? Or does the Senator propose to take the $30 per person and carry it into a general fund, to be redistributed by the State to the pensioners?

Mr. BILBO. My proposition is to give $30 straight out to every person on the eligible roll of the Republic.

Mr. GEORGE. To each person who is on the roll?

Mr. BILBO. Yes. And if there are any degrees of need which require that there be an adjustment, that is a matter which the State can attend to.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BILBO. I yield.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. As I read the amendment, the payment is to be made by the Secretary of the Treasury without any intermediary action on the part of anyone in the State.

Mr. BILBO. Certainly; it goes direct.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. From the Treasury to the individual?

Mr. BILBO. No; it is handled by the Social Security Board through the regular channels. That is the purpose of the amendment.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Then the payment is to be made to the State and not to the individual?

Mr. BILBO. Yes; but each individual is to be given $30, and if there are any grades of relief, or different types of need shown in various cases, adjustment can be made in the use of the funds appropriated as the cases are thoroughly investigated by the State. But each person shall receive $30. My proposition is to treat every son and daughter of the Republic fairly and squarely at the hands of the Government, because all pay taxes alike. If the State wants to make differentials as the result of its investigation, that is a matter which lies in the hands of the State.

Mr. GEORGE. Then, Mr. President, the Senator means, as I understand his amendment, and I so interpreted it but I was not clear in my understanding of it, that the Federal Government will pay $30 to each person on the roll.

Mr. BILBO. Yes.

Mr. GEORGE. So each pensioner on the State roll will receive $30 plus whatever amount the State itself may pay to the pensioner?

Mr. BILBO. That is correct. I will say that is a correct interpretation of the amendment. The amendment has been thoroughly analyzed, scrutinized, and criticized by some of the social-security experts and by the usual counsel who attempt to serve the Senate in carrying out such matters.

Mr. President, I have prepared an amendment which I propose to introduce before the bill is finally acted upon to do away with the custom or, rather, the rule in force in some of the States requiring old people to take a pauper's oath. In view of the great official family which has been brought together by the social-security organization, not only in Washington but throughout the country, to investigate the needs of aged persons, I wish to save the old people the embarrassment and the odium of having to take a pauper's oath before the Government decides to do its duty. With all the organization under the Social Security Board I believe they can ascertain the true status of the old and needy persons of the country.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BILBO. I yield.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Does the Senator's amendment make it incumbent upon any State to contribute any sum whatever as a prerequisite to receiving $30 for its old people?

Mr. BILBO. The amendment provides that before any State can receive the $30 per capita from the Federal Government it must make the appropriation which is now in force and never reduce it. It can go up as high as it wants to, but it must continue to make the appropriation it has previously made.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Then if the amendment should be adopted, each elderly person in each State would receive what each State is paying him or her plus $30 from the Treasury?

Mr. BILBO. Plus $30 from the Treasury.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. As I understand the amendment further provides that the age limit shall be 65 years?

Mr. BILBO. Yes; 65 years.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. In that particular it is different from the amendment suggested by my colleague [Mr. LEE] yesterday?

Mr. BILBO. Yes.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The age limit proposed by him was 60 years. The age limit proposed by the Senator from Mississippi is 65 years.

Mr. BILBO. Yes.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. My colleague's proposal was for an appropriation of $40 for each person. The amendment of the Senator from Mississippi proposes $30.

Mr. BILBO. Yes.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BILBO. I yield.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. I think there is quite a distinction between the two amendments, in that the amendment proposed yesterday applied to all persons over 60 years, regardless of their financial situation, while under the amendment proposed by the Senator from Mississippi the payments are to be made only to those who are classified as being needy.

Mr. BILBO. Those who are classified as being needy.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Those who are classified as needy are those who are required to take the pauper's oath at the present time.

Mr. BILBO. Yes; those who are registered as eligible.

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BILBO. I yield.

Mr. LEE. There is one other difference. Those who are gainfully employed would have the choice of keeping their jobs or giving them up and accepting the pension.

Mr. BILBO. Yes.

Mr. LEE. While I am on my feet I should like to ask the Senator a question: Does the Senator's amendment provide that every person on the rolls shall receive $30, regardless of the degree of dependence?

Mr. BILBO. That is my understanding of my amendment. He shall receive $30 first from the Federal Government, and if it is desired to make any differential on account of varying degrees of need that can be done by the local social-security board from the funds appropriated by the State legislature.

Mr. LEE. It seems to me it would be fairer to provide for payment to the old people according to the degree of dependence. For example, I can understand that a person declared to be 10 percent dependent would receive $30, while some other person who was not declared to be dependent would not receive anything, either from the State or from the Federal Government. Therefore, it seems to me it would be more consistent to pay every aged person the pension. How many persons 60 years of age can the Senator think of who have today an income, aside from their jobs, sufficient to sustain them? Therefore, I believe the Senator would do well to modify his amendment so as to make the payment in proportion to the degree of dependence.

Mr. BILBO. No. The theory of my amendment is that every citizen who is declared to be eligible for an old-age pension because of needy condition shall receive $30 from the Federal Government. The amounts now contributed by the various States are sufficiently large to permit any necessary adjustment because of varying degrees of need. I do not think there would be sufficient difference in the degrees of need to require anything other than a flat $30 payment. There is ample margin to make the necessary adjustments, if, in the judgment of the Social Security Board, there should be adjustments. The theory of my amendment is that the Federal Government shall treat all alike, and that every citizen under the flag shall receive the same amount, $30. So far as the State is concerned, the sky is the limit.

Mr. LEE. Except for those who are not on the rolls, those who have not been able to prove their poverty.

Mr. BILBO. They are not eligible.

Mr. LEE. They should be.

Mr. BILBO. That is the theory of the Senator's amendment. I took pleasure in voting for it.

Mr. LEE. I intend to support the Senator's amendment, and, as I announced, support amendments to help increase the pension to the old people, but I should like to see them all put on the same basis.

Mr. BILBO. I share the Senator's sentiments to the extent that I voted for his amendment; but, since we cannot get what we want, we will take what we can get. I should like to see the Senate do its duty to the needy old people and grant $30 per capita to those who have been declared needy and eligible under the social security rules and regulations.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BILBO. I yield.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. A few moments ago the Senator called attention to the fact that some States in the Union are more wealthy than others, and therefore more capable of paying pensions of this kind.

Mr. BILBO. Yes.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. He also called attention to the fact that the conditions under which we are living have brought about a concentration of economic power and wealth in some States. As I understood him, he expressed the desire that his amendment would have the effect of equalizing the payments among the States. As I read the amendment, I wonder if it would have that result.

Mr. BILBO. I would equalize the payment of pensions to the needy old people, regardless of the State in which they live.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Under the provisions of the Senator's amendment a pensioner in California, which is at the top of the list so far as State payments are concerned, would receive an average of approximately $62, while a pensioner in the State of Arkansas, which is at the bottom of the list, would receive an average of about $36 or $37; so the inequality would not be done away with.

Mr. BILBO. That is a matter with which the Federal Government cannot concern itself, because that difference is brought about by the generosity, liberality, and humanitarianism of the States themselves. I still believe in States' rights.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Perhaps not their humanitarianism or their desire to serve so much as their ability to pay. I think the people of Arkansas would be thoroughly pleased to be able to pay what the State of California pays, or what the State of Massachusetts pays, or what the State of New York pays.

Mr. BILBO. I appreciate the correction. I should have included the ability to pay.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BILBO. I am delighted to yield.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. What would be the attitude of the Senator from Mississippi toward a proposal to have the Federal Government make all the collections and all the payments? The people have to pay the tax anyway. They have to pay it all. They pay the State tax to make up the State contribution, and they pay the Federal tax to make up the Federal contribution. If the National Government should make all the collections, then the National Government could make uniform payments. What would be the attitude of the Senator toward such a proposal?

Mr. BILBO. I announced on yesterday that I considered the obligation of a pension to the aged and needy of the country strictly a Federal obligation. I should be glad if it were possible to enact such legislation and have the Federal Government pay the entire bill. However, I am not now dealing with a theory. I am dealing with a condition. We have the social-security law, which imposes a dual obligation or responsibility; and, since that is true, I could not give my consent to the Federal Government taking over the funds appropriated by the States. So long as the States put up a part of the money I think they should have something to do with the qualification or eligibility of those to whom the payments are made.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Will the Senator yield further?

Mr. BILBO. I yield.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. My inquiry did not contemplate that the Federal Government should take over the money collected by the States, but it contemplated an amendment to the Social Security Act providing that the Federal Government should make the entire collection and relieve the States from the collection and disbursement of any funds, making the obligation a Federal obligation, under the Federal law and a Federal system.

Mr. BILBO. I agree 100 percent with the Senator that that is the correct theory of how the pension should be handled and who should pay it. The Federal Government should pay it, instead of the States. However, since there is now a dual responsibility, we have to deal with the law. I am merely trying to come as near perfection as possible and eliminate the inequalities.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for another question?

Mr. BILBO. I yield.

Mr. GEORGE. Yesterday we adopted the so-called Connally amendment.

Mr. BILBO. Yes; I voted for it and was glad to do so.

Mr. GEORGE. The Senator will recall that the Connally amendment requires contributions on the basis of 2 to 1 up to an average of $15. If the Senator's amendment were adopted, would it be in lieu of the Connally amendment, or would it be in addition?

Mr. BILBO. My amendment would take the place of the Connally amendment.

Mr. GEORGE. Then it would be in lieu of the Connally amendment.

Mr. BILBO. Yes; though I am glad to have the Connally amendment in the bill.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, we are in a state of parliamentary confusion if the pending amendment is in lieu of an amendment adopted yesterday, without any motion to reconsider the amendment adopted yesterday. It was for that reason that I propounded the question to the Senator. If his amendment is in addition to the Connally amendment, and simply an additional provision, then, of course, it would not be affected by the Connally amendment.

Mr. BILBO. If the Senate will adopt my amendment, the conferees can work out the legal details. As I understand, it would take the place of the Connally amendment.

Mr. President, my time has just about expired. In conclusion I wish to say that we now have an opportunity to correct a great injustice which the present social-security law imposes upon the poorer and weaker States of the Republic. We have an opportunity to do the right thing, the just thing, the square thing, the righteous thing, for the citizens of the Republic, without any partiality. The present law is a rich State's pension law. It seems to me it was written for the benefit of the rich States, because they are able to take advantage of it. Senators know that the poorer States cannot take advantage of it. We are discriminating against the old people in the poorer States. If I cannot obtain a correction in any other way, I am almost persuaded to go back to Mississippi, organize the old people of my State, and move them to California, Massachusetts, or some State which is able to take advantage of the social-security law. That would be one way to solve the problem. Mississippi is unable to match the Federal Government and pay the pension. That circumstance is an injustice to the old people living in Mississippi, something for which they are not responsible.

When Senators go back to their constituents they will have to answer the question: "You had an opportunity to give us $30 from the Federal Government. Why did you not give us the $30 when you had an opportunity to do so?" We now have an opportunity to let our people know that we really mean to take the action which is necessary for the relief of the old people. Remember they can all vote, because they are beyond the poll-tax age.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The hour of 1 o'clock having arrived, under the unanimous-consent agreement, the time of the Senator from Mississippi has expired.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia has 5 minutes, under the unanimous-consent agreement.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I desire to say a few words regarding the pending amendment. While I am loath to make a point of order against the amendment, it seems to me that it is clearly not in order; because if it is in lieu of the Connally amendment, obviously, it would follow that a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Connally amendment was adopted should be made.

But with respect to the merits of the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi, permit me to say that the provision amending clause (7) of section 2 of the Social Security Act is cared for in the bill. Clause (7) of section 2 simply relates to repayment out of funds collected by the State from a pensioner's estate of the pro rata part going to the Federal Government. That is cared for in the pending bill, and cared for effectively.

It should be said that when the Senator from Mississippi prepared his amendment the House had not reported the social security bill, and he, therefore, did not know that the first portion of his amendment would be covered by the bill as actually reported. So much for the first section.

The second section of the amendment, Mr. President, raises the important question of whether we are in a position to increase out of the Federal Treasury old-age benefits by $30 per month to each pensioner upon the rolls of a State. We have made great progress; we are doing something toward an increase; the Connally amendment provides for a more equitable distribution up to an average of $15 of the portion of the fund paid by the Federal Government to aged persons in the several States.

The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. BILBO] yesterday said that the added cost of his amendment would be approximately $300,000,000. At another point he made the statement that it would be something like $400,000,000.

Mr. BILBO. About $400,000,000 is the correct amount.

Mr. GEORGE. Now I desire to call attention to the fact that the Treasury has estimated and reported that the cost of the old-age assistance to the Federal Government under the present law would be $225,000,000 on January 1 next. It has also estimated that the pending amendment would add $450,000,000 to the cost of carrying the old-age assistance provisions of the Social Security Act. That is true, Mr. President; but I now direct the attention of the Senate to the fact that under this amendment, if adopted, the Federal Government would be required to contribute $30 a month to each person on the pension roll.

I call attention to the further fact that each State receiving this additional benefit must not reduce its contribution made during the first quarter of 1939. So, without increasing the payment from the State by a single dollar, every needy person could be put on the rolls of the State merely by reducing the amount it pays to each person.

We have in this country now 8,370,000 people 65 years of age and over. The Social Security Board has advised us that there are, at least, 4,000,000 needy aged persons 65 years of age and over; that is at least 4,000,000 who could qualify now. The Social Security Board, therefore, has estimated that the adoption of this amendment, if only 50 percent of those 65 years of age and over should qualify and go on the rolls, would increase the amount of the Federal contribution to $1,440,000,000, or an increase of $1,215,000,000 over the present law.

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GEORGE. I have only about a minute remaining, but I yield to the Senator.

Mr. BILBO. In view of the figures the Senator has cited, he ought to be willing to yield.

Mr. GEORGE. I am willing to yield.

Mr. BILBO. Does the Senator mean to tell the Senate that some statistician in the Social Security Board, who is not in sympathy with taking care of the obligation of the Government to the old people and who does not know anything about conditions, says, under the rules and regulations that are now placed in the hands of the Social Security Board in Washington, that 4,000,000 people can qualify at this time?

Mr. GEORGE. There are now 4,000,000 needy people on the waiting list and on the rolls who are 65 years of age and over.

Mr. BILBO. Does the Senator from Georgia object to these needy people being on the rolls?

Mr. GEORGE. No; I do not; but I am simply calling attention to the cost of the Senator's proposal.

Mr. BILBO. Why are they not on the rolls?

Mr. GEORGE. Because the States have not put them on the rolls.

Mr. BILBO. Why the discrimination?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The hour of 1 o'clock and 5 minutes p. m. having arrived, under the unanimous-consent agreement, the Senate will now vote on the pending amendment. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. BILBO].

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays. I desire to see how Senators stand on the question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The yeas and nays are demanded. Is there a second?

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The amendment of Mr. BILBO was rejected.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Calloway, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6205) to provide for additional clerk hire in the House of Representatives, and for other purposes, agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. WARREN, Mr. COCHRAN, and Mr. WOLFENDEN of Pennsylvania were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

The message also announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 6942) to authorize the attendance of the Marine Band at a memorial concert for the benefit of the families of the victims of the U. S. submarine Squalus disaster at Rye, N. H., July 30, 1939, and for other purposes, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

The message further announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the enrolled bill (H. R. 1882) for the relief of Otis M. Culver, Samuel E. Abbey, Joseph Reger, and August H. Krueger, and it was signed by the President pro tempore.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED

The bill (H. R. 6942) to authorize the attendance of the Marine Band at a memorial concert for the benefit of the families of the victims of the U. S. submarine Squalus disaster at Rye, N. H., July 30, 1939, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

DISTRIBUTION OF JUDGMENT FUND OF SHOSHONE TRIBE

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, a year ago this month the Supreme Court of the United States confirmed an award which had been made by the Court of Claims to the Shoshone Indians of Wyoming. The award was of a sum in excess of $4,000,000. To distribute that award among the members of the tribe it is necessary for the Congress to pass a distribution act. Ever since the decision of the Supreme Court confirming the award negotiations have been in progress between the Indians, on the one hand, and the Indian Office on the other. The Members of the Wyoming delegation in the Senate and the House of Representatives have participated in the conferences. Out of those negotiations came a bill which was introduced in the Senate by the junior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. SCHWARTZ] and myself. The bill has been carefully considered by the Committee on Indian Affairs. It is unanimously agreed to; the report has been made, and it is now on the calendar. I am most anxious to have the bill passed by the Senate, in order that it may be considered by the other House before adjournment, so that the distribution may take place without delay. I, therefore, ask unanimous consent that the Senate now consider calendar No. 806, Senate bill 1878.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. KING. I desire to ask the Senator from Wyoming whether or not any part of the $4,000,000 consists of interest?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Yes.

Mr. KING. Is not the greater part of it interest?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Oh, no. The award was made in the sum, as I recall, of $4,400,000. It has been drawing interest for a year, and the interest amounts to about $130,000.

Mr. KING. I understand that in some of these claims cases when, for illustration, the principal of the claim amounted to a million dollars, the interest item has amounted to eight or ten or fifteen million dollars. There is a measure now pending which, I think, seeks to rectify such injustice. I have, however, no objection to the bill.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, may I make an inquiry in order to confirm my own view?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. McNARY. A bill passed the Congress authorizing the submission of the claim to the Court of Claims, did it not?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. That is correct.

Mr. McNARY. And the court found a verdict for the Indians, which verdict was confirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator is correct.

Mr. McNARY. And this bill represents an effort to disburse the amount to the tribe of Indians?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator is quite correct.

Mr. McNARY. The bill came before the Indian Affairs Committee during my absence, but, I understand, is reported unanimously?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Yes; and the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. FRAZIER], the ranking minority member of the committee, was present.

Mr. McNARY. It is really a routine measure designed to carry out the award of the Supreme Court?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. That is exactly correct.

Mr. McNARY. I have no objection to the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The title of the bill will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (S. 1878) to provide for the distribution of the judgment fund of the Shoshone Tribe of the Wind River Reservation in Wyoming, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 2, on page 2, line 2, after the words "sum of", to strike out "$2,350" and insert "$2,450"; at the beginning of line 7, to insert "the sum of $100; and", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 2. That there shall be credited on the books of the Office of Indian Affairs the sum of $2,450 to each member of said tribe whose name appears on the roll provided for in section 1 hereof; and out of such sum so credited the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to make available immediately to each individual member of the tribe the sum of $100; and, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, the sum of $1,350 to each adult and the sum of $500 to each minor for the following purposes: Purchase of land, improvement of lands to be acquired or already held by the Indian, for the erection and improvement of suitable homes, the purchase of building material, farming equipment, livestock, feed, food, seed, grain, tools, machinery, implements, household goods, bedding, clothing, and any other equipment or supplies necessary to enable the Indians to fit themselves for or to engage in farming, livestock, industry, or such other pursuits or vocations, including education, as will enable them to become self-supporting: Provided, however, That the funds of the aged, infirm, decrepit, and incapacitated members may be used for their proper maintenance and support in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior. The remainder of the share of each adult individual Indian, including accrued interest, shall be made available under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe, and the remainder of the share of each minor Indian shall, with accrued interest, be held intact until such Indian reaches the age of 18 years, when it shall be available under the same conditions as herein provided for adults. As herein used the term "adult" shall include the members of the tribe 18 years of age or over, and the term "minor" shall include all members less than 18 years of age. On the death of any enrolled member, adult or minor, the sum on deposit to his credit shall be available for expenditure for the benefit of his heirs for the purposes herein authorized.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 3, after line 10, to strike out section 3, as follows:

SEC. 3. That after the segregation provided for in section 2 shall have been made, the remainder of said judgment fund, including interest, shall be available for expenditure on request of said tribe, and by and with the consent of the Secretary of the Interior, subject, however, to the following limitations and conditions: Not to exceed $500,000 of said fund shall be available, with the consent of said tribe, for the purchase of lands in the manner provided in section 6 hereof; $125,000 shall be available, with the consent of said tribe, for loans to individual members or groups of members of said tribe, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior; such money as shall remain in the fund in excess of $625,000 shall be available for expenditure, with the consent of said Shoshone Tribe, for supervising such enterprises as may be set up through the use of the fund and for otherwise administering the use of money in and withdrawn from the said fund; and for such productive enterprises for the benefit of said tribe as shall first be approved by said tribe and by the Secretary of the Interior. An income resulting from such productive enterprises shall be repaid into the Shoshone tribal judgment fund.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 4, after line 7, to insert:

SEC. 3. (a) Not to exceed $1,000,000 of said judgment fund, or interest thereon, shall be available for expenditure upon the request of the tribe and with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, for the purchase of lands in the manner prescribed in section 6 of this act.

(b) The sum of $125,000 of said judgment fund, or interest thereon, shall, at the request of the tribe and with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, be set aside as a loan fund for making loans to individual members, or groups of members, of said tribe under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior.

(c) The remainder of said judgment fund, including interest thereon, after making the segregation provided for in section 2, and after setting aside the respective amounts authorized by this section, shall be available for appropriation, upon the recommendation of the Secretary of the Interior, and with the consent of the tribe, for purposes of benefit to the tribe, including the establishment and administration of productive enterprises for the benefit of said tribe, and any income derived from such enterprises shall be credited to the Shoshone tribal judgment fund.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 4, page 5, line 10, after the word "authorized", to insert "and directed", so as to read:

SEC. 4. That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to establish land-use districts within the diminished and ceded portions of the Wind River Indian Reservation, Wyo., and, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, to effect the consolidation of Indian and privately owned lands within said districts through exchange, relinquishment, donation, assignment, or purchase of lands or interests therein, including water rights or surface rights to lands, improvements thereon and improvements on undisposed-of ceded lands, to the end that the respective Indian and non-Indian land holdings may be consolidated for more beneficial use.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 5, page 6, line 22, after the word "district", to strike out "is" and insert "are", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 5. That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed to restore to tribal ownership all undisposed-of surplus or ceded lands within the land-use districts which are not at present under lease or permit to non-Indians; and, further, to restore to tribal ownership the balance of said lands progressively as and when the non-Indian owned lands within a given land-use district are acquired by the Government for Indian use pursuant to the provisions of this act. All such restorations shall be subject to valid existing rights and claims: Provided, That no restoration to tribal ownership shall be made of any lands within any reclamation project heretofore authorized within the diminished or ceded portions of the reservation.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 6, page 7, line 4, after the words "sum of", to strike out "$500,000" and insert "$1,000,000"; in line 12, after the word "accrue", to strike out "Provided, That in addition to the amount of tribal funds above authorized for land purchases, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $500,000 for the purchase of privately owned lands in accordance with the provisions of this section, which sum is to be used only in the event the Indians consent to the use of a like amount of tribal funds as hereinabove provided"; and in line 22, after the word "Arapaho", to strike out "Tribe" and insert "Tribes", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 6. That the sum of $1,000,000 authorized in section 3 for use in carrying out the land-purchase and consolidation program hereinbefore authorized shall remain available until expended and any amount expended shall be reimbursed with interest at 4 percent per annum to the Shoshone Tribe of Indians of the Wind River Reservation from joint funds to the credit of the Shoshone and Arapaho Tribes of the Wind River Reservation or from future accruals to said joint fund, as and when said funds accrue. Title to all land purchases made hereunder shall be taken in the name of the United States in trust for the Shoshone and Arapaho Tribes of Indians of the Wind River Reservation, Wyo. All purchases of lands or interests therein made pursuant to this section shall receive the approval of the Shoshone and Arapaho Tribal Councils or of the business committees thereof.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 7, on page 8, line 10, after the word "authorized", to strike out "or for per capita payments to the members of the Shoshone Tribe", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 7. That in no event shall any portion of the Shoshone judgment fund become liable, payable, or subject to any debt or debts contracted prior to the passage of this act by any Indian of the Shoshone Tribe except debts to the United States or to the tribe, and in no event shall any portion of the Shoshone judgment fund be expended to defray the cost of Federal administration over the Shoshone Tribe, except as herein authorized.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BLACK BOOKING AND BLIND SELLING OF MOTION-PICTURE FILMS

Mr. NEELY. Still cherishing an imperishable and increasingly confident hope that in some sweet by and by the Senate will seriously consider and eventually pass Senate bill 280, the motion-picture anti-block-booking bill, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the body of the RECORD this measure, as modified by the proposed amendments, for the purpose of supplying desirable information to the Members of this honorable body.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

* The modified bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the methods of distribution of motion-picture films in commerce whereby (a) exhibitors are required to lease all or a specified number of an offered group of films in order to obtain any individual desired film or films in the group, a trade practice sometimes known as "compulsory block booking"; and (b) films are leased before they are produced and without opportunity for the exhibitor to ascertain the content of such films, a trade practice sometimes known as "blind selling," are hereby declared to be contrary to public policy in that such practices interfere with the free and informed selection of films on the part of exhibitors and prevent the people of the several States and the local communities thereof from influencing such selection in the best interests of the public, and tend to create a monopoly in the production, distribution, and exhibition of films. The Congress finds and declares that such methods and practices adversely affect and constitute a burden upon commerce, and it is the purpose of this act to prohibit and to prevent such methods and practices in commerce.

Sec. 2. For the purposes of this act, unless the context otherwise requires—

(1) The term "motion-picture film" or "film" means all motion-picture films (whether copyrighted or uncopyrighted), including positive and negative prints, and copies of reproductions of such prints, which films contain photoplays or other subjects and are produced for public exhibition: Provided, That the term shall not include films commonly known as "news reels" or other films containing picturizations of news events, or short subjects of 2,000 feet or less in length.

(2) The term "to lease" includes the making of a license agreement, contract, or any type of agreement whereby a film, the distribution of which is controlled by one of the parties, is to be supplied to and exhibited in a theater owned, controlled, or operated by the other party.

(3) The term "person" includes an individual, partnership, association, joint-stock company, trust, or corporation.

(4) The term "distributor" includes any person who engages or contracts to engage in the distribution of motion-picture films.

(5) The term "exhibitor" includes any person who engages or contracts to engage in the exhibition of motion-picture films.

(6) The term "commerce" means commerce between any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, and any place outside thereof; or between points within the same State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, but through any place outside thereof; or within any Territory or the District of Columbia.

For the purposes of this act (but in no wise limiting the definition of commerce) a transaction in respect of any film shall be considered to be in commerce if the film is part of that current of commerce usual in the motion-picture industry whereby films are produced in one State, leased for exhibition in other States, and distributed to them through local exchanges in the several States, the films circulating from the exchanges and between the various exhibitors. Films normally in such current of commerce shall not be considered out of such commerce through resort being had to any means or device intended to remove transactions in respect thereto from the provisions of this act. For the purpose of this paragraph, the word "State" includes Territory, the District of Columbia, and foreign country.

(7) The terms "aggregate price" and "price" as used in section 3 (1) shall mean the aggregate of all flat rentals, and of all rentals based upon a percentage of prospective receipts together with any other consideration named in the lease or offer to lease.

Sec. 3. (1) It shall be unlawful for any distributor of motion-picture films in commerce to lease or offer to lease for public exhibition films in a block or group of two or more films (at a designated lump-sum price for the entire block or group only) and to require the exhibitor to lease all such films or permit him to lease none; or to lease or offer to lease for public exhibition films in a block or group of two or more at (a) a designated lump sum an aggregate price for the entire block or group and at separate and several prices for separate and several films, or for a number or numbers thereof less than the total number, which (total or lump sum) aggregate price and separate and several prices shall bear to each other such relation (a) as to operate as an unreasonable restraint upon the freedom of an exhibitor to select and lease for use and exhibition only such film or films of such block or group as he may desire and prefer to procure for exhibition, or (b) as tends to require an exhibitor to lease such entire block or group or forego the lease of any number or numbers thereof, or (c) that the effect of the lease or offer to lease of such films may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in the production, distribution, and exhibition of films; or to lease or offer to lease for public exhibition films in any other manner or by any other means the effect of which would be to defeat the purpose of this act.

(2) It shall be unlawful for any person knowingly to transport or cause to be transported in commerce any motion-picture film which is leased, or intended to be leased, in violation of subdivision (1) of this section.

Sec. 4. It shall be unlawful for any distributor of motion-picture films in commerce to lease or offer to lease for public exhibition any motion-picture film over 2,000 feet in length unless such distributor shall furnish the exhibitor at or before the time of making such lease or offer to lease (a complete and true) an accurate synopsis of the contents of such film. Such synopsis shall be made a part of the lease and shall include (a) (an) a general outline of the story, incidents, and scenes depicted or to be depicted and descriptions of the principal characters, and (b) a statement describing the manner of treatment of dialogs concerning (any) and scenes depicting vice, crime, or (suggestion) suggestive of sexual passion. It is the purpose of this section to make available to the exhibitor sufficient information concerning the type and contents of the film and the manner of treatment of questionable subject matter to enable him to determine whether he wishes to select the film for exhibition and later to determine whether the film is fairly described by the synopsis.

Sec. 5. (1) Every person who violates section 3, or who fails to furnish the synopsis required by section 4, or knowingly makes any false statement in such synopsis, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not exceeding $5,000 or by imprisonment for not exceeding 1 year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

(2) The several district courts of the United States are hereby invested with jurisdiction to prevent and restrain violations of this act, and it shall be the duty of the several district attorneys of the United States, in their respective districts, under the direction of the Attorney General, to institute proceedings in equity to prevent and restrain such violations. Such proceedings may be by way of petition setting forth the case and praying that such violation shall be enjoined or otherwise prohibited. When the parties complained of shall have been duly notified of such petition, the court shall proceed, as soon as may be, to the hearing and determination of the case; and pending such petition, and before final decree, the court may at any time make such temporary restraining order or prohibition as shall be deemed just in the premises. Whenever it shall appear to the court before which any such proceeding may be pending that the ends of justice require that other parties should be brought before the court, the court may cause them to be summoned whether they reside in the district in which the court is held or not, and subpoenas to that end may be served in any district by the marshal thereof.

Sec. 6. If any provision of this act is declared unconstitutional or the applicability thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of the act and the applicability of such provision to other persons and circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

Sec. 7. This act shall become effective 12 months after its enactment.

AMENDMENT OF SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6635) to amend the Social Security Act, and for other purposes.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, we are advised by the press of the results of an election which occurred yesterday in North Dakota. It indicates the views of the people of that State with respect to some of the aspects of the social-security policy.

It appears that an active campaign has been conducted by former Gov. William Langer in favor of a plan to pay $40 per month minimum old-age pensions. It appears from the Associated Press dispatch that the plan called for a gross income or transactions tax to raise funds for the payment of pensions, the votes in 588 precincts being 9,481 for the income or transactions tax and 66,886 in opposition.

It appears from the action of the electorate of North Dakota that when they are required to meet pensions by taxation they are not so enthusiastic for the same. There is evidence, however, that propositions are not looked upon with so much disfavor which call for the Federal Government to make appropriations to meet pension plans. Perhaps that accounts for the demands that Congress shall make large appropriations to meet pensions of various kinds and bounties and gratuities.

The press dispatch relating to this matter is as follows:

MEASURES TO PAY FOR NORTH DAKOTA PENSIONS LOSING ELECTION

FARGO, N. DAK., July 11.—Early returns from today's special election indicated a strong vote against passage of the four measures sponsored by former Gov. William Langer in a move to pay for the $40 minimum old-age pension plan he helped push through the recent legislature.

On an act abolishing the office of grain storage commission, 576 of 2,260 precincts gave 11,146 for the act, 64,455 against.

On a proposed system of municipal liquor control, 576 precincts gave 11,030 yes, 65,980 no.

On a 2-year moratorium on highway construction, 572 precincts gave 10,271 yes, 65,913 no.

On a gross income or transactions tax, 588 precincts gave 9,481 yes and 66,886 no.

The three latter measures were intended to help pay for the $40 minimum monthly pensions.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, I wish to speak briefly on the bill. The distinguished Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], as chairman of the Finance Committee, is to be congratulated on the committee report and on the masterful way in which he has conducted hearings on the pending legislation. He has combined practical wisdom with genuine human sympathy and understanding.

Two years ago this spring I had the honor of serving on the Nonpartisan Social Security Commission, sponsored by the Hearst newspapers. My colleagues on this commission included Merryle S. Rukeyser, chairman; Henry I. Harriman; Samuel W. Reyburn; William J. Graham; Herman Feldman; and Dr. Richard A. Lester. The function of this commission represented a new technique in American journalism. It gave the sponsoring newspapers and the press generally the benefit of the considered judgment of a balanced group after it had carried on research, consulted outside authorities, and debated the issues at stake. On four separate occasions—March 11, April 22, May 6, and June 1, 1937—I presented to the Senate the findings of the Commission. More than 18 months later the major portion of these findings, in broad essentials, were validated by the similar recommendations of the advisory council set up jointly by the Social Security Board and the Senate Finance Committee.

These two bodies agreed on the following seven significant points:

First. In suggesting that old-age benefits start in 1940, instead of 1942;

Second. In proposing the increase of benefits to the aged in the early years of operation;

Third. In recommending the sharing of benefits with widows;

Fourth. In urging a moderate contingency reserve instead of a colossal mythical reserve approaching $47,000,000,000;

Fifth. In urging that benefits be extended to exempt groups, such as maritime workers, and national bank clerks;

Sixth. In warning against excessive pay-roll rates; and Seventh. In insisting on the earmarking of Federal receipts to support social security.

Mr. President, in this time of subnormal economic activity I think it is of paramount importance to encourage business and to facilitate the exchange of goods by lightening rather than increasing the tax burden. The mandatory and automatic increase in old-age benefit taxes will be obviated when Congress is relieved of the scheme to set up a huge actuarial reserve—the so-called $47,000,000,000 reserve fund by 1980. If the analogy of private insurance were forgotten, and the country turned to the sound pay-as-you-go principle, with a moderate contingency reserve, it would be practicable to operate for some time longer on the present tax scale. A reserve of from ten to fifteen billion dollars would seem to be ample.

With business still subnormal and with unemployment still large, no heavier drain than is necessary should be made for social security on current production. In the circumstances, it would be a national blunder to continue the effort to build up a colossal actuarial reserve at the expense of dissipating the purchasing power of men and women now at work. It is currently believed that about 90 cents of every dollar collected under the plan to lay by a reserve of $47,000,000,000 would go to reserves, and only about 10 percent into benefits. I understand the experience of the Board has shown that the 10-percent estimate was somewhat low. If the tax excess is kept down, it will automatically keep the reserve down to a reasonable figure.

I am opposed for a number of reasons to the accumulation of the contemplated huge reserve fund, which is estimated to run as high as $47,000,000,000 in 1980. It would make mandatory an increase in the Federal debt. It would be a constant temptation to reckless spenders and might be used for political purposes. It would fail to perform an economic function unless it should be spent in a way to increase our productive power and the national income. It would make the entire old-age-benefit program rigid and inflexible to changes in the price level or in the rate of industrial progress. Such procedure is contrary to practice and experience abroad. I am informed that in Sweden, after a comprehensive study of this subject by a commission of experts over a 6-year period, the full reserve principle was abandoned at the beginning of this year, after 24 years of experience.

Mr. President, I have already referred to the patriotic and analytical work of the Nonpartisan Social Security Commission, sponsored by the Hearst newspapers. I wish to add that as a young man representing iron and steel workers, desiring to keep informed on labor conditions, I found the Hearst newspapers out front, among only a few others, advancing the cause of collective bargaining editorially and showing the mutual responsibilities of labor and management.

The activities of the Hearst Nonpartisan Social Security Commission that have played such a significant part in advancing the revisions of the Social Security Act recommended by the Ways and Means Committee of the House and the Finance Committee of the Senate are but one example of the long-continued service rendered by William Randolph Hearst to this Nation. Frequently involved in fierce controversy, this veteran publisher has stuck to his guns and fought his way through. Every manner of complaint has been brought against him, with one exception. No one has ever said that he was a coward. His papers have campaigned vigorously for higher wages and better working conditions. Long after the hue and cry of present-day controversies are over, Mr. Hearst will be remembered for the substantial contributions he has made to the preservation of the democratic system of free enterprise and the protection of the aged, the unemployed, and the helpless.

Mr. President, in conclusion I wish to call attention to a paragraph of the report of the Social Security Board to the President and the Congress of January 1939 relative to the disclosure of confidential information obtained under the Social Security Act:

The Board recommends that State public assistance plans be required, as one of the conditions for the receipt of Federal grants, to include reasonable regulations governing the custody and use of its records, designed to protect their confidential character. The Board believes that such a provision is necessary for efficient administration, and that it is also essential in order to protect beneficiaries against humiliation and exploitation such as resulted in some States where the public has had unrestricted access to official records. Efficient administration depends to a great extent upon enlisting the full cooperation of both applicants and other persons who are interviewed in relation to the establishment of eligibility; this cooperation can only be assured where there is complete confidence that the information obtained will not be used in any way to embarrass the individual or jeopardize his interests. Similar considerations are involved in safeguarding the names and addresses of recipients and the amount of assistance they receive. Experience has proved that publication of this information does not serve the avowed purpose of deterring ineligible persons from applying for assistance. The public interest is amply safeguarded if this information is available to official bodies.

Mr. President, failure to observe these principles resulted in conditions nothing short of a public scandal in the State of Pennsylvania during last year. Surely there is no place for political partisanship in the administration of social-security legislation. It should not be tolerated.

While the bill is not just exactly as I should prefer to have it, I shall nevertheless vote for its passage.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, day before yesterday, when committee amendments were being discussed and acted upon, I raised an objection to an amendment on page 42, after line 6, which refers to the fishing industry and eliminates from the provisions of the act those employees engaged in the catching, taking, harvesting, cultivating, or farming of fish, shellfish, and so on, and fixes a limitation of 400 tons for ships excluded by the amendment.

The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] agreed that the amendment might go over to the next day, and then, through a misunderstanding on his part because of a conversation I had had with representatives of a department, he thought I was satisfied with the amendment, and it was agreed to. Then another amendment, on page 71, line 13, which covers the same subject, was also adopted.

Mr. President, I have not agreed to the amendment, but I shall not now, because of a conversation which the Senator and I had yesterday, ask for a reconsideration of the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

My understanding with the Senator from Mississippi is as follows—and if I am incorrect, I am sure he will correct me: That he will present the facts concerning the fishing industry so far as I have been able to ascertain them, and since this is a Senate amendment and will be subject in its entirety to negotiations between the Senate conferees and the House conferees, the Senate conferees will attempt to work out such modifications of the amendment as will meet the situation which I present, and will also take care of the situation which was intended to be taken care of by the Finance Committee when the amendment was included in the Finance Committee's report of the bill to the Senate.

On that basis I am willing at this time to have the clerk read the amendment which I would propose if it were not for the agreement with the Senator from Mississippi. My present idea is to have the matter worked out. It may be that the conferees will find that my amendment is not practicable, and under the assurance of the Senator from Mississippi I am certain that if that is so, the conferees will work out something which will meet the other situation and will not meet the situation with which the committee was confronted when the amendment was included.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the amendment suggested by the Senator from Washington.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 42, it is proposed to strike out the committee amendment in lines 7 to 17, and in lieu thereof insert the following:

(14) Service performed by an individual in connection with the catching, taking, harvesting, cultivating, or farming of any kind of fish, shellfish, crustacea, sponges, seaweeds, or other aquatic forms of animal and vegetable life, in the employ of a person who does not on any one day during the pay period in which such service is performed have in his employ five or more persons engaged in rendering such service; or.

On page 71, to strike out the committee amendment in lines 13 to 23 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

(14) Service performed by an individual in connection with the catching, taking, harvesting, cultivating, or farming of any kind of fish, shellfish, crustacea, sponges, seaweeds, or other aquatic forms of animal and vegetable life, in the employ of a person who does not on any one day during the pay period in which such service is performed have in his employ five or more persons engaged in rendering such service; or.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, the situation with which the committee was confronted was that there are in certain parts of the country fishermen employed in very small operations. A father will own a little fishing boat, and he will work on it, and perhaps have his son or two of his sons working with him. The nature of the operation is such that the committee did not feel that it would be possible to practically administer the act in reference to those people, and the committee felt it probably would work a great hardship in reference to that type of operators to have them come under the act.

I have no quarrel with that position. However, the amendment submitted by the committee would go much further than that. According to the figures taken from the 1930 census there were at that time approximately 129,207 people employed in the fishing industry in the United States. The estimate of the Social Security Board as to the effect of the committee amendment is that it would eliminate from the operation of the act at least a hundred thousand of these 129,000 people. Clearly the committee did not intend that sort of an amendment.

The committee included the 400-ton standard because they thought that would take care of the situation, and the Board has furnished me figures to the effect that upon the basis of the elimination of vessels of less than 400 tons, of the 80,500 fishermen whose employment is directly upon ships which are under registry, there would be only 530 of the fishermen who would come under the act, and the remainder would all be eliminated from the operation of the act. I think, clearly the committee did not have any intention of creating that sort of a situation.

I then tried to figure out whether or not the 400 tons was too high, and whether it would be possible to get it down to a 50-ton basis, and I asked for the figures upon that basis. I found that that would bring about this result—that out of 28,000 involved 22,000 would be excluded, and only 6,000 included.

Upon the basis of the ships themselves, the Bureau of Fisheries, in the Department of Commerce, estimates that there is a total of only seven ships operating in the fishing industry which would be under the operation of the act if the Senate amendment were enacted in its present form. There are two whaling vessels, one cod vessel, four sardine or pilchard reduction plants. Clearly there is no intention upon the part of the committee, and there would be no intention upon the part of the Senate to have that situation result from the final acceptance of the Senate amendment.

Looking at the figures of the merchant-marine statistics for the year 1938, the total number engaged as seamen on these ships operating in the fishing industry is 24,437. I do not know what percentage of the 24,437 are employed upon the 7 ships to which I have referred, but clearly the number who are employed on the 7 ships is a very small and infinitesimal percentage of the total number of 24,437.

I place these facts in the RECORD so that my position may be made clear. We have no objection to the committee taking care of the situation which was contemplated by the Senator from Mississippi and by the Finance Committee, but I feel sure that they do not want to have all of these people—if 100,000 out of 129,000 is the correct number—eliminated from the operation of the act merely for the purpose of taking care of a comparatively small group of people throughout the country who operate their fishing industry upon the basis which the Senator from Mississippi contemplates.

I should like to have the Senator from Mississippi state the position he, at least, would take on this question in the conference.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, the Senator from Washington and I are in thorough accord as to what has happened with reference to this amendment, and I am delighted that he has given these facts for the RECORD, and has presented this amendment, which he is not going to press, I understand, but which will receive the consideration of the conference committee because the matter will be in conference. We want to be helpful in the matter that is presented by the Senator from Washington, and there is no conflict in our views with reference to it. I give the Senator every assurance that the amendment which he has offered will be given consideration when the bill goes to conference.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, if I may I should like to ask for a little stronger statement than as to consideration. I think the Senator will recognize that in face of the facts, if I merely presented an amendment or opposed the Senate committee amendment, the Senate itself would not accept the Senate committee amendment as it has been adopted.

Mr. HARRISON. I am in thorough accord and sympathy with the Senator's position, and, as I understand, he is in further conference with various individuals interested in the subject of this amendment and, so far as I am concerned, I shall make an effort to have the amendment, which I understand will be further clarified, included in the conference report.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I thank the Senator. I send to the desk an amendment on another phase of the bill, which I have had printed, and which I ask to have reported.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed, on page 2, to strike out beginning with line 19 down to and including the word "assistance" in line 20, and in lieu thereof to insert the words "take into consideration the income of an individual claiming old-age assistance, but shall not deny old-age assistance to any individual because he owns real property having a value not in excess of $2,500 or because he owns personal property having a value not in excess of $500 or because other persons are under a duty to furnish support to such individual"; on page 2, line 24, before the period, insert a semicolon and the words "and (9) effective July 1, 1941, provide for a determination upon each claim for old-age assistance within thirty days from the time of filing application; and (10) effective July 1, 1941, provide that no individual shall be required, in order to receive old-age assistance, to convey or give any lien upon any property owned by such individual, and provide that in the absence of fraud and deception there shall be no recovery from the estate of any deceased individual with respect to old-age assistance received by such individual"; and on page 3, line 12, strike out "sixty-five" and insert in lieu thereof "sixty."

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, during the last few days the Senate has had under consideration three different amendments involving the question of amount. The statement has been made by many Senators that it was of extreme importance that the bill be amended so as to change the amount. The argument has been used that it is necessary and desirable to do this because of the fact that if it were not done dissatisfaction with the act would be such as to result in an entirely different system, which is held by some who have discussed it to be more or less of a threat.

I recognize that the question of amount is of importance, and I believe that, insofar as we possibly can make them, increases in amount should and must be made. But if we are interested in the question of dissatisfaction, the possibility of the perpetuation of a social-security problem in the country, it is of equal if not greater importance to see that what may seem to be minor matters are adjusted so as to be satisfactory to those with whom the Social Security Board is working, either directly or through the State agencies.

The question of satisfaction with a piece of legislation usually depends first upon what it contains. But of equal, if not greater, importance, it depends upon the way in which it is administered; and if there are in the act possibilities for administration which will result in dissatisfaction, it seems to me of supreme importance that they should be eliminated. While my amendments do not involve the question of amount, they do involve questions which my experience has shown will probably result, as they have resulted in the past, in more dissatisfaction with the old-age pension system, the social-security system, than any question of amount.

Take the first part of the amendment, which refers to the question of need. The administration of the act, so far as the possible recipient is concerned, in most of the States of the Union, at least, has been through the medium of trained social-service workers. There are a good many people who take one side and a good many people who take the other side of the argument as to the fitness of trained social-service workers in handling this kind of an activity.

We must admit that the trained social-service worker does have a background which enables him or her more carefully and probably more scientifically to examine the cases. At the same time we must admit that the trained social-service worker looks upon the problem with which he or she is confronted in a different and I think in a slightly less humanitarian way than does the average citizen. It may be it is simply because such workers have had so much experience along that line that they do not impress those with whom they deal as having that humane sympathy which other people might have toward the problem.

But we have a general definition of need. We say that these people must be in need in order to participate in the program, and the social-service worker goes to the house and she makes an examination of the family. She asks innumerable questions. Many of the questions are viewed by the person in the family who is interviewed as being impertinent, as being none of the business of the social-service examiner.

Then the social-service worker finds, perhaps, that an individual over the age of 65 has, as a result of saving through the years, acquired a piece of real estate or acquired a home. The chief criticism that is made generally of the establishment of old-age pensions is that it will remove from those who are thinking that possibly they will be participants in the social-security program when they reach old age the incentive to save their money; that it will take away from them the incentive to thrift, and bring about on the part of our people in the future such a frame of mind that they will never want to save any money, for they may say the Government will take care of them when they are old, and therefore it is needless and not desirable to save any money.

That is the stock argument which we hear against the establishment of old-age pensions. Yet, in the measures which we have enacted in the past, by leaving leeway to those who administer the acts, we have done the most important thing to bring about that situation by giving to the administrators the right to say to the old person who has saved a little money and has been able to get for himself and his wife a home worth $3,000, $4,000, or $5,000, that because he has a certain amount of money or of property, therefore he cannot get the pension unless he conveys the title to the Government and gives the property to the Government.

That strikes directly at incentive toward thrift. If, in addition to providing an old-age pension when people get old, we say that he or she must be a pauper in order to get it, then certainly there is no incentive toward saving a little money in order to obtain a home in which to live. Certainly an old man or woman should not be penalized because he or she has been sufficiently thrifty possibly to save sufficient money with which to buy a home for $2,500, or which at the time it was acquired had a value of $2,500. So one part of the first amendment provides that an exemption of $2,500 in real estate shall be allowed, and that that shall not be taken away from the possessor.

The second part of the amendment provides that old people shall be allowed to have $500 worth of personal property. Here again, while a saving of $500 may not seem so much to the Members of this body, the saving of $500 and its possession at the age of 60 or 65 years does seem of importance to a great many people. If we are going to tell these people that they cannot even have $500 if they are to be eligible to receive the old-age pension, then certainly we are playing right into the hands of those who say that we should not provide any pensions at all because they take away all incentive toward thrift.

I present the proposal not merely upon the basis of humanity. Certainly there is not anything humane in saying to these people, "If you desire to participate you cannot participate if you have $2,500 worth of real estate or $500 in cash or personal property of any kind." There is nothing humane about that kind of a provision.

The fact is that those who have administered this act in the past on the basis that it was necessary to show need have assumed that they had a right to say if aged people had anything at all they were not entitled to participate under the act.

The purpose of the first amendment is simply to provide that in determining need the board shall—

Take into consideration the income of an individual claiming old-age assistance, but shall not deny old-age assistance to any individual because he owns real property having a value not in excess of $2,500 or because he owns personal property having a value not in excess of $500 or because other persons are under a duty to furnish support to such individual.

Referring to the last part of the amendment, it does not say arbitrarily that the son or the daughter who is in a position to assist the father or the mother may completely evade all responsibility. It does not completely destroy any responsibility upon the part of the family. But it does say to the social-service worker, "You are not in a position to say to the father or mother, 'You have a son or a daughter who can support you, or could support you, and therefore you must be supported by them.'"

I do not know of anything more cruel than, for example, placing a mother-in-law or a father-in-law on the support of a married son or daughter where there is, as many times happens, severe friction between the daughter-in-law or the son-in-law and the father-in-law or mother-in-law. I know in my State it is the position of the State department which administers the law that if there is any possibility that the son or the daughter or other relative is in a position to take care of the parents, then they are to be arbitrarily cut off.

My amendment takes care of the general situation by permitting and compelling the Administrator to take into consideration the other possible sources of income of the person who is eligible for old-age benefits, but it does not place upon the person administering the law the right to say arbitrarily, "You cannot get any money because of the fact that you have a relative who can and who possibly should take care of you."

Mr. President, I think it is true of perhaps 90 percent of our people that they would not under any circumstances permit their fathers or mothers to secure an old-age pension while they are able to take care of them. However, there is a percentage of people who do not have that attitude of mind, and it is a condition which we all recognize, a condition which we must recognize.

It seems to me that if we are to have a social-security program as a permanent policy in the United States, now is the time to protect against such situations, which result in more dissatisfaction with the measure than any provisions in it relating to money.

The next amendment is, on page 2, line 3, which provides for a determination upon the claim within 30 days of filing application. I do not know how the situation is generally throughout the country. I have mentioned this matter to a number of the Members of the Senate, and those with whom I have discussed it have said that the same situation exists in their States as exists in my own State.

The period of time between the filing of the application and action upon the application extends month after month, and even into a year, and sometimes up to 18 months or 2 years. How very much better it would be for a person who has an application on file which is to be rejected to have it rejected within a reasonable period of time, rather than to have it delayed month after month. I will admit that during the first year of operation there probably was very great justification for delay; but the law has now been in operation sufficiently long so that there is no justification for the administrators of the act to say that an applicant for old-age assistance or an old-age pension cannot have a determination of his application within a period of 30 days after the application is filed. If we make the process speedy, we shall eliminate one of the greatest causes of dissatisfaction. While I am in Washington I receive two or three letters a week from applicants, and when I am at home I have conversations every day with persons who have filed applications for old-age pensions. I am told, "I filed my application last January and nothing has been done about it. Why do you not do something about it?" I explain that the State has control of the operation so far as that question is concerned. The applicant says, "Very well; that may be true, but the Federal Government furnishes half the money, and you represent the Federal Government. Why can you not insist that something be done?"

There is only one way that the Federal Government can insist upon action, and that is to say to the States that if they are to receive money from the Federal Government they must use reasonable speed in the consideration of the applications. I think that question has much to do with the dissatisfaction with the present law.

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield.

Mr. LEE. I intend to support the amendments proposed by the Senator. With respect to the situation just referred to in the Senator's own State, the same situation is true in Oklahoma. However, in justification of those who administer the law it may be said that the case load is so heavy and there are so many more applicants than can be taken care of that the social workers cannot get around to all of them in a short time. As I pointed out yesterday, for every social worker there are perhaps a thousand clients who must be interviewed to find out their economic status. With a thousand clients to each social worker, if the worker gets around even once a year to check the rolls, more than three clients a day must be interviewed. The problem is very difficult. I believe the solution lies in a complete repeal of the State administration, with an outright old-age pension which puts everyone of a certain age on the rolls. After we have sifted them we find many who are not on the rolls, but they are not self-supporting, as the Senator from Washington has just pointed out. They live with relatives. That is not an ideal condition. In other cases they hold jobs which they are unable to perform, and which should be left for younger people to do. The percentage of those who have attained the age of 60 and are able to sustain themselves without jobs is so small that in my opinion an outright pension which would pay everybody 60 years of age a pension would effect a great saving in the machinery of administration, and the universality of the application of the law would result in greater satisfaction.

I appreciate the fact that the Senator voted for the amendment which I proposed yesterday, which would have accomplished the object I have in mind. I presume the Senator is doing as I am doing. If you cannot get a whole loaf, take a half. If you cannot get a red bird, a blue one will do. We should get the best we can out of the law, and improve it all we can. I feel that we have made some advance. We are providing a pension for those who have never had one before, and we are considering a great problem. I wish to say to the Senator that I shall support his amendments, and that I favor the efforts of all Senators who are undertaking to improve the law, which is a complicated statute because we are trying to solve a complicated problem.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I thank the Senator from Oklahoma for the statement he has just made. So far as delay being justified because of the number of applications, I will say that for the first year or year and a half I accepted that argument by the various State agencies and apologized for them. I thought they were doing the best they could. However, I do not think that situation any longer exists. I believe the time has now come, the law having been in operation for a considerable length of time, when it should be possible, and it must be made possible, for those who have applications before the administering agencies to be given a decision upon their applications within a period of 30 days after the application is filed.

The second part of the second amendment refers to claims against the estates of individuals who have been recipients of old-age pensions. It provides that only in cases of fraud may a claim be laid against the estate of an individual. As I pointed out in reference to the first amendment, we are not helping the general cause of social security or the cause of old-age pensions by permitting those who administer the law to take away from those who have a little property the property which they have. If the administrators do not succeed in obtaining the property while the individual is alive, they succeed after he is dead by laying a claim against his estate. Certainly if there is any fraud or deception of the Government on the part of these individuals, the Government is entitled to obtain the property; but, in the absence of fraud, there should not be the constant threat of filing liens against property and laying claims against the estates of individuals.

The third amendment is with reference to the question of age, and reduces the age limit from 65 to 60. Those who are familiar with the long movement in this country in behalf of old-age pensions know that in the beginning it was anticipated that the age of 65 was probably the proper age at which the payment of old-age pensions should commence. I think undoubtedly 20 or 25 years ago that was the proper age. However, anyone familiar with economic and industrial conditions in the country and the changes which have taken place in the past 20 years must recognize that there has been a direct relationship between the general changes and the age at which people are no longer able to work. There is, and has been, a terrific movement in the country toward the substitution of machinery for the labor of individuals. I remember reading a survey of the automobile industry, made in 1934. It was made as a result of the National Industrial Recovery Act. The findings of the committee showed that in the production of automobiles the average age of those employed was 31 years, and that young men coming into the automobile industry at an early age were unable to carry on their work after they had reached the age of about 35.

There has been a very definite and very certain reduction in the age at which people are eligible for employment. I do not think that the reduction in age from 65 to 60 would mean any material loss to the Treasury of the United States. I do not think it would materially increase the expenditures which the Federal Government and the local governments must make, because I think the facts conclusively show that those who would be eligible under the reduction in the age limit and who would participate in an old-age pension between the ages of 60 and 65 are those who are already securing assistance from some form of relief or work relief, in many instances in a larger amount than the amount which they would receive under an old-age pension. We shall very shortly reach the time when we must recognize such a change in our industrial and economic forces as to require that those above the age of 60 be recognized as eligible for old-age pensions, old-age benefits, and old-age assistance.

It seems to me that all three of the amendments which I have introduced, and which I am now asking the Senate to adopt, go to a point which has created more friction, more dissatisfaction, and resulted in more aggravated cases of complaint than any of the other questions involved in the policy of social security. In my opinion, the adoption of these amendments is absolutely essential, not merely to prevent what was described yesterday as a threat of something which would involve much more money than the Social Security Act. I think that unless we take care of the situations involved in my amendments we shall see a breakdown of the social-security system in this country.

I urge that the Senate adopt the three amendments, which may seem to be minor in importance, but which, nevertheless, reach points which are more likely to cause trouble than any other points in the whole system.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado in the chair). Does the Senator desire to have the amendments voted upon en bloc?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Yes; Mr. President.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, the amendments of the Senator from Washington were considered by the Finance Committee, but did not receive the approval of the committee. We felt that eligibility for assistance to needy aged people was a question for determination by the States. That was the theory upon which the legislation was first passed; and if we now start to make a change, the problem will be constantly before us.

I hope the amendments will be rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendments offered by the Senator from Washington [Mr. SCHWELLENBACH].

The amendments were rejected.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, there is an amendment at the desk which I now offer for the consideration of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 119, at the end of the bill, it is proposed to insert the following:

Sec. 908. (a) There is hereby authorized to be established by the Committee on Finance of the Senate and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives, in cooperation with the Social Security Board, an Advisory Council on Unemployment Insurance, representing employers, employees, and the general public, to study and report to said committee on the following matters concerning unemployment insurance:

1. Scope and coverage.
2. Amount, character, duration, and qualification for benefits.
3. Advisability and nature of individual employer and State unemployment experience ratings for tax purposes.
4. Size, character, adequacy, and disposition of reserves.
5. Source, character, and method of financing.
6. Coordination of unemployment insurance with relief, work relief, and other programs for alleviating economic distress among the unemployed.
7. Pertinent experience in the operation and administration of existing unemployment-insurance laws.
8. Any other matters which either of the above-mentioned committees or the Social Security Board may deem relevant to the inquiry.

(b) The Social Security Board shall furnish all necessary technical assistance in connection with such study.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, the amendment I have just offered establishes an Advisory Council to study and report on the problem of unemployment insurance in the United States, with a view to improving and perfecting the provisions of the Social Security Act in that regard. The amendment was submitted to the Committee on Finance. Although it was too late to be included in the committee report, the amendment has received the unanimous approval of the committee.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, the Senator is correct. The Finance Committee authorized me to accept the amendment when the Senator from New York offered it. So it has the approval of the Finance Committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I offer another amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the end of the bill, following the amendment last agreed to, it is proposed to insert the following:

Sec. 909. (a) There is hereby authorized to be established by the Committee on Finance of the Senate and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives, in cooperation with the Social Security Board, an Advisory Council on Disability Benefits, representing employers, employees, and the general public, to study and report to said committees on the establishment of disability benefits under the Social Security Act as amended, with particular reference to the following:

1. Relationship of disability insurance to other forms of social insurance.
2. Scope and coverage.
3. Amount, character, duration, and qualification for benefits.
4. Source, character, and method of financing.
5. Pertinent experience in the operation and administration of existing disability-insurance systems, public and private.
6. Coordination of disability insurance with relief and other programs for alleviating economic distress among the disabled.
7. Rehabilitation services.
8. Any other matters which either of the above-mentioned committees or the Social Security Board may deem relevant to the inquiry.

(b) The Social Security Board shall furnish all necessary technical assistance in connection with such study.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, the purpose of this amendment is similar to the purpose of the amendment just offered by the Senator from New York and approved by the Senate, except that it relates to disability benefits.

Mr. WAGNER. The amendment authorizes a similar Advisory Council to study and report on the establishment of disability benefits under the Social Security Act as amended. Payment of such benefits in connection with the old-age-insurance system has already been approved in principle by the Advisory Council which reported last December.

Mr. HARRISON. There is no objection on the part of the committee to the acceptance of this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER].

The amendment was agreed to.

CONVEYANCE OF CERTAIN EASEMENTS TO NEW YORK CITY

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I have conferred with the leaders in regard to the matter which I am about to bring to the attention of the Senate. There is upon the calendar a bill for the consideration of which I ask unanimous consent. It is Calendar No. 825, Senate bill 2662. If it is to be of any use at all, the bill must be passed now.

There is in contemplation the construction of a bridge in New York City from the lower side of Manhattan to the Borough of Brooklyn. There are certain easements necessary in order to permit the construction work to proceed. The bill authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to convey an easement over certain properties which are now occupied by the Federal Government. The city of New York has agreed, in consideration of the granting of the easements, to convey to the Federal Government certain properties which may be utilized in lieu of certain Federal properties the use of which will be interfered with by the construction of the bridge.

Mr. AUSTIN rose.

Mr. WAGNER. I have submitted the bill to the Senator from Oregon, I may say to the Senator from Vermont, who carefully went over it with me and expressed approval of it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I inquire of the Senator from New York whether he thinks there is any probability of the consideration of the bill leading to any debate?

Mr. WAGNER. Not at all. I cannot imagine any objection at all to the bill.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I inquire of the Senator from New York if hearings were held on the bill?

Mr. WAGNER. There were no hearings held, but there is at hand a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, in which he explains the provisions of the bill, and expresses his approval. The reason there is need for haste, I may say to the Senator, is that until this measure shall have been passed and approved nothing further can be done by the city of New York toward prosecuting the construction of the bridge.

Mr. AUSTIN. Did the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds consider the bill?

Mr. WAGNER. They have considered it; yes.

Mr. AUSTIN. In a meeting?

Mr. WAGNER. I am not a member of the committee and cannot therefore state as to that, but it was unanimously reported by the committee, I understand. A similar bill has been reported by the committee having jurisdiction in the other House, and I understand it is about to be passed by that body.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 2662) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to convey an easement in certain lands to the city of New York, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to convey to the city of New York upon such terms and conditions and for such consideration as, in his absolute discretion, he may deem to be to the best interests of the United States, an easement to construct and maintain a bridge for highway purposes over and across the land comprising the Barge Office site at or near Battery Park, Borough of Manhattan, New York City, being the same premises conveyed to the United States by letters patent from the State of New York, February 5, 1867, recorded April 13, 1867, in the office of the register of the county of New York, in Liber 1007 of Conveyances at page 157; deed from the mayor, aldermen, and commonalty of the city of New York to the United States, dated March 30, 1867, recorded April 13, 1867, in the office of the register of the county of New York, in Liber 1007 of Conveyances at page 158; and deed from the mayor, aldermen, and commonalty of the city of New York to the United States, dated June 7, 1879, recorded June 9, 1879, in the office of the register of the county of New York, in Liber 1498 of Conveyances at page 82.

AMENDMENT OF SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6635) to amend the Social Security Act, and for other purposes.

Mr. DOWNEY obtained the floor.

LXXXIV—568

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, will the Senator from California be good enough to yield to me to offer two amendments, which I think will occasion no debate? If they should, I will withdraw them, so that the Senator from California may proceed.

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. GEORGE. I offer an amendment that has been approved by the committee. It relates to the revenue act, but the amendment is very brief and self-explanatory.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the end of the bill following the amendment last agreed to it is proposed to insert the following new section:

SEC. —. Subsection (d) of section 602 of the Revenue Act of 1936, as amended (relating to floor stocks adjustment), is amended by striking out "January 1, 1937" and inserting in lieu thereof "January 1, 1940."

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. KING. Obviously this is a matter dealing with the revenue, and I was wondering whether it is appropriate to be attached to the pending bill and whether or not it will provoke a controversy with the other House?

Mr. GEORGE. I do not think so, I will say to the Senator, because it was intended by an amendment which was adopted to the Revenue Act to cover this particular matter. It was more by inadvertence than otherwise that it was omitted. The matter was submitted to the Committee on Finance, and the committee in considering the Social Security Act authorized the amendment to be offered from the floor.

Mr. KING. What is the purpose of the amendment? I was not in the committee when the matter was under consideration.

Mr. GEORGE. I will explain it in a word. The amendment is to give merchants holding floor stocks the same period within which to file claims for refunds as was given to processors by the amendment to the recent Revenue Act. This group was overlooked when the tax bill was under consideration.

Mr. KING. Would this meet with the approval of the Treasury Department?

Mr. GEORGE. I do not know. The Finance Committee adopted an amendment to the revenue act extending the time within which those who had paid the tax might file claims for refunds. This amendment simply permits a merchant who has the goods on hand to have the same period within which to file his claim for refund.

Mr. KING. Is there any considerable number of those who would avail themselves of the benefits of this provision?

Mr. GEORGE. Yes; there are a considerable number, but their claims are very small as a rule, and, under the rigid requirements of the law, very few of them can prove that they have not passed on the tax.

Mr. KING. I shall not object, but I regret that it has not been considered more carefully.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Georgia.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, there is another revenue matter embodied in the amendment which I am offering on behalf of the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], who is not present in the Chamber. While some technical language is used in the amendment, I should be very glad in one or two sentences to explain what its purpose is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the end of the bill following the amendment last agreed to it is proposed to insert a new section, as follows:

SEC. —. (a) The provisions of section 213 (f) of the Revenue Act of 1939 shall apply without regard to the exception therein provided, if (1) the taxpayer in the determination referred to in such exception is a corporation; (2) such determination is by a decision of the Board of Tax Appeals or of a court; (3) under the law applicable to the taxable year in which the exchange occurred, the basis of the property, acquired upon the exchange from the taxpayer by the party assuming a liability of the taxpayer or acquiring the property subject to a liability, is the cost to such party of the property acquired upon the exchange; and (4) the taxpayer in pursuance of the plan of reorganization effected a complete liquidation immediately subsequent to the exchange.

(b) No overpayment determined to have been made for any taxable year by reason of the provisions of paragraph (a) of this section shall be refunded or credited unless a claim for refund is filed within the period of limitations otherwise provided by law for filing a claim for refund for such taxable year, or within 1 year from the date of enactment of the Revenue Act of 1939, whichever of such periods expires the later.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, considerable technical language is used in the amendment, it being necessary to use it in order effectively to amend the revenue act so as to meet the situation in contemplation. The amendment applies only to one single instance, and is intended to apply to only one case that was discussed at very great length by the Finance Committee at the time the revenue act was under consideration. It simply permits one taxpayer the privilege of filing a claim for refund, although there had been a final court decision in his case. Inasmuch, however, as the Government itself asked that the rule which had resulted from the decision favorable to the Treasury should be abrogated for all other taxpayers by an amendment to the revenue act, it was deemed just and equitable that it be abrogated in the case which actually went to final adjudication. That is, the decision being favorable to the Treasury, and the Treasury asking that the decision be upset, it was felt that this condition presented a strong equitable reason for offering this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Georgia.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, will the Senator from California yield to me to offer some clarifying amendments?

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. HARRISON. I wish to offer certain amendments which are clarifications of certain language which appear in the bill. One is on page 47, line 2. I send the first amendment to the desk and ask to have it read by the clerk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 47, line 2, it is proposed to insert the following new sentence:

In any case where an individual has been paid in a calendar year $3,000 or more in wages, each quarter of such year following his first quarter of coverage shall be deemed a quarter of coverage, excepting any quarter in such year in which such individual dies or becomes entitled to a primary insurance benefit and any quarters succeeding such quarter in which he died or became so entitled.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, the change from an annual to a quarterly basis for eligibility requires that an individual be paid $50 in wages in a quarter for the quarter to be counted toward eligibility. Wages is a defined term and does not include salary in a year after the first $3,000 is paid. Accordingly an individual receiving $12,000 a year might, under the definition, have only one quarter of coverage in the year because all the part of his salary which could be counted as wages was paid in the first quarter. Under the amendment he would also have the succeeding three quarters in the year counted as quarters of coverage. This is merely a clarifying amendment to remove any possible ambiguity in this type of situation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARRISON. I offer another amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 111, line 15, it is proposed to strike out the word "No" and insert "Except as provided in section 906, no."

Mr. HARRISON. This technical amendment is necessary because the new section 906 inserted by the Finance Committee affects the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, and would therefore be in conflict with the language contained in this section unless the exception clause were inserted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARRISON. I offer another amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 116, line 14, it is proposed to strike out the words "effective January 1, 1939," and insert in lieu thereof the following: "as of the effective date thereof, and paragraph (4) of section 811 (b) of the Social Security Act is repealed as of January 1, 1939."

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, the repeal of paragraph (4) of section 1426 (b) of the Internal Revenue Code as of January 1, 1939, failed to take into account the fact that the Internal Revenue Code became effective subsequent to that date, with the result that the corresponding provision of the Social Security Act which was operative until the code became effective technically may remain in force. The amendment makes clear that paragraph (4) of section 811 (b) of the Social Security Act is repealed as of January 1, 1939, and that the corresponding but subsequent provision of the Internal Revenue Code is repealed as of its effective date.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARRISON. I offer another amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 119, after line 23, it is proposed to insert the following:

Sec. 909. Subsection (h) of section 5 of the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, as amended, is amended by inserting after the words "United States", where they first appear in such subsection, the following: "except the taxes imposed by sections 1410 and 1600 of the Internal Revenue Code with respect to wages paid after December 31, 1939, for employment after such date."

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, this amendment would include under the Social Security Act certain Federal savings-and-loan associations affiliated with the Federal home-loan banks, which would otherwise be excluded from the old-age insurance, the Federal insurance contributions act and the Federal unemployment tax act provisions of the bill as passed by the House, since under the Home Owners' Loan Act they are exempt from all taxes imposed by the United States.

Many savings and building-and-loan associations and their employees are covered under the Social Security Act at present. It is only those which have become affiliated with the home-loan bank which are exempt, it having been determined that they are instrumentalities of the United States. The bill as passed by the House narrowed this exclusion to such instrumentalities as are wholly owned by the United States or are exempt from taxes by other provision of law and accordingly failed to include these Federal savings-and-loan associations.

There seems to be no sound reason for excluding from the benefits of the Social Security Act employees of a building or savings-and-loan association merely because the association has organized itself as a Federal savings and loan association. Moreover, the present provision of the bill would permit those associations otherwise included to avoid coverage by becoming affiliated with the Home Loan Bank Board.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, those are all the clarifying amendments that I have to offer. The Senator from Vermont [Mr. Austin] has an amendment dealing with a subject which, I am informed, is already covered; but if he feels that there is any doubt about it, I am perfectly willing, so far as I am personally concerned, to accept his amendment and let it go to conference. I think the farmers referred to by him already come in the excluded class in the bill.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 48, line 14, after the comma, it is proposed to insert the following:

Or in salvaging timber or clearing land of brush and other debris left by a hurricane.

On page 74, line 12, after the comma, it is proposed to insert the following:

Or in salvaging timber or clearing land of brush and other debris left by a hurricane.

On page 103, line 16, after the comma, it is proposed to insert the following:

Or in salvaging timber or clearing land of brush and other debris left by a hurricane.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, in a word, all three of these amendments affect the definition of agricultural labor.

I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the RECORD at this point, for the use of the Senate and of the conferees, some correspondence which shows the background and the need for these amendments:

First, a letter from me to E. W. Tinker, Acting Chief of Forest Service, dated January 5, 1939.

Second, a letter from Payson Irwin, special assistant to acting administrator, Northeastern Timber Salvage Administration, to me, dated January 7, 1939.

Third, a letter from Guy T. Helvering, Commissioner, to me, dated January 26, 1939.

This correspondence shows the necessity for these amendments and the policy of the amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the letters will be printed in the RECORD.

The letters are as follows:

JANUARY 5, 1939.

E. W. TINKER, Esq.,

Acting Chief of Forest Service, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. TINKER: Referring again to the question whether the work of salvaging the wind-thrown timber and clearing of land of debris caused by the hurricane in New England properly falls within the exemptions from taxation of employers and employees:

The presentation of the claim of the farmers of New England, made on behalf of Vermont and New Hampshire this morning, that all of this work which is necessary and incidental to restoration of the land to agricultural use constitutes agricultural labor, resulted in a request for further evidence to be furnished to the Social Security Unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Therefore, will you please furnish me with such facts as you can regarding the following points:

(1) Whether individuals cutting and clearing are in the employ of a farmer or of a contractor;

(2) Whether the services are performed on or around the land of the employer, or whether they are performed for an employer who clears the land for others.

(3) Whether any of the employees are in the employ of the Government agency, Northeastern Timber Salvage Corporation, which is a subsidiary of the Surplus Commodities Corporation that will issue the invoices for logs and lumber on which farmers can obtain an advancement of 80 percent of the value of the salvaged logs. (The Surplus Commodities Corporation is financed for this purpose with money borrowed from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.)

(4) Another question asked is: Are the millers who do the sawing, contractors, or do they serve only as a link in the operation of clearing the land?

(5) If it is proper that we be furnished with a copy of the type of contract used in both the delivery of logs and the sawing of logs, we should like to have it.

Our attention was called to a ruling, S. S. T. 289:

"Services performed by an employee on land owned or tenanted by his employer in the removal of stumps, brush, etc., for the purpose of preparing the land for use as an orchard constitute 'agricultural labor' within the meaning of titles VIII and IX of the Social Security Act. However, services performed on such land in cutting, sawing, and preparing timber for market do not constitute 'agricultural labor' and are not excepted from 'employment' under the act."

This syllabus is prefixed to a report of a case which clearly differs from the salvaging project we have under consideration.

I believe that we can get a prompt decision by the unit after furnishing the required details regarding the mechanics of both timber removal and fire prevention.

Thanking you for your courteous assistance, I am,

Sincerely yours,

WARREN R. AUSTIN.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, FOREST SERVICE,
Washington, January 7, 1939.

HON. WARREN R. AUSTIN,
United States Senate.

DEAR MR. AUSTIN: Reference is made to your letter of January 5. The question of the payment of the social-security tax on labor employed in salvage work in New England was brought to my attention about 10 days ago, and after a discussion over the telephone with Mr. Paul, of the Social Security Unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau, I arranged with our Boston office to have two test cases put before the collector of internal revenue in Vermont and rushed to the Washington office for a ruling.

It seems obvious that logging contractors are under the social-security law, but the case of the farmer who may employ one or two men to aid him in salvaging the hurricane-felled timber should not be subject to the social-security tax. Agricultural labor is not so taxed. A farmer might presumably employ a laborer on his farm, but a part of the farm work would be work in the woodlot, which, under modern practices of forestry, would require that a certain amount of thinning of the stand would be done each year. If the trees cut were merchantable, such cuttings would constitute produce from the farm, and the laborer's wages should not be taxed. Under the present hurricane disaster conditions in certain areas in New England, this farmer might need to employ several men to aid him in reducing fire-hazard conditions in his woodlot, but in that process he would find many logs which the Government stands ready to purchase. Under the present ruling by the Social Security Unit, this farmer would be subject to tax.

The first two questions in your letter, I believe, are answered by the above statement.

Your third question asks whether any employees of the Northeastern Timber Salvage Administration are engaged in logging operations. The Salvage Administration stands in the relation of a purchaser of logs delivered to certain storage points. The logging operations are carried on either directly by the timber owner or by a contractor employed by the owner or contracted for by the owner.

In answer to question 4, the Salvage Administration, after the logs are purchased, is making contracts with sawmill operators to process the logs. Consequently the milling operation lies completely outside of the logging operations.

Our sawmill contract is undergoing a complete revision. As soon as it has been completed I shall be very glad to send you a copy. The agreement entered into by the Salvage Administration with the timber owner will be sent you as soon as I can secure copies from the Boston office.

I trust this gives you the information you wish, but I shall be glad to have you call on me at any time for anything further you may wish.

Very sincerely yours,

PAYSON IRWIN,
Special Assistant to Acting Administrator, Northeastern Timber Salvage Administration.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, January 26, 1939.

HON. WARREN R. AUSTIN,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: Receipt is acknowledged of your letter dated January 10, 1939, addressed to Assistant Deputy Commissioner Self, in which the views of the Bureau are requested as to the status under the taxing provisions of the Social Security Act of services performed in connection with the salvaging of timber and clearance of land of brush and other debris left by a recent hurricane. There was transmitted with your letter a communication dated January 7, 1939, from Mr. Payson Irwin, special assistant to Acting Administrator, Northeastern Timber Salvage Administration, containing certain information relating to the manner in which the aforementioned activities are conducted. It is contended that all services performed by employees of farmers in connection with such activities are excepted from "employment" as "agricultural labor" within the meaning of those terms as used in titles VIII and IX of the act. This matter was also the subject of a conference held in the office of Assistant Deputy Commissioner Self on January 5, 1939, at which you and Senator Bridges, of New Hampshire, were in attendance.

You are advised that article 6 of Regulations 91, issued pursuant to title VIII of the act, reads as follows:

"The term 'agricultural labor' includes all services performed—

"(a) By an employee, on a farm, in connection with the cultivation of the soil, the raising and harvesting of crops, or the raising, feeding, or management of livestock, bees, and poultry; or

"(b) By an employee in connection with the processing of articles from materials which were produced on a farm; also the packing, packaging, transportation, or marketing of those materials or articles. Such services do not constitute agricultural labor, however, unless they are performed by an employee of the owner or tenant of the farm on which the materials in their raw or natural state were produced, and unless such processing, packing, packaging, transportation, or marketing is carried on as an incident to ordinary farming operations as distinguished from manufacturing or commercial operations.

"As used herein, the term 'farm' embraces the farm in the ordinarily accepted sense and includes stock, dairy, poultry, fruit, and truck farms, plantations, ranches, ranges, and orchards.

"Forestry and lumbering are not included within the exception granted by section 811 (b)."

The provisions of article 206 (1) of Regulations 90, issued pursuant to title IX of the act, are substantially similar to the above-quoted provisions of article 6 of Regulations 91.

In view of the foregoing, the Bureau has no alternative but to hold that services performed in connection with the cutting of timber and its preparation for market do not constitute "agricultural labor" for purposes of the taxing provisions of the Social Security Act, irrespective of the fact that such services may be rendered in the employ of farmers or that they may be performed, in part, for the purpose of reducing fire hazards.

The conclusion reached with respect to the services rendered in connection with the cutting of timber and its preparation for market is, for the same reasons, applicable to services performed in connection with the removal of brush and other debris from timberlands since, under the circumstances, such activity would appear to be carried on as a part of the lumbering operations. While the facts submitted are not sufficiently complete to enable this office to rule definitely upon the status of services performed in connection with the removal of brush and other debris from lands that are used for ordinary farming operations, it would appear that such services are excepted from "employment" as "agricultural labor" since they are incidental to ordinary farming operations, provided, of course, that such services are rendered in the employ of the owner or tenant of the farm upon which they are performed.

The letter dated January 7, 1939, from Mr. Irwin is returned, a copy having been made for the files of this office.

In the event further correspondence relative to this matter is necessary, please refer to the symbols A&C: RR: 3.

Very truly yours,

GUY T. HELVERING, Commissioner.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. President—

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Frazier	La Follette	Schwellenbach
Andrews	George	Lee	Sheppard
Ashurst	Gerry	Lodge	Shipstead
Austin	Gibson	Lucas	Slattery
Barbour	Gillette	Lundeen	Smith
Barkley	Glass	McNary	Taft
Bilbo	Green	Maloney	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	Guffey	Mead	Thomas, Utah
Borah	Gurney	Minton	Tobey
Bridges	Hale	Murray	Townsend
Bulow	Harrison	Neely	Tydings
Byrd	Hatch	Norris	Vandenberg
Capper	Hayden	Nye	Van Nuys
Chavez	Herring	O'Mahoney	Wagner
Clark, Idaho	Hill	Overton	Walsh
Clark, Mo.	Holman	Pittman	Wheeler
Danaher	Holt	Radcliffe	White
Davis	Hughes	Reed	Wiley
Donahay	Johnson, Calif.	Reynolds
Downey	Johnson, Colo.	Russell
Ellender	King	Schwartz

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-one Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. President, I wish now to move to recommit the social-security amendments to the Finance Committee for further study of the whole pension and savings field, with the objective of enacting a proper national pension law for the senior citizens of America. In support of the motion I desire to discuss the issues here involved under three divisions.

I first want to convince the Senate of the United States that the present Social Security Act, with the amendments proposed, is so unworkable and so unjust and so unfair that it should fall by its own weight, and should not receive the support of any Senator.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I should like to recall that the day after the Social Security Act was passed in the House of Representatives I delivered a speech on the subject, Social Insecurity. That is all we have had out of the law, social insecurity.

Mr. DOWNEY. I appreciate the contribution of the Senator, and I agree with him that the law should rather be entitled "Unsocial Insecurity" than "Social Security Act."

In the second place, Mr. President, I desire to attempt to show to this body that a State-Federal matching system is wholly futile compared with a wholly national plan, and under that heading I shall discuss the features of the so-called Townsend plan, which would bring relief to millions upon millions of despairing citizens between 60 and 65 years of age who are now unemployed, humiliated, and degraded, facing insecurity and poverty. I shall attempt to show that an act should be passed paying social dividends as a matter of right, not as a matter of cheap charity, to everyone past 60 years of age not gainfully employed, and that the money therefor should not come from an expanding public debt, which we all know will soon crash our credit, and with it our economy, but from a proper consumptive tax, equivalent at least to about 2 percent of the bulk of our business transactions.

Mr. President, as a third point I shall attempt to show that not only is the Townsend plan justified as strictly a relief measure, but that our economy is collapsing because of lack of consuming power; that it is collapsing because of an excess of savings; that at least 90 percent of the economists in Washington today agree that our economy crashed in 1929 because of stagnant savings, that our economy crashed in 1937 because of excessive savings, and that it will crash within the immediate future whenever we balance the Public Budget, or, at the best, even though we do not do so, within a very few years, and that we must move forward to provide a system of savings or pensions for our senior citizens which will provide the purchasing power so that our young people may work, and so that, in lieu of savings, our senior citizens may have purchasing power upon which to live in dignity and security.

Let us first consider the Social Security Act as it now stands, with the amendments proposed and accepted by this body. I say that it is a law which should not receive the vote of a single Senator, and I do not believe it would if the Senators fully realized its futility and injustice. I am speaking now only upon two phases of the Social Security Act: First, that designed to pay pensions to workers past 65 years of age. That branch of the law falls into two divisions: First, payments to workers in covered occupations after they are 65, flowing from contributions made upon the basis of the pay rolls—2 percent for the present; 6 percent within a few years. The other section of the bill is the old-age assistance division, which we have discussed so much here within the last 2 or 3 days, which now, as the bill stands, provides for a maximum contribution by the Federal Government up to $20, to be matched by the States with an equal amount.

Mr. President, I venture to say that never before has so illogical and absurd a law been proposed in this body. How does it operate? It operates in such a way that the workers in the covered occupations, who will have 6 percent of their salaries taken away from them in the immediate future, and in the far-distant future will receive about one-half the payments we will make to other pensioners as a matter of charity or governmental subsidy.

There may be some Senator who can justify that. If there is, I wish he would make a statement to the workers of the Nation; I wish he would here and now declare the justice of a law which penalizes men who contribute compared with those who receive governmental subsidies. If there is any Senator who is willing to face the workers of America in the covered occupations, who are to pay 6 percent of their salaries for old-age insurance, and then in the immediate present receive about one-half what is now paid as a matter of charity and one-half of what he can look forward to in 40 years, I think the defense of the law should be made by some leader in this body who believes in it.

Mr. President, let me show what we, the Senators from California, must explain to our citizens when we return to report on this law. The Social Security Board estimates that in 1942 the workers in the covered occupations will receive an average of $26.85. It is my firm opinion that that is much too optimistic. I have had independent investigation made, and I do not believe the workers in the covered occupations will receive more than $22 or $23 in 1942 as an average. But, in order to avoid argument on that point, I am going to take the average contributions which will be received by the more poorly paid 80 percent of the workers in the covered occupations, which, upon the most optimistic basis, would be between $19 and $20. Those figures apply to the 80 percent of the more poorly paid workers in the covered occupations.

Consequently, we from California must return to the State of California and report to organized labor and to the workers in the covered occupations of California that, commencing in 1942, if they are 65 years of age and otherwise qualified, they will receive an average of $20 under the proposal here pending; yet we automatically in California, under the amendment lifting the Federal contribution to $20, will be paying $40 to each and every individual past 65 years who qualifies. In other words, the leaders of the majority party are asking this body to ratify a measure which will give one-half as much to the workers in the covered occupations in 1942, if they are single, as we will now give as a matter of governmental subsidy.

But that is not the worst of it. The measure is even more grotesque and absurd. Let us consider it further. If under the contributory act the worker is 65 years of age, and is married to a wife who is past 65 years, his allotment under the proposed amendments would be 50 percent greater, or $30. But in the State of California, as in every other State in the Union, and under the rules of the Federal Government, in making contributions for charity we give the full amount to both husband and wife, so the measure would automatically give to those in California receiving what may be called charity pensions who are both married and past 65, the sum of $80, while we give to the workers of the Nation who are contributing, oh, so generously, the sum of $30. Could anything—I appeal to Senators—be more unfair and grotesque to the workers of the Nation?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. In other words—and I am now agreeing completely with the Senator's challenge—the only way you can approach equity between these two things is by State penury in respect to old-age assistance?

Mr. DOWNEY. The Senator is absolutely correct. We could only bring about any equality between the two different groups under this law by the State of California—and I might say almost every other State in the Union—reducing its contributions to its aged citizens.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the able Senator yield?

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. The reference by the distinguished Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] to the word "penury" recalls that the able Senator from California is the author of a book entitled "Pensions or Penury"?

Mr. DOWNEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I should like to call Senators' attention to that book. Some Senators no doubt have read it. In my opinion it is one of the most able statements on the present day old-age problem. It is one of the most able expositions of social security that has come to my attention. The title of the book is "Pensions or Penury," and I sincerely hope that Senators and citizens generally will read and follow the conclusions of the junior Senator from the great State of California.

Mr. DOWNEY. I am very appreciative of the very courteous words used by the Senator in calling attention to my book. I may say that I have sent a complimentary copy to all Senators and many of the Representatives, and I am glad to report that most of them have done me the honor to read it.

Mr. President, the measure before us has been held up by some as providing a liberalization of the present Social Security Act, and I think a majority of Senators believe they are at least making some small step forward by the enactment of the measure.

Mr. President, nothing could be more false than such a belief. When I was engaged in the practice of law there was an aphorism I used to employ that "figures do not lie but liars figure." What is the justification for a rather harsh remark of that kind? It has been stated—and I am not criticizing the press for it—that this measure will provide a liberalization, and particularly in relation to a married man, who will receive 50 percent more than the single man. I may say that that statement is true, but let us test it and see how fallacious is the statement as a whole. Under the existing law, Mr. President, if a worker in a covered occupation for 40 years without missing 1 day earned $100 on an average every month, and paid the 6 percent designed by the law, when he was 65 years of age he would, under the present law, regardless of his marital status, receive $52.50. We, representing the Townsend groups, thought $52.50 was too low for a man who had given up 6 percent of his salary for 40 years, and never missed a single month's work. But this measure reduces that payment 50 percent, or down to $35. And there is a corresponding reduction in the payments to be made to every worker in the covered occupations after the lapse of 10 years. In other words, this is not a liberalization. It is a long step backward, further into the land of poverty and degradation and degeneracy.

Mr. President, under the proposed law, the single man receives $35 and the married man 65 years of age, whose wife is also 65, receives 50 percent more, or $52.75, or 25 cents more if married to a woman past 65 years than he would get under the present law. That is liberalization!

A man who is married, under the proper conditions, will get 25 cents more than under the present law, and a single man will get 50 percent less; and if I am wrong, there are able gentlemen here who can challenge my statements.

That is not the worst of it. The gentlemen who drafted and presented this measure, Mr. President, know that there will not be 1 citizen out of 100 who will ever get the benefit of that 50-percent increase. I do not think one Senator within the sound of my voice realizes that, and yet it is true. Why is it true? The law says that not only must the man be 65 years of age but he is entitled to the increase only if his wife is 65. That is a joker that would have done credit to an insurance-company actuary, because most men who are still married, many of them having remarried, at 65 have wives who are 5 or 10 years younger; consequently, only a limited proportion will get the benefit of it.

Not only that, but when men reach 65 years of age Heaven has taken from almost half of them their helpmates, their wives, and they are not married at all.

That is not the only joker.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Would the Senator mind at that point saying whether or not there is a distinction between an unmarried man of 65 and a married man whose wife is, say, 60 or 64 years—under 65 years of age?

Mr. DOWNEY. I am not aware of any distinction. Is the Senator?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. No. I was simply inquiring.

Mr. DOWNEY. No; I know of no distinction. If the wife was 60 years of age and the husband 65, they would get the $35 in one of the most favorable cases. Mr. President, I want it understood that hardly any of them will ever get $35 or $52.50; that is, presuming that a man has been in a covered occupation, and never missed one pay roll, at an average pay of $100 per month, he probably will not receive enough to live on. I am merely using the figures given by the Social Security Board—the most favorable figures.

In Mr. Doughton's report is a statement which I presume comes from the Social Security Board, and I submit that it ought to be embalmed as one of the most extraordinary platitudes of asininity that has ever been published in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD or in our public files, because these gentlemen know that that 50-percent increase for married workers whose wives are past 65 means practically nothing, and they finally admitted that it will not cost any more. Why? Because there may not be one citizen out of 100 who will get the advantage of it.

They suggest another reason why this particular benefit is still more vital in its application, and I want to quote to the Senate from the Doughton report. I am now quoting:

The supplementary benefit payable an aged wife is one-half the primary insurance benefit of the annuitant.

Now listen—

Because most wives in the long run will build up wage credits on their own account as a result of their own employment these supplementary allowances will add but little to the ultimate cost of the system.

I said I was going to read the most extraordinary platitudinous language that has, I think, ever been uttered by a responsible social body, and here it is. These gentlemen are speaking—and I am still quoting—about the benefits that will flow from this great liberalization by which the married worker will receive 50 percent more than the single worker, and they finally admit that it will mean nothing in dollars and cents, but they say nevertheless it is of great importance. Let us read their own language:

These supplementary allowances will add but little to the ultimate cost of the system. They will, on the other hand, greatly increase the adequacy and equity of the system—by recognizing that the probable need of a married couple is greater than that of a single individual.

In other words, this law adds to the adequacy and equity of the system, because it recognizes that it costs more for two to live than for one. As a matter of fact, assuming that that is a benefit, and is not known to every man, woman, and child in the United States today, it is the only benefit which will accrue from the great liberalization for not more than 1 percent of our citizens past 65 years of age.

Mr. President, the law has other features which are so unfair and unjust to the workers of the Nation—who some day, I feel sure, will learn about them—that it should be rejected.

Again quoting the figures concerning a man who has an average monthly payment of $100 for 40 years in a covered occupation, if a man earns $100 monthly for 5 years, he receives $26.25. If he works double that time, or for 10 years, does he receive double the amount? He does not. He receives $1.25 more, or $27.50. If he works for 20 years he receives $30. If he works for 40 years he receives $35. The man who works for 40 years receives $35 and the man who works for 20 years receives $30, or $5 less. In other words, one of our citizens who is to be inspired and protected by this great law has built up a payment of $30 by 20 years of contribution, and he will be encouraged to work for 20 years more by being given an additional $5 for the second 20 years' contribution. If that worker were not entitled to one cent of interest, if he lived until he was 65 and commenced to receive his benefits, as between the 20-year payments and the 40-year payments he would have to live until he was 90 years of age to receive back even the additional amount he paid in during the last 20 years. If we allowed 3-percent interest, he would then have to live to be about 125 years of age, after he had reached the age of 60, to receive back what he had paid in.

Mr. President, if I make any error in my figures I hope some Senator will challenge my conclusions.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield.

Mr. DOWNEY. I gladly yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Does the Senator mean to say that that is the best the "brain trust" could do?

Mr. DOWNEY. I should not want to place the responsibility or blame for this law upon any one person. I think probably its authors sincerely and honestly believed in it. Later, I wish to discuss the state of mind which could believe that in a land of imperial wealth, with factories running at half capacity and food destroyed so as to become a stench in the land, we have to cause our senior citizens to live in poverty and degradation. Later, I wish to speak upon that feature of the minds which drafted the act.

Mr. President, the question which immediately arises is, How could men who evidently know the actuarial business have been so prejudiced against the older workers as to deny them any justice or decency? Why is it that after a man has worked from 10 to 20 years he receives almost nothing for the great bulk of the contributions he makes? I will tell the Senate why.

The Social Security Board found that this unhappy and miserable plan would result in the literal starvation of millions of persons past 65 years of age, who would not be able to obtain any relief except by further governmental subsidies and borrowed money. So what did the Board do? It used the contributions of the younger workers in order to work out some liberalization for the older workers. This is exactly what was done, and I challenge anybody to oppose it. Under the law, the older workers will receive their pensions as a result of the contributions of the younger workers; and the gentlemen who have challenged the Townsend plan because we believe in a consumption tax which would bear upon the rich man in proportion to his spending capacity as well as upon the poorer man in lesser degree have finally come down to a system under which, because of its contradictions and futility, hundreds of thousands or millions of pensioners who will receive payments in the next 5 years will be paid by virtue of the pay-roll tax upon other workers.

There is no possible contradiction of that statement. Under the Social Security Act we have not only clamped down the one kind of tax which whips most strongly against the worker, but we have put that tax upon all persons younger than 40 or 45 in order to provide benefits for persons now past 65, because we were unwilling honestly and frankly to face the problem.

Mr. President, the book which I wrote has been referred to. Otherwise, I should make no reference to it. In that book I referred to this law as pure chicanery and fraud. I wish to give one other example. I could give many others, but my time is too limited to do so.

Under the provisions of the bill as it came from the House, any person who did not receive more than $200 in a given year would receive no credit for the tax upon his pay roll. That provision has been changed so that unless his earnings exceed $50 in a quarter he receives no credit. We have millions of unfortunate persons in this land—God help them—who earn $400 or $500 a year, working perhaps a month now and a month again, in and out of covered occupations. The provisions of the bill virtually mean that we are to tax the most miserable, unfortunate people in America on $100, $150, or $199 of their earnings; and if their earnings do not happen to exceed $200 we are going to take their money away from them. That is all it amounts to. Millions of dollars will be drained into the Federal Treasury out of the most miserable unfortunates in America.

Mr. President, I know scrubwomen in California who get down upon their knees and earn perhaps $20 or $30 a month, and who perhaps do not earn more than $100, $150, or $199 a year; and yet we are going to clamp this 6-percent tax down upon them—which is bad enough—and then we are not going to give them $1 of credit or $1 of benefit!

The representatives of the Social Security Board say, "Let that washerwoman or scrubwoman live from the time she is 30 until she is 65, and then we shall take care of her as a charity patient, and we shall make up to her what we took away from her small earnings in order to help finance the workers of the Nation who are now unable to obtain through governmental subsidy the necessary amount upon which to live."

Mr. President, while I am opposed upon economic grounds to any contributory system at all, I can understand the logic of a man who says that the benefits a man receives should be in proportion to his contributions; and that is what this law pretends to provide. But it is absolutely false and misleading. For the next 5 years the older workers will receive several times the proportionate amount over the younger workers who, as a result of the whole scheme, will gain practically nothing through the last 15 or 20 years of their savings.

Mr. President, I have stated the unhappy position of the Senators from California who will have to go back and tell the workers of California in covered occupations, that is the 80 percent of the more poorly paid ones, that they will receive about $20 a month as a result of these liberalizing amendments, while in California a husband will be receiving $40 and a wife $40, or a total of $80.

Do not let any gentleman say, "Well, we do not care what happens in California; it is not our fault if California is too generous." Do you know, Mr. President, that under this proposition we are agreeing to a subsidy from the Federal Treasury for husband and wife of $20 a month each or a total of $40 a month to a husband and wife who have passed 65 years of age. That is more than the great bulk of the workers under the contributory system will receive from their contributions.

Mr. President, let us forget about the contributions of the States. We are proposing under the State-aid plan to give a Federal subsidy which will be greater than what will be received by the workers under the contributory system. Then, when we add the maximum amount paid by the States the contributory worker is going to be so anguished and heart-sick that I am glad that I am not committed to this measure, for, doubt not the day will come, Mr. President, when the workers of America will realize its iniquity.

The present law gives to old-age assistance recipients an average of a little over $19 a month. The Connally amendment, which the Senate has adopted, plus the $20 amendment we have adopted, will raise that average to about $25 a month. Let me say that, with the exception of Senators from two or three States, every other Senator must go back to his State and say to the workers in the covered occupations, if this bill shall be enacted, "We have provided for you, the workers of America under a contributory system, an average of less than is provided as a matter of governmental subsidy."

It is true that many of the Senators will not be in the same extremely embarrassing situation that the distinguished senior Senator from California and I will be in, but the distinguished senior Senator from Massachusetts and the junior Senator from Massachusetts, the Senators from Colorado, those from New York, and those from Ohio—indeed, as a matter of fact, those from every State in the Union—under this new amendment will be in the same position to a greater or lesser degree.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. WALSH. What is the maximum payment for old-age assistance in California?

Mr. DOWNEY. The legal maximum is about $35, but we are only paying an average of about $32.50.

Mr. WALSH. In Massachusetts the average is $28; but the determination of the amount to be paid to a needy individual who has reached the age of 65 is left to the local authorities, as the Senator knows. The result is that the amount paid varies in different communities; and, I am happy to say, in my opinion, the amount paid in Massachusetts ranges as high as $50 in some cases, and $40 and $35 in a large number of cases.

There are other instances in some communities of the contribution being very small. The system under which we are operating—and I am not now speaking in opposition to the system advocated by the Senator from California—leaves to the local communities the determination of the question of need and the amount that should be paid in a particular case to an aged individual. It may be $35 or $45 in one community and in another seven or eight dollars; but if an old person is bedridden and in extremely destitute circumstances and requires more money, provision is made by Massachusetts law for the local authorities to provide for such cases.

As the Senator knows, there is a further provision that one-half the amount is contributed by the Federal Government up to $15. In Massachusetts two-thirds of the remaining amount is provided by the State and one-third by the local communities. So, in the case of an individual in a particular community receiving $30, $15 would come from the Public Treasury, $10 from the State of Massachusetts, and $5 from the local community.

It seems to me that these elastic provisions, under which the determination is left to officials of the local community, who know the needy circumstances of the individual citizen, have operated to better advantage than the general State-wide plan, such as that in California of paying a fixed sum to every individual, no matter what the degree of need may be.

Mr. DOWNEY. I thank the Senator for his very illuminating and interesting statement, and, as a representative of California, I congratulate the State of Massachusetts that in certain payments, at least, it exceeds the payments in California. I had believed we provided the highest payments, and we do have the highest average payments, but in individual cases, as the Senator has pointed out, Massachusetts has the highest. I wish, however, that the senior Senator from Massachusetts had brought his sound judgment and intellect to the question I am propounding. The Senator from Massachusetts must go back and say to the workers in the covered occupations, "Eighty percent of you will get only $20 a month under the law, and, looking ahead 40 years, as the law is now framed, you can hardly hope to get as much as Massachusetts now pays as a matter of subsidy." I take it, that the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts sees the point involved in that, and he may want to respond to me and say, "Well, if the workers in the covered occupations receive so little, we will have to take care of them as a matter of additional charity," which, of course, is what ultimately will happen under this law.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator from California yield at that point?

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. Do I understand the Senator to say that ultimately it will be necessary, in his opinion, for the Federal Government to provide subsidies which will make up the difference between what the workers in the covered occupations will receive and what a person who receives an old-age pension now obtains?

Mr. DOWNEY. I will respond to the distinguished Senator from Illinois in this way: If the Congress does not enact legislation embodying the Townsend plan before the workers of America become aroused to what this law is, I venture to say that this Government will be paying subsidies to bring up the payments of the workers who are paying a contribution to what is being paid in the States as a matter of charity.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. DOWNEY. Certainly.

Mr. LUCAS. The Senator has made a very interesting statement and argument concerning this important piece of legislation. I am merely wondering whether or not the Senator has offered any amendment which would place in the law what he has in mind in connection with the Social Security Act?

Mr. DOWNEY. No; I may say to the Senator from Illinois that I have not. I have appeared before the Finance Committee in an open and in a closed hearing; I explained my ideas to the Finance Committee; and, of course, they were totally disregarded, as I expected them to be. I knew that I would have no opportunity to reach the ears of the Senate except in some such manner as this, but I may say I did the best that I could.

I may further say to the distinguished Senator from Illinois that since 1925, I venture to say, my mind has been occupied 8 or 10 hours a day on this question of excess savings and pensions, and I declare to the Senate that no logical and sound law can be worked out by a combined State and Federal plan embodying a contributory system on the one side and a governmental subsidy on the other. I am anticipating myself in some of these arguments.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. WALSH. I think it only fair to say that the Senator made it very clear to the Committee on Finance that he was opposed to the whole theory of the present social-security law; indeed, he used very strong language in condemning it, and stated that he thought, in time, it would be considered to be almost a fraud—I think that is the very word he used—

Mr. DOWNEY. I think so.

Mr. WALSH. A fraud on the people of this country. For the reason that he was opposed to the whole theory of the law, he did not choose to make any suggestions or offer any amendment, but he is now proposing an entirely different theory be substituted. Am I correct?

Mr. DOWNEY. I thank the Senator. He is entirely correct.

Mr. President, I desire to say that there is one very material respect in which this social-security law violates every acknowledged rule of taxation and social decency. The condition I am now about to describe has been partially, but only to a degree, rectified by the Connally amendment. This law under which the Federal Government gives a larger subsidy to the wealthier State, or to the State that believes more in pensions than does the poorer State, or the State that, being rich, does not give them, does what? Its tendency is, and only is, and must be, to suck money out of the poorer States for the benefit of the richer States. In other words, beyond any doubt, taken as a general rule, the higher pensions are paid in the wealthier States; not in every case, but as a general rule. The money is collected by the Federal Government from all over the United States. The poorer States get the smaller amounts and the richer States get the larger amounts.

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. DOWNEY. Yes; I yield.

Mr. LEE. Then the situation operates further to aggravate the maldistribution of national income rather than to alleviate it. Is that correct?

Mr. DOWNEY. I absolutely agree with the Senator.

Mr. LEE. It carries out the idea that—

Unto everyone that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance; but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator permit an interruption?

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. WALSH. I feel very strongly that the present system, as set forth in the Connally amendment, is unsound and will ultimately lead to the Federal Government assuming the most sacred local right that the people of the country have—namely, the right of taxation.

I cannot understand how it can be said that a State is a poor State or a rich State simply upon the basis of per capita income. Whether or not a State is a poor State in comparison with other States for the purpose of governmental expenditures and income depends also upon its system of taxation. In this country the variation of the ratio of existing true value of general property for taxation purposes extends in the different States from 20 percent to 125 percent, and the same situation exists in the tax rate levied on general property between the States.

If the day comes—and God forbid that it shall come—when we have a Federal uniform system of taxation, when $100,000 of property in California will be valued and taxed exactly as $100,000 worth of property is taxed in Massachusetts or in Alabama or in Mississippi, we can then justify taking out of the Public Treasury the total sum of money which may be required for these social-welfare contributions and activities, and especially for old-age assistance. To my mind, however, it is inequitable and unfair, and that is why I voted against the Connally amendment and other proposals to classify States as rich and poor States simply and solely on the ground of per capita income.

In my own State of Massachusetts, as shown by the figures here, the old-age contribution made in some communities is very small. In others it is large. Does that mean that those are poor communities? No. Does that mean that these are rich communities? No. It means that the people in certain communities have voluntarily levied heavy taxes upon themselves to meet higher standards of health, educational, and social-security legislation, and other obligations.

So I am one of those who feel that I must protest against any attempt to describe States as rich States or poor States upon the basis of per capita income. They can be so described solely and alone on the basis of every man, woman, and child in every State having the same ratio of valuation placed on his or her property, and the same tax rate on his or her property. Then we shall distribute the revenues collected from taxation equitably between the States and the people of the several States.

This, however, is entering into the domain of robbing the local communities of their dearest and most precious right, which I hope may never come; but we are coming to it. We are coming to it; and the Connally amendment is a move in that direction, and every other amendment is a move in that direction, because the people of California who pay, upon $100,000 full value, taxes of $40 to $50 per thousand have a right to demand that in the District of Columbia, instead of paying $17.50 per thousand, the people shall pay taxes of from $40 to $50 on $100,000 worth of property.

The Senator will pardon me; but I wanted to emphasize, in considering what the Senator terms an inequality under the present system, a matter that we shall have to meet and solve in the future.

I hope what I have said indicates that we have not yet found an equitable solution of the problem about which the Senator is talking.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. President, I am deeply grateful for the very illuminating and thought-provoking statement made by the Senator from Massachusetts. If I correctly interpret his remarks, as I believe I do, I am wholly in accord with him; and I believe that a national pension system would at least be a step in the right direction to produce uniformity.

Mr. President, I am now going to do something which perhaps some few of the citizens of the State of California may criticize me for, but not the great bulk of them. I am going to say that while the amendments proposed here will automatically bring California up to a payment of $40 per month to a single man and $80 per month to a husband and wife, which is a consummation devoutly to be desired, yet nevertheless I think it is grossly unfair to the poorer States, like Oklahoma and the others, that California will still be receiving several times as much from the Federal Treasury as is the State of Arkansas. And though I am speaking against the selfish interest of my State, I here and now declare that to the extent that our wealth in California exceeds the wealth in any other State, a uniform tax levied over the United States, returnable to the citizens of the United States in equal amounts, is the only decent, fair kind of a tax. It is elementary in tax law that the burden of taxation should fall upon the shoulders of those best able to bear it; and this inequitable, this strange act reverses that principle and takes away from the poorer State and gives to the richer State.

Mr. President, I have not yet reached the point which is the most shocking to me in this law, but I now approach it. Let me first call to the attention of this body the fact that over a period of 150 years the workers of America have builded by their energy, talent, and toll the richest empire of all times and places; rich almost beyond human conception; rich enough to deluge not only every senior citizen but every man, woman, and child in America with all the good and needed things of life. We need not destroy our chickens because we cannot sell the eggs. We need not destroy our dairy cattle because children cannot buy milk. We do not have to plow under fruits and vegetables, and let factories run at 50 or 60 percent of capacity. We have the power in the great business leaders of America and in the workers and technicians of America to produce $100 or $200 per month for the senior citizens of America, plus high and decent profits and salaries and wages to the workers. When I hear men solemnly discuss a plat of poverty extending a half century in advance, when right today, as I talk, we are surfeited in our own wealth, do not the men who conceived this plan of giving $20 or $30 a month to retired citizens know that our factories can never run again to employ our workers, that our farmers can never be prosperous, that our businessmen never can be secure unless we, the representatives of the people, work out methods of distributing the wealth which will be produced by general employment?

What are the figures now accepted by everyone? Today, this month, our national income does not exceed the rate of $65,000,000,000 per annum. The most conservative figures now show that with a slight amount of building in the bottleneck industries in a year or two or three years we could produce, in physical goods and services, at least $110,000,000,000, certainly forty or fifty billion dollars of wealth more than we are now producing.

Mr. President, if there is any Senator here, our majority leader or anyone else, who can tell this body how he will end unemployment, except by providing for the Nation sufficient income to buy back what will be produced if we have general employment, I should like to hear him speak. With a productive capacity of $100,000,000,000 or $125,000,000,000, so long as we disburse in this Nation sixty or seventy-five or eighty billion dollars of purchasing power, we are going to have an ever-growing army of the unemployed.

Let us frankly and honestly tell the truth about the United States of America. I love my country and I love democracy. I shall stand as firmly as I can for constitutional principles and for the American people. But, oh, why, instead of criticizing and belittling foreign nations do we not inquire about our own shortcomings and remedy them?

Mr. President, it is a simple fact that today there is more unemployment in the United States than in all Europe combined. We are building poorhouses, penitentiaries, and asylums faster than all the other nations of the world combined. Someone may say to me, "Yes; but in Europe they are employing men in the armament industry." That is true. We have the benefit of two great oceans; we are at peace with each other, and with the world; we do not yet have to spend very much upon our Army and Navy, and it might be argued that that is one of the reasons for unemployment in this country, and that the employment of people abroad is a result of their armament programs. But let me point out to my colleagues in humility and sorrow a thing I regret to say, that the countries in Europe in the last 5 years have steadily increased, and are today increasing, their capital goods, and Germany and Japan and Italy—yes; and Great Britain and France—are steadily today and every year becoming richer in capital goods, while we today are just standing still. In other words, Mr. President, in spite of the fact that they are involved in a great armament race they are doing better than we are doing. Let us admit it with humility and regret.

Let us face the facts. We say there are eleven, twelve, or thirteen million unemployed in this country. Oh, yes; there are that many men in the United States totally unemployed. There are ten or fifteen million more working on part time, precariously holding their jobs, working a day this week and a week next month. There are in the United States today the equivalent of at least sixteen or seventeen million idle men.

Mr. President, that is not the worst part of the story. We now have an unbalanced Budget to the extent of about $4,000,000,000. That $4,000,000,000 not only furnishes assistance for the hopeless, hungry people on our relief rolls—God protect them—but it does something else; it employs at least 5,000,000 more men who are engaged in producing the goods and services for the relief workers. If we attempted today to balance our Budget, and if we withdrew that support from private industry, we would see the army of the idle augmented so rapidly that our entire economy would be placed in jeopardy. As a matter of fact, by September 1937 we had about balanced the Budget; $4,000,000,000 of inventory accumulated in 8 months; then men stopped producing, and by the following July four or five million more men were out of work, and we were compelled to take up the burden of disbursements from an ever-expanding public debt.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?
Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. In other words, I take it the Senator would say that we might well turn from the idea of saving the world and turn to the great American scene, and try to save our own country.

Mr. DOWNEY. Yes; I can agree with the Senator at least this far, that our own internal problems are more vital to me than are any external problems, and what I see 2 or 3 years ahead, and not longer than that, in the internal breakdown of our economy, is more terrifying than the possibility of any Asiatic or European nation ever undertaking to invade our shores.

I have said, Mr. President, that it is only by virtue of an unbalanced Budget of three or four or five billion dollars that we can keep going. Let me say that that does not mean that I condone the increase of the public debt. Let the public debt increase a very few years longer at the rate it has during the last few years, and we are going to see the collapse of every bank and building and loan association and insurance company in the United States. Government bonds would have to fall only 10 percent now to wipe out the surplus and reserves of almost every bank and insurance company in the United States, because at present they are investing almost exclusively in Government bonds.

Mr. President, no one need suggest to me that we can support our own bonds. Of course we can, and we would, and in a few months we would be in the midst of issuing printing-press money, and inflation, and then it would not make very much difference what happened to the banks and insurance companies, because savings and property rights would be destroyed, as they were in Russia and in Germany.

Mr. President, this is what is extraordinary to me about the social-security law. Here we are, lacking thirty or forty or fifty billion dollars of consuming power to get our people back to work, and with that condition existing, we have here a law which is a plat of poverty for 40 years ahead of time. Forty years in advance these gentlemen have calculated their figures, 40 years in advance the actuaries have projected this realm of poverty.

Why do I say that? It is suggested to me that increasing wages might increase what the workers would receive. Oh, no; because these gentlemen have designed this plan, and cleverly, I admit, so that the workers in the contributory system can never hope, as a result of the most prosperous years, to get a decent annuity. Why is that? We are now calculating their annuities upon this basis: For the first $50 in a covered occupation we will give 40 percent, or $20, but after that we give only 10 percent of anything over $50. So, however much a man conceivably might earn, he could never hope to get a pension which would support him with any degree of decency, even though he faithfully worked for 40 years.

As a matter of fact, I may say to the distinguished Senator from Kentucky, that the utmost that could ever be reached by a worker out of this contributory system would be the sum of $56. I do not suppose there will ever be one who will get anywhere near that amount, because it would mean that for 40 years he would have to work every month in a covered occupation and receive the maximum salary of $250. So, while it sounds well to say that a worker might get $56, the likelihood that he will ever get more than $20 or $30 at the end of 40 years is very slight indeed.

So I say, Mr. President, that this plan is a plat of poverty projected by actuaries for a half century ahead.

Today we are surfeited with wealth we cannot use. Machinery, inventions, and business efficiency are continually developing, and yet, while only utilizing 60 percent of our business capacity, we are now going to project a system 40 years ahead when the present payments will not even provide sufficient to take care of the wealth we are now producing.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MEAD in the chair). Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Do I understand the Senator to say that we will have to wander through the desert for 40 years toward the promised land of social justice if this administration's social-security plan is projected into the future; and if so, is that the best the Solomons of this administration can do?

Mr. DOWNEY. I may say to the distinguished Senator that I do not believe we will wander for 40 years in the desert, because within 3 or 4 years, as I shall attempt later to show the Senate, the collapse of this economy, in my opinion, is inevitable, and I do not make that statement lightly, and when I come to it I shall challenge any debate or argument thereon.

Mr. President, I now want to pass to the proposed system in which some of us believe. In the first place, we believe there should be a national plan because it has got to become the major instrument of relief. We do not want to continue to have C. C. C. camps, and P. W. A. and W. P. A. projects, and N. Y. A. projects. Whatever subsidy is to be provided should be given to men who have done their life's work and are no longer needed by society, who, in my opinion, are those past 60 years of age. Consequently, since it has to be and should be the major instrument of relief, it ought to be administered nationally.

Assuming we would place in operation a pension system which would provide for people past 60 years of age, retired from gainful employment, that probably would cause our senior citizens to yield up about two and one-half million jobs, as I calculate—almost exactly the same number as now work under our relief agencies. I believe that with an adequate national pension system we could return relief burden to the States, which could easily handle it with the amount they are now disbursing in pensions under the present system, and Congress could be relieved of this unhappy, this unwholesome problem of work relief, where, it seems, this body has consumed a great part of its time in argument upon how much should be given, and how much money is to be raised, and how long we can continue to borrow.

We believe that instead of setting the age of 65 for the pension recipient it ought to be reduced to 60 years of age. I cannot say anything to strengthen that contention, Mr. President, except that admittedly we have millions upon millions of people between 60 and 65 years of age, jobless, moneyless, friendless. Many of them are dying of malnutrition and neglect. Not one month passes in the United States but that thousands of these senior citizens from 55 years of age and up are taken out of hovels, and county poorhouses, and fourth-rate hotels, and along the roads, the victims of malnutrition and lack of medical care.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. If I am correct, out of a million men and women who have reached the age of 60 years, 600,000 plus will be dead before they reach the age of 65. It might be well to pay a little pension to these people before they pass out of existence. Many of them will be gone from the American scene before they reach 65.

Mr. DOWNEY. I can totally agree with what the Senator has just said. When the depression came upon us I was practicing law in the valley of the Sacramento, and I venture to say that 90 percent of my clients of the middle class and business class were stripped of everything they had. I have seen them in the intervening years broken down mentally and physically by insecurity, their morale lost, their hope lost, dying prematurely and unhappily between 60 and 65 years of age.

I tell the story of one man out of tens of thousands in California who tried to get work. He was past 60 years, and he tried to get a pension. However, he was under 65. Finally after being twice treated for malnutrition in the hospital he penned a note saying, "Too old to work, too young for the pension. I had better take this dose of poison." And he took it and died.

Two- or three-line notices of happenings of that sort appear every day, buried in the back columns of the newspapers. Such things occur in this wealthy, affluent land of which we love to boast, this land of imperial wealth, which, if we could restore our workers to full employment, would afford to each retired worker everything they could need.

Mr. President, some Senators will be interested, I hope, in specific figures upon the proposed Townsend plan. The best estimates now place the number of citizens past 60 years of age at about 13,000,000. Of those 13,000,000 people past 60 years of age, 4,150,000 are still considered employable. Of the 4,150,000, 150,000 are working on W. P. A. projects, and 1,000,000 are idle. Three million, or about 20 percent of the total number, are employed; and those who are employed are making somewhere around four or five hundred dollars a year, precariously clinging to their duties, precariously, with their failing strength, trying to hold on, and keeping out of work some son, or grandson, or young man, when they themselves should have been retired to that serenity and that dignity which should be every man's right after he has retired, but which is the privilege of so few of us.

It is my estimate—and that is all it is—that if we should place in effect the Townsend plan on the basis of a 2-percent transactions tax, of the 3,000,000 workers who are now working, two and one-half million would yield their jobs to younger men. Furthermore, they would yield up their W. P. A. jobs. We would still have working about 500,000 men and women past 60 years of age. That would leave about 12,000,000 men and women to account for. It is my opinion that about one and one-half million of them would never claim the pension, because they may be aliens, or they may be well to do and not want it, or for some other reason. I think the pension would be claimed by about 10,000,000 or 11,000,000 of our senior citizens.

Our proposal is a 2-percent-transactions tax to provide the funds. Let me say this particularly to the distinguished Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG]. I am not now speaking dogmatically. When I discuss a transactions tax I want Senators to understand that my mind, of course, realizes it would take months of careful investigation to find the best tax. I am satisfied it must be a tax upon consumption. It must be about the equivalent of a 2-percent tax on transactions.

It might be easier and better to put on a 3-percent wholesalers' tax, and a 4-percent manufacturers' tax, and a 2- or 3-percent retailers' tax. That might produce the needed amount of money at a great deal less cost and complication. Consequently, when I am citing a transaction tax of 2 percent, it is merely in the argument for a general principle of that kind.

Mr. President, I realize that I am about to say something which at first will shock the ears of my auditors, but I think that upon listening and considering, Senators will be much more receptive in their consideration of the Townsend plan. We would urge that out of this transaction tax wages and salaries should be exempted. Instead of clamping down with a 9-percent pay-roll tax, we would exempt the wages and salaries of the workers of America, so that at least any burden they bore would be indirect and not direct.

We would necessarily, to protect our banks and insurance companies and investors, exempt the sale of securities, stocks and bonds, and financial transactions of that character. Exempting those transactions, we find that in the United States at the present time we have gross-income transactions of about $360,000,000,000. A tax of 2 percent upon that amount would yield $7,200,000,000, which is exactly 10 percent of the income it is now agreed we produced in 1937. In other words, we are advocating a tax which would effect a profound redistribution of wealth, and would set over to the senior citizens of America, probably by way of increased prices of goods, 10 percent of the national income, or $7,200,000,000. With the present national income, that plan would yield to each person past 60 years of age retired from gainful employment somewhere around $50 or $60 a month. As the national income increased up to one hundred, one hundred and twenty-five, or one hundred and fifty billion dollars, which is well within our capacity within a few years, the annuities paid to the retired workers would correspondingly increase up to $75, $100, $150, and ultimately probably to $200 a month.

If I had finished my story there, and if I were proposing the imposition of a 10-percent tax upon every American, depending upon the amount he spent, not one man of decency or Christianity or generosity should object. Mr. President, if it were necessary, I would cheerfully yield 10 percent of my income to know that this problem was worked out, and that hungry men and women past 60 years of age who have built this Nation for us were being taken care of with some degree of decency in a Christian civilization. I cannot understand how any man living in a Christian republic would be unwilling, if he thought such a plan would be successful, to consent to a tax of 10 percent upon the amount he consumed.

The Townsend plan has been condemned by some of the leaders of the liberal movement because it is a tax upon consumption—upon the masses. Let me repeat, we exempt pay rolls, and the tax would be indirect, in place of the 9-percent tax which is now contemplated under the Social Security Act. However, we would do more than that. If Mr. Ford had $1,000,000 income a year, I believe he would have to pay about 6 percent of that amount net, above present taxes, or about $60,000 a year. A Senator of the United States, in my opinion, would have to pay about $600 more than he is paying under present taxes, which would be done away with. A worker making $100 a month would have to pay only $60 a year. I appeal to the liberals in the Senate. If this method would give to the workers of America making $100 or $150 a month far more than they could hope to obtain from an insurance company or under the present law in return for the tax upon them, bringing to them the benefit of taxes upon greater incomes, why should the liberals of America castigate and condemn the Townsend plan and then seek to place in effect this pay-roll tax?

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I have in my possession an editorial published some time ago in a well-known magazine, in which the editor maintained that the soldiers' bonus should be paid by a revolving 2-percent-stamp tax. Of course, the editorial was published some time ago, and the soldiers' bonus has since been paid; but I thought it might be of interest to the Senator to know that a great magazine had published such an editorial some time ago. With the Senator's permission I should like to have the editorial placed in the Record as soon as I can refer to my office files.

Mr. DOWNEY. I am very happy to have that done.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the editorial referred to be printed in the Record tomorrow or at some future time during this session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There being no objection, the editorial will be printed in the Record.

Mr. DOWNEY. While I have said that the 2-percent transactions tax, or an equivalent tax, would, in my opinion, yield about $7,200,000,000, I do not want this body to understand that it would be that much of a burden upon our economy in addition to the present burdens. I believe that under this plan we could and should do away with the $1,000,000,000, $2,000,000,000, or $3,000,000,000 that we are annually spending, by way of an expanding debt, upon the W. P. A. We could do away with an immense amount of relief, poorhouses, and insane asylums. We could do away with the billion or billion and a half dollars that the present law is going to raise; and I feel confident that the net amount which would be raised by the proposed tax would not be in excess of two or three or four billion dollars more than we are now raising.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Let me give the Senator the figure for 1949. In that single year we shall raise $2,550,000,000 in pay-roll taxes.

Mr. DOWNEY. Does the Senator from Michigan say that is the amount which would be raised from the pay-roll tax alone?

Mr. VANDENBERG. The whole two and a half billion dollars represents pay-roll taxes.

Mr. DOWNEY. That has nothing to do with old-age assistance.

Mr. VANDENBERG. No.

Mr. DOWNEY. It can thus be seen that while the tax which we are advocating would be uniform and would do the work, it would not burden the national economy to the extent the opponents of the Townsend plan have led the public to believe.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. I understood the Senator to say that he thought the transactions tax would yield approximately $7,000,000,000.

Mr. DOWNEY. $7,200,000,000.

Mr. LUCAS. Will the Senator state upon what that figure is based?

Mr. DOWNEY. That figure is based upon $360,000,000,000 of transactions.

Mr. LUCAS. Where does the Senator obtain the figure of $360,000,000,000 of transactions?

Mr. DOWNEY. That figure was testified to before the House committee, I believe, by representatives of the Department of Commerce. I will say to the distinguished Senator from Illinois that I will not argue or quarrel with him. I am advocating the imposition of a consumptive tax which would raise about that amount of money. If it should raise more, we should not need so much. If it should not raise that much, we should have to change the tax.

Mr. LUCAS. I should like to have the Senator explain just what he means by a transactions tax.

Mr. DOWNEY. Of course, if it included every transaction, it would include every transfer of money from one individual to another in a commercial transaction.

Mr. LUCAS. Do I understand that that provision is embodied in the bill?

Mr. DOWNEY. There is no such bill now pending.

Mr. LUCAS. I apologize to the Senator. Of course, there is no such bill pending; but am I to understand that that type of transactions tax is embodied in the Townsend plan?

Mr. DOWNEY. Yes; that type of tax, exempting wages, salaries, and financial transactions, is embodied in the Townsend plan.

Mr. LUCAS. So, if the Townsend plan were in effect every type of transaction that is made would be taxed at the rate of 2 percent?

Mr. DOWNEY. I do not want the Senator to misunderstand what I have already said. We are advocating the transactions tax, or a consumptive tax equivalent to it; and if the Senator could convince the Finance Committee that a tax upon manufacturing, wholesale, and retail transactions producing the same gross amount would be more convenient, we should have no hesitancy in adopting that system.

Mr. LUCAS. I am discussing now, or attempting to discuss in my limited way, what I have always understood the Townsend plan to include, which is a transactions tax.

Mr. DOWNEY. That is correct.

Mr. LUCAS. I am not talking about a manufacturers' tax. I am not talking about a consumptive tax. I am directing my line of questions to the transactions tax, which, in my humble opinion, is the meat of the entire Townsend plan.

Mr. DOWNEY. The distinguished Senator from Illinois is mistaken. He sees the tree instead of the forest. We believe in a consumptive tax. We know, in the first place, that incomes are now taxed to about the full amount they can be taxed. The tax must fall on consumption; and it ought to be a consumptive tax equivalent to about 2 percent on transactions. However, if the Senator thinks that is too complicated or too expensive, I will not argue with him. Other consumptive taxes might be more feasible and economical.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a further question?

Mr. DOWNEY. Surely.

Mr. LUCAS. Am I to understand that the Senator from California is now abandoning the transactions tax, and is now seeking to collect the $7,200,000,000 through a consumptive tax, a manufacturers' tax, or some other tax?

Mr. DOWNEY. I will say to the distinguished Senator that a transactions tax is a consumptive tax, because it falls upon the consumer.

Mr. LUCAS. I appreciate that fact.

Mr. DOWNEY. It is added to prices. I have not abandoned anything. We are advocating a 2-percent-transactions tax; but if tax experts say that would be too expensive or too burdensome to work out, and if some other kind of consumptive tax would yield the same amount more cheaply and more efficiently, I, for one—and I am speaking for no one except myself—would be for it.

Mr. LUCAS. I think the Senator understands my position with respect to the transactions tax. I have always taken the position, from the very beginning of the discussion of the Townsend plan, that it would ultimately break down of its own weight, because of its impossible administrative features. That has been one of my primary reasons for being against the Townsend transactions tax from the very beginning, because I think the Senator will agree with me that under the transactions tax there would be a tax upon every transaction made.

In other words, every time one wrote a bank check in a business transaction there would be a tax upon it. The testimony in the House hearings, I think, shows that there are millions upon millions of checks written annually which would be taxed. I think the Senator will agree with me, for instance, that every servant, every hairdresser, every barber, every merchant, every oil-station man, every taxi driver, in fact, everyone rendering any personal service of any kind, would be subject to this tax.

I mention this primarily for the purpose of trying to demonstrate to the Senate how impossible it would be to administer the transaction tax. I should like to have the Senator comment upon that phase of the subject, because in my mind that is the most important feature of the Townsend plan. Without the transaction tax there can be no Townsend plan and every Townsend follower believes in this type of legislation to create revenue. If we are going to have a policeman at every farmer's door when he trades a horse for a hog and gets $10 to boot, which would be a transaction, if we are going to have a policeman at every grocery store and barber shop and beauty parlor in order to collect the tax the country should know about it in advance. The Senator should thoroughly explain the mechanics of this tax. Let it be understood that I have no quarrel with the objective in adequately providing for the aged people of the Nation but I submit with sincerity that the transactions tax is absolutely impossible. Again I request the Senator to tell the Senate how he expects to collect the tax.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, will the Senator from California yield to me for the purpose of calling for a quorum? The Senator will not thereby lose the floor.

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. ASHURST. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Frazier	La Follette	Schwellenb
Andrews	George	Lee	Sheppard
Ashurst	Gerry	Lodge	Shipstead
Austin	Gibson	Lucas	Slattery

Davis	Hughes	Reed	Wiley
Donahay	Johnson, Calif.	Reynolds
Downey	Johnson, Colo.	Russell
Ellender	King	Schwartz

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-one Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. President, I am very grateful to the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lucas] for the question he has propounded to me. First, let me say I think that he is concerned about the immaterial rather than the material. When I state that we would undertake to raise $7,200,000,000, that is the final and the crucial fact. When I state that in our opinion the amount must be raised by a consumptive tax, that is the next most important thing.

If for any reason a transaction tax, such as I may have in mind, or such as the distinguished Senator from Illinois may have in mind, should prove too burdensome, the tax could very easily and without any difficulty be imposed upon the wealth of the country to extract $7,200,000,000 or $4,000,000,000 or $5,000,000,000 or $8,000,000,000, or whatever might be needed.

I do not want to argue this particular point, because I do not think a particular kind of a sales transaction or gross-income or manufacturers' or retailers' tax is important. The important declaration from us is that it must fall, not upon incomes but upon consumption, and that it must be equivalent to a 2-percent tax.

I wish to say to the distinguished Senator, however, I think he vastly overrates the difficulty. If the Senator can consider himself engaged in labor, his own salary and my salary as a worker and the salary of every other worker would be exempt so far as concerns the payment of the salaries and their receipt or their disbursement. None of the workers of America would ever have to make any returns at all. I venture to say that with the exemptions I have indicated 95 percent of the returns upon this tax would be paid by businessmen, including, of course, farmers. If it should seem too great a burden upon the small farmer, I would have no objection to exempting the first $1,000 or $2,000 of farm income and merely impose the tax upon the receipts of the remaining more prosperous and larger farms.

So I cannot agree with the distinguished Senator from Illinois that a transactions tax, with the exemption of the pay rolls and financial transactions, would be burdensome.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. Of course, I have no bill in front of me, and I am not sure what the Townsend plan is insofar as the transaction tax is concerned. When the Senator talks about a consumers' tax and when he talks about a manufacturers' tax and when he discusses certain exemptions that may go into a bill or may not go into a bill, of course, that is all problematical and it is based upon some contingency which may or may not happen. The only thing that I have mentally in front of me, and what I have always understood about the Townsend plan, and what the country understands, is that it involves a 2-percent transaction tax upon all business transactions.

I should like to call the Senator's attention to his book he wrote back in 1936, entitled "Why I Believe in the Townsend Plan." I respectfully refer to page 106 as to what the Senator says about the transaction tax, which those sponsoring the Townsend plan have advocated for many years.

The Senator says:

Let me suggest one further aspect of the transaction tax. It would bear more heavily on the small and independent merchant than on the chain store and monopoly. The chain store may make its own flour, bake its bread, and act as jobber, wholesaler, and retailer. The bread sold by the smaller merchant would have to bear three or four accumulating taxes, while the chain stores would sell subject to but one or two. I doubt if the independents could survive under this extra burden. In any event, the effect of a transaction tax upon monopolies must be considered.

In other words, the Senator said that if a transactions tax should become the law of the land along with the Townsend plan, it would practically destroy every independent merchant in the country, because they could not survive and compete with the chain-store corporations of the country; and then it would be necessary, I presume, if we followed that theory to a logical conclusion, to do something to the chain stores in order to save the independents.

I presume the Senator has not changed his mind upon that important point.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a moment?

Mr. DOWNEY. Surely.

Mr. NEELY. I hope that no one will consider it an undonable asperity for me to give notice that I purpose to object to any further yielding by the Senator from California excepting for questions. Otherwise the debate on this bill may continue indefinitely.

Ten days ago it was understood that the Senate would begin the consideration of Senate bill 280, the anti-block-booking bill, last Thursday. I have been vainly waiting a week for the fulfillment of this understanding.

I am tired of being behind the "eight ball." In the hope of escaping from my uncomfortable situation, and in the belief that the Senate should make some progress toward the consideration of the order of business which has been laid aside again and again, I shall object to further yielding by the Senator from California. But let me assure my fellow Members of the Senate that my objections will be made in a spirit of genuine friendship for everyone with whom the objections may interfere, including always the distinguished, eloquent Senator from California [Mr. Downey].

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. RUSSELL in the chair). The Senator has that right.

Mr. CLARK of Idaho. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. CLARK of Idaho. Would not a heavy retail sales tax cover all the substantial features of the so-called transactions tax?

Mr. DOWNEY. Before I answer that question, if the Senator from Idaho will pardon me, I desire to say to the Senator from West Virginia that I realize the position he has been put in, and I am thoroughly sympathetic with him. I should like to ask the Senator from West Virginia at what time he would like to have me conclude my speech tonight, and I will abide by his desire regardless of interruptions.

I may say that in a large portion of my speech I intended to deal with the problem of savings and investment. That part of the speech could just as appropriately be made when the Barkley bill for additional loans and further expanding the public debt is before us; and I could reserve that part of my argument for that later date.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the Senator is going to make that part of his speech against my bill, I would rather he would make it now. [Laughter.]

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOWNEY. Yes; I yield.

Mr. NEELY. Let me assure the able Senator from California that I am not only interested in his speech, but that I hope to hear him deliver it in its entirety on some other occasion. If he would complete his address in time for the Senate to pass the pending bill before adjournment this evening, it would thereby become possible for Senate bill 280, the anti-block-booking bill, to be considered tomorrow.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. President, would it be appropriate for me to inquire if any other Senators desire to be heard upon this bill or upon my motion?

Mr. LUCAS and Mr. HOLMAN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is advised that there are other Senators who wish to address the Senate on the bill.

Does the Senator from California yield; and, if so, to whom?

Mr. DOWNEY. I would rather not yield until I have answered the questions which Senators have already propounded to me.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I merely want to assure the Senator from West Virginia that I shall not again violate the rule of the Senate. I appreciate the fact that he has been very diligent in trying to get his bill before the Senate. I am probably just as anxious to vote on that bill as anyone in the Senate. I apologize to the Senator for violating the rule; but it has been done here so frequently, and no one has ever objected, that I did not think I was guilty of any breach of propriety in not only asking the question but in also making what seems to me some pertinent observations.

I thank the Senator for yielding to me.

Mr. DOWNEY. I shall endeavor to govern myself in accordance with some reasonable principle.

Mr. President, I of course still stand by and recognize the logic of what the Senator from Illinois read from my book. I recall the words of Job:

Would * * * that mine adversary had written a book.

But I am not embarrassed by what has been read; and I have pointed out to Dr. Townsend and to his organization that if we should merely levy a transactions or a gross-income tax, a tremendous burden would be placed upon the independents in contrast to the chain stores and the great organizations; and our last bill which was presented in the House of Representatives provides for what is termed a processing tax. Under that measure, if the Standard Oil Co. should take its own oil out of the ground, refine it, sell it as a wholesaler, and retail it, it would have to pay four taxes in lieu of one; so that it would be placed upon an equality with four independent businessmen, each operating in a separate field.

I must say that I feel very, very greatly encouraged by the remarks of the Senator from Illinois. There is no one whose character, ability, or intellect I admire more than his. If all that stands in the way of his becoming an advocate of the Townsend plan is the difficulty about collecting a transactions tax, and if he will use his great ability to suggest the proper kind of a consumptive tax, I shall be very grateful. I was very happy yesterday when I heard the very distinguished Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Bilbo] speak. I thought for a few moments that he was going to make a Townsend oration, and I think the day will come when he will do so.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOWNEY. Yes; I yield.

Mr. TOBEY. May I remind the Senator from West Virginia, who put the prohibition on interruptions other than questions, that before he put the prohibition upon us I addressed myself to the Senator from California and asked him to yield not for a question, but for information. This is not a question, I will say to the Senator from West Virginia; but I am speaking to my fellow Republicans now, to stir up their pure minds by way of remembrance; and, referring to the Republican National Convention platform adopted at Cleveland in 1936, I read therefrom with reference to the party's plank on social security for the aged:

We propose a system of old-age security, based upon the following principles:

1. We approve a pay-as-you-go policy, which requires of each generation the support of the aged and the determination of what is just and adequate.

2. Every American citizen over 65 should receive the supplementary payment necessary to provide a minimum income sufficient to protect him or her from want.

3. Each State and Territory, upon complying with simple and general minimum standards, should receive from the Federal Government a graduated contribution in proportion to its own, up to a fixed maximum.

And I call attention particularly to paragraph 4:

4. To make this program consistent with sound fiscal policy the Federal revenues for this purpose must be provided from the proceeds of a direct tax widely distributed. All will be benefited and all should contribute.

I interrupt the Senator from California and read that extract into the RECORD solely for the purpose of buttressing the statement with this argument from the platform of the Republican Party, and saying that party platforms are made not only to get in on, but, in my opinion and my conviction, to stand on after parties get in.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. President, I am very, very deeply grateful for that contribution to this record, because it immediately brings to the support of this general principle all of the distinguished Senators on this side of the aisle except our Democratic friends; and we have several good Townsends among the Democrats. So I feel very much encouraged by that contribution.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I desire to know the relationship between the $7,000,000,000 proceeds of the Senator's transactions tax and his pension payments. What pension would $7,000,000,000 yield to the group which the Senator estimates will be eligible?

Mr. DOWNEY. If the numbers claiming the pension were 10,000,000, which is possible, the pension would be $720 a year or $60 a month. If there were 11,000,000, as there might be, the pension would be slightly less. With a national income of $110,000,000,000, which we have the capacity readily to produce, the senior citizen past 60 would then realize somewhere around $100 per month; and as the national income ascended, of course the annuity would ascend with it.

The Senator from Idaho [Mr. CLARK] a moment ago suggested that in lieu of a transactions tax, if it proved too burdensome, we could impose a heavier retail tax; and that, of course, is very true. Under a 2-percent transactions tax, if the farmer were selling a dozen eggs for 25 cents, he would have to pay one-half-cent tax, the wholesaler would have to pay another half-cent tax, and the retailer another half-cent tax, or a cent and a half altogether, making the total cost of the eggs 26½ cents. As the Senator from Idaho has pointed out, if we wanted to levy the 1½-cent tax on the retailer it would, in my opinion, amount to exactly the same thing as collecting it in three different transactions.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. DOWNEY. Surely.

Mr. NORRIS. I wish the Senator would give us his idea as to how many employees it would take to carry this tax into execution, and what the expense would be.

Mr. DOWNEY. I regret that I cannot state that to the Senator from Nebraska. I might say to him that the object is to produce employment, and if we had to employ a hundred thousand or even a million people in the collection of the tax, we would just as soon have them get their wages out of that work as in any other way, because they have to be employed and have to do work anyway.

I have read statements to the effect that the transaction tax itself would be burdensome and expensive, and I say again to the distinguished Senator from Nebraska, for whom I have such high admiration, that if a particular kind of a transaction tax were too expensive and involved too many employees, then it could be simplified in the way the Senator from Idaho has already suggested.

There is another feature of the Townsend plan which I believe involves a new and a Christian conception, that is, that whatever is paid in this Nation should no longer be paid as a matter of humiliating charity but should go to every person past 60 years of age retired from gainful employment, regardless of any means test.

I realize that might give to 20 percent of our population past 65 money of which they were not vitally in need, but I think we should establish a new social concept. I would have attempted to prove here this afternoon, if my time had not been too much limited, that the day when the great masses of the people can save is past. In the data developed by the temporary national economic committee, so ably headed by the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], the most distinguished men from every business and industry were called to testify. Mr. Sloan, of General Motors; Mr. Stettinius, of the United States Steel Corporation; Mr. Owen D. Young, of the General Electric; representatives of insurance companies and banks and economists testified, and embodied in the report of the committee are the statistical data perfected over a number of years by thousands of students of statistics and economics. When the bill of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] comes before this body, I shall present the findings of the committee at length.

Let me say to my colleagues very briefly that those data show that our economy is breaking down because of excesses of savings diverted from business income into stagnation. They show that businessmen, in the production of goods and services of the Nation, pay out the national income; that out of that national income about 20 percent is saved; that that saving passes into the banks, and to the extent it cannot come out in capital formation it must either be borrowed by the public or released in consumers' credit or in some other temporary way.

Mr. President, those figures indicate clearly that in 1929 we had seven or eight or nine billion dollars of excess savings beyond the needs of capital industry; but in 1937 the economy crashed at about the same point in wealth production as in 1929, and we had $8,000,000,000 of savings diverted from the business stream that were not returned to consumption by way of capital formation, and inventory account increased by $4,000,000,000 as a result of that in a period of 8 months.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. WILEY. I merely want to interject a suggestion. I recall that a recent report made by some of the great—

Mr. NEELY. A point of order. I object if the Senator is not asking a question, and I will have to object to the Senator yielding for any purpose except for the asking of a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has a right to yield or not, as he chooses; but under the rule he can yield only for a question.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, does the Senator know that a recent report by some of the leading economists of this country shows that in 1929 about $17,000,000,000 went into new industry from the earnings of this country, and in 1937 only about $6,000,000,000?

Mr. DOWNEY. I know that that is not accurate. I hold in my hand tables which are admitted by all the economists and statisticians to be approximately correct, and the figures in those tables indicate a condition totally different from that suggested by the Senator from Wisconsin. As a matter of fact, these figures show, as the distinguished Senator from Wyoming will bear me out, that in 1937 equipment and machinery investments by business enterprises had returned to 95 percent, in money value, of what they were in 1929, and since prices of those durable goods were lower by about 5 or 10 percent, there was actually more machinery and equipment purchased in 1937 by the great enterprises than in 1929.

As a matter of fact, there was only one capital formation field which in 1937 was not almost back to the average level of 1920 and 1929, and that field was the residential construction field. Residential construction is now far below what it was in the twenties, and some New Deal leaders are counting upon the day when we will spend as much money in residential construction as we did in the 1920's, entirely oblivious to the fact that from 1910 to 1920 our population increased 16,000,000; that from 1920 to 1930 our population increased 16,000,000; and that in this decade it has increased only 8,000,000. Moreover, the great building boom of 1923, 1924, and 1925, when residential construction reached its maximum, had several years of the war upon which to feed. So that in the decade of 1920 we were virtually constructing for an increasing population of twenty-two or twenty-three million people. In the coming decade we will not have to construct houses for half that many.

Professor Hansen, who testified, stated that residential construction uniformly kept pace with the increase of population, and since our population was rapidly declining, we could never again hope to get back to the residential construction figures of the 1920's. If the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin will read the figures which I have handed to him, he will see that in capital formation in 1937 we had almost returned to the condition of the year 1929, and had returned to the condition of the year 1925 in everything except residential construction.

Mr. President, I am about to conclude for this evening—

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. The Senator used an expression, and I am not merely—

Mr. NEELY. I object to the Senator from California yielding except for a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California will yield at his own risk unless the Senator to whom he yields propounds a question.

Mr. ADAMS. I will say that it is also at the risk of the Senator's bill.

Mr. DOWNEY. I did not hear the Senator's statement.

Mr. ADAMS. I wanted to ask the Senator a question.

Mr. DOWNEY. Let me first say to the Senator from West Virginia that I am about to conclude. I yield to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. ADAMS. The Senator used the expression "excess savings," and stated they amounted to $8,000,000,000. I wonder whether he can explain just what he meant. I have heard the expression used before, and it was not clear to me. I have had the feeling that savings are a very desirable thing in the Nation.

Mr. DOWNEY. I am very happy, first, to state to the distinguished Senator that very possibly I used the expression a little inaccurately. When I used the expression "excess savings," I meant the amount of savings that could not be absorbed in capital formation.

I may state to the distinguished Senator that today we have about $6,000,000,000 of excess savings. Four billion dollars of those excess savings are being taken up by Government borrowing. That may cause the Senator to say that they are not excess savings, but I wish to point out to him that public or private borrowings are merely ephemeral operations, and that in any long-time, prospective economy, unless our statesmen realize that we dare not accumulate more savings out of the industrial income than we can utilize in building hotels or apartment houses or farm buildings or machinery or factories, indubitably we will crash. I may further say to the distinguished Senator that we should recollect that the savings of past generations made our capital goods possible, but likewise our capital goods made our savings possible. In other words, when savings pass into a bank they stagnate there, and with them an equal amount of wealth, unless the Government borrows it, or some individual or consumer credit borrows it. I should be very happy indeed to discuss this question later with the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. President, a word or two more, and I shall have concluded.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Wyoming?

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Before the Senator leaves this phase of his discussion, perhaps it would be more illuminating to those of us who are listening if he were to develop a little more in detail the conclusion he has reached with respect to the character of future economy, inasmuch as he has based his argument upon the premise it is now impossible to invest the savings in the capital-goods industry.

Mr. DOWNEY. I shall be very happy indeed to do so. I do not wish to intrude upon this body too long tonight, but I am very happy to answer.

At the present time, going into the banks and insurance companies, are about $6,000,000,000 that come out in the form of credits to farms and factories. The Federal Government, as I have said, is borrowing $4,000,000,000 of that, and restoring it to commerce through the relief workers, and if the Government were not doing it, a corresponding $4,000,000,000 of inventories would undoubtedly accumulate, just as was the case in 1937.

I have already said to the distinguished Senator that $8,000,000,000 of excess savings accumulated in 1936, and $6,000,000,000 is now accumulated. Our income is lower now than it was in 1937. Consequently we are saving about $2,000,000,000 less. We are taking away $4,000,000,000 by public borrowing.

I should like to impress upon the Senate that $2,000,000,000 of excess savings is being restored to the consumptive stream by the losses largely of our farmers. As a lawyer I have handled transactions by the hundreds, and what is happening in the Sacramento Valley and elsewhere in California is an index of what is happening throughout the Nation. In California farmers, after a tragic era of loss, are again faced with a similar situation; they are unable to sell their products at the cost of production. Oftentimes some farmer has come into my office to see me and has said, "Mr. Downey, I have lost $5,000 on this year's operations. Can you help me mortgage my farm, or sell some stocks and bonds?" I might know some businessman who had $5,000 in excess savings which he had not invested, and I could arrange for the borrower, who had suffered a loss on his crop, to take the $5,000 of excess savings out of the hands of the businessman, and thus was it restored to the consumptive stream.

In the year 1938, the losses of our farmers and the classes largely dependent upon them in my opinion exceeded by $2,000,000,000 the losses in 1937.

I realize that losses are a part of the profit-and-loss system we have, as are gains. But certainly when the farmers produce crops for which tens of millions hunger, and they cannot sell them, losses thus made must be ascribed to a faulty mechanism rather than to our type of economy.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator again yield?

Mr. DOWNEY. I have not yet answered the Senator's question. I was just coming to it.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I was wondering if the Senator was.

Mr. DOWNEY. In the United States at the present time we have about $6,000,000,000 income from profits flowing into the hands of individuals in the form of incomes, rents, profits, and dividends. About $6,000,000,000 is received from property incomes. Of that $6,000,000,000 we estimate that $4,000,000,000 is being saved. In other words, people who have already accumulated savings and property are not spending the incomes they received from their prior savings to the extent of about $4,000,000,000. Those billions of dollars are flowing into the hands of the savings banks, the insurance companies, and the other great lending agencies, as was so graphically brought out before the committee presided over by the Senator from Wyoming.

The cash holdings of savings banks and commercial banks of this Nation are at an all-time high; the cash holdings of insurance companies in our commercial banks are at an all-time high; and the cash savings of all types of investors are at an all-time high. Their withdrawal undoubtedly would tend to break down the present faulty economy and to reduce the distress of our farmers and others who are in a system of unregulated competition compared to others.

Mr. President, if Senators desire to conserve a free country, there are only two things they can do, and they must be done, or, beyond doubt, we face regimentation and a dictatorship, with all that that means. I am talking now sheer mathematics and nothing else. There are two things we must do. We must compel persons receiving incomes, to the extent they can no longer be utilized in building up this Nation, to spend them.

If Mr. Ford is allowed to make $2,000,000 a year—and I do not want to deprive him of that right—and to keep $500,000 or $750,000, he must be compelled to spend it to the extent that it can no longer be used in building more automobile factories or more factories of some other kind. Consequently, I would propose a tax upon the unearned incomes of the Nation, upon incomes flowing from property, compelling the expenditure of such incomes for consumable goods, or their forfeiture to the public. In other words, I would say to the fortunate classes of America, "We want to protect your property; we want to protect your savings; but we say to you that when you withdraw from the business stream billions of dollars that can no longer be returned by capital formation, you are destroying your own right of saving and your own property." I say, Mr. President, that if that kind of a law were passed, within 6 months we would see released in the Nation $4,000,000,000 of stagnant purchasing power, restoring our workers to employment, and allowing our industrial machines to operate at full capacity.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. The Senator then places human rights above property rights.

Mr. DOWNEY. I hope I do, but let me say that I am here merely talking sheer mathematics. As the honorable Senator from Wyoming will recall, Mr. Sloan, Mr. Young, Mr. Stettinius, every one who testified before the Monopoly Committee, including eminent economists, said that the great business enterprises of America are now developing out of their own earnings, by way of appreciation of funds and surpluses, all the capital that can be used in this Nation in the future.

Mr. Sloan said, "We do not want any more money from outside sources. If we want to promote the Diesel engine we are prepared to advance a hundred million dollars to promote it." A distinguished man from the aircraft industry said the same thing. That is undoubtedly true. Our great business enterprises have reached such a condition that out of their own earnings they produce all the capital that can from now on be utilized in the American Nation, and at a subsequent time I should like to discuss the figures so graphically developed in the report made by the committee headed by the distinguished Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, the Senator will recall—

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I unwillingly object.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. If the Senator will pardon me I shall ask a question. Does the Senator from West Virginia desire to object?

Mr. NEELY. I am unwillingly compelled to object to anything except a question.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I shall propound a question, if the Senator from California will permit me to do so, and when the Senator from California has concluded his speech perhaps I myself may have something to say.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Wyoming that I am placed in a very unhappy and embarrassing position, and I wish he would assist me. I shall be only too delighted to engage in colloquy when the bill of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] is before the Senate for consideration. That bill apparently is an outcome of the hearings before the Economic Committee. I think I should now conclude very rapidly, in view of the long wait which the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY] has on the block-booking bill. I wish the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY] would cooperate with me, and not speak after I have concluded.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I shall withdraw my request to the Senator to yield out of deference to his desire.

Mr. DOWNEY. I am deeply grateful for what the Senator from Wyoming has just said, but I must admit my sympathy for the distinguished Senator from West Virginia. For months he has been endeavoring to obtain consideration of a bill in which he is greatly interested. That consideration is long overdue. I should have closed my speech an hour or so ago, and I regret having spoken for so long.

I shall conclude by saying that, in my opinion, the great masses of American people can never again save, and any attempt on their part to save will break down our economy. As a matter of practical fact, every Senator knows that four out of five men past 50 years of age are "broke" today, living in the chill shadow of poverty, which will close down upon them whenever they lose their jobs. I shall not enter into any discussion as to whether or not they should have saved or could have saved. It is a simple fact that millions of our fellow citizens past 60 years of age, the best men and women in the Nation, who have builded the farms and the factories by virtue of which we live, are in desperate want in an opulent nation which could lavishly provide for them.

A Senator must take one of two positions. Either we cannot distribute our wealth under a free economy and a capitalistic system, or we have not the will or the intelligence to do so. I am unwilling to take either of those positions, because I know the high honesty, ability, and devotion to society of the Members of this body.

So far as pensions are concerned, I think the American Nation has had a blind spot. That blind spot has existed because we came out of an agrarian civilization in which 90 percent of our people lived upon farms, a system under which the older members of the family could gracefully, honestly, and easily be absorbed into the farm economy with dignity and security as they grew older.

One of the Senators before the Finance Committee took the position that it was the duty of the children to support the parents. I would reply to him by saying that 50 percent of our younger married people themselves live in insecurity and despair, and cannot decently support their parents. We have passed into a highly mechanized urban civilization, with tremendous concentrations of wealth and population. God help four out of five of our retired workers in the next 10 or 15 years, as they lose their jobs, use up their scanty savings, and have to impose themselves upon children who cannot support their own families.

It has been said to me that I have too great a concern for the retired workers and the senior citizens. I have concern for the babies of this Nation, who, lacking milk and sustenance, are doomed to a life of disease which could be avoided. I have sympathy for the 5,000,000 youngsters between 16 and 24, hopelessly seeking jobs, first with hope in their hearts and then with despair. I have sympathy for the millions upon millions of unemployed, for the W. P. A. worker trying to live and support a family of four or five on $50 or $60 a month. I sympathize with those people. No one defends such conditions. There is no one who does not bewail those facts.

However, the Social Security Act is acclaimed as a great achievement, when in reality it is a plat of poverty projected 50 years ahead of time. What disturbs me is that the leaders of social security in Washington honestly believe they have done a great job in this plan, which would give $20 or $30 a month to our retired workers.

I wish some Senator would undertake with me to live for one month on $20, and then come back and report to our colleagues the misery, horror, and degradation of it. I have not the courage or hardihood to undertake it alone. I cannot live on 5 or 10 cents a meal in some miserable, lousy hovel, as most of our elderly people have to do.

For some reason we have a blind spot in this opulent land. I say we must change our social conception. Let the children support their parents, but let it be done by law. Let the younger generation support the retired worker and regard him as a retired partner who has builded this Nation for the rest of us.

Mr. President, if we in the Senate wish to do one great act, we have the power to lift millions upon millions of despairing elderly people out of the depths of degradation, humiliation, and poverty which most of us would rather die than descend to.

Mr. President, the Social Security Act is born of a lack of vision. It springs from poverty. It never strikes above the eaves of the poorhouse. It is unfair to the workers in the contributory system. It will produce from them a political repercussion which in my opinion will be unequaled when once they realize what it is. At its best, it gives to our older people only enough to exist in misery and degradation.

I realize the tremendous import of these questions. I am not urging upon any Senator that he should vote for any measure in which I believe. I am now asking Senators, in decency and fairness, to vote to recommit to the Finance Committee this inequitable, unsound measure. Let us see if we cannot do better. Certain features of it should immediately be passed, such as freezing the pay-roll tax, reducing the reserve, and increased payments to the people in the poorer States. However, the greater issue is building a great plan to act as a uniform instrument of relief over the Nation. Let us not, in mercy, commit our hands and our voices to the approval of this bill today.

Mr. President, I ask the Senate to agree to my motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from California [Mr. DOWNEY] to recommit the bill to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on this question.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HOLMAN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the distinguished Senator from Tennessee [Mr. STEWART]. I do not know how he would vote, if present. If I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "yea." I withhold my vote.

Mr. TOWNSEND (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR]. Not knowing how he would vote, if present, I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. HALE (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES]. Not being able to transfer my pair with him, I withdraw my vote.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS]. Not being informed how he would vote, if present, I withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. HARRISON (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY]. I understand that if he were present he would vote "yea." I transfer my pair with him to the senior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] and will permit my vote to stand.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

The Senators from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR and Mr. STEWART], the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BURKE], the Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN], and the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER] are members of the committee appointed to attend the funeral of the late Representative McREYNOLDS, and are, therefore, necessarily absent.

The Senator from Florida [Mr. ANDREWS], the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK], and the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHAY] are detained in various Government Departments.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES], the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN], the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the Senator from West Virginia

[Mr. HOLT], and the Senator from Idaho [Mr. CLARK] are absent on important public business.

The Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] is paired with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS]. I am not advised how the Senator from Florida, if present and voting, would vote. It is my information that the Senator from Maryland would vote "nay."

The Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY] is absent on official business. I am advised that if present he would vote "yea."

Mr. AUSTIN. The Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] has a pair with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD]. I am advised that if present the Senator from Michigan would vote "yea," and the Senator from Alabama would vote "nay."

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS] has a general pair with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN]. The Senator from Pennsylvania has been called away on important public business.

The result was announced—yeas 18, nays 47, as follows:

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE—ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

A message from the House of Representatives by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the Vice President:

S. 289. An act for the relief of the West Virginia Co.;

S. 1575. An act to provide that the annual registration of motor vehicles and the annual licensing of certain public vehicles in the District of Columbia shall be for the period from April 1 in each year to March 31 in the succeeding year; and

S. 2336. An act to authorize an exchange of lands at the Fort Francis E. Warren Military Reservation, Wyo.

AMENDMENT OF SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6635) to amend the Social Security Act, and for other purposes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment, which I ask to have printed and lie on the table.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I had hoped we might finish the bill tonight. Will not the Senator offer the amendment tonight?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Very well. I will offer it now if the Senator wishes to finish the bill tonight.

Mr. HARRISON. I hope we may finish the bill tonight.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. I shall ask immediate consideration of the amendment if the Senator is going ahead with the bill.

Mr. HARRISON. Very well.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. I offer the amendment, and ask to have it stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, line 2, after the word "State", it is proposed to insert:

and, effective January 1, 1941, such financial participation shall amount to not less than $10 each month with respect to each needy individual receiving old-age assistance for the month.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President, the purpose of this amendment, which is quite obvious from reading it, is to require the States after January 1, 1941, to pay at least $10 per month to the recipients of old-age pensions.

Yesterday we had before us an amendment requiring the Federal Government to put up $10 to the State's first $5. In the pending measure we place a ceiling of $40 per month on pensions, and it seems to me it is perfectly reasonable and proper that we should put a bottom on the pensions.

I heard what the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] said yesterday about his disappointment over the way the States have responded to the opportunity which the Congress gave them to provide pensions for their aged citizens. I heard what the other Senators have said. They have all testified that all of the States which pay low pensions could do much better than they are doing.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, does the Senator's amendment provide that the minimum contribution by any State to any individual over 65 years of age shall be $10, in order to entitle him to receive $15 from the Federal Government?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. No; the average for the State must be at least $10.

Mr. WALSH. So that in one community the amount might be smaller and in another larger, but the average for the State must be $10 in order to entitle the State to $15 of Federal money?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. In order to bring the State into the approved plan.

Mr. WALSH. The only way in which they can be punished is by taking away the $15.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Taking away everything from them unless they pay the $10.

Mr. WALSH. So that the Senator's amendment provides that the average contribution to individuals over 65 years of age shall be $10 per person?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. That is correct. That is, beginning on January 1, 1941.

Mr. WALSH. Beginning January 1, 1941?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. That is correct.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. We have already adopted an amendment offered by the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] providing that of the first $15 the Federal Government shall put up $10 and the State $5. That is the requirement.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. I can understand how a State could be required to put up a minimum amount as its share of the contribution under the plan which has been adopted, but I am wondering how the Senator's amendment would fit in with the amendment already adopted, under which up to $15 it is a 2-to-1 proposition, whereas the Senator's amendment provides for an average of $10. How would that dovetail into the 2-for-1 up to $15?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. It would work in this way. The minimum pension would be $25; the Federal portion of it would be $15, and the State portion would be $10. So the pension would be $25.

Mr. BARKLEY. I understood that the Senator, in answer to another question, stated it was an average of $10.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. It is an average.

Mr. BARKLEY. It would have to be a minimum average of $10.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, if the State put up $5 and the Federal Government $10, as provided in the Connally amendment, the pension in that case would be $15, and I do not see how it fits in with an average of $10.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. What is the average at the present time?

Mr. BARKLEY. It varies, of course.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. How low is it?

Mr. BARKLEY. It is as low as $6 in some States.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Yes; it is as low as $6 in States putting up $3 plus. Under the Connally amendment, that situation is not changed in the slightest degree, except that the Federal Government puts up two-thirds. In other words, the State of Arkansas is paying $6 now, and under the Connally amendment the State of Arkansas would pay $9. Under my arrangement the State of Arkansas would pay $25; and there is a vast difference.

Mr. BARKLEY. That would make more than an average of $10-a-month pension, would it not?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. The State of Arkansas would pay an average of $25.

Mr. HATCH and Mr. WAGNER addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Colorado yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. The Senator from New Mexico was on his feet first, and I yield to him first.

Mr. HATCH. I wish to be sure about one thing in the Senator's amendment. Suppose there should be a State, my State or any other State, which could not raise $10 a month; what would happen in such a State?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. It would lose its Federal contribution entirely. I heard what Senators from the so-called poorer States, the States which are not paying pensions, said on the floor yesterday. They said, "Better that we have no pensions than this dime-a-day pension." That is what they said, and I am taking them at their word.

Mr. HATCH. The Senator did not hear me make that statement.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. No; I did not hear the Senator from New Mexico make the statement; but it was heard here, and it has been heard here frequently in the discussion of the pending bill.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. I yield.

Mr. WHITE. Am I to understand that the Senator's proposal is that the average contribution shall be $10, or not less than $10?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Not less than $10.

I now yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. WAGNER. As I now understand the amendment, it means that in every case in which the Federal Government participates, or makes a contribution to a State, the minimum pension will be $25.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. That is correct.

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. I yield.

Mr. BILBO. I desire to ask the Senator how he reconciles such a compulsory proposal with the inherent rights of a sovereign State. I can understand how the Government can make a tender on condition that a State will accept it and do certain things, but for Congress to say to a State that they must do this or forfeit their right—and a State might not be able to raise the money—I think is outrageous.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. The States do not have to accept it at all; they do not have to accept the Federal money.

Mr. BILBO. But the Senator is going to rob the State of the chance to get even a small part of the contribution.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. The purpose of the amendment is to get rid of disgracefully low pensions. I heard what the Senator from Kentucky said yesterday about his great disappointment. As I recall his remarks, he stated that when the pension program was first enacted by the Congress, it was the objective and the purpose and the hope that the States would all enact pension legislation and that it was his hope that all pensioners would receive $30; but that he had been disappointed in the result; that the matter had been going on and on, and we were continuing to give money to the States, continuing to pay disgracefully low pensions, and that his patience was about exhausted. My patience is exhausted, and I believe that the patience of the Congress is being exhausted at the response the States have made to the liberal proposals which have been made to them on the part of the Federal Government.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for another question?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not yet understand the Senator's amendment clearly.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. I wish the clerk would read the amendment again.

Mr. BARKLEY. I think I am in sympathy with what the Senator is trying to accomplish, but I want to be sure I understand it, because he used the term, "average of $10." Did the Senator mean that the average pension drawn by the pensioner would be $10, or that the average contribution by each State must be $10, or that the minimum of the contribution by the State should be $10?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. I regret that the amendment is not before Senators in printed form. I understood the bill was to go over. But I ask that the clerk read the amendment again, so that the Senator from Kentucky will have it in mind.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator desire to have the amendment reread?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Yes; I should like to have the amendment read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, line 2, after the word "State", it is proposed to insert "and, effective January 1, 1941, such financial participation shall amount to not less than $10 each month with respect to each needy individual receiving old-age assistance for the month."

Mr. BARKLEY. Now let me ask the Senator how he arrives at his figure of $25 a month pension. How does he assume that the Federal Government puts up $15 in order to make the amount $25?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Twenty-five dollars is the minimum. This is the way it would work. We will suppose, for instance, that the State of Kentucky pays pensions to 10,000 persons.

Mr. BARKLEY. The number is about 40,000.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. I did not know what the number was, but I used 10,000 as an arbitrary number, because I wanted to make the multiplications easily. We will say the State is paying pensions to 10,000 people. Under the present plan the State of Kentucky would have to pay 10,000 people at least $10 apiece.

Mr. BARKLEY. A month.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Each month, yes; in order to have an approved plan.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am afraid that interferes with the provisions of the Connally amendment, under which up to an average of $15 a month the Federal Government puts up $10 and the State $5. If the State is required to contribute a minimum of $10 in each case, and if the Federal Government contributes $10, that will make an average of $20, so that the two-to-one proposition as carried in the Connally amendment would not apply. Is that correct?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. The Connally amendment would apply; yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. Does the amendment of the Senator from Colorado superimpose itself on the 2 to 1 figure of the Connally amendment?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. The Connally amendment is a formula, and under the Connally amendment the Federal Government puts up $10 for the first $5 that the State puts up. Then for the next $5 the Government puts up $5.

Mr. BARKLEY. That makes a total of $25?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Yes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. JOHNSON].

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. I ask for the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HARRISON. I merely wish to state before the vote is taken that if each State must put up $10 each month for each individual on the State rolls, as is proposed in the amendment—it is not the average as anyone who hears it read may assume, but the minimum is $10 for each individual which each State must put up in order to get this Federal assistance—none of the States would qualify for all their pensions. Thirty-one States would be excluded from getting the Federal assistance even on the basis of an average requirement. But this means more than an average of $10 State money per case. It means $10 State money as a minimum per beneficiary.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I wish to remark that the table which was put into the RECORD by the Senator from South Carolina 2 or 3 days ago indicates that there are 28 States in the Union in which the total average receipts is less than $20.

Mr. HARRISON. The figures show that 31 States would be excluded even on an average basis. No State at present pays a $25 pension, but the minimum pension payment considers the other income of an individual.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. JOHNSON].

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, I wish the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] were here, because I intend to refer to the debate we had yesterday on the amendment which I offered to the bill. I shall read from the RECORD of yesterday:

Mr. VANDENBERG. I mean to say to the Senator that for 7 years we have failed by $3,000,000,000 a year to find the money with which to pay our bills.

Mr. LEE. Because the Finance Committee has not brought in a tax bill to accomplish that, and every time we offer a tax bill the Senator is one of the first to say, "Let us not stifle business."

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator knows that is not accurate if he is familiar with the RECORD. I have voted for every increased tax amendment proposed by the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE]. I have voted for every increased tax that has been proposed in the Senate for the purpose of paying the Government's bills, and I cannot do any more than that.

Now, Mr. President, I wish to refer to the RECORD because on the vote on the revenue bill of 1935, which was taken on August 14, 1935, on H. R. 8974, Seventy-fourth Congress, the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] made a long speech, several pages in length, against the bill and in support of his own motion which was to recommit that revenue bill. That tax bill, according to the Senator's own figures here, was estimated to raise $270,000,000 additional revenue above that being received. Senator VANDENBERG's own words are:

Second, if—

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LEE. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. I should like to have the RECORD show that the distinguished Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] is necessarily temporarily absent from the Senate.

Mr. LEE. I am glad to have that shown.

Quoting from the Senator's speech of August 14, 1935, appearing on page 13044 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD:

Second, if we must have an ill-timed and ill-starred tax bill, should it be a tinfoil measure—and when I speak of it as a tinfoil measure I mean no disrespect to $270,000,000 as such. That still is an enormous sum of money to take from the pockets of the American people, even in this New Deal day of astronomical calculations.

Then on page 13077 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of August 14, 1935, there is a record vote giving the names of those voting "yea" or in support of the motion to recommit that tax bill of 1935. Remember that tax bill was estimated to increase the revenue $270,000,000, according to Senator VANDENBERG's own statement. Now everyone knows a motion and a vote to recommit is a motion and a vote to kill.

Senator VANDENBERG's name appears with those who voted to recommit. In column 4 his was the second name.

I refer again to the RECORD, Mr. President, on the vote on the tax measure of 1936, which was H. R. 12395 of the Seventy-fourth Congress. On page 9110 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of June 5, 1936, there is a record vote on the tax bill of 1936, which bill, so I am unofficially informed, it was estimated, would greatly increase the revenues. We see Senator VANDENBERG's name among those voting "no." His name is the fifth name from the top of that column.

Therefore it seems that the Senator from Michigan is the one who did not know the record, or was not familiar with the record, or had forgotten the record when he suggested that the junior Senator from Oklahoma was not familiar with the record when I intimated that the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] opposed tax measures that would increase the revenues, help balance the Budget which he is so interested in balancing, and which I too would like to balance. But different from the Senator from Michigan, I vote for such measures.

Mr. President, I just wanted to keep the record straight.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, before the vote is taken I should like to ask a question of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. JOHNSON]. Regardless of where the money comes from, whether from a State, or nationally, the net result of the Senator's amendment would be that the average payment to a person 65 years of age would be $25 in every part of the country?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. That is correct; in every part of the country.

Mr. GEORGE. Under the Senator's amendment the minimum payment any person on the rolls would receive would be $25.

Mr. BARKLEY. I may ask the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] a question in connection with his remarks made a moment ago, and referring to my remarks of yesterday in which I expressed my disappointment that not only in my own State but in other States, the States had not matched the $15 of Federal money. It so happens that in my State there is a campaign on now for Governor and for members of the legislature, and in all probability the next legislature, which will meet in January, will match the $15 that is now being contributed by the Federal Government. But in the event they should not change the maximum of $7.50, which is provided under the present law, and raise it to $10 in every case, then in that event Kentucky would not participate at all in this old-age pension? Is that correct?

Mr. HARRISON. That is the way I understand it. Without question, the amendment as it is written says: "shall amount to not less than $10 each month with respect to each needy individual receiving old-age assistance." It is not the average in the State.

Mr. BARKLEY. I understand.

Mr. HARRISON. It is the minimum.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, that raises a question in any State. I think it is an important matter for us to consider, in voting on the amendment, whether or not we are willing to say by the amendment that if the State does not provide by law for a minimum of $10 in each case there shall be no pension at all, and that the Government of the United States shall even withdraw its contribution. That is, no doubt, a form of coercion on the States; and I am wondering whether or not it is wise now to attempt to coerce them with the threat that if they do not do as we wish, they will not receive anything.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President, it seems to me rather strange to draw the line at this kind of coercion, because the whole bill is based on the principle of coercion of the States, not only in the pension part of it but in the unemployment part of it. There is coercion all through it.

Mr. BARKLEY. It was not exactly coercion. It was cooperation. It was offering an inducement to the States to enter this field, which most of them had not entered.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. My amendment is along the line of cooperation. The Senator asks what would happen in Kentucky if the State did not raise the money, and whether or not it would be shut off entirely. It would be shut off entirely except insofar as it paid pensions; and whenever it paid a pension it would have to pay $25. The Senator says Kentucky pays pensions to 40,000 people. Kentucky could pay pensions to 20,000 people, bringing up its average, and cut off 20,000 who have been given this pitifully small amount.

Mr. BARKLEY. Kentucky could not do that unless it raised the maximum State contribution from $7.50 to $10 in cases where a pension was paid at all. The number might be reduced from 40,000 to 20,000. That would not necessarily compel the State to pay a maximum of $10, with $15 from the Government, unless by law the maximum were raised from $7.50, where it is now, to $10, under the provisions of the Senator's amendment.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. If the State paid a pension to anyone, it would have to pay $25.

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; and if the State did not provide for such payment by State law, it would not participate in the pension fund.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. It is up to a State to say to whom the pension shall be paid.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, no doubt the policy of the amendment is good in some States. However, many of us in the poorer States are faced with facts.

The Legislature of the State of Florida does not convene for 2 years. At present, I understand, there is not sufficient money appropriated to provide for an old-age pension of $10 per month to be paid by the State. That means absolutely that under this amendment those who have been receiving a pension in Florida might not receive anything at all for the next 2 years.

I shall, therefore, have to oppose the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. JOHNSON]. On that amendment the yeas and nays have been demanded and ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HALE (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] who, I understand, would vote "nay", if present. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG], and will vote. I vote "yea." I am advised that the Senator from Michigan would vote "yea" if present.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS]. I am not informed how he would vote. If permitted to vote, I would vote "yea." I withhold my vote.

Mr. TOWNSEND (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR], who is detained from the Senate attending a funeral. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. HARRISON (after having voted in the negative). Making the same announcement as before with regard to my pair with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY] and its transfer, and I will permit my vote to stand.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

The Senators from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR and Mr. STEWART], the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BURKE], the Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN], and the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER] are members of the committee appointed to attend the funeral of the late Representative McReynolds and are therefore necessarily absent.

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] and the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY] are detained in various Government departments.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES], the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CARAWAY], the Senator from California [Mr. DOWNEY], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN], the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], and the Senator from Idaho [Mr. CLARK] are absent on important public business.

The Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] is paired with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS].

Mr. AUSTIN. The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS] is absent on important public business. He has a general pair with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN].

The Senator from Oregon [Mr. HOLMAN] would vote "yea" if present. He has a general pair with the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. STEWART].

The Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY] is necessarily absent. His pair and transfer have been stated by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON].

The result was announced—yeas 37, nays 31, as follows:

So the amendment of Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is still before the Senate and open to further amendment.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I ask the clerk to read the printed amendment which I have at the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. At the end of the bill it is proposed to insert the following new title:

TITLE X

The Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof a new title as follows:

"TITLE XII—AID TO INDIANS

"Sec. 1201. From the sums appropriated for titles I, IV, and X, respectively, the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay to each State which has, under any such title, an approved plan that includes Indians upon the same conditions as other persons covered by such plan, for each quarter, beginning with the quarter commencing July 1, 1939, an amount, which shall be used exclusively as aid to Indians, equal to the total of the sums expended during such quarter as aid to such Indians under such State plan, such amount to be in addition to the amount paid the State with respect to sums expended for other persons.

"Sec. 1202. For the purposes of this act the term 'Indian' shall include all persons of Indian blood who are members of a tribe, pueblo, band, community, or other group now or hereafter recognized by the Congress or the Secretary of the Interior, and who reside on a reservation or on other lands set aside or established for Indian use and occupancy: Provided, That the term 'Indian' shall also include all Indian and Eskimo natives of Alaska who are of one-half or more Indian or Eskimo blood, certified as such by the Secretary of the Interior or by any other officer duly designated by him. The records of the Department of the Interior and of the Indian Service shall be prima facie evidence of the facts shown thereon as to tribal membership, age, sex, and degree of Indian blood.

"Sec. 1203. The Commissioner of Indian Affairs of the Department of the Interior is hereby authorized to enter into arrangements with any State agency charged with the administration of a State plan approved by the Board under titles I, IV, or X to use any agency or agencies of the Office of Indian Affairs in the administration of any such plan with respect to Indians."

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, from the beginning of this Government Indians have been considered to be wards of the United States, and the aged dependent Indians of all kinds have been cared for by the United States.

Under the terms of this bill, Indians are to receive the same benefits as all other citizens, but half of the cost is to be charged to the States. It is to avoid that situation that I have offered this amendment. The amendment is quite similar to and in effect identical with one which I submitted to the committee—that is, that Indians shall receive the same benefits as white persons, but that the entire cost shall be paid by the United States.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield.

Mr. WHEELER. I call the Senator's attention to the fact that throughout the West the States receive no taxes or other income from the various Indian reservations, but everything goes to the particular Indians concerned.

Mr. HAYDEN. My State is the extreme example of that case. Arizona has over 19,000,000 acres in Indian reservations. It is the extreme example with respect to the number of Indians in proportion to the white population.

I ask permission to insert in the RECORD a table showing that in the State of Arizona over 10 percent of the population are Indians.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the table will be printed in the RECORD.

The table is as follows:

State	Total population of the State	Indian population of the State	Percentage Indian population to total population
United States.....	122,775,046	332,397	0.27

Mr. HAYDEN. We have 435,573 white people. We have 43,726 Indians. If the 43,726 Indians had been counted in the last census we should have two Representatives in the House of Representatives; but, under the Constitution, Indians not taxed are eliminated.

That is one way of meeting the situation. The other way is to allow Indians to be left out of the social-security scheme.

When I had this matter before the committee, it was suggested that the committee would look with favor upon the second alternative. I desire to present the two propositions, and see which one the committee now is willing to accept. I am unwilling to allow the matter to pass with no action at all; and I ask the clerk to read, for the information of the Senate, the typewritten amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be read for the information of the Senate.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

On page 111, line 13, strike out the quotation mark.

On page 111, after line 13, insert a new section as follows:

"PROVISIONS RELATING TO INDIANS

"Sec. 1108. (a) Notwithstanding any other provisions of law, the Social Security Board shall not disapprove any State plan under title I, IV, or X of this act because such plan does not apply to or include Indians.

"(b) For the purposes of this act the term 'Indian' shall include all persons of Indian blood who are members of a tribe, pueblo, band, community, or other group now or hereafter recognized by the Congress or the Secretary of the Interior and who reside on a reservation or on other lands set aside or established for Indian use and occupancy: Provided, That the term 'Indian' shall also include all Indian and Eskimo natives of Alaska who are of one-half or more Indian or Eskimo blood. The records of the Department of the Interior and of the Indian Service shall be prima facie evidence of the facts shown thereon as to tribal membership, age, sex, and degree of Indian blood."

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, some of us are greatly interested in this amendment and in what the Senator from Arizona has to say about it. May we not have order in the Chamber?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Let there be order in the Chamber, please.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, in each case it was necessary to define what is an Indian. What we are talking about is an Indian who lives in a pueblo or on a reservation and is recognized by the Government or by the Indian Office. I am not referring to Indians who have departed from their tribal relations and have gone out into and become a part of our civilization. I am referring to Indians residing on nontaxed Indian lands.

I should like to inquire of the chairman of the committee what his view is with respect to the matter. Should we adopt the first proposition which I submitted to the committee and allow the Federal Government to bear the entire expense and give the Indians the same treatment as everybody else, or should we allow a State which cannot afford to pay this bill not to be penalized if it does not take care of the Indians?

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I may say to the Senator that, of course, he is familiar with, because he has read, the letter of the Interior Department, which is very much opposed to the first proposal.

Mr. HAYDEN. I also have read, Mr. President, the report made to the Senator's committee by the Social Security Board recommending my proposal. It was transmitted to Congress by the President. It is as follows:

A number of States have a considerable Indian population, some of whom are still wards of the Federal Government. The Board believes that in cases where such individuals are in need of old-age assistance, aid to the blind, or aid to dependent children, the Federal Government should pay the entire cost. If this provision is made, the Board should be authorized to negotiate cooperative agreements with the proper State agencies so that aid to these Indians may be given in the same manner as to other persons in the State, the only difference being in the amount of the Federal contribution. The Board believes that it should also be given authority to grant funds to the Office of Indian Affairs for this purpose, if that appears more desirable in certain circumstances.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, the committee gave consideration to this question. Personally, I have no objection to the last amendment. Let us vote on it and handle the matter in conference to the best of our ability.

Mr. HAYDEN. If that is the case, if the committee is willing to accept the second proposal, I offer it as a substitute for the first one, which I withdraw.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Arizona withdraws the first amendment offered by him and offers in lieu thereof the second one, which has just been read for the information of the Senate.

The question is on agreeing to the second amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I send to the desk and offer an amendment which was suggested by the Treasury Department.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi on behalf of the committee will be stated.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Section 201 (f) is amended to read as follows:

"(f) The managing trustee is directed to pay from the trust fund into the Treasury the amount estimated by him and the Chairman of the Social Security Board which will be expended during a 3-month period by the Social Security Board and the Treasury Department for the administration of title II and title

VIII of this act and the Federal Insurance Contributions Act. Such payments shall be covered into the Treasury as repayments to the account for reimbursement of expenses incurred in connection with the administration of titles II and VIII of this act and the Federal Insurance Contributions Act. Such repayments shall not be available for expenditures but shall be carried to the surplus fund of the Treasury. If it subsequently appear that the estimates in any particular 3-month period were too high or too low, appropriate adjustments shall be made by the managing trustee in future payments."

Mr. HARRISON. The Treasury has requested the adoption of this amendment because of certain technical reasons. If the payments made by the trust fund to the Treasury for the cost incurred in administering title II and title VIII of the Social Security Act and the Federal Insurance Contributions Act were covered into the Treasury as provided in the reported bill, the receipts and expenditures would be overstated in the accounts of the Treasury by the amount so deposited.

Collections, when originally received, are classified in the Treasury accounts under "Social Security taxes"; and subsequently, under the existing provision, a portion would be deposited as "Miscellaneous receipts," thus overstating actual receipts. Also, when funds are expended from appropriations for administration of title II and title VIII of the Social Security Act and the Federal Insurance Contributions Act, such items would be shown as expenditures under "Social Security Board" and "Departmental," and the reimbursements for such expenses from the trust fund would also be shown as expenditures, unless such items are deposited as repayments instead of miscellaneous receipts.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi on behalf of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I offer an amendment which is suggested by the Social Security Board to place the Federal share of administrative costs on the same basis as administrative costs for grants-in-aid to States for such costs in other allotments made by the Board.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi on behalf of the committee will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. In lieu of clause (2) of sections 3 (a) and 1003 (a), it is proposed to insert the following:

and (2) an amount equal to one-half of the total of the sums expended during such quarter as found necessary by the Board for the proper and efficient administration of the State plan, which amount shall be used for paying the costs of administering the State plan or for old-age assistance, or both, and for no other purpose.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, at present the Federal Government participates in State old-age assistance and blind-assistance administrative costs by adding 5 percent to the amount of the Federal share of the benefit payment.

In the case of dependent children there is a different rule. The Federal Government under the law pays the same proportion of administrative costs as of benefit payments. This has been found more equitable and satisfactory; and this proposal is that instead of 5 percent of the total grant, the State will get half the administrative expense as found necessary by the Board in the case of old-age assistance and blind assistance.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi on behalf of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment, which I offer and ask to have read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 116, line 4, it is proposed to insert a new section, as follows:

SEC. 904. Beginning with January 1, 1941, no provisions of the Social Security Act shall be operative or effective for foreign-born aliens who have not taken out their full American citizenship papers by that date or who do not become American citizens within 6 years after their entrance into this country: Provided, however, That all aliens not qualified for social-security benefits shall have refunded to them the full amount of any contribution they may have made to the social-security fund before they became disqualified from participation in the benefits of this act through failure to comply with the citizenship requirements of the act: Provided further, That in the case of alien employers or American employers using alien laborers a tax equivalent to that collected from like American citizens shall be levied and collected as a "special privilege tax" for operating as aliens in this country in direct competition with American citizens.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I may state by way of explanation that the amendment which I have offered merely prohibits noncitizens—that is to say, aliens in this country—from participating in the benefits of the proposed act. I think the time has arrived when we should pay more attention to our own people and quit worrying about the citizens of other countries of the world. I do not see why American taxpayers should support citizens of other countries. I am merely asking that noncitizens of the United States not be supported by citizens of the United States. I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, if this amendment is to be contested we should have time to study it and consider it. I do not know whether or not I am in sympathy with it. My first impulse is to be for it, but it is far reaching and important, and I think we ought to adjourn and give consideration and attention to the amendment tomorrow. I personally do not feel like going on record without an opportunity to study it, though I am sympathetic with the Senator's idea.

Let me ask the chairman of the committee whether he intends to accept the amendment and have it go to conference.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I do not say that I approve the amendment, as I have not had time to study all its implications. I am informed by the Social Security Board that it would create administrative difficulties. If I should accept it, it will merely be to place the whole problem in conference.

Mr. WALSH. Then let us adjourn and have a chance to study it before we vote on an amendment of this importance and consequence.

Mr. HARRISON. I have suggested another amendment to the Senator from North Carolina, and if he will offer that, we will let the matter go to conference. It is an amendment which deals with the question of payments being made outside of the United States. I do not necessarily give my approval to either this amendment or to the amendment offered by the Senator from North Carolina, but am submitting additional language only because I feel that if there are any limitations to be placed on the payments, the matter should be considered from more than one angle.

Mr. WALSH. I took the Senator's amendment to be broader than that.

Mr. HARRISON. My amendment is based on administrative problems.

Mr. WALSH. I understood the amendment to forbid any alien any of the benefits of the social security provisions unless he has taken out his first papers, and within 6 years takes out his final papers. That is the gist of the amendment, as I caught it from a hurried reading.

The point I make is that I do not know how many people it would affect; I do not know what distress it might cause; I do not know how far reaching it would be, and I think we ought to have time, and not be obliged, at 6 o'clock, to go on record on a measure of this importance. I say that I do not know what my own convictions about it would be.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I have an amendment which I desire to offer as an addition to the amendment offered by the Senator from North Carolina, and I suggest that we let the whole matter go to conference.

Mr. WALSH. If there is not to be a roll call, I do not make any suggestion as to adjourning, but if there is to be a roll call on the amendment, I think the Senate should adjourn until tomorrow.

Mr. HARRISON. I think my proposal is agreeable to the Senator from North Carolina. I hope the Senator from North Carolina will modify his amendment to the extent suggested.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, in order that there may be no misunderstanding about this matter insofar as the record vote is concerned, because it is an important amendment, it is my understanding that the Senator from Mississippi has accepted my amendment, and it is my further understanding that his amendment likewise has been accepted, and that they will both be considered in conference.

Mr. HARRISON. That is correct.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I want to keep the record clear to that extent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi by way of modification of the amendment of the Senator from North Carolina.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the end of the amendment offered by the Senator from North Carolina it is proposed to insert:

(b) No payment of any benefit provided in section 202 of this title shall be payable to an individual while such individual is not a resident of the United States or its possessions unless such individual resides within 50 miles of the United States.

Mr. REYNOLDS. One question there, if the Senator from Mississippi will yield for a moment. What is the meaning of the words "resides within 50 miles of the United States"?

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, we have a special situation with certain nearby countries, especially those which are contiguous to us, such as Mexico and Canada. We do not want to change our friendly relations with those countries, and I am sure the Senator would not. The proposed arrangement will put the whole matter into conference, and we can consider it carefully.

Mr. TAFT. Am I to understand that an alien who has actually paid the tax on his salary is to be barred from getting back any of the money he has already paid in?

Mr. REYNOLDS. As a matter of fact, my amendment provides that anything he might have paid in shall be returned to him.

Mr. TAFT. As I heard the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi read, there was no such condition in it.

Mr. HARRISON. The suggested amendment I offered is merely to place the matter of payment outside the United States, as well as the question of payments to aliens, in conference. The question would frequently be raised in connection with survivor benefits.

Mr. TAFT. Although the deceased may have paid in his money for years, his beneficiaries could have no advantage of it merely because they do not live here. Is that the position of the Senator?

Mr. HARRISON. If they live in this country they get the money; whether we should risk policing payments in foreign countries, where our penalty provisions for fraud would be ineffective, where we will have to expend large sums for effectively safeguarding the funds, is a matter for study.

Mr. TAFT. It seems to me a very unreasonable provision.

Mr. REYNOLDS. It is my understanding that the Senator from Mississippi has in mind certain international treaties we have with other countries of the world. In that connection I might at this time bring to the attention of the Senator from New York, if he will pardon me, the fact that many of the countries with which we have some sort of treaty will not permit any money to be sent out of their borders. I think that if both of the amendments are to be considered, those countries which are not permitting money to leave their borders to come to the United States—except reciprocal payments, which have been referred to today—should not be considered in this.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I wish to make an inquiry. Does the Senator say to us that we have treaty arrangements with other nations which compel us to make payments to our citizens who are abroad?

Mr. HARRISON. We have not been able to go carefully into this matter of the amendment offered by the Senator from North Carolina with the officials of the State Department. There exist certain arrangements, I understand, under which, when people die in certain foreign countries, settlement of estates may result to the benefit of citizens of this country if there are heirs here. The matter is one which manifestly requires careful consideration.

Mr. ADAMS. We are talking about future payments.

Mr. HARRISON. We do not want to violate any existing arrangements with foreign countries. The Finance Committee has not been able to go into this matter thoroughly, nor has the committee given any careful study to it.

Mr. ADAMS. The President pro tempore of the Senate, now presiding, who knows all about treaties with foreign countries, could, from the chair, inform us as to these arrangements with foreign nations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from North Carolina accept the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi as a part of his amendment?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I will accept it, but I can enlighten the Senator from Colorado about one thing, that is, that more money from the United States of America goes into other nations of the world than comes from other countries to this Nation. We are sending out hundreds of thousands of dollars yearly from the United States by way of veterans' pensions to citizens who are now residing in other nations of the world, some of whom, as a matter of fact, have become affiliated in sympathy with other countries, according to the understanding I have.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. My understanding of the second part of the amendment of the Senator from North Carolina is that under it the employers of the 3,700,000 aliens in this country, or the percentage of them who might be employed, would have to pay the tax, despite the fact that the workers would not get the benefit of the money which was paid, unless the aliens should be naturalized, and this is either a method of tax against the employers which never goes on to the employees, or it would force naturalization of 3,700,000 aliens.

Mr. REYNOLDS. In reference to that, it would be in the form of a special privilege tax. Why should foreigners in this country be provided benefits by our Government and given work here when we have 12,000,000 people out of employment? I am thinking about the unfortunate unemployed American citizens in this country. There are between eleven and twelve million of them at this hour, men and women, looking for jobs, who have been looking for jobs for years, and cannot find them. Insofar as the junior Senator from North Carolina is concerned, I shall do my best to protect American jobs for American citizens. Then after we have provided those 11,000,000 or 12,000,000 men and women with jobs, and after we have provided with whole-time jobs the 26,000,000 men and women who are now working on part time, and after we have found jobs for the 3,000,000 men and women on the W. P. A. rolls, and after we have reduced the employees on the Government rolls who are now 4,000,000 in number, and after we have found jobs for 300,000 American boys in our C. C. C. camps, and after we have found jobs for the 700,000 young boys and girls who graduated from the high schools and colleges last month—after we have done all we can for the American citizen I am talking about here today, I want to help people in Europe and every other continent. But I do not want to help them until after I have done my part toward helping American citizens.

My amendment simply provides that aliens in our country shall not be permitted to participate in the benefits received by citizens of this country.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I asked the Senator a question which I think could be answered "yes" or "no." We all enjoyed the speech; but would the Senator kindly answer the question whether or not the amendment, if adopted, would have the effect I suggested?

Mr. REYNOLDS. That would be the effect. In the case of alien employers or American employers using alien laborers, a tax equivalent to that collected from like American citizens shall be levied and collected as a special-privilege tax. In other words, my answer is that I am for the American citizens first, and then for the "furriner" second.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] as modified.

The amendment as modified was agreed to.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I ask to have printed in the Record at this point a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury to the chairman of the Committee on Finance of the United States Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The letter is as follows:

JULY 13, 1939.

HON. PAT HARRISON,

*Chairman, Committee on Finance,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.*

MY DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: Further reference is made to your letter dated June 23, 1939, transmitting a copy of S. 2680 (76th Cong., 1st sess.), entitled "A bill to provide for the clarification of certain provisions of the Social Security Act and of the Internal Revenue Code with respect to trustees of Massachusetts trusts and other fiduciaries, and for other purposes." A statement of this Department's views on this proposed legislation is requested.

S. 2680, if enacted, would amend section 1101 (a) (6) of the Social Security Act and section 1426 (c) of subchapter A and section 1607 (h) of subchapter C of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code to provide that a trustee holding either alone or with no more than four other persons the legal title to trust property is not an employee of the trust, whether or not the trust is an association taxable as a corporation. The amendment of the Social Security Act would apply only with respect to the years 1936, 1937, and 1938. The amendments of the Internal Revenue Code would apply on and after January 1, 1939.

With respect to the status of trusts and trustees for the purposes of titles VIII and IX of the Social Security Act and subchapters A and C of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code, it is the position of the Department that a trust estate, rather than the trustees thereof, should generally be treated as the employer of employees performing services on behalf of such estate. In determining whether trustees should be considered as employees of the trust estate, it has been concluded (1) that trustees of an ordinary trust, that is, one created by will or by declaration of the trustees or of the grantor, the trustees of which take title to the property for the purpose of protecting or conserving it as customarily required under the ordinary rules applied in chancery and probate courts, are not employees of the trust estate, and (2) that trustees of a "business" trust, that is, one created or availed of primarily for the conduct of a business venture, are employees of the trust estate.

The distinction between ordinary trusts and business trusts, for tax purposes generally, has long been recognized. A business trust, as distinguished from an ordinary trust of the traditional type, is one used as a medium whereby an income-producing or profit-seeking activity may be carried on through a substitute for an organization such as a corporation, thus obtaining the advantages of that form of organization without its disadvantages. The trustees of a business trust perform for the trust estate services similar to those performed for a corporation by the officers thereof. The term "corporation" is defined by the applicable provisions of law to include "associations, joint-stock companies, and insurance companies." The term "associations" as used in the definition has been held to include business trusts. Therefore, in view of the provisions of section 1101 (a) (6) of the Social Security Act and sections 1426 (c) and 1607 (h) of the Internal Revenue Code, which provide that the term "employee" includes an officer of a corporation, a trustee of a business trust is considered an employee of the trust estate.

The enactment of S. 2680 would exempt from the taxes imposed under titles VIII and IX of the Social Security Act and the corresponding provisions of the Internal Revenue Code the remuneration of trustees of business trusts. It would also exclude such trustees from the individuals who must be counted in order to determine whether the trust was or is an "employer" for the purposes of title IX of the Social Security Act, and subchapter C of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code.

Whether legislation should be enacted to relieve business trusts and their trustees of the burden of the taxes imposed under the Social Security Act and subchapters A and C of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code with respect to the remuneration of the trustees without granting similar relief to corporations or other business organizations and their officers with respect to the remuneration of the officers is, of course, a matter of policy for the determination of the Congress. It is pointed out, however, that exemption provisions complicate the administration of a tax law, and the Department, for administrative reasons, would prefer that exemptions from social-security taxes be kept as few in number and as simple as other considerations may permit. The Department is also opposed, for administrative reasons, to the provisions of the bill making applicable retroactively the exceptions therein contained. Furthermore, since the bill provides that the amendment to the Social Security Act shall apply only with respect to the years 1936, 1937, and 1938, the remuneration of trustees with respect to 1939 and subsequent years will be included for purposes of the benefits provided by title II of the Social Security Act; but, by virtue of the proposed amendment of subchapter A of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code, would not be subject to the taxes imposed with respect to such years by such subchapter. For fiscal reasons the Department is opposed to the enactment of any legislation which would operate to exempt a particular class of individuals from the taxes imposed by subchapter A of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code if such individuals remain eligible for benefits under title II of the Social Security Act.

For the foregoing reasons the Department is not in favor of the enactment of S. 2680.

In view of the urgency of this matter advice has not been secured from the Bureau of the Budget as to its relationship to the program of the President.

In the event that further correspondence relative to this matter is necessary, please refer to IR:A & C:RR.

Very truly yours,

HERBERT E. GASTON,
Acting Secretary of the Treasury.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is still before the Senate and open to further amendment.

If there be no further amendments, the question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. LODGE. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

Mr. LODGE. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, what was the request of the Senator from Massachusetts?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts asked for the yeas and nays, but there was not a sufficient number.

Mr. HARRISON. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. LODGE. I withdraw my suggestion of the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is, Shall the bill pass? The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HALE (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES]. Being unable to secure a transfer of my pair, I must withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay"; and, if at liberty to vote, the Senator from South Carolina would vote "yea."

Mr. HARRISON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY]. I understand he would vote as I intend to vote. Therefore I am at liberty to vote, and vote "yea."

Mr. BARKLEY (when Mr. LOGAN's name was called). My colleague [Mr. LOGAN] is unavoidably absent. If present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. SHIPSTEAD (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON] and will vote. I vote "yea." If present, the Senator from California would vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES], the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER], and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] are absent on important public business. I am advised that if present and voting, these Senators would vote "yea."

The Senators from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR and Mr. STEWART], the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BURKE], the Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN], and the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER] are members of the committee to attend the funeral of the late Representative McREYNOLDS, and are, therefore, necessarily absent. I am advised that if present and voting, they would vote "yea."

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN], the Senator from Idaho [Mr. CLARK], the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY], the Senator from California [Mr. DOWNEY], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], and the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN] are detained on important public business.

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS] is absent because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] is absent on official business. He has a general pair with the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS].

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce that the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG], the Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON], and the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS] are all necessarily absent. If present, they would all vote "yea."

I announce the following pairs on this question:

The Senator from Oregon [Mr. HOLMAN] with the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. STEWART].

If present, the Senator from Oregon would vote "nay" and the Senator from Tennessee would vote "yea."

I also announce the general pair of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. TOWNSEND] with the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR].

The result was announced—yeas 57, nays 8, as follows:

YEAS—57

Adams	Gibson	Lucas	Schwartz
Ashurst	Gillette	Lundeen	Schwellenbach
Austin	Green	Maloney	Sheppard
Barbour	Guffey	Mead	Shipstead

Byrnes	Glass	McNary	Tydings
Caraway	Hale	Miller	Vandenberg
Clark, Idaho	Holman	Nye

So the bill H. R. 6635 was passed.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the clerks may be directed to renumber the sections.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARRISON. I now move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, ask for a conference with the House thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the President pro tempore appointed Mr. HARRISON, Mr. KING, Mr. GEORGE, Mr. LA FOLLETTE, and Mr. CAPPER conferees on the part of the Senate.

PROHIBITION OF BLOCK BOOKING AND BLIND SELLING OF MOTION-PICTURE FILMS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 280) to prohibit and to prevent the trade practices known as compulsory block booking and blind selling in the leasing of motion-picture films in interstate and foreign commerce.

GRAVE MARKERS FOR VETERANS

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, there was messaged over from the House, H. R. 985, which has to do with the provision of grave markers for veterans. I have consulted with the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs and the chairman of the subcommittee, the Senator from Indiana [Mr. MINTON], which reported out a bill which I introduced relating to the same subject. The bill has twice passed the Senate. It has now passed the House in practically the same form, with the exception that the limitation on the price has been omitted by the House bill.

I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of House bill 985, to authorize the Secretary of War to furnish certain markers for certain graves.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, I shall have to ask that the matter go over for the time being.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill will be passed over.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

THE JUDICIARY—ELMER D. DAVIES

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States, which was read, as follows:

To the Senate of the United States:

At 12:20 p. m. today there was delivered to my office the resolution of the Senate requesting me to return to the Senate the resolution advising and consenting to the appointment of Elmer D. Davies to be United States district judge for the middle district of Tennessee.

I regret that I cannot accede to this request as before its receipt I had signed and sent out a commission appointing Judge Davies, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to the position named in the resolution.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
July 13, 1939.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The message will lie on the table.

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President, as I was the author of the motion, unanimously carried in the Senate yesterday, to recall the notification to the President of the confirmation of the nomination of Elmer D. Davies, I am compelled to rise to express my surprise and astonishment at the tremendous haste and marked dispatch and startling speed with which this whole matter has progressed.

Under the circumstances, all I can now do, especially at this late hour, is vigorously to record my opposition to this appointment and the way its confirmation was rushed through. Later on, perhaps, I shall make certain further comments. In any event, I shall wish to insert in the RECORD certain data which show at least in a degree the basis for my objection to this nomination.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF A COMMITTEE

Mr. HAYDEN, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of sundry postmasters, which were ordered to be placed on the Executive Calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will state in order the nominations on the calendar.

THE JUDICIARY

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Benjamin J. McKinney to be United States marshal for the district of Arizona.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

NATIONAL YOUTH ADMINISTRATION

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Aubrey W. Williams to be National Youth Administrator.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask that the nominations of postmasters be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nominations of postmasters are confirmed en bloc.

IN THE MARINE CORPS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Marine Corps.

Mr. WALSH. I ask that the nominations in the Marine Corps be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nominations in the Marine Corps are confirmed en bloc.

RECESS

Mr. BARKLEY. As in legislative session, I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 6 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Friday, July 14, 1939, at 12 o'clock meridian.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate July 13 (legislative day of July 10), 1939

UNITED STATES MARSHAL

Benjamin J. McKinney to be United States marshal for the district of Arizona.

NATIONAL YOUTH ADMINISTRATION

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, JULY 13, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Most merciful God, our Father, for our sins we ask the forgiveness of the Cross and for our guidance the benediction of Thy love and care. Thou, who art so prodigal with the riches of field and forest, of land and sea, how much more has been the glory of Thy gifts to the souls of men. O Son of Mary, walk with us; teach us the lessons of forbearance that we may forgive as we hope to be forgiven. Bless those who struggle against want. We pray that the doors of employment may be opened wide and that the hearts of men may be opened to help the world's sad needs; may those who have much share with those who have less. Immortalize the hopes of those lives that have been blighted and the sanctities of those who are lonely and in tears; transfigure human sorrow, lighten the darkness, and dwell among us. In our dear Redeemer's name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate had passed a joint resolution of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. J. Res. 155. Joint resolution consenting to an interstate oil compact to conserve oil and gas.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 5407) entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States,' approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto," disagreed to by the House; agrees to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. WHEELER, Mr. BONE, Mr. TRUMAN, Mr. AUSTIN, and Mr. TOBEY to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 4929) entitled "An act to amend the act of June 23, 1938 (52 Stat. 944)," disagreed to by the House; agrees to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. WALSH, Mr. TYDINGS, and Mr. HALE to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

ADDITIONAL COPIES OF HEARINGS ON TRANSPORTATION ACT OF 1939

Mr. JARMAN. Mr. Speaker, from the Committee on Printing, I report back favorably without amendment (H. Rept. No. 1114) a privileged concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 26) authorizing the printing of additional copies of the hearings held before the Committee on Interstate Commerce of the Senate on the bill (S. 2009) entitled "Transportation Act of 1939," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That, in accordance with paragraph 3 of section 2 of the Printing Act approved March 1, 1907, the Committee on Interstate Commerce of the Senate be, and is hereby, authorized and empowered to have printed for its use 1,000 additional copies of the hearings held before said committee during the current session on the bill (S. 2009) entitled "Transportation Act of 1939."

The concurrent resolution was concurred in, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ADDITIONAL COPIES OF HEARINGS ON PROFIT-SHARING SYSTEMS

Mr. JARMAN. Mr. Speaker, from the Committee on Printing, I report back favorably without amendment (H. Rept. No. 1115) a privileged concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 25) authorizing the printing of additional copies of the hearings held before a subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Finance on the Investigation of Existing Profit-Sharing Systems Between Employers and Employees in the United States, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That, in accordance with paragraph 3 of section 2 of the Printing Act, approved March 1, 1907, the Committee on Finance of the Senate be, and is hereby, authorized and empowered to have printed for its use 10,000 additional copies of the hearings held before a subcommittee of said committee during the Seventy-fifth Congress pursuant to the resolution (S. Res. 215) providing for an investigation of existing profit-sharing systems between employers and employees in the United States.

The concurrent resolution was concurred in, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ADDITIONAL COPIES OF SENATE REPORT NO. 610, ON PROFIT SHARING

Mr. JARMAN. Mr. Speaker, from the Committee on Printing, I report back favorably without amendment (H. Rept. No. 1116) a privileged concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 24) authorizing the printing of additional copies of Senate Report No. 610 entitled "Survey of Experiences in Profit Sharing and Possibilities of Incentive Taxation," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed 12,000 additional copies of Senate Report No. 610, a report of a subcommittee of the Committee on Finance submitted pursuant to Senate Resolution 215 (75th Cong.), entitled "Survey of Experiences in Profit Sharing and Possibilities of Incentive Taxation," of which 1,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate document room, 10,000 copies for the use of the Senate Committee on Finance, and 1,000 copies for the House document room.

The concurrent resolution was concurred in, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

STATUE OF WILL ROGERS

Mr. JARMAN. Mr. Speaker, from the Committee on Printing I report back favorably without amendment (H. Rept. No. 1117) a privileged concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 29) to print and bind the proceedings of Congress, together with the proceedings at the unveiling in the rotunda, upon acceptance of the statue of Will Rogers, presented by the State of Oklahoma, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed with illustrations and bound, in such form and style as may be directed by the Joint Committee on Printing, the proceedings in Congress at the unveiling in the rotunda, together with such other matter as the joint committee may deem pertinent thereto, upon the occasion of the acceptance of the statue of Will Rogers, presented by the State of Oklahoma, 5,200 copies; of which 1,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate and 2,700 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and the remaining 1,500 copies shall be for the use of and distribution by the Senators and Representatives in Congress from the State of Oklahoma.

SEC. 2. The Joint Committee on Printing is hereby authorized to have the copy prepared for the Public Printer, who shall provide suitable illustrations to be bound with these proceedings.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, may I say it was my understanding that there was to be placed in that document only one illustration of the statue as it is in the rotunda of the Capitol. No great number of illustrations was to be placed in the document.

Mr. JARMAN. I did not understand there was any great number of them.

Mr. RICH. It was my impression there was only one illustration.

Mr. JARMAN. My understanding was that the proceedings and what happened in the House in connection with that incident were to be printed.

Mr. RICH. That is right; but the resolution refers to illustrations. I was under the impression there was only one illustration of the monument as it was presented and now stands in the rotunda of the Capitol.

Mr. JARMAN. That was my impression also.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ADDITIONAL CLERK HIRE IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 6205) to provide for additional clerk hire in the House of Representatives, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

Mr. RICH. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, may I explain my position on this bill by saying that I realize it is not our duty in the House to interfere with the transactions and legislation of the Senate, but it does seem to me that our conferees should request of the Senate that when they are considering additional clerk hire, one clerk at the rate of $1,800 a year and one at the rate of $1,500, they give some consideration to cutting down the number of clerks Senators should have who come from States where the population is small. For instance, there are 15 States with populations of less than 1,000,000, 8 States with populations of less than 500,000, and 3 States with populations of less than 300,000. There are two Senators from each of those States. It does seem to me that the Senators have more clerks than they need for the conduct of their business, and it does seem that the Senate should use good business judgment and try to hold down the number of additional clerks. This bill will add over 600 more clerks on Capitol Hill. I hope the conferees will convey that message to the Senate and see if they cannot cut down expenses to the degree warranted by good common business sense. I am personally against the bill because of its waste and extravagance, and I feel it is not necessary and should not be passed.

Mr. WARREN. If this bill goes to conference, I assure the gentleman I will present his views to the conference committee.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I want to make my position clear on this matter. I am opposed to the legislation that is proposed. I voted against it when it was here in the House in the first instance. I realize that to send measures to conference is the normal way to do business and I am, therefore, not going to be obstinate and object to sending this bill to conference. However, I wanted to make my own position clear.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and appoints the following conferees: Mr. WARREN, Mr. COCHRAN, and Mr. WOLFENDEN.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. JOHNSON of West Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD the brief address and tribute paid to the State of West Virginia by my constituent, Col. Heber H. Rice, of Huntington, W. Va., upon the State's seventy-sixth anniversary celebration at the New York World's Fair on June 24, 1939.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the Appendix of the RECORD an address delivered by the N. Y. A. Administrator, Mr. Williams, at the Institute of Public Affairs in Virginia.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, on yesterday the Senate passed the so-called Connally amendment to the social-security bill, requiring the Federal Government to match $2 for each dollar the State contributes up to $15 for the aged needy. This is one of the amendments a group of us fought for so hard and unsuccessfully when this bill was considered on the floor of the House. Since the Senate has seen fit to place that amendment in this bill, it is hoped that the House will see fit to concur in the amendment. It is right, it is just, it is fair, and it is equitable. I hope the conferees on the part of the House, backed by the House membership, will see fit to allow this amendment to remain in the bill and become part of the law.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COLMER. I am sorry to say to my friend that my time is just about up.

Mr. RICH. No; it is not up. Where are you going to get the money to do that? [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. COLMER. Where we get it for everything else.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DISNEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. DISNEY. Mr. Speaker, referring to the remarks of my distinguished colleague, and on the same general subject, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. COLMER], I would like to call the attention of the House to a newspaper dispatch of July 11, from Fargo, N. Dak., reading as follows:

Early returns from today's special election indicated a strong vote against passage of the four measures sponsored by former Gov. William Langer in a move to pay for the $40 (per month) minimum old-age pension plan he helped push through the recent legislature.

On a gross income tax or transactions tax 588 precincts gave 9,481 yes and 66,886 no.

This illustrates that when it comes home to the people that they must pay these bills they vote the other way. It proves that they will sustain their representatives if those representatives will save the taxpayers' money. [Applause.]

MEMORIAL CONCERT FOR THE BENEFIT OF FAMILIES OF VICTIMS OF THE "SQUALUS" DISASTER

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 6942) to authorize the attendance of the Marine Band at a memorial concert for the benefit of the families of the victims of the U. S. submarine Squalus disaster at Rye, N. H., July 30, 1939, and for other purposes, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President is authorized to permit the band of the United States Marine Corps to attend and participate in a memorial concert to be held at Rye, N. H., on July 30, 1939, the entire net proceeds of such memorial concert to be distributed to the families of the men who lost their lives in the sinking of the submarine Squalus.

Sec. 2. For the purpose of defraying expenses of such band in attending and participating at such memorial concert there is authorized to be appropriated the sum of $3,100, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to carry out the provisions of this act: Provided, That in addition to transportation and Pullman accommodations the leaders and members of the Marine Band be allowed not to exceed $5 per day each for actual living expenses while on this duty, and that the payment of such expenses shall be in addition to the pay and allowances to which they would be entitled while serving at their permanent station.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. VINSON of Georgia: Change the period at the end of section 1 to a colon and add the following proviso: "Provided, That the cost of the travel herein authorized shall be charged to current appropriations of the Marine Corps in the same manner and under the same regulations as though such travel was necessary in the Naval Service."

Strike out all of section 2.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the gentleman from New Hampshire [Mr. JENKS] may address the House for 5 minutes and I yield to the gentleman for that purpose.

Mr. JENKS of New Hampshire. Mr. Speaker, on May 23, last, one of the most appalling disasters in the history of our Navy took place off the coast of New Hampshire. We all recall the shock and alarm with which news was received that the submarine Squalus had failed to rise from a practice dive; we remember the hours of prayerful hope and suspense that followed, and the wave of joy and gratitude that swept over the Nation when word was flashed that the men entombed 240 feet below the surface of the Atlantic Ocean were being brought to the surface. But there was still another chapter to be written—that joy and gratitude was later tinged with sorrow when it became known that 26 of the men of that brave crew were trapped, beyond the hope of rescue, in their watery grave. I shall not dwell on the sorrow that has since hung like a pall over the loved ones of those 26 men.

Word came to me a few minutes ago from Portsmouth that they have just begun to raise the Squalus, and there is every reason to hope that the effort to bring the vessel to the surface will be successful.

This bill, H. R. 6942, that I have introduced and that you have consented to consider is for the purpose of authorizing the United States Marine Band to go to Rye, N. H., to participate in a memorial concert on July 30 for the benefit of the dependents of those men who are still in that water-filled compartment of the submarine Squalus.

I feel confident that every Member of this House is interested and in sympathy with this bill because the loss of those men is a national disaster and the welfare of their dependents is a national responsibility. The States which suffered specifically in this calamity can be listed as follows: Arkansas lost one, California three, Connecticut two, Florida one, Georgia one, Idaho one, Iowa one, Massachusetts one, Michigan one, Minnesota one, Missouri one, New Hampshire two, New York one, Oklahoma two, Pennsylvania one, South Carolina one, Tennessee two, Virginia one, and Wisconsin one.

I talked this morning with those who are sponsoring this memorial concert; from subscriptions already received, it is estimated that the net proceeds of the concert will be in the vicinity of $30,000, which indicates that a most generous response will be forthcoming from all sections of the country. The plan is to broadcast this concert over the National and Columbia networks, and I feel sure that the appeal to be made in connection therewith will meet with overwhelming success.

I would appreciate very much the Members of this House doing the unusual thing of authorizing the President to send the Marine Band to New Hampshire for this occasion; I realize it is not customary for Congress to send the Marine Band other than to the two national conventions of our Nation-wide veterans' organizations, but in behalf of the dependents of the courageous men who lost their lives in line of duty on the submarine Squalus, I bespeak your favorable consideration of this bill.

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. JENKS of New Hampshire. Yes.

Mr. THORKELSON. Does not the gentleman believe it would be a good idea for the Members of Congress to donate $5 apiece to the families of these men?

Mr. JENKS of New Hampshire. I thank the gentleman from Montana, and I am in hearty and thorough accord with his suggestion.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an article in the Survey Graphic for July 1939.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

FORT STEVENS

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, 75 years ago yesterday occurred an incident in the District of Columbia that is unique in the history of our country for two reasons. It found a President of the United States—Abraham Lincoln—in office under fire and, secondly, the only engagement ever fought in the District of Columbia took place. It was an attempt upon the part of a daring, brilliant Confederate general, Jubal A. Early, to capture the city of Washington, July 12, 1864. The Battle of Fort Stevens occurred. Yesterday was the seventy-fifth anniversary of that event. Last evening a very short but a very appropriate exercise was held in the fort to commemorate that event, and our distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BOLLES] delivered a brief and an appropriate address on that occasion. I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include the address of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BOLLES] delivered on that occasion.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SCHIFFLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an address delivered by the Honorable Benjamin Rosenbloom, a former Member of the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include therein a radio address delivered by the distinguished minority leader, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN], Monday last.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. RODGERS of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a brief patriotic address delivered by Rabbi Max B. Currick, of Erie, Pa., president of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, on Abraham Lincoln.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

SHOOTING AT HARLAN, KY.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask the attention of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. KELLER].

DEATH FOLLOWS DENIAL OF CIVIL LIBERTIES

Dock Caldwell, 31-year-old miner, lies dead in Harlan County. He died because he attempted to follow the decree of John L. Lewis that no one in Harlan County should work until he had joined the United Mine Workers of America.

Last Sunday William Turnblazer, head of the local union, called upon those belonging to the United Mine Workers to prevent the operation of the mines. Yesterday morning Caldwell attempted to carry out Turnblazer's demands, to make good the decree of John L. Lewis, by trying to prevent a fellow worker who did not belong to the union entering a mine. He was shot and killed. Two National Guard men were seriously wounded. Three other miners were wounded in the same affray.

For months the National Labor Relations Board, headed by its Chairman, Madden, has been giving support to the idea that in Harlan County a man must join the United Mine Workers before he can mine coal. Acting in collusion with William Turnblazer, head of the local union, Philip Phillips, a regional director of the Board, has been giving support to the move which denies civil liberties to the miners of Harlan County. The Federal administration itself has lent moral encouragement to John L. Lewis' demand for a closed-shop contract in the soft-coal industry.

Upon the shoulders of Lewis, whose commands in 1922 were followed by the massacre of 25 miners at Herrin, Ill., in a similar dispute, rests the major share of the responsibility for the death of Dock Caldwell. Sharing in that responsibility should be listed Madden, of the National Labor Relations Board, the members of that Board, and William Turnblazer, who incited the unlawful activities of the pickets.

The time has long gone by when we as representatives of our people should by our silence, by our inaction, lend moral support to those who deny liberty to our fellow citizens. On the floor of this House for amendment should be brought the National Labor Relations Act, so that American workers may once more be free to follow their chosen tasks to earn a livelihood for themselves and their families.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include a radio address broadcast by myself July 1.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate by Mr. Baldrige, one of its Clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a joint resolution of the House of the following title:

H. J. Res. 329. Joint resolution consenting to an interstate oil compact to conserve oil and gas.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendments of the House to a bill of the Senate of the following title:

S. 289. An act for the relief of the West Virginia Co.

The message also announced that the Senate had ordered that the Secretary be directed to request the House to return to the Senate the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 155) entitled "Joint resolution consenting to an interstate oil compact to conserve oil and gas."

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT LIBRARY

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I call up privileged House Resolution 238, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 238

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 118, a joint resolution to provide for the establishment and maintenance of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, and for other purposes. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the joint resolution and continue not to exceed 2 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Library, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the consideration of the joint resolution for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the joint resolution and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion, except one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that this matter has been debated heretofore, and that a majority voted for the resolution when under consideration the last time, I am wondering whether the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH] would agree that we reduce the time for the rule to 15 minutes on a side.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, when this matter last came before the House it came up suddenly, and we were not in position to discuss it in detail. Actually we need more time in order to convince those on the Democratic side that there should be no such memorial library at Hyde Park.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I feel that if the gentleman would have from now until doom's day he would not have enough time to convince Democrats or any man interested in this matter to vote with him.

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, ladies and gentlemen of the House, this resolution makes in order Senate Joint Resolution 118. It provides for 2 hours of general debate. I was hopeful that the gentleman from New York would agree to 15 minutes for each side on the rule, but for his own reasons he again desires to be heard at length.

I personally feel that the resolution should be adopted without extensive debate. When it was up a few weeks ago 229 Members voted for it and only 139 against it, which was but a few votes short of the required two-thirds under suspension of the rules. Since that time the press, including even the reactionary Republican newspapers, have editorially condemned those who voted against the measure without regard for merit but simply as an expression of petty and mean politics. Now we are considering the measure again. Politics has had its day on the matter, and this is the time to look upon it without prejudice. In my opinion every Member, regardless of party, should in good conscience vote for it. I had expected that the Republican Members on the left, after considering the criticism of their votes against this resolution when it was last up, would realize their mistake, agree to unanimous consent for the bill to be called up without special rule, and then concur in having the bill read and passed. But somehow or other you pay little heed even to honest criticism that you sometimes find in your own papers.

Mr. BOLLES. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. No; I cannot yield. You are pursuing a policy which does not help the Nation, yourselves, or your party. Mr. Speaker, I regret that some of my old Republican friends, for whom I have a good deal of respect and affection, of late have been obliged to vote under orders. Some years ago we Democrats were charged with being rubber stamps, although it is now admitted that we always retained our independence of thought and action. That charge may now be thrown back at the Republicans. I know that the Democrats always tried to support the President in his great efforts to pull us out of a terrible depression brought on by a Republican administration, and at the start you Republicans seemed to possess enough sincerity to aid us.

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. No; I cannot yield to the gentleman now. But of late you seem to vote as a unit at all times, under the whip and spur of the minority leader, for whom personally I have the highest regard. I am actually sorry for him, because the orders do not come from him, I know, because he is a legislator. He desires to do the right thing, but these orders come from the old, defunct, and, as I believe, extinct Republican National Committee.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. To the minority leader I am always pleased to yield.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I know the gentleman tries to be honest and fair and always is when he has the real facts.

Mr. SABATH. I thank the gentleman for his remarks.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I want to tell the gentleman that I am not taking orders from anyone, but I wonder if he can say the same? [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. SABATH. I can. I want to say to the gentleman who has served with me many years that I have at all times been more or less independent.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. More or less? [Laughter.]

Mr. SABATH. Yes.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mostly less.

Mr. SABATH. I cannot say that of many of your Members. It might surprise you to know that I am a Democrat and when, especially during the last 6 years, we have been trying to bring out legislation for the benefit of the country, that it is but natural for me to support those beneficial measures which have accomplished so much for the country. I hope, however, that you will realize that the policy you Republicans have pursued of late will not aid you in the long run. It cannot gain you support, for the people are not slow to recognize instances of playing politics at the expense of the country. And this is a typical example.

Many of you were elected because of your promises to forego politics and to work for the interest of the people, but if you expect to be reelected you had better change the tactics you are now pursuing not only on this measure but on all others this session. People are becoming convinced that you are not keeping the faith with them. All you seem to have on your brains—pardon me, I meant to say on your minds—is politics, making a political issue out of this resolution before us. You thought you were doing a smart thing for the Republican Party when you voted solidly to reduce the wages of W. P. A. workers in the East, North, and West, and to increase the wages of those in the South, and likewise throwing thousands off of W. P. A. jobs, even though they cannot find employment in private industry. I wonder how you will explain that vote to your constituents at home. I believe that they will resent it and will charge you of betraying them for a little political advantage. Do not let your unwise political strategy run away with you, because it will rebound on you next election and leave you at home.

If the resolution before us were considered solely upon its merits, without regard to politics, we would not be obliged to spend 3 or 4 hours in debate. Here we have a situation where the President of the United States signifies his intention of turning over to the Nation, free of charge, all his valuable papers, correspondence, and documents. Former collections of Presidents had to be purchased at great cost.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. In a few minutes.

Mr. FISH. I would like to know what President received any money for his papers.

Mr. SABATH. Oh, the gentleman from New York is so well informed that it is not necessary for me to waste time in enlightening him. From the records he can find out how many Presidents—

Mr. FISH. I do not know of any President who received any money.

Mr. SABATH. Not the President himself.

Mr. FISH. Well, that is what the gentleman said.

Mr. SABATH. Some of the widows of Presidents, and some of the Presidents, too, for their writings, just as President Coolidge did at a dollar a word. And you all know what happened to President Harding, but I do not want to go into all that. I am taking the floor today in the hope that I might convince some of you that your course is a poor one, one that you should abandon. For your own benefit you should cooperate with us, help us legislate properly, and pass legislation helpful to the country, and make it possible to adjourn soon. Such a course would bring you the applause of the people instead of the criticism you now reap. Such a course would be praised as sincere and constructive legislating, instead of playing politics.

Mr. BOLLES. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. No; I cannot yield to the gentleman. He cannot enlighten me.

Mr. BOLLES. Oh, yes; I can.

Mr. SABATH. Not on any subject I wish to take up. Mr. Speaker, I am not going to detain the membership further. I had jotted down a few memoranda to call to the attention of the House, but I do not think my advice would be heeded. In calling a few facts to the notice of the Republicans I have done my duty. If they will not heed my advice, it will be their funeral, and no one else's.

There is one charge that will be made today, I am sure, that I do want to answer. Branding this as a memorial in an attempt to prejudice Members against the resolution, the lame criticism will be made that memorials should only be for the dead, a narrow viewpoint to which I cannot subscribe. I believe that Congress should give its approval and applause to those who deserve it during their lifetime rather than to withhold it until the individual is dead.

However, this is not simply a memorial or a monument. It is a means of preserving for the American people documents and other material of value to future generations from a historical standpoint. President Roosevelt needs no monuments or memorials now or in the future. Posterity remembers a man for his deeds, and President Roosevelt has built a memorial in the hearts of the American people more enduring than stone or concrete. A great man may be condemned and even vilified during his lifetime, as were George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson, Woodrow Wilson, and Abraham Lincoln. But when the years roll by and history views them in true perspective, they have taken their place with the immortals of all time, while their critics have long since been forgotten. So it is with President Roosevelt. There are many who try to block his noble endeavors, who use as their mean instrument the most sordid and petty politics. Their reward is a headline in today's newspaper. History will accord them obscurity.

I say to you that the deeds and efforts of President Roosevelt in behalf of the underprivileged, the downtrodden, the unemployed, and the masses of the American people will live long after the criticism and opposition of selfish interests are forgotten, just as the men who make them today will be forgotten.

Neither I nor any supporter of the principles of President Roosevelt needs to stand here and ask you to erect a memorial to him. The American people will take care of that. But we do ask you, in the interest of the American people and of future generations, to help us preserve those things of historical interest and value through the creation of this library.

You all know how many times, after our Presidents have gone, that private collectors ask exorbitant sums for documents, letters, manuscripts, and so forth that have fallen into their hands and that later Congress has desired to acquire for preservation. In my many years of service here I have been called upon many times to vote on bills, as have many others here, to appropriate large sums to buy records and other private papers of former Presidents, both Republican and Democrat, from private sources.

Here in this measure is an opportunity to acquire these valuable records while the owner of them still controls their disposal, thus saving the people future expense and preserving them for the future. Laying aside all petty political considerations, the passage of this measure is not only a practical but the patriotic thing to do, and I hope that even the most partisan Member will today rise above politics and vote for the passage of the measure.

I will conclude by saying that I hope that between now and the time debate on the resolution expires you gentlemen will give it serious thought and vote with us in passing it.

Some of you Members on the Republican side and even some Democrats at times feel it is wrong to say a good word about a good man during his lifetime. I do not agree with you. I believe in expressing appreciation while a man lives. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I now yield to the gentleman from New York 30 minutes, as he has requested.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker—

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. FISH. Yes; I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. TABER. What does the gentleman think about this situation: That if the documents are of real value historically to the country, they should be placed in a public library where they would be easily accessible, a library like the Congressional Library, or some big library in New York City, rather than being entombed and embalmed in some small place?

Mr. FISH. I may say to the gentleman from New York that that is the only issue before the House. These papers belong in only one place; not, as my colleague said, possibly in the Library of Congress, or some other library in New York City; they belong in the Congressional Library, beyond a possibility of doubt, and in no other place. They should be in the Congressional Library along with the papers of Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, and of all our Presidents down to the present time. As I proceed I will present the records regarding the papers of the different Presidents and the facts in detail.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. I yield.

Mr. KNUTSON. Is this the most important legislation that the new dealers have to present to Congress? Is this going to solve the unemployment problem and put 10,000,000 or 12,000,000 idle men back to work?

Mr. FISH. I may say to the gentleman from Minnesota that I regret exceedingly that this bill is brought up, because I am fearful it will be adopted by a party vote and that a very deplorable and an unfortunate precedent will thereby be established. No bill should be brought before this House for the erection of a monument to a living man, especially a bill to provide by a vote of Congress for the maintenance of a public library away from the city of Washington to contain the papers of any President of the United States, be he Republican or be he Democrat.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. FISH. I yield.

Mr. KNUTSON. The gentleman says it is improper and without precedent to establish a memorial like this to a living man. Would it not be all right when the man is dead politically?

Mr. FISH. I have to admit to the gentleman from Minnesota that I think that behind this bill is a certain nervousness on the part of the President and his friends, that they are not willing like other Presidents and their friends to wait upon the verdict of history to decide what place that President should have; and, therefore, now, during his lifetime, it is proposed to erect a library to him and have Congress maintain it and not await the verdict of history. No one in this House knows whether President Roosevelt will go down with Jefferson, Jackson, Cleveland, and Woodrow Wilson, those great Democratic Presidents, or whether he will go down in history with Pierce and Buchanan. I will have a little more to say on that later on. As Al Smith used to say, "Let's look at the record."

My friend from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] spoke here for 15 or 20 minutes in a most amiable way, but he did not enunciate a single sound argument or reason why the Federal Government should maintain this library at Hyde Park. Let me say to the membership that if there should be one man—and I do not believe there would be half a dozen votes for this bill if the vote were taken secretly so the administration would not know how the Members voted; there is no rhyme or reason for it while there are scores of reasons against it—but if there is any one man who should be for it, it is myself, because this library is to be erected in my congressional district.

The building is to be maintained by the Congress and by the Government in my congressional district. I have been bitterly attacked by the two largest newspapers in my district published in the city of Poughkeepsie, 3 miles from Hyde Park, for my views upon this subject. They came out in two or three different editorials denouncing me and urging my constituents in Hyde Park and Dutchess County to appeal to me, to write to me to change my views when this bill came up for reconsideration. As a result of these editorials in the two largest newspapers in my district I have received one letter from a proponent of the bill, some professor at Vassar College, one letter from the Roosevelt Home Town Club, or whatever they call it, in Hyde Park, one letter from the town board of Hyde Park, and a dozen letters against the bill.

That is all I have had from my congressional district, in spite of this tremendous appeal that has been made to my constituents to write and tell me I was wrong.

There is no better or finer town in the whole of the United States than Hyde Park. It is a great Republican town, and, naturally, many of the people of that town want this library. They want it maintained by the Government. Public subscriptions will be raised, or have already been raised in the amount of $350,000. The building will be built there, I hope, by local labor. Then it is proposed that the Congress appropriate funds to maintain it, but no one has told us how much that will be. It may be $40,000 or $50,000, and I have heard it estimated as much as $100,000 a year. I propose to offer an amendment to limit it to $12,000 when the bill is read for amendment.

Of course, the people of Hyde Park would like to have this library. They would like to build it themselves with their own labor. They would like to have a dozen or more jobs in the library, and I have heard it claimed there would be as many as 40 jobs.

Mr. PATRICK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. PATRICK. Was the President born there?

Mr. FISH. Yes; the President was born in Hyde Park, and he has lived there all his life, but rarely has he ever carried the town of Hyde Park. Of course, that is another matter.

Mr. LEAVY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. LEAVY. May I ask the gentleman if he does not think it would have been well if the precedent that is now about to be established, if this legislation passes, should have gone back to the days of George Washington and other Presidents, irrespective of who they may have been, and if each of those Presidents had donated his home, his birthplace, his papers, and would have constructed buildings as is here proposed, and would have then presented to the American people such property, it would now be a great shrine?

Mr. FISH. The gentleman is under some misunderstanding. The President is giving the Government, like practically all other Presidents, certain papers which ought to belong to the Government anyhow. Secondly, he is not giving the library, he is merely giving 12 acres of his land, which becomes tax exempt. The people of Hyde Park will have to pay for those taxes because those 12 acres automatically become tax exempt. He himself is giving his papers, and, I submit, and will prove as I go along, that those papers ought to be in the Library of Congress with the papers of all of our Democratic and Republican Presidents. We have a Congressional Library for which we appropriate huge sums of money. It has special archives called "Presidential Row." It has trained and skilled men in the manuscript division who study these Presidential papers and who are experts on those periods of history. People come from all over America to the Congressional Library to study the Presidential papers, not those of one particular President but of all Presidents. If you pass this bill you establish, in my opinion, a highly undemocratic precedent. I actually believe it an un-American, undemocratic, and unpatriotic precedent. I cannot imagine anything that is more undemocratic than Congress voting to encourage Presidential papers being taken away from the city of Washington.

Mr. LEAVY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. LEAVY. I want to answer the statement just made, if the gentleman will give me an opportunity, to see whether I am in error or not.

Mr. FISH. Then ask a question.

Mr. LEAVY. My understanding is that the plain provisions of this resolution provide that the President at his own expense will erect upon these 12 acres of ground such building as is required and will reimburse the Government for any services it renders in designing a building; then will donate the building with, not his public papers, but his private papers that belong to him and to his heirs, and these will be made available to the American people. It is that situation that I ask about.

Mr. FISH. The gentleman is in error. The President puts no money into that building. It has been raised by public subscription amounting to $350,000.

Mr. LEAVY. Does the gentleman contend this legislation provides that the money shall be raised by public subscription?

Mr. FISH. Certainly. It has already been raised.

Mr. LEAVY. There is nothing in here to so indicate.

Mr. FISH. We have nothing to do with that. We are to maintain the library after it is built.

Mr. LEAVY. I am frank to say to the gentleman, if the Herbert Hoover birthplace in Iowa were offered under exactly the same conditions, I do not care whether it would be by public or private subscription, I as a Member on this side of the aisle would vote for it.

Mr. FISH. The gentleman does not even know what he is talking about. He has not read the whole bill. Furthermore, no Republican President would even think of asking in his lifetime to have the Government maintain a personal library in his home town.

Mr. LEAVY. I have read the bill.

Mr. FISH. The gentleman has made two or three misstatements. The President does not put a dollar into this library. The Government does not put a dollar into the building. That is raised by public subscription. We maintain the building in perpetuity and there is no limitation on the amount of money the Government may have to pay.

Mr. LEAVY. I challenge the gentleman to point out to the Members of the House where in this bill there is anything said that the money shall be raised either by public or private subscription.

Mr. FISH. I am telling the gentleman it has already been raised. The sum of $350,000 has already been raised.

Mr. LEAVY. The gentleman very cleverly dodges the proposition I put to him.

Mr. FISH. Does the gentleman want to raise some more money? The bill, I have repeatedly explained to the gentleman, calls for no money to build a library.

Mr. PARSONS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. PARSONS. The gentleman described our great Presidents. He admits that Franklin D. Roosevelt is a very great President?

Mr. FISH. I do not admit any such thing. Nor do I believe it. I am willing to let posterity determine that.

Mr. PARSONS. That is the way I understood the gentleman.

Mr. FISH. No. I personally believe he may go down as one of the greatest spendthrifts and one of the worst Presidents we have ever had, but let history determine that.

Mr. PARSONS. That is not in accordance with the language the gentleman used.

Mr. FISH. I said there was a certain nervousness on the part of President Roosevelt and his friends in regard to letting posterity determine where he will rank. He may rank with Jefferson, Cleveland, Woodrow Wilson, and Jackson, those great Democrats; yet he may rank, as I said, with Buchanan and Pierce and be forgotten, except for the burden he saddled on the American people.

Look at the record. What does the record disclose? It shows that practically all Presidential papers are now in the Library of Congress.

George Washington: All but a very small percentage of his papers and the letters known to have been written by or to Washington are in the Congressional Library in Washington.

John Adams: Very few of his papers are here. The papers of the Adams family are understood to be in the Massachusetts Historical Society under control of a family trust. The case of the Adams family is an exception, and I believe a great mistake has been made by the Adams family. There could not be a greater mistake than to have those papers under the control of the Adams family, when they should belong in the Congressional Library and be open to the public. I do not know whether the Adamses were Republicans or Democrats, and I do not care.

Thomas Jefferson: The large collection, including the Presidential papers, is here. A very considerable body, largely of personal character, is in the library of the Massachusetts Historical Society. Why should they be there? They all ought to be in the Congressional Library.

Madison: The largest collection, including those which deal with the Constitutional Convention and with the Presidency, are here in the Congressional Library.

Monroe: The largest single collection is here. There are other groups, however.

J. Q. Adams: The situation regarding his papers is the same as in the case of John Adams.

Jackson: The great body of the Jackson papers is in the Congressional Library, although small groups are found elsewhere.

Van Buren: The great collection is here, including the Presidential papers.

Harrison: The main collection is here, and is small.

Tyler: The only collection in existence is in the Congressional Library.

Polk: The Polk papers, including the diary, are all in the Congressional Library.

Taylor: The only important collection, a small one, is in the Congressional Library.

Fillmore: A small group is here. The main collection is in the Buffalo Historical Society. It ought to be in the Congressional Library.

Pierce: The main collection is here, but there are others elsewhere.

Buchanan: A small group is here. The main collection is in the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia.

This means that those who want to do research work and write about American history have to go to all these different places to find out the facts and to refer to the source material.

Lincoln: The Robert Todd Lincoln gift of the White House papers is here, but will not be opened until 1947. There are other groups elsewhere.

In reply to the gentleman from Illinois, I may say I do not know of any President who ever got a dollar for his papers. They have been largely donated to the Library or given by the widows to the Library, although I believe the Library has purchased some Presidential papers from private sources after their deaths.

Grant: There is no large collection.

Hayes: The main body of the Hayes papers is in the Hayes Memorial at Fremont, Ohio. The Government put up no money for that Fremont Library for Hayes, nor did the Government put up any money for any other library or other repository where Presidential papers may be kept.

This is a completely new precedent, establishing a memorial to a living man. It is utterly un-American, utterly undemocratic. It goes back to the days of the Pharaohs, who built their own images and their own obelisks. It goes back to the days of the Caesars, who put up monuments of themselves and crowned them with laurel leaves, and posed as gods.

Garfield: The papers of President Garfield are also in the Congressional Library.

Arthur: The main collection is in the Congressional Library, but in part is a deposit, not a gift.

Cleveland, a great Democrat: The great collection is here in the Congressional Library. There are other small groups elsewhere.

Benjamin Harrison: The Harrison papers are in the Congressional Library.

McKinley: The great collection is here. It covers the Presidency, particularly.

Theodore Roosevelt: The Theodore Roosevelt papers are in the Congressional Library.

The papers of President Taft are here, but as a deposit, not as a gift. Does anybody believe the Taft family would ever take a penny for those papers? If they do believe it, they do not know the Taft family.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. SABATH. Why does not the Taft family donate the papers?

Mr. FISH. The reason they do not donate the papers is simply this: Many of the Presidents and many of the Secretaries of States, too—and I hope I have time to refer to the Secretaries of State because their papers are also in the Congressional Library—do not want their papers opened immediately. As in the case of the Lincoln papers, Mr. Lincoln's son did not want President Lincoln's papers opened, for personal reasons, until 1948. The Taft family may have personal reasons for not donating the papers at the present time.

A year ago I myself donated to the Congressional Library 30 boxes or trunkloads of papers of my grandfather, Hamilton Fish, who was a United States Senator, a Member of the House of Representatives, and Governor of the State of New York, and for 8 years Secretary of State under the Grant administration. This was probably the greatest collection of official papers and letters that is in existence. It includes letters from numerous Presidents, as well as letters from Clay, Calhoun, and Webster, and from Charles Sumner by the score. These papers are of much more real value than the papers of President Roosevelt today because such papers do not have much value until the men have been dead for a number of years and a sales value is developed. I donated these papers because they ought to be in the Congressional Library. However, my grandfather in his will expressed the desire that his papers be not donated immediately because of a personal row with Sumner. He did not want them released to the public for a number of years after the death of those referred to.

Let me go on. Most of the Presidential papers have been donated with just a few exceptions.

Wilson: Certain letters and papers of President Wilson are deposited here, but are not open to investigators.

Harding: The Library has a few letters written by President Harding, but the Harding papers are understood to be in the Harding Memorial at Marion, Ohio.

It is my belief there are very few papers left in the Harding collection. I am under the impression most of them were destroyed, because I have tried for years to get one single letter written by President Harding and signed by President Harding, and I have been unable to do so. I wanted this for a collection of letters of all Presidents in the library at Williams College. They have a complete collection, except for a letter from President Harding. If anybody in the House or anywhere else knows where I can get a letter that President Harding has signed I would like to know about it in order to complete that great collection.

Coolidge: The papers of President Coolidge are here, but as a deposit and not as a gift. I understand that anybody who is studying the papers or the writings of President Coolidge, all he has to do is to ask Mrs. Coolidge, and she will let him see all the papers they may desire. That is the understanding in the Congressional Library.

President Hoover: The papers of President Hoover are at Palo Alto, at the university out in California.

I think they ought to be here with all the rest of the Presidential papers, but he has put them there at his own expense, while this proposal is to maintain the papers of President Roosevelt and establish this precedent, which means that every other President will come back to Congress for the same kind of appropriation for his home-town library.

Let us get rid of all this sob-sister stuff and shedding of crocodile tears, saying that we must erect a monument to a living man. If you do it for one, you do it for all, and that is why this precedent is wrong in every way.

If these Presidential papers are taken away from Washington and scattered in the future all over America, in Squeedunk and Podunk, writers, students, and those who do research work will have to spend thousands of dollars to go from one little town to another when we have already erected a Congressional Library at great cost in order to keep these Presidential papers. We have 20 men in the Manuscript Division of the Library of Congress doing nothing else but looking after these historical papers of Presidents and Secretaries of State. In addition, there is a special photostat bureau with experts in charge. Now you come along and on political grounds, with no reason whatever advanced and with no argument except one of party, you say that we must do this for President Roosevelt, because he wants it done.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. I yield.

Mr. KNUTSON. I agree with the gentleman that these papers should be deposited in the Library of Congress in Washington, so that they may be available to the statesmen of the future so that they may go there and go over these papers and learn how not to run a government. [Laughter.]

Mr. SABATH. Well, well, well!

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, it is a little difficult beginning this debate, but I do not think it makes any difference, because I imagine you have made up your minds and nothing I can say will deter you or change your decision. You will probably vote for this and say, "We cannot put these Presidential papers in The Archives Building. The Archives Building is already filled." This was stated in the debate the last time. I took the trouble to go down to The Archives Building a few days ago. It is one of the most magnificent buildings in Washington or anywhere else in the world. It cost $12,000,000. It is about one-third filled and may not be filled for another 25 or 50 years, but, as a matter of fact, that argument which was presented to you as a reason for being for this bill the last time does not hold water. These Presidential papers do not go to the Archives Building, they go to the Congressional Library.

We have just built a new annex to the Congressional Library of 25 acres. They have enough room to hold Presidential and Secretary of State papers for hundreds of years to come, but you will hear the argument advanced that there is no place left for us to take care of these papers in either the Library of Congress or The Archives Building.

It has also been very noticeable, in some of the propaganda which has accompanied the proposal of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, Inc., to have it taken over by the Government of the United States, that attacks and criticisms have been made on the Library of Congress and on other collections of papers of Presidents of the United States, the distinguished predecessors of the present incumbent of the White House. These attacks and criticisms, deprecating as they do previous work in the same field for the purpose of "building up" the Roosevelt proposal, are wholly unworthy, if not unpatriotic; for there can be no question in the mind of any fair-minded person that what the Government has already done by special acts of Congress or through its regular agencies, as the Library of Congress, has been proper and right.

Large expenditures are alleged to have been incurred. The present proposal asks for unprecedentedly large expenditures for the acquisition and care of one man's papers. Nobody knows what the appropriation will be in this bill. It may be $50,000, it may be $100,000. It may be the interest on several million dollars a year. I propose to offer an amendment to limit it to $12,000. I think that is ample for the maintenance of one man's papers outside of the city of Washington. I wish to God there was something that I could say to change one vote on the Democratic side. I know that I cannot. I know that we have all of the logic and reason on our side. I know that this Congress would not appropriate one thin dime for the maintenance of the Mellon Art Gallery if it were located in Pittsburgh, but when he gave his pictures and had them brought to the city of Washington, where they ought to be, then we appropriated money to maintain them here, and not where he was born, in the city of Pittsburgh. That argument will be brought up, that we have done something to maintain the Mellon Art Gallery, but he has given $50,000,000 of his own money for pictures to promote Washington as an art center. This Roosevelt Library is not to be in the city of Washington. It is in my district, and if anybody should be for it, it is myself, but I shall never be for this library or for any private library for any President, Republican or Democratic, because it establishes a wrong precedent and it is totally undemocratic and totally un-American—taking these Presidential papers away from Washington where they could be seen, and where we have already got 20 men working on these official papers, paid by the Government of the United States. It is proposed now to set up a precedent for every President to follow from now on, to have a little library for his own personal papers, and then have our historians, rich and poor alike, chasing around after information all over the country. Is that democratic, or is this proposition democratic—raising a monument to a living man? Is that a sound precedent in America, where we still call ourselves a democratic nation?

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. Yes.

Mr. GREEN. I do not understand the difference in a great monument to Mr. Mellon, who served through three Presidents, and erecting one to the greatest President.

Mr. FISH. Oh, the gentleman was not listening to what I said. I said that if that art gallery were erected in Pittsburgh, where Mr. Mellon was born, we would not give one thin dime out of the Treasury of the United States to maintain it; but when it is here and is a gift in the city of Washington, where we want it, then we do provide for it, and the gentleman probably voted for it. If we needed more manuscript room in the Presidential row of the Congressional Library, if they needed a couple more men, I would vote for it, although they already have 20 men there now. But to provide for 20 men for the Roosevelt papers in Hyde Park, some 250 miles from here, is an entirely different situation.

Mr. GREEN. Then think of the millions of dollars of taxes that were excused in the other case. There is nothing like that in this case.

Mr. FISH. Let me say to the gentleman, in the name of all the gods at once, upon what meat doth this our Caesar feed that he hath grown so great? What is good enough for Washington and Jefferson and Jackson and Lincoln and Cleveland and Wilson and Theodore Roosevelt ought to be good enough for Franklin Delano Roosevelt, but apparently it is not. He comes in here asking special privilege of the Democrats, and the party whip is cracked, and without a sound reason or a sound argument you are told that you must vote for this thing and establish a precedent here that we maintain a library—a precedent for all time—and have these Presidential papers taken out of the city of Washington. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield now to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN].

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I dislike to take the floor again on a matter of this kind, because I expressed my true feelings rather fully a Monday or two ago when this matter was under consideration. After more than 26 years in this House I feel I know that if the majority party with any President—take the three Republican Presidents that party has had in 12 of those years—had offered a bill exactly like this, with the name simply changed, that it would have met with little or no opposition on the Democratic side of the House. I feel that I know that. We did not hate Mr. Harding or Mr. Coolidge or Mr. Hoover. I never knew Mr. Harding personally. If I ever met him in my life, I do not remember it. I was sorry, deeply sorry, for the way some people in the United States of America treated Mr. Harding. I still believe, and I shall maintain as long as breath is in my body, that there has never been a President of the United States who was not an honest man.

I knew Mr. Coolidge fairly well. Frankly I liked him very much. I had breakfast with him one morning along with my friend from Massachusetts, and I remember their conversation about when they were in the Legislature of Massachusetts together, and some old hotel in which they lived, and so on. I had a good time with him. If a resolution such as this had been presented to have preserved the papers of Calvin Coolidge up at Northampton, I would have been proud to vote for it.

I knew Mr. Hoover for 8 years. He appeared before the committee of which I was a member, as Secretary of Commerce. I liked him. I thought he was a highly capable man as Secretary of Commerce. I never did think he would make a good President, and I think my fears on that subject were wholly justified by a complete demonstration of 4 years; but I did not dislike him.

I remember when Mr. Wilson was President. It is a rather funny thing. It does not apply to all Republicans. It never has. But there was a large percent of the Republican membership of this House that would turn pale, like the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH] turns when he discusses Mr. Roosevelt, when they got up on this floor to talk about Woodrow Wilson. Now, the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH] is a pretty good hater, you know. When Woodrow Wilson's name was mentioned they would turn pale. I never could understand just exactly why a certain percentage of Republicans should so hate a Democrat.

If another name were substituted in this resolution for that of Franklin D. Roosevelt, I doubt very seriously whether it would have a great deal of opposition on the Republican side of this House. I just do not think that my folks do that way.

Now, I am going to put in the RECORD, in my extension of remarks, a statement that was not prepared by me, but which I think is true, to show how the papers of the various Presidents are scattered throughout the length and breadth of the land. No President's papers are in any one place. A great many of them have been destroyed by fire. A few of them are in the Congressional Library. Some of them are in State historical societies. Some of them are still in the hands of individuals. The Lincoln papers will not be available for the public, as I understand it, until 1947.

These are Mr. Roosevelt's papers. These are his private papers. He has a right, when he leaves the White House, as he did when he left Albany and as he did when he left the Navy Department, to pick up any paper of any private nature and burn it or hide it away to be looked at 100 years from now. But Mr. Roosevelt wants these papers to be made available. To be frank about it, I think he is doing a beautiful and a generous thing. Was there any kick on our side of the House when there was a monument built down here and the land donated and the care and upkeep of it made a charge upon the Government from now on, when it was proposed that that memorial be set up in perpetuity to Andrew Mellon, who typified a certain class of business, a certain class of politics in the United States? You cannot separate it from being a monument to Mr. Mellon. And I was glad to support it. It is a remarkable thing that some people in this House, and especially the Representative from the district in which Mr. Roosevelt lives, get so disturbed when his name is mentioned. He is the most distinguished citizen who ever lived in that district, and probably the most distinguished who will live in it during the lifetime of any of us. If he has done one thing, if he has uttered a sentence in the more than 6 years he has been President of the United States which pleased his Congressman, I have never heard him make a public statement to that effect.

Of course, he does not like Mr. Roosevelt. I do not know exactly how Mr. Roosevelt feels about him [laughter], but I can imagine, as I still have some imagination left in this material world in which I live. But I think it is most unfortunate. I believe that if the worst Republican I ever knew—and I have known some bad ones, just like I have known some bad Democrats—were President of the United States and lived in the district that I represent in Congress—I am not out of humor at all—if he lived in my district, I think I would allow somebody else at least to take up the personal cudgels against him. I would want the people to know that I represented a district that was proud of the fact that the President of the United States came from that district, just as Virginia used to be proud to be called the "Mother of Presidents," and like the great State of Ohio was proud that it came along following Virginia as the "Home of Presidents." Frankly, I would just be proud of it. I have tried to be proud of every President I have ever known and of everyone about whom I have read.

I want to say one thing to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish]: When he was talking about great Democrats and poor Democratic Presidents, if he will reread his history about the administration of James K. Polk, of Tennessee, he will probably revise his opinion of that great Tennessean, who was one time Speaker of this House, because I think he will find that in the administration of James K. Polk in all probability as many permanent and far-reaching things were done in Washington as in most other 4 years in the history of American politics.

I am sorry, as the gentleman from New York says he is, that this vote is going to divide up and down the center aisle; I am tremendously sorry for that. I think it is not going to be a fine spectacle in the House of Representatives. Every Democrat on the motion to suspend the rules voted to pass this bill. It is my presumption that everyone on the right of where I stand will vote the same way today; and I am deeply sorry, loving this place as I do, after an association here with such men as the gentleman from Pennsylvania, GEORGE DARROW, during all these years, sometimes sad but usually glorious, that you gentlemen on the Republican side of the aisle from New York and from the other States should take the position you do.

Let me say to you that the press of the country is a pretty good interpreter of what will be written as history. They have not sustained you on your action of a few weeks ago, and they will not sustain you on the action you intend to take today, because they will believe as I believe, and as we all believe, that your vote today is being cast because Franklin D. Roosevelt is Franklin D. Roosevelt and because he is a Democratic President of the United States.

Let me say, furthermore, to this Congressman, the gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish], that he need not fear about the place of Mr. Roosevelt in history. Mr. Roosevelt is like another great Democratic President of the United States who said:

It matters not what my personal fortunes may be, I am willing to play for the verdict of mankind.

[Applause.]

That man was Woodrow Wilson, loved and hated as few men have been since Jackson. If there was ever a man in the history of American politics who was hated it was Old Hickory Jackson, yet today when the roll is called of the great Presidents from Washington to Roosevelt no man leaves out the name of Andrew Jackson. [Applause.] He was hung in effigy more than any other President. He was cartooned with Arbuthnot and Armbruster hanging on either side of him, the great murderer. He was hated because he believed that brains and character should run this country, and not the bank of Philadelphia. [Applause.] Today, however, no man when he calls the roll of the great men who have been at the helm of this mighty state leaves out the farmer, gentleman, soldier, statesman, who today sleeps on the ground of The Hermitage in the middle of that lovely State known as Tennessee. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, the matter referred to as in my remarks is the following statement prepared by efficient people interested in the library bill:

Throughout American history Presidents retiring from office have removed from the White House all correspondence and documents addressed to them, because these papers and documents have always been considered personal property. After retirement some Chief Executives have totally destroyed such material; others have partially destroyed it, edited the remaining portion, and sold their collections; and still others have disposed of their papers in a manner making research and study of their collections impossible.

In order to acquire valuable Executive papers, Congress often has found it necessary to appropriate large sums for the acquisition of this material from Presidential heirs and individual collectors. In most cases purchased collections were incomplete, and from time to time additional sums must be spent to gain ownership of papers considered necessary to make existing collections more complete.

As an example of the present difficulties encountered by the historian who aspires to write a book concerning national development during the administration of President James Monroe, in order to utilize source material, it would be necessary for him to travel to such widely separated places as Washington, D. C., capitals of foreign nations, New York City, and private libraries in the United States and Europe.

It is the general impression that the papers of President Monroe are preserved in the Library of Congress, but the Gouverneur collection of Monroe papers is owned by a private citizen of Washington, D. C.; approximately 1,200 items are in the New York Public Library; unpublished notes written by Monroe when he was Ambassador to England to the Russian Ambassador to London were discovered in the Vorontsoff family library in 1935 and were to be published by the Academy of Sciences of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics; and other individual letters and documents are held by private collectors and libraries.

It is also a popular belief that the papers of Thomas Jefferson, whose library was given to the Government and constitutes the nucleus of the Library of Congress, are contained in the Library of Congress. It is true that the main collection is preserved in this manner, but his private papers are, for the most part, at the Massachusetts Historical Society Library; 186 letters to his daughter, Mrs. Martha Jefferson Randolph, are in the Pierpont Morgan Library; important papers covering the period from 1779 to 1835 are owned by the Pennsylvania Historical Society; for the period from 1788 to 1825, by the Buffalo Historical Society; for the period from 1789 to 1798, by the Virginia State Library; for the period from 1791 to 1835, by the Yale University Library; and other papers, for the period after 1791, are held by the American Philosophical Society and the Missouri Historical Society.

The same circumstances, applying in the cases of Jefferson and Monroe, are true with regard to 13 Presidents. The papers of nine Presidents are not available for research by reason of private ownership by heirs or explicit instructions that they are not to be opened until fixed periods of time have elapsed. The papers of six Presidents are thought to have been totally or partially destroyed by fire so that it will never be possible to assemble complete collections. Many collections held by the Library of Congress are fragmentary and of little value except as museum pieces. Since most of its large collections were acquired by purchase, the value of material not owned by the Library has increased, is eagerly sought by private collectors, and the completion of Government collections will be a costly process.

Many of the papers of Harrison, Tyler, Fillmore, Lincoln, Grant, and Harding are believed to have been burned. The Harrison papers still in existence are held by the Wisconsin Historical Society, the Library of Congress, and individual owners; the Tyler papers by the Library of Congress, but the greater part of his collection was left to his widow's care and was destroyed in the burning of Richmond in 1865; and the surviving Fillmore papers are owned by the Buffalo Historical Society and the Yale University Library. It is thought that most of Fillmore's papers were burned by his son's executors in 1891 in accordance with a mandate in the son's will.

The Lincoln papers in the possession of the Library of Congress will not be accessible until 1947, two other collections are owned by private citizens, and individual items are in the hands of collectors. Grant is said to have destroyed his own collection of papers and if any survive they are in the hands of various descendants or individuals. One of the most valuable books concerning the Grant administration—as a matter of fact, so significant that it won the Pulitzer prize for biography in 1937—was written by Dr. Allan Nevins, professor of American History at Columbia University, and was entitled "Hamilton Fish—The Inner History of the Grant Administration."

President Harding is popularly reported to have personally destroyed many papers pertaining to his administration, but the collection still in existence is in the possession of the Harding Memorial Association of Marion, Ohio.

The papers of President Coolidge are inaccessible to historians or the public and their eventual disposition appears to be a subject of uncertainty. President Buchanan's collection is held by the Pennsylvania Historical Society; Hayes' by the Hayes Memorial Library at Fremont, Ohio; and the papers of John Adams and John Quincy Adams are in the possession of the Adams family and are not available for research purposes.

President Herbert Hoover, probably conscious of the aid to research afforded by the separate preservation of source material along the lines of period and locality, constructed a library at Stanford University, California, known as the Hoover Library on War, Revolution, and Peace. There his valuable collection, including his personal library and important correspondence covering his many years of public service, is deposited.

Many of the Cleveland papers are privately owned, some are in the Library of Congress, and a sealed box of papers deposited in the New York State Library is to be opened this year. The collection of Woodrow Wilson is owned by Mrs. Wilson, and only Mr. Wilson's biographer has had access to it.

As the result of lack of uniformity in the methods of preserving Presidential papers, of the incomplete nature of even the largest collections, and of the scattered location of important papers which should have been preserved as a unit, it has not been possible for scholars, historians, and those interested in political science to properly analyze, for the benefit of government and history, the background and purposes of many important matters having their origin with the Chief Executives without extensive travel and large expenditures.

Some may argue that Presidential papers should automatically become the property of the United States Government; the same line of reasoning should apply to all duly elected representatives of the people. On this basis the correspondence, research material, and other information contained in the files of Members of Congress should become Government property when Members of Congress retire from office. Perhaps it is not necessary to cite the significance of speeches and letters by Webster, Clay, and other former Members of the legislative body in the formation and clarification of our democratic principles and policies. Like the papers of Presidents, the important collections of these individuals are located in cities and towns from boundary to boundary of the Nation, preserved by patriotic societies, libraries, and individuals. Presidential papers may be more comprehensive with respect to the activities of government, yet they are no more the property of the Government than the papers of any other elected or appointed individual discharging governmental responsibilities. Both practice and precedent have contributed to the theory that correspondence and documents of this kind are private property.

Since President Roosevelt's papers constitute the largest collection of Presidential papers in existence, and being mindful of the importance of preserving historically important material pertaining to the executive branch of the Government, the subject of their disposition was discussed with friends who suggested that he appropriately might seek the advice of historians and archivists, and a meeting with some of them was arranged for this purpose.

Many of those who were consulted by the President have stressed the importance of preserving intact all documents covering the years of President Roosevelt's public life, both in New York State and in the National Government. They have pointed out that all these papers overlap, that to separate them would destroy the unity which makes the collection unique among collections of executive papers, and that the only way to preserve this gift in the manner which will best facilitate all forms of research and study is to erect a separate building as a repository.

The historical material constituting the proposed gift of President Roosevelt may be briefly classified as follows:

First. Public and personal papers: These include practically all incoming and copies of practically all out-going correspondence, as well as other material covering his years of service as New York State senator, 1910-13; as Assistant Secretary of the Navy, 1913-20; as Governor of New York, 1929-33; and as President of the United States. They include also a large volume of political material, especially material relating to the Presidential campaigns of 1920, 1924, 1928, 1932, and 1936, and a smaller accumulation of other material of a miscellaneous character.

Second. Historical manuscripts, etc.: These consist chiefly of material relating to the history of the American Navy since 1775, which over a period of many years was collected from various sources. They include letters, log books, and other manuscripts, paintings, drawings, prints, and models of many famous American naval vessels.

Third. New York State material: This group includes a historically valuable collection of material relating to the State of New York and the Hudson Valley.

Fourth. Books and pamphlets: This collection numbers approximately 15,000 books and pamphlets. Some of them are rare items, many are autographed copies from the authors, and the great bulk of them are important works on American history.

A recent survey of the portion of the material that is now stored in Washington shows that the papers and books occupy between 5,000 and 6,000 linear feet of shelf space. Other items include over 400 pictures and prints of sizes varying from 12 by 18 inches to 36 by 48 inches, in addition to many smaller ones, 37 ship models, and approximately 7,000 volumes. At Albany there are approximately 50 boxes, size 2 by 2 by 2 feet, containing the personal and unofficial public papers of Mr. Roosevelt's two administrations as Governor of New York. There is also a considerable miscellaneous collection at Hyde Park, N. Y., which has not yet been surveyed.

Acting upon the advice of those whom he consulted, the President decided to give his private papers, documents, library, and pamphlets on subjects pertaining to historical events of this period, works of art, ship models, pictures, photographs, maps, and other similar material to the Government. A group of business leaders offered to cooperate with the scholars who suggested the plan for preserving the gift, by raising funds necessary to build a repository for the collection along lines to be determined by leading archivists and historians and in keeping with the modern conception of library technique. The President then offered a tract of land from his estate at Hyde Park, N. Y., as a site for such a building. Public announcement of these gifts was made on December 10, 1938.

It should be noted that the proposed location of the library at Hyde Park, N. Y., is in keeping with the methods advocated by historians and authors engaged in research work related to history. Today there is so much source material, accumulated through more than 150 years of national development, that the mature years of a man's life would not constitute a period of sufficient length to permit the writing of a general history from original sources. Instead, scholars prepare new general histories by referring to outstanding books covering specific periods. In other words, the best book or books concerning the Revolutionary period, the Civil War period, and other periods, all written from source material, would be consulted. The new work would condense and consolidate the facts in the manner best suited to the purposes for which the new book might be written. In this way, revised, chronological data for public use covering the most important periods and events, can be presented in a single volume.

A scholar studying the economic development of the United States would utilize the work of individuals considered as outstanding authorities on economic development during each era of progress, authors of textbooks, and general nonfiction work pertaining to political science would follow the same method, and the principle applies in other associated fields of literature and history.

It is not difficult to understand why authors of histories and books on associated subjects, as well as works of fiction dealing with a certain period of history, prefer to have source material preserved on the basis of periods of national development. Naturally, the task of those engaged in research is facilitated by having the majority of source material pertaining to a given period, preserved at one location and administered by librarians and their assistants who, by reason of intimate knowledge of this material, can render the most effective service in advising and assisting authors.

Coupled with the desirability of segregating source material by periods of history, there is a further advantage to research in localizing source material whenever it is possible to do so without destroying the unity of a collection. "Localizing" may be defined as "establishing research centers in various localities where material holding definite local interest may be preserved." The historical societies of the Western States probably contain more informative material concerning the development of the West than is to be found elsewhere. This material is used in the preparation of State histories, but it is also important to the record of national growth since reference to it must be made in describing the national acquisition and development of the territory west of the Mississippi River. These libraries contain the collection of papers of individuals who contributed to the development of particular States as well as the important documents of Presidents of the United States and high ranking Government officials who were natives of the State and may have held State offices prior to their assumption of duties which were national in scope. Most of the other States, like those of the West, have State historical societies and State libraries where historical material is similarly preserved.

The result of the preservation of source material in this manner has been to stimulate interest in historical research throughout the country by affording ready accessibility to students and historians. It also has had the tendency to centralize material pertaining to locality and to individuals identified with the locality. Historians engaged in research work are primarily interested in a certain period of history, a definite locality, or a specific person. It would be financially impossible for authors with limited resources to visit Washington, D. C., for the purpose of devoting many weeks to intensive research. Under our present system it is possible for a complete history of the United States to be written without visiting the Library of Congress or the United States Archives. Books upon all phases of history have been written by qualified individuals from source material, and copies are contained in the larger libraries where they are available to all citizens.

In addition to conforming with the generally accepted principles of preserving historical material, it has been pointed out by authors that the location of the library at Hyde Park, N. Y., will make it possible for the President, upon his retirement, to render invaluable assistance in classifying material and in supplying information which might be helpful in clarifying the intent and purposes of documents. Archivists and librarians have cited the belief that decentralizing source material would decrease the hazard of fire or other calamity which under a policy of preservation at one point might result in a loss of the major portion of our important historical records.

Obviously it would be impossible and impractical to assemble all source material in the Library of Congress or the United States Archives. The administration of so much material would be cumbersome; suitable facilities for its preservation would be lacking; only a small percentage of individuals would be economically qualified to engage in historical research because of the expense of traveling to their National Capital; millions of school children who visit local libraries for study and inspiration in matters pertaining to patriotism and history would be deprived of the opportunity of viewing historic documents; and such a policy would be bitterly contested by public libraries, historical societies, and private citizens.

Several meetings were held by the various groups interested in the acceptance and preservation of President Roosevelt's gift, and as a result of these meetings the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, Inc., was incorporated in the State of New York to carry out these purposes in the manner determined to be most beneficial both to the public and to historians. Committees were formed to direct the program that would make it possible for the Federal Government to accept the gift, and their activities are now under way.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired; all time has expired.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker—

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KELLER. I yield.

Mr. FISH. I just wanted to say to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN] that I agree thoroughly with his remark that Andrew Jackson was one of our great American Presidents, but that is all I agree to in the remarks made by the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. SABATH. That is more than we expected from the gentleman.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 118 to provide for the establishment and maintenance of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 118, with Mr. BOEHNE in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

By unanimous consent the first reading of the joint resolution was dispensed with.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 20 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I see no reason for getting excited over the discussion of a matter of this character. It is, as the gentleman from New York well said, a very simple question. He reduced it, in his opinion—I refer to the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH], of course—to one question only, and that is whether there is any other place that ought to be considered for the deposition of the papers of Franklin D. Roosevelt except in the Library of Congress. He then proceeded to make a number of misstatements—because apparently he has not had time to study this subject. I am going to correct his misstatements as I proceed in this discussion.

We find it necessary to take up the Senate bill instead of the House bill, because the Senate passed the bill ahead of us. In the meantime, the reorganization of the Government had been brought about, and this made it necessary to make certain perfecting amendments purely for the purpose of making the bill fit into the reorganization program. You will find, therefore, that on page 2 of Senate Joint Resolution 118 we had to change the title "Secretary of the Treasury" to "Federal Works Administration"; and we had to change "Treasury Department" to "Public Building Administration." To make the bill comport with the Government reorganization, on page 3, in line 4, we had to change "Procurement Division" to "Public Buildings Administration"; and, again, "Secretary of the Treasury" had to be changed to "Federal Works Administration." Further down on the same page, in line 19, the words "Provided further" had to be added to make the bill fit in with the general expression of the bill.

On page 7 we took out "Director of the National Park Service" and substituted for it "Commissioner of Public Buildings." This has been done, as I stated, for the purpose of making the bill fit in with the reorganization program that was brought about under a law passed by Congress. I want now to take up with you what this bill really is, what it provides, and then present the reasons supporting it.

You will find at the top of page 2 the following:

Title II of the joint resolution provides for the acceptance and maintenance of the library upon the following terms:

1. That the Archivist of the United States be authorized to accept for and in the name of the United States from the Honorable Franklin D. Roosevelt, or from such person or persons as he may designate to act for him, a tract of land, consisting of approximately 12 acres to be carved out of the donor's estate in the town of Hyde Park, Dutchess County, State of New York, and located on the New York-Albany Post Road, to be utilized as a site for the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library.

2. That the Archivist be authorized to permit the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, Inc., a New York membership and nonprofit corporation, organized for that purpose, to construct on the said site by private subscription of funds a suitable library building or buildings, in accordance with plans and specifications to be approved by the Archivist, in which these collections of historical material and future additions thereto shall be housed.

I am reading this because I feel very few Members of the House have had an opportunity to study what really is in the bill. I am quite sure the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH] has not.

3. That, upon the completion of the above-mentioned project, the Archivist of the United States be authorized to accept from the donor the historical material described herein, and to acquire by gift, loan, or purchase, similar related material from other sources.

4. That the United States agrees to provide in the future such funds as may be necessary for the upkeep of the said library and for the administrative expenses and costs of operations thereof so that the said library shall at all times be properly maintained.

5. That a board of trustees be established, consisting of the Archivist, who shall be chairman, the Secretary of the Treasury, and five members to be appointed by the President of the United States. The trustees are to serve without compensation, but are to be allowed their necessary expenses incurred in the discharge of their duties. The board is authorized to accept, receive, and administer gifts and bequests of personal property as trust funds for the benefit of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, and to use such funds in the purchase of equipment for said library, in the preparation and publication of guides, inventories, calendars, and textual reproduction of material in the said library; and in the purchase of historical books related to and other historical material contemporary with and related to the historical material acquired from Mr. Roosevelt.

6. That the immediate custody and control of the said library (except as the same is vested by law in the Director of National Buildings, Parks, and Reservations) and its contents shall be vested in the Archivist of the United States, who shall be authorized to appoint and prescribe the duties of such officials and employees as may be necessary for the execution of the functions vested in him by law in connection with the said library.

7. That the Archivist be authorized to prescribe regulations governing the arrangement, custody, protection, and use of the material deposited in the said library and to make the material available to the public free of charge, except that he may, in his discretion, charge and collect a fee not to exceed 25 cents per person for the privilege of visiting and viewing the exhibit rooms and museum portions of the said library, and to pay the funds so derived into the trust fund above referred to in paragraph 5.

8. That the Archivist be required to make a report to Congress at the beginning of each regular session covering the operations of the said library, including a detailed statement of all accessions, dispositions, receipts, and expenditures for the preceding fiscal year.

9. That the cost incurred by the Archivist in carrying out his duties in connection with the said library be paid out of the appropriations to The National Archives Establishment as other costs and expenses of The National Archives Establishment are paid.

Mr. Chairman, there are plenty of copies of the bill available, and those who desire copies of the report may obtain them also, because they, too, are available. If you will follow the bill and the report you will be able to follow what I am about to say.

Beginning at the bottom of page 23 of the hearings you will find the following analysis of the bill by Prof. Samuel Eliot Morison, of the Harvard College Department of History, and it answers, in my judgment, practically everything that anybody wants to know, because I asked him to make it so plain that it could not be misunderstood.

In answering my letter he said:

The creation of a building where the archives and collections of a President of the United States are brought together for permanent preservation is a matter of far-reaching importance to historians and to American history. American history has suffered from the neglect of papers of past Presidents. Although many Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, Wilson, and other papers have been secured by the Library of Congress, these are but a fragment of what they were when they left the Executive Mansion.

I want to emphasize that, because I want the Members of the House to understand the facts.

President Hoover is the only President of the United States so far who has preserved his archives and collections intact, and his building is at Palo Alto, Calif.

As I assume the committee is already familiar with the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library scheme, I shall write my memo in the form of answers to questions that some of the Members might wish to ask. I am speaking as a professor of American history, author of several books on the subject (list in Who's Who in America), and one who has done research on the papers of several Presidents.

Question. Why aren't President Roosevelt's Presidential papers sent to The National Archives after he retires from the Presidency instead of having a special building put up for them at Hyde Park?

Answer. Because a good deal more than his Presidential papers is involved. In addition to them, which The National Archives could receive, there are several other units in his collections which they aren't authorized to receive and have no place for, such as (a) New York gubernatorial and other New York political papers; (b) private library; (c) naval history manuscripts; (d) naval history prints and ship models; (e) various museum objects. The National Archives can handle only archives, not collections. The Library of Congress can handle only books and manuscript collections, not archives nor objects.

Question. Why shouldn't these be split up, the Presidential papers sent to The National Archives, books to the Congressional Library, others to the Smithsonian, New York Historical Society, etc.?

Answer. Because that would destroy the unity. All these collections and archives overlap more or less, as they have been accumulated by a President of the United States. In that respect they are unique. We have here the records of a Governor of New York, an Assistant Secretary of the Navy during the World War, a President for two terms, and, besides, the historical papers, books, and objects of a great collector. It would be a crime to break up this unique assemblage of historical sources and objects of personal interest, and the only way to keep it together is to erect a special library-archive-museum building to hold it.

Question. Won't history students find Hyde Park inconvenient and hard to get at, compared with Washington?

Answer. Hyde Park is certainly not so handy a place for students as Washington, but the inconvenience of the location will be more than compensated by the value, for future students of the life and administrations of Mr. Roosevelt, in having all the materials together. The sentimental value of having the library at Krum Elbow, Mr. Roosevelt's home, is also to be considered.

Question. Has the President the right to take his files away with him?

Answer. Yes. The White House has been cleared of every President's archives at the expiration of his term, or at his death, if he died in office; the files of his administration have been considered his personal property, to deal with as he or his heirs saw fit. And down to President Hoover's administration, the major part of the Presidential files were destroyed before leaving the White House.

Question. What have former Presidents, in fact, done with their papers?

Answer. Some (for example, U. S. Grant's) were totally destroyed by the ex-President, others (for example, Jefferson's, Madison's), after much editing and dilapidation, have been given or sold by the Presidents' heirs to the Library of Congress; others (for example, Lincoln's and Garfield's) have been kept fairly intact by the family, but not opened to investigators. Only the Hoover, Hayes, and Harding papers are housed in buildings specially constructed.

Question. Does not this removal of papers from Washington hamper the work of the Government departments?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KELLER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Is it not a fact that the Coolidge papers are in the Congressional Library?

Mr. KELLER. They are deposited there, but not as a gift. I will come to that and will cover the whole thing, if the gentleman will permit me.

Does not this removal of papers from Washington hamper the work of the Government departments?

Answer. No; because every incoming letter at the White House that concerns a Government department, or has to be dealt with by it in some way, is passed on to the proper department or official, and only a record or copy of it kept in the White House files. Consequently, anything in the Presidential archives that concerns official or other Government business exists either in original or in duplicate in the appropriate permanent depository at Washington.

Question. Why does the National Archivist come into this picture, when the F. D. Roosevelt papers are not to be in The National Archives?

Answer. It is proposed to place the Roosevelt archives and collections in charge of The National Archives Administration (a) in order that they may have expert care, handling, and classification from the day they leave the White House; (b) provide for access by competent historical students; (c) because The National Archives Administration is the most competent body in the country to handle the collection and the problems connected with them.

Question. Didn't former ex-Presidents take care of their own collections and papers?

Answer. Those who have cared for them with a proper sense of their obligation to posterity have found it a great burden. Mr. Hoover has been the only President with the means to give his collection proper care. He had but one term; Mr. Roosevelt will have had two. In Mr. Hoover's term about 600 pieces of mail came into the White House daily; the daily average has now risen to 6,000. The Rutherford B. Hayes Memorial Library at Fremont, Ohio, contains the equivalent to about 120,000 pages of typewriter paper.

There are already in the F. D. Roosevelt files at the White House between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 pages. In other words, the task of caring for a President's papers has now grown too big for any family to handle.

Question. Are there any other advantages to this plan?

Answer. The library and museum building will be erected by private subscription; Congress will only be asked to provide for maintenance as part of the National Archives Administration.

Respectfully submitted.

SAMUEL ELIOT MORISON.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KELLER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. WADSWORTH. That document is signed by Mr. Morison?

Mr. KELLER. Certainly it is. It will be found on pages 23, 24, and 25 of the hearings.

Mr. WADSWORTH. The hearings before what committee?

Mr. KELLER. Before the House Committee on the Library.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Did Mr. Morison say anything about the Taft papers?

Mr. KELLER. We will find that here in another place.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Morison has already published in some newspaper the fact that the Taft papers have not been cared for. As a matter of fact, they are in the Congressional Library.

Mr. KELLER. We are going to find out about that.

Mr. WADSWORTH. The gentleman said he would say something about the Coolidge papers.

Mr. KELLER. Yes; I did. And I will.

Mr. WADSWORTH. The Coolidge papers are in the Congressional Library.

Mr. KELLER. Yes. That is true.

Mr. WADSWORTH. They are open to inspection by anyone who wants to see them, with the permission of Mrs. Coolidge.

Mr. KELLER. Yes; with the permission of Mrs. Coolidge, but not otherwise. In other words, they are there as a deposit, not as a gift at all.

Mr. WADSWORTH. The gentleman has no doubt that they will remain in the Congressional Library?

Mr. KELLER. There is no certainty at all that they will remain there.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I just wanted to see that the history was complete, because neither the Taft nor the Coolidge papers are mentioned in this document.

Mr. KELLER. I am not through yet. That was simply to answer the question that had been asked generally.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman give me a little information on this?

Mr. KELLER. If the gentleman will ask a question, I will be glad to answer it.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Is it proposed to include in this collection the private correspondence that might be of public interest?

Mr. KELLER. Certainly, everything. Let me read about that to the gentleman.

I do not yield any further, because other gentlemen may wish to ask questions for information—

Mr. HOFFMAN. I was asking for information.

Mr. KELLER. When the gentleman asks a question like that, it is not worthy of an answer.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 additional minutes.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish] made the statement that there is just one thing to consider, and that is whether these Presidential papers shall go into the library as the only place where they ought to go. The gentleman also said that the papers that are in the library have been given to the library. Of course, that is a mistake.

Let me call your attention to the fact that the Government of the United States has paid out for a part of the Washington collection $45,000. We have paid for a part of the Jefferson collection $20,000. We paid out for a part of the Madison collection $55,000. We paid out for a part of the Monroe collection $20,000, for the Jackson collection $18,000, and for a small part of the Tyler collection we paid $1,000. Some payment was made for a part of the Polk collection, although the amount could not be found when I went to investigate it. What we have of the Johnson papers were bought by the Government for $7,500, and some of the Chester A. Arthur papers for $500. The total of this as far as we know at the present time amounts to $167,000 paid out for only a small part, actually, of the Presidential papers of the United States.

The Lincoln papers are so thoroughly scattered that nobody knows what Lincoln wrote in many regards. There have been many things attributed to him which can neither be confirmed nor denied. One hundred and fifty thousand dollars is being asked for a collection that has been gathered together from all parts of this country over a number of years. I believe a bill was presented last year asking that amount for the known remainder of the Lincolniana.

It seems to me that when the gentleman refers to all these documents being given that is presented without cost, he ought to understand when we have already paid out $167,000, and when we are asked to pay $150,000 for some additional part of the Lincoln papers, that he ought not to make a statement like that. It is not true, and it is not only not true, it is entirely wrong.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KELLER. I yield for a question.

Mr. REES of Kansas. The gentleman has just called attention to the amount of money that has been expended for the papers of former Presidents.

Mr. KELLER. Yes.

Mr. REES of Kansas. I do not find anything in this report about it, and I may not have heard all the discussion, but can the gentleman estimate, approximately, what the expense of taking care of these papers may be to the United States Government? Are there any figures of record or do the hearings give us any information on that question?

Mr. KELLER. The question came up and there was no estimate before the committee that I know of.

Mr. REES of Kansas. I just wanted to know whether there was such an estimate.

Mr. KELLER. However, the question was discussed by members of the committee at different times both in the committee and out of it, as far as that is concerned. I should like to call attention to the fact that there is a provision in the bill that a fee of 25 cents is to be charged for admission to the grounds and to this museum, and so forth, and the proceeds from this fee are expected to cover largely the entire running expense. Also, if the gentleman will read the bill—and it is in the hearings, too, because I printed therein the bill and the incorporation of the nonprofit corporation to take charge of this library, as well as the bylaws of that corporation—you will find that all these facts are printed there. If you want to go into that question carefully, you will find that proper provision is made for receipt of other gifts that may be used for this very purpose. It is the belief of those who have looked into it best that it will pay its own way without making any charge for admission. That it will largely do so I myself have little, if any, doubt.

On the other hand, I call your attention to the fact that the question of cost of upkeep is brought in. With respect to all Presidential papers, whether they are simply deposited with the Government or whether they are owned by the Government through gift or purchase, the time of the employees of the Library of Congress is given to them. It is a part of the business of these employees to attend to the Taft papers, for instance, that can be seen only on permission of the Taft family. The same thing is true of the Coolidge papers. The same cost of personnel applies to the Lincoln papers, which cannot be seen at all until 1947. Nevertheless, we pay for the housing of those papers that do not belong to us. We pay for the cataloging of them. We pay for the protection of them, even when they do not belong to us. Since we are doing that, it is difficult for me to understand why anyone could rightfully object to paying the same character of expense in relation to an entire historic collection such as this is.

The Franklin D. Roosevelt gift to the American people, however, includes not only the Presidential papers but books, correspondence, papers, pamphlets, works of art, models, pictures, photographs, plats, maps, and other similar material. A library of 15,000 or more volumes of rare books, many of them autographed by the authors and extremely valuable, is a part of this. The official papers, incoming correspondence, copies of replies, the brief memoranda—hand-written bits of only a sentence or two, but important in filling in the gaps in correspondence—stenographic records of telephone conversations, naval pictures, ship's models, and mementos of the Roosevelt era are all included.

This will give a comprehensive and complete history of this important period of history of America.

I want once more to call attention to the fact that a great proportion of the various Presidential papers are not in the Library of Congress.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KELLER. I yield.

Mr. REES of Kansas. And they will all be somewhere else, and not here in Washington, under the provisions of this bill.

Mr. KELLER. Oh, yes; certainly. I am just answering the contention of the gentleman from New York, and let me call your attention to the fact that only a part of the Washington papers are here, although a more nearly complete collection of his papers than any other are in the Congressional Library. Of the Jefferson papers, we have probably one-third of them. We paid $20,000 for the part that was supposed to be the public papers, and the others went to the historic societies of Boston, and when they came to look them over they found many of the papers here are private papers, while many of those up at Boston are actually public papers. As to Jackson, there are some groups of Jackson papers all over the United States. Taylor only had a small part here in the Library of Congress.

As to Fillmore, practically none of his papers are here, nearly all being in the Buffalo Historical Society. The Buchanan papers are at Philadelphia. The Hayes Memorial at Fremont, Ohio, has the papers of Mr. Hayes. The Memorial at Marion has the papers of President Harding. I recall that my friend the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH] said these papers were at Squedunk and Podunk. I am going to report him to the citizens of Marion and Fremont and let him tell them which is Squedunk and which is Podunk.

Mr. Hoover's papers are all, I understand, at Palo Alto, and he has a perfect right to have them there.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH] was just about as correct in his statement that all of these papers had been given to the Library of Congress as he was in nearly everything else he said, and not more so.

I also want to call attention to the fact that under the customs, at least, and under the law so far as we have enacted it, the papers do belong to the President and he has a perfect right to dispose of them to suit himself. But this is an attempt on the part of President Roosevelt to make it a custom in this country to always have the Presidents hereafter keep their papers intact for historic purposes, and that certainly ought to be done. Any man who has indulged in research along this line knows the importance of the statement I am here making. Every man who engages in an investigation of Presidential papers will find out how scattered and broken these collections are, how broken the historic thread is, and how difficult to pick up again. There is no perfect collection of the papers of any single President in the Library of Congress, not a solitary one.

I want to call attention to what my friend the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN] referred to. It was my very great pleasure and honor to introduce the bill, to hold hearings on it, and to sponsor through the House the bill that brought into existence the great National Gallery of Art, the gift of a great American. I also wish to call your attention to the fact that not a single, solitary vote was cast against that and not a single, solitary word said against the man who gave that great collection. In doing that he did honor to himself and to his country. I am proud of the fact it was my privilege to do that, just as I am proud today to bring in this new idea, this very important idea of making available always hereafter to historians of our country the entire papers of every President who shall succeed Mr. Roosevelt. He appreciates as no other President has the great importance of historic continuity through official documents. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 6 minutes to the junior member of the Committee on the Library, the gentleman from New York [Mr. ROCKEFELLER].

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. Chairman, when I say I do not look with favor upon the proposals contained in this resolution, I do not speak with any personal or political bias, and any words I may utter are not to be interpreted to mean in any sense that I impugn the motives which may have prompted the sponsors of this resolution. As I understand it, generally and briefly, it is proposed to have erected not in the village of Hyde Park, but at some distance from it, at a point to be determined by the President, a building, or perhaps buildings in which are to be housed, preserved, and displayed such historic material as the President may donate.

Title I, section 1, subdivision (b) of the resolution states that the choice of materials shall include books, correspondence, papers, pamphlets, works of art, models, pictures, photographs, plats, maps, and other similar material, covering, I think we will all agree, quite a bit of territory. To properly round out the history of the United States I agree that it may be necessary or at least highly desirable to preserve and make available to those who wish to study them the important letters, papers, and other writings or printed documents of all of our Presidents and some of our high officials, but I do believe, and I believe it very strongly, that the material should be confined wholly to those documents, that have a direct bearing on our governmental affairs, or which will be of historic value now or as time advances. Although this resolution would seem to include them, I do not put in my category promiscuous works of art, models, pictures, photographs, maps, plats, and other miscellaneous subjects. I am firmly convinced that the cost of collecting, housing, and preserving and displaying unrelated exhibits of that nature would far exceed their true value, to either present or future generations. That value to my mind is not determined solely by the preservation and display of exhibits of that nature. I think the real test of their value is in the fact that they can and will be made easily accessible and available to those who care to inspect and examine them.

I am somewhat familiar with the country in the neighborhood of Hyde Park, perhaps more so than most of you. That estate is situated on the Hudson River, approximately 75 miles from the city of New York and about the same distance from Albany. Of course if one owns his own conveyance, he may come and go as he pleases and upon his own time, but if not, he will be compelled to avail himself of such autobus service or railroad service as is available. It is true that autobuses pass the entrance to the President's estate, but that service is very infrequent, and it may not be possible to induce the bus driver to deposit a passenger at any other place than the entrance to that estate, on the highway, in which case it would then be necessary for one to cover the rest of the journey on foot. Moreover, that meager bus service is very likely to be reduced within the near future for the reason that there is now under construction and will soon be completed another and better highway which is much farther from the present road and from the President's estate, and it is very likely that these buses will be rerouted as soon as the road is completed, over that better road.

As to railroad facilities, there is a station called Hyde Park, which is at least a mile or two from the entrance to the President's estate. Today the train service is very infrequent to that station. In fact, the timetable under which trains are operated shows that between 9 o'clock and 5 o'clock in the afternoon but one train out of New York City is scheduled to stop at that station on week days, with the exception of Saturday, when an extra train stops at 3:16 in the afternoon. That same timetable shows also that between those hours but one train out of Albany is scheduled to stop at this station on week days. Anyone alighting from a train at that station would find it exceedingly difficult, if not quite impossible, to find a conveyance which would carry him over the rest of the trip, and it would, therefore, be necessary for him to cover that distance on foot.

The place nearest the President's estate where a traveler may procure food and lodging is in the comparatively small and unincorporated hamlet of Hyde Park, which is from 1 to 2 miles distant. I have passed through that hamlet many times, and to all appearances only those living accommodations are provided that will suffice the needs of those who reside in or near there. Travelers in any number would find it difficult to procure suitable meals and overnight accommodations.

Although one can at best but hazard a guess as to the number who may visit the buildings or of whom that number will be comprised, it is very likely that in the end visitors will not run into large numbers and will comprise very largely, if not wholly, students and writers of history and those engaged in research work of such a nature as to make inspection and examinations of the exhibits necessary. The inconvenience and expense of these visits may make it impossible for those people to avail themselves of such advantages as the library and museum may offer, therefore the principal purpose which might justify such an undertaking would be defeated.

Should the precedent be established, as this resolution will do, of permitting the important papers and writings of our Presidents to be housed and preserved at or near their homes, such a precedent would be highly undesirable and impractical. Under such a plan it would be necessary for those who may wish to examine and study the documents to travel from the Atlantic to the Pacific and to visit many intermediate places. The necessary expenses of those trips would undoubtedly be more than the average traveler could bear.

Today most of the important writings of many of our Presidents are housed, preserved, and made available for inspection and examination in the Library of Congress in the city of Washington. To that Library anyone interested may now go, without the payment of an admission fee, and examine those writings under most favorable conditions and with courteous and efficient service. That custom, in my judgment, should be continued, and any departure from it would be to the detriment of the work of those who are interested and would reduce materially the real value of those records. From a reading of the bill it might be inferred that the revenues from admission fees and other sources will be sufficient to pay all the expenses necessary to the maintenance of the museum, and that therefore the Federal Government will not be required to contribute any money toward its upkeep. My experiences with undertakings of this nature cause me to doubt very seriously that any such happy condition will obtain. I cannot dispel from my mind the thought that such an undertaking as is proposed by this resolution will, when all is said and done, require substantial appropriations out of the Federal Treasury. In these days of mounting deficits and debts it would be not only unwise but highly improper to impose this added burden upon the taxpayers. I doubt very seriously the propriety of adopting this resolution or of accepting the offers made thereunder, especially at this time.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, in today's issue of the Washington Daily News there appears a short editorial under the caption "Small Fry Politics," of which I shall read the first paragraph:

Certain Republican Members of Congress, led by Representative "HAM" FISH, of New York, are engaged in an almost incredibly petty attempt to defeat the bill to establish a Franklin Roosevelt Library at Hyde Park.

That political issue has been drawn in a number of the addresses that have been made on the floor, and I shall address myself to it very briefly. When this bill was on the floor the first time, I voted against it. I found no great comfort in that vote, largely because it is so easy to misconstrue and interpret a vote like that on the ground that it has been inspired by narrow partisan politics.

I would support the bill that is before the House today if it told the whole story, but I am afraid that the issue has been confused, and that the issue of politics, if there be one, is one of those self-generated things over which we have no control and with which we on this side of the aisle have exactly nothing to do. All we have to do is to go back and examine the whole story.

It was in March of 1938 that the newspapers announced that a syndicate had purchased the Presidential papers and that they were to be put on the market at $15.

There followed a swelling crescendo of criticism. It came from all sections of the country. We had nothing to do with it. We did not offer the papers to the public. We did not edit the versatile newspapers in the country that took exception to the propriety of the thing. After some 3 or 4 weeks there came from the White House a proposal to the effect that none of the royalties should enhance the fortunes of the present incumbent of the White House and that they were going to be devoted, and I use contemporary language, "to a worthy public purpose." On the heels of that statement came the proposal to establish a library at Hyde Park.

Now the bill is before us again to effectuate that purpose, to give the United States of America and the people thereof a remaining interest, subject to a life estate, in 12 acres until such time as it shall become complete. The costs are to be met by appropriations out of the Federal Treasury. There is no hint of royalties there. It is to be maintained by the Park Service, or the Commissioner of Buildings, under the Reorganization Act.

There is no hint of the expenditure of royalties there. There is a provision in the bill to charge a museum or exhibit fee that would rebut almost any contention that royalties are to be used. The construction is to be undertaken by a corporation in New York, ostensibly by private donations and otherwise, to take care of the building. There is no hint in the bill under the authority of the trustees that, in the bequests or gifts which they are to administer, any royalties are to be expended.

So what about the "worthy public purpose" of which the public in this country was given assurance, when there was a great tide of criticism because of the doubtful propriety of the incumbent of the White House selling these papers to a syndicate to be sold everywhere in the United States of America? We did not make the issue. Now, it would appear that some people are going to ask us to resolve it as a political issue, and I will say to you frankly that I am ready to do so unless they put something in the bill to require the assurance that was given by somebody at the other end of the Avenue in March of last year, when this whole project was inspired to lift the curse of criticism.

Now, here is a significant thing. They talk about politics. First of all, a committee of 60, a so-called ways and means committee, was organized in order to provide the money for construction. Who is the chairman of that committee? Mr. Frank Walker, and it is so stated in the report that goes with this bill. The language on page 3 of the report is:

There was organized under the chairmanship of Hon. Frank C. Walker a group of businessmen and other public-spirited citizens to help in raising funds for the construction of a library building at private rather than at public expense.

An examination of the reported activities of that committee is very interesting.

Let us see what happened out in the State of Colorado. I am quoting from a news dispatch from the Denver Post of July 4, 1939. The committee assigned a quota of $2,000 to the State of Colorado as its share toward the construction of a building at Hyde Park. The job was entrusted to Mr. Thomas Duke, who is district administrator of the Bituminous Coal Act in Denver. Mr. Duke ostensibly is going to address himself to the job, and—

It is understood that all officeholders under the New Deal will be invited to contribute.

I am quoting from the dispatch.

Political? Partisan? Did we raise it? Are we using the Democratic national committeemen in order to raise the money? What would be the answer from that side with respect to that statement?

Another State, the State of Montana, has been given a quota, I understand, of $2,000 to raise. I quote from this dispatch:

Mr. O. S. Worden, of Great Falls, Mont., who represents Walker's own State on the Democratic national committee, is reported to have threatened to resign when the $2,000 assessment was levied on Montana for the Roosevelt Library.

Now, Mr. Worden's own remarks, in quotations:

"This is the last straw," he was quoted by friends here as declaring. "It is bad enough to meet repeated demands for the Democratic National Committee, but when it comes to soliciting money for the Roosevelt Memorial I am ready to quit."

But when they undertake to fasten upon us the allegation that we are playing politics, I wonder what answer can be made to the fact that two Democratic national committeemen are here quoted as saying that their States received quotas that must be raised and that they are getting tired of being used for that kind of purpose?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 additional minutes to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Now we are called upon to appropriate out of the Federal Treasury under this bill for the costs incurred by the Archivist. We are called upon to appropriate out of the Federal Treasury for the expenses of the Board of Trustees. We are called upon to appropriate out of the Federal Treasury for the clerical help to the Board of Trustees. We are called upon to appropriate from the Federal Treasury, the people's money, for the maintenance, the care, and the upkeep of this memorial. It involves an overall expenditure of $300,000 of public funds annually.

I have no objection. I am ready to vote for it, I will say to my friend the majority leader—I will give him a vote this afternoon if he will write into this bill a provision which carries out the solemn assurance that went out from the White House early in 1938 that the royalties from the sale of the President's papers will be devoted to a worthy public purpose which is now effectuated in the terms of the bill. I say to any of them that if they will write that into the bill and keep faith with the American people, I will give them a vote. [Applause.]

My attitude is not inspired by dislike or ill will. I entertain nothing but the kindest feeling toward the President. However, since the partisan issue was injected into the debate and it was made to appear that the attitude of the Republicans was predicated upon political bias and blind partisanship, it was only fair and proper to relate the whole story and show how this proposal came about and what assurance was given the country with respect to its operation and maintenance.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. JOHNS].

Mr. JOHNS. Mr. Chairman, I think no one since I have been here in the House has ever heard me say an unkind word against President Roosevelt. I may disagree with some of his policies, but when it comes to a matter of preserving his papers for future generations, that is a different question. I join the gentleman from Illinois, who just preceded me, in saying that if this bill can be changed so that this building will be built here in the city of Washington where the people of the United States will get the benefit of it, then I will vote for the bill. This may be selfish on my part, but I feel that the place for this building is here in Washington where people who come by the thousands each year will have the opportunity of viewing these books and papers, and seeing what the present President of the United States has said and done. They cannot do this in Hyde Park.

It may be selfishness on the part of the President to want it in Hyde Park, but if he does, then he should erect a building of his own there and put his papers in it, let people pay for the privilege of getting in and seeing them and reading them. If, however, we are going to expend the money of the United States Government for the erection of this building and its maintenance, the place for that building is here in Washington where it will do the people of the country some good. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin yields back 1 minute.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD].

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, I wish to direct my remarks to the language on the bottom of page 7 of the bill, which reads:

Provided, That the Archivist is authorized to charge and collect, under regulations prescribed by him, a fee not in excess of 25 cents per person for the privilege of visiting and viewing the exhibit rooms or museum portion of the said library.

Mr. Chairman, some few days ago I introduced in the House a resolution calling for the investigation of a new program which has been instituted by the Secretary of the Interior under which they are now beginning to charge entrance fees to public buildings and exhibits which have heretofore been open to the public without charge, and been visited by tens of thousands of people. It seems to me it approaches the stage of disgrace for us in this day and age to extract from high school boys and girls who come to Washington from our various school districts, dimes, and quarters, and 50-cent pieces in order to see these great national shrines. I can hardly comprehend that in this day and age when we vote money so recklessly we would permit the imposition on the traveling public of such charges in this manner and as set forth in this bill. I hope before the bill is voted upon that the 25-cent charge provided for in the language I have quoted will be stricken out; and that when we read the bill under the 5-minute rule the Committee will also eliminate all of section 303, which provides for an additional 25 cents per person for the privilege of visiting and viewing the property. This 50-cent charge is unreasonable and should never be imposed upon our visiting and traveling public.

I also trust that in the days to come we can prevail upon the Secretary of the Interior to remove the 10- and 25-cent charge which I understand has been imposed as an entrance fee to some of the shrines in Washington. The American public is a traveling public; and when a father and mother scrape enough funds together to bring their family 500 or more miles to see these things, they dislike to be informed upon their arrival that the family cannot see them without having to pay $1.50, or $2 for the crowd.

I shall not support the pending bill for numerous reasons unnecessary for me to state at this time. The place for the library is here in Washington where the earnest students of our country come for the purpose of consulting State records. I have not heard of hotel facilities or medium-priced eating places or living facilities near the Hyde Park home and project so that a student could go and remain there for research. Even though the student did go there he would not have available to him all the collateral records and documents he would find in Washington. So, from the purely economic standpoint I would not support this bill or a similar bill for any President, be he Republican, Democrat, or of some other political complexion. The place for these records is here in Washington. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the former distinguished chairman of the Committee on the Library, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. LUCE].

Mr. LUCE. Mr. Chairman, in the course of my service here I cannot recall an address meant to accomplish an end that was so adequate, thorough, and complete in presenting the reasons why that end should not be accomplished as the remarks of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN], a man whom we greatly esteem and admire. This time, however, he laid before the Committee the overpowering reason why this bill should not pass. This reason is to be found in his address from first to last. His argument was one of personality.

Personality is exactly the reason, and the overpowering reason for the precedent and the practice of society in not commemorating a man while he is living. The gentleman from Texas laid before the House a list of the Presidents and extolled all of them. I will join with him in his praise of the Presidents; but he neglected to tell the House that of the 30 Presidents we have had, not one of them, so far as I know, ever hinted any wish for commemoration while he was alive. Thirty Presidents, with the same pride in their work, the same satisfaction in their achievements, the same belief that they were useful to their fellow men, have not sought to be commemorated while they were alive. These Presidents, one after the other, have left records of service and achievement which of themselves warrant their praise. These Presidents have had enemies, as any President would have. These Presidents have adhered to ideals that have aroused wide controversy, yet none of them have sought to inject that controversy into a question of commemoration while living.

We do not know what the future may say about our great men until years have passed, until we get a perspective, until we can make comparisons; so very wisely men from time immemorial have refrained from this practice of commemoration during life. I venture to say that no man in this Chamber, either on the Democratic side or on the Republican side, will begrudge due honor to the present President of the United States after he has finished his term on this globe. It is not impossible and it is to be hoped that no Republican here approaches the question with any intent of aspersion on the President now. I do say that the paramount question is, Should there be commemoration during life?

There are other questions. There is the fact that this program contemplates the least use of the papers. It is made difficult and costly to have access to them and it deviates from what is the desire of the Congress that all the records of all our Presidents shall be easily accessible to students.

Mr. KELLER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LUCE. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. KELLER. In what year did Washington die, does the gentleman remember?

Mr. LUCE. In 1799, I think.

Mr. KELLER. When did the Commonwealth of Virginia erect the Washington statue in Virginia?

Mr. LUCE. I was not present on that occasion.

Mr. KELLER. It does a terrible thing to the gentleman's comment, because that was done in 1784. Many other monuments were built to Washington while he was still alive.

Mr. LUCE. Was any monument to him erected by appropriation or legislation by the Congress while he was alive?

Mr. KELLER. The question involved in the gentleman's argument, and in the argument of several other gentlemen, is that no monuments have ever been built by acts of Congress to men while they were living. I have called his attention to the fact that the State of Virginia erected a memorial to George Washington in 1784, 15 years before Washington's death. The answer to the contention concerning acts of Congress is contained in the erection of the bust of Theodore Roosevelt by legislative act. In 1886 a resolution passed the Senate providing for the placing of busts of the Vice Presidents in the vacant niches of the Senate Chamber from time to time. Most of those busts were placed while the Vice Presidents were still living. Incidentally, may I say we ought to have learned enough by now to paint the portraits of our Speakers while in office, which we have not done until recently.

Mr. DONDERO. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LUCE. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DONDERO. Did Washington ask the Congress of the United States that his statue be erected in Virginia?

Mr. LUCE. The gentleman from Illinois can answer that question.

Mr. KELLER. I did not hear it.

Mr. DONDERO. Did Washington or any other President ever ask the Congress to appropriate money to erect a statue?

Mr. KELLER. This is not a monument in that sense. The gentleman from Massachusetts, as well informed as he is, did not know that Washington had a number of monuments built to him while he was still living. These gentlemen are falling under the illusion, very widely spread in this country, that monuments and memorials are erected only to men after they are dead. There are so many exceptions to this idea that it is no longer accepted as the rule.

But the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library is not a memorial to Mr. Roosevelt. It is a depository for the great gift that he is making to the American people, just as the fine gallery of art is not a memorial to Mr. Mellon, but a depository to his great gift to the American people. One is giving of the wealth of his intense public life, and the other of his great wealth. The whole question seems to be a criticism of recognizing a man until he is dead and gone.

Mr. DONDERO. Were any monuments built at the request of the Presidents themselves?

Mr. KELLER. I do not know that Washington asked the Congress to "Please erect a monument." But Washington did sit, over a long period of time for the great sculptor, Houdon, and did entertain him at Mount Vernon while the mask was being modeled. Washington was certainly a willing partner to the making of that statute, and rightly so.

Mr. DONDERO. Did any President request a monument to be erected on his private estate?

Mr. KELLER. They did erect this Houdon statue down in Richmond.

Mr. WOODRUFF of Michigan. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LUCE. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. WOODRUFF of Michigan. The gentleman from Illinois has mentioned the fact that busts have been made of the Vice Presidents. I am quite sure the gentleman from Illinois will not make the statement that the Senate took the action necessary to bring about the making of those busts at the express desire or wish of the Vice President himself.

Mr. KELLER. Maybe not; but in 1886 there was a resolution passed by the Senate for that purpose.

Mr. WOODRUFF of Michigan. While the gentleman is on that question, may I suggest to him that he show the House or the committee just where and when the Vice President involved requested that action?

Mr. KELLER. The Senate of the United States did it.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LUCE. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Would the gentleman be willing to vote for a bill that would create a bust of the President and put it up here?

Mr. LUCE. Does the gentleman from Illinois desire to answer the question?

Mr. KELLER. I would like to have the question again.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. I inquired of the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts whether he would be willing to now vote for an appropriation to provide a bust of the President and put it up here in the Capitol.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. REES].

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, in my opinion we are giving consideration this afternoon to a proposition that is unprecedented and at this time unnecessary. It is the first time in the history of this country that a President, while living and holding office, has requested the Congress of the United States to appropriate money from the Treasury to provide, as I see it, a memorial on his behalf.

I appreciate what the majority floor leader had to say on behalf of our President, and am not here to take issue with the distinguished gentleman. I regret that the floor leader of the House has seen fit to decide for us how this measure is going to be passed and that it will be agreed to along party lines. I am interested, however, in the attention which is being paid to this measure. To the left of me I think there are probably more than half of the Republican Members on the floor, and to the right I think I can count about 20 or 22 Members; yet when the roll is called in an hour from now the Democratic Members to my right will file down and cast their votes in favor of this measure.

It just seems to me that in all fairness, if the distinguished President of the United States who is now in office—and according to reports we have, he does not expect to retire for some time—wants to make sure that Congress will provide a memorial to him—someone has said it was not a memorial, but that is what it is—to be located in the State of New York, if he really wants to be magnanimous in a matter of this kind, he should be glad to turn over whatever there may be among his papers that are of importance to this Government of ours and let them be placed in the Library of Congress or The Archives Building, so recently completed at a cost of millions of dollars.

Strange as it may seem, the bill provides that the man in charge of the archives is the one who is to look after this collection of correspondence away over here in the State of New York. This is a precedent, of course, but we have had a good many precedents during this administration. This is an additional one—and that may not be so important. But it just seems to me that it is a pretty poor time to ask this Congress to agree to underwrite, if you please, a statement that it will provide whatever funds may be required to establish this great memorial and then keep it going from now to time immemorial. We have not been given any estimate as to the expense of it.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES of Kansas. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. GIFFORD. Perhaps the Congressional Library wants only public papers. Perhaps they would not want to house his models and his paper dolls.

Mr. REES of Kansas. I assume those in charge of the Library could certainly agree with those in charge of The Archives as to what papers would really be of interest to the people of the country.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 additional minutes to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. REES of Kansas. I do appreciate the fine speeches which have been made on behalf of this legislation in the name of loyalty to a great man. But let us get down to some of the facts in the case. This is the first time, so far as I can find out, that Congress has ever been asked to appropriate money to provide a shrine or memorial in the name of a President—to be established outside the city of Washington. If these papers and documents that have been described are valuable—and I will concede that many of them are valuable—then why not house them, at very little additional expense to the Government, in the buildings here in Washington? In the Library of Congress, if you please, where documents of other Presidents are housed and where the great Constitution and the Declaration of Independence are preserved and displayed. At the expense of millions of dollars, our Government has provided these buildings right here in the Capital City for the purpose, among other things, of housing documents of this nature. Here they are accessible to students and others who care to examine them.

Under this bill it is proposed that the President shall give 12 acres of ground in an inaccessible place in the State of New York, where the Government or somebody is to provide a building and guarantee the maintenance of such building until time immemorial. Except, and provided, however, that a fee of 25 cents is to be charged those who may want to go down to Hyde Park, N. Y., to examine these papers.

And so this afternoon it seems to me unreasonable and inconsistent that this Congress—even before the present term of the President has expired—should agree to take on an obligation of hundreds of thousands of dollars to establish a memorial in the name of our President. I have called attention to the fact that there is no limitation in this bill as to what it will cost or how much will be required to maintain it. An amendment will be offered to limit the maintenance expense to $12,000 per year. That is $1,000 per month. I predict that this House will vote that amendment down by a big majority.

Members of Congress, this is a critical time in our economic history. The taxpayers of our country are being plunged deeper and deeper into debt. Thousands and millions of our people do not have even the necessities of life. We are not justified in underwriting an obligation that will cost these taxpayers some hundreds of thousands of dollars when, in my judgment, it is absolutely uncalled for and unnecessary.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES of Kansas. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. CURTIS. Was it not Cato who said, "I would rather have coming generations ask, 'Why is there not a monument to Cato?' than 'Why is there one?'"

Mr. REES of Kansas. Something has been said about being loyal to the President of the United States. We all want to be loyal to the President, but I do not believe this is a question of loyalty at all. It is a question of whether or not the United States Government is going to start out here, while the President is in office, and agree to spend some hundreds of thousands of dollars in the State of New York to perpetuate the name of the President and establish a memorial for him in place of putting it in the Capital City, where folks can view it if they really care anything about it.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES of Kansas. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. KNUTSON. Does the gentleman believe there is any danger of anyone's ever forgetting Roosevelt?

Mr. REES of Kansas. The gentleman can answer his own question. I am saying that this is a pretty poor time to ask the taxpayers of this country to provide funds for a memorial of this kind. If the President really wants this library, if he is so generous in this matter, why does he not go ahead and establish his shrine himself, and establish it right here in the city of Washington, where we can all have a chance to get the benefit of this great collection?

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES of Kansas. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. GIFFORD. Why can we not establish it where a self-respecting Republican can go?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES of Kansas. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I am very much interested in the gentleman's description of having a lot of men hired to look over these papers and keep them intact in years to come. I wonder if anybody has taken the precaution to have somebody look over the papers and see if they can find any of real worth there?

Mr. REES of Kansas. I would not care to answer that question. Let me say again, let these papers be housed in Government buildings in this great Capital City of Washington, so they may be easily accessible to the public, free of charge. If the President is anxious that the documents be preserved for the benefit of those who are to come after him, then let them be placed in the repositories that have already been established for that purpose.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHORT].

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, it is a rather unpleasant task any Republican has to perform here today in opposing this proposition, because we realize in advance that we will be charged with playing petty politics. For inexplicable reasons certain newspapers will heap opprobrium upon our heads. Because of our traditional and our inherent or innate respect for the Presidency of the United States, any American citizen is loath or reluctant to criticize any occupant of the White House, whoever he may happen to be. This particular measure, however, is a most unusual and extraordinary one, violating all customs, traditions, and precedents of days gone by. That is, perhaps, because the present occupant of the White House will go down in history if for nothing else as the great precedent-breaker. That is the reason he has been campaigning for a third term ever since his inauguration for a first term.

Now we find an occupant of the White House not only in his lifetime but even before he has finished his term of office sanctioning if not asking the Congress of the United States to build a memorial to his memory. Mr. Chairman, I do not believe in building memorials to live men, neither does any other Member of this body honestly believe in it. The only argument that has been advanced here today for the passage of this measure has been an appeal to partisan prejudice. Why the President is eager to build a memorial to himself before he goes out of office I cannot understand, unless he has been suddenly seized with an inner conviction or his intuition tells him that he is soon to experience a political demise.

I am sure that the great men of the past—even Homer through Aristides and Aeschylus and others of the ancient Greeks—were never concerned as to whether or not their writings would be saved for posterity. I am sure that Horace and Ovid and Cicero were never anxious to have a memorial erected to house their writings before they died. I cannot believe that Dante and Rousseau and Voltaire were greatly worried as to what the future might brand them. Not even immortal Shakespeare or Milton or Wordsworth would have the unmitigated gall and brazen effrontery to ask that a monument be erected to them to house their precious pearls of wisdom before their death.

I remember that the greatest teacher of all time, a lowly carpenter from Nazareth, never left any libraries. He never wrote but once, with his finger in the sand, but His philosophy has not been lost and His teachings have not been forgotten. Mr. Chairman, that which is worth remembering never dies. But, of course, the Great Teacher possessed the mark of all true greatness—namely, humility and modesty. Mr. Roosevelt might be charged with many high crimes and misdemeanors, but there is certainly one charge that neither friend nor foe can ever launch against him, and that is that he possesses either modesty or humility.

Why the President of the United States insists on having his voluminous writings housed at his country estate in Hyde Park, far removed from the National Capital, will baffle the imagination of any fair-minded and honest man. Is he afraid to have his precious, immortal documents housed in the Library of Congress, where the Constitution of the United States and the Declaration of Independence are framed and enshrined? Is he fearful that by placing his writings in either the Congressional Library or The Archives Building down on Constitution Avenue that they might be polluted or contaminated by the Farewell Address of the Father of our Country, by the Gettysburg Address of Abraham Lincoln, and by the immortal writings of Thomas Jefferson, or are these writings of the President which he sold a year and a half ago for huge sums, reputedly receiving $100,000 or $150,000—and remember they were press conferences as well as addresses, which he had forbidden newspapermen to report, yet he sold not only his own property, but their property, their questions as well as his answers for a colossal, stupendous sum which his secretary, Stephen Early, said would some day be handed over to a great public cause, but there is not one line or one word in this joint resolution turning over any of the money received by Mr. Roosevelt for the five large volumes that were published and on which he received enormous royalties—are these writings of Mr. Roosevelt so far superior to all others that they deserve a place all their own? This library he insists be erected on his own home estate, and any improvement to that estate or increase in value to it caused by the construction of a building or buildings on 12 acres, more or less—that is how definite and certain and clear it is—erected by the public's money and maintained and kept by the taxpayers' funds out of the United States Treasury, shall not be subject to taxation during the existence of any life estate reserved in the property. The President, after insisting that the library be on his own estate, erected by public funds, maintained out of the Federal Treasury, is going to charge the poor, forgotten man in this country "two bits" to enter the grounds and then "two bits" more to get into the museum where the library is housed. [Laughter.]

Oh, this friend of the "forgotten man"! You know, this Roosevelt family is a most unusual family. They are lovers of the downtrodden and the underprivileged, but they are always sure that none of the kids marry any of that kind. [Laughter.]

I submit, in all fairness, that there has never been such a public display of colossal conceit or such an unblushing parade of swashbuckling egotism as is contained in this measure. Only an egocentric megalomaniac would have the nerve to ask for such a measure, and yet it is going to be crammed down our throats this afternoon by an appeal to blind partisan prejudice. Only posterity and only time can properly evaluate the greatness of any man. I have no objection whatever to Mr. Roosevelt's papers being conserved. Certainly I do not want his campaign speeches of 1932 destroyed. They are his best utterances. I do not know who wrote them.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. KELLER] says, "Well, the United States Government is going to vote funds to keep up the new National Gallery of Art." I want to say there is no analogy or parallel whatever between the National Gallery of Art and this proposed public library to be established at Hyde Park. Why? Because the National Gallery was given outright by a former Secretary of the Treasury who was so modest that he did not want it even named after him. It is not the Mellon Gallery of Art; it is the National Gallery of Art; and he donated an art collection worth anywhere from $40,000,000 to $50,000,000, and he left $10,000,000 more to erect the building, and, I understand, a certain sum to be used as an endowment for future acquisitions, and it is being built after he is dead and gone.

Mr. Roosevelt will not have to worry about having a monument erected to his memory. The monumental public debt that is heaped upon the backs of the American taxpayers, through this orgy of New Deal spending, will painfully remind generations to come of Franklin I, and, God let us hope, the last. [Laughter.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes.

Mr. SHORT. In all seriousness, even if you favor the construction of this public library at Hyde Park, instead of placing Mr. Roosevelt's writings along with our other great statesmen—and you see I am generous enough to include him with them—in the Library of Congress and The Archives Building, I believe that no man here today will insist that this is a vitally urgent and necessary thing at this particular moment.

However desirable the proposition may be, it is not indispensable at this critical period in our history, when the American taxpayers are staggering under an unbearable burden of public debt. I pause to remind you gentlemen that in the past 6 years under the unprecedented New Deal spending, our public debt has been doubled. It is $45,000,000,000 today, and the interest on that debt is over a billion dollars a year—17 cents out of every Federal tax dollar going to pay the interest on the public debt. Forty-five billion dollars is a sum that is incomprehensible and it staggers the imagination. If we started paying $500,000,000 a year on our national debt, it would take 5 generations, or 90 years, to pay off that debt. If we started paying off $500,000,000 of our national debt every year, it would take 3 generations, or 60 years, to reduce the debt to the point where it was when Mr. Roosevelt took over the reins of Government. With this crushing debt to carry, with 12,000,000 men out of work, with labor strife everywhere, we have wasted a whole day debating the proposal to erect a shrine to the man who is responsible for these deplorable conditions. And how in the name of God, Representatives of the American people, Democrats and Republicans alike, can give their stamp of approval to such an unprecedented and unnecessary proposal as this, which violates all tradition and history, to satisfy the inordinate vanity of one individual, I leave for future generations to determine. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has expired.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. COFFEE].

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. Mr. Chairman, we all like the able, distinguished, and very eloquent gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHORT]. The gentleman from Missouri is humorous. Sometimes he tells stories designed to be witty and if we cannot laugh at the joke of the age, we can often laugh at the age of the joke. The type of story in which the gentleman usually indulges is calculated to arouse all of us to laughter and appeal to our risibilities, but the eloquence to which he has given expression this afternoon is a disgrace to the House of Representatives. His attack upon one of the great men that American history has produced is decidedly disgraceful and out of place. It comes with poor taste from the gentleman of Missouri. Whatever faults may be charged to the President of the United States, no one can properly attribute to him the foibles and peccadilloes of his own children, if there be such. The charge that the children of the President have married into the families of the wealthy and not into the families of the common people of the United States, whether true or false, and certainly the blame, if there be any blame, should not be laid at the feet of the President of the United States.

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me right there?

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. Yes.

Mr. SIROVICH. I call the attention of the gentleman to one irresponsible statement made by the previous speaker to this effect: A month ago while I was sick I was visited by Elliott Roosevelt, one of the sons of the President. He told me that when the President was elected he, Elliott, had no position. The President refused to allow him to use his name even to secure a position. Elliott then, with only $40 or $50 in his possession, rode with his wife in an automobile to Los Angeles and there secured a position with Mr. William Randolph Hearst. He did that through his own indefatigable ability. He was to write in the Hearst newspapers on the subject of aviation. Although the son of the President of the United States, he relied upon his own individual efforts to secure work, which would give him an opportunity to rise on the ladder of fame and fortune. He did not marry a great heiress, as the previous speaker intimated. It is a great regret to me, Mr. Chairman, that gentlemen in discussing the advisability of taking over the President's papers and bequeathing them to posterity, should attack the children of the President of the United States.

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I re-echo the able statements made by the majority leader of the House of Representatives. When this House stoops to the disgraceful level of resorting to personalities and abuse of the President of the United States as the basis for an argument justifying their vote against a bill which 90 percent of all the Republican newspapers in the United States have endorsed, it seems to me they have reached the extreme nadir of partisanship in the Congress of the United States. Whatever faults may be attributed to Mr. Roosevelt, history will regard him as one of the great humanitarian Presidents of this generation. I think of Roosevelt as a man who may be likened unto Abraham Lincoln who said:

Die when I may—I want it said of me by those who knew me best that I always plucked a thistle and planted a flower, where I thought a flower would grow.

Edward Markham spoke in poetry of Abraham Lincoln, and he said of him that he was a man "who matched the mountains and compelled the stars to turn aside to conquer him." All of the diabolical, vindictive jeremiads in which the Republicans have indulged during this debate will rise to haunt the President's next adversary in the campaign of 1940. All the vindictive attacks made upon the President of the United States will not justify one single modicum or one iota of the attack made on this bill.

This is an opportunity for the Congress of the United States to acquire the writings of a great President, a President whom history will record as one of the four outstanding Presidents of the United States. Yes, we can indulge in our would-be humorous, feebly witty attacks upon a man whose shoes, in some cases, we are not even fit to shine. It seems to me that this performance today is something that ought to make the common people of America rise up and denounce in their wrath the kind of attacks that are being made upon the Presidents of the United States. Let us rise above personalities in this critical period of American history. Let us pass the bill and go on to other things. Let us do something for the plain people of America whose sufferings are crying out in their righteousness in every part of the land. Let us rise above the level of the low degrees to which this Congress has descended. I am ashamed of my colleagues. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. LEWIS] such time as he may desire.

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, I think the answer to many of the arguments—I say “arguments”—against this bill is completely summarized in an editorial which appeared in the New York Times of June 7, 1939, and with your indulgence I shall read from it. The editorial is entitled “Frisivolous Objections.” It reads as follows:

[From the New York Times of June 7, 1939]

FRIVOLOUS OBJECTIONS

Last December, Mr. Roosevelt announced his intention of setting up at Hyde Park, “for the first time in this country, what might be called a source-material collection relating to a specific period in our history.” It would include all his papers and correspondence from 1910, besides books, paintings, portraits. The collection was to be housed in a building built by private subscription. The property was to go ultimately to the Federal Government. Mr. Roosevelt also wished that the family house at Hyde Park and the greater part of his estate there should be taken over by Congress after his death. It is hard to see any high motive in the almost unanimous opposition of the House Republicans to the bill to carry out the President's purposes.

Some grounds of objection were patently frivolous. Why not stow the collections in The Archives Building? It is true that Mr. Roosevelt wanted the primary responsibility for the care of his material to rest in the Archivist of the United States; but The National Archives of the United States collects only records from Government agencies. With historical manuscripts of other kinds it has nothing to do. Representative FISH said that the measure would be a precedent, so that papers of future Presidents “would be scattered all around the country.” Well, the papers of past Presidents are scattered all around the country. Those of Jefferson are divided among the Library of Congress, the Massachusetts Historical Society, the Missouri Historical Society, the University of Virginia, and many other places, as well as among private persons.

The papers of the two Adamases are in Quincy. Buchanan's and Pierce's are scattered. Upon the advice of distinguished historians, Mr. Roosevelt decided to keep his collection in one place. The judgment of the historians is sufficient authority. It is hard to understand why most of the Republicans in the House opposed a bill so evidently meritorious; and the wisdom of the Democratic leaders in suspending the rules and so requiring a two-thirds vote remains mysterious. Doubtless the bill will yet be passed in the ordinary manner. Aside from partisanship, the only intelligible reason for objection is the notion that everything should be piled up in Washington. That is a queer notion for Republicans to hold now.

[Applause.]

I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Colorado has consumed 4 minutes.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. VOORHIS].

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I am afraid that I am getting to be an egocentric megalomaniac, because I really had a sincere desire a while ago to be able to follow on the floor that modest, shy, retiring flower of the Ozarks and to come immediately after his speech. You will all readily recognize that a man has to be a little bit conceited to think that he can do that effectively. It happens I did not have that opportunity.

I do not think this is a matter that should be charged with partisanship. For my part I am not going to raise that issue and I trust nobody else will, but I do think a couple of statements recently made ought to be corrected.

In the first place, it has been said that this is supposed to be a “monument” to President Roosevelt or a memorial to President Roosevelt for his own writings. Now that simply is not the case. What this proposal is, is that a gift be given by Franklin D. Roosevelt to the United States of America if Congress chooses to accept it, and that that gift consist of a collection made at the expense of the President himself and not in the nature of a memorial or monument or collection of his personal writings at all. Everybody who has taken the trouble to look into the matter knows that this is a very valuable collection of material, entirely aside of anything that may have come from the pen of the President.

In addition to that it happens to occur to me that when a proposal is made by somebody in the nature of a gift like this, it is up to the recipient to consider the matter from that standpoint. I do not see why the man who offers to make a gift of this kind does not have the right to make suggestions as to how the thing shall be handled, where it shall be placed, and under what circumstances it shall be taken care of. One gentleman who was opposing the measure made a speech here this afternoon and suggested that the President himself should have put up the money to build a building in Washington in which to house this material. I am as convinced as that I am standing here that had that been done the gentleman on that side of the House would have yelled twice as loud about egocentric megalomaniacs and other choice bits like that, because they would have said, “Here is a man who does not think that Congress would accept this and so he is going out here and do it himself to make sure that these things are preserved.”

I think it has been done with very good taste. I think a proposal has been made which, as is evident on the floor of the House, can be criticized and discussed in the House and we can decide whether we want to accept this or not. I believe that it smacks not at all of the charges that have been made. Another thing I resented was when the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHORT] made the remark that “the President proposed to charge the people of America two bits to get into this building.” I hope the gentleman did not intend to leave the impression that the President was personally going to collect the money, but I think if he had meant to do that he did a pretty good job of it. I think if he thought it over he would not want to leave that false impression.

There is one respect in which I agree with the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHORT]. He said he did not think this was a matter that was particularly vital at this time; he thought other things were more important. So do I. I wish we might be considering this afternoon, in a more deliberate mood than we were able to do before, just what is going to happen on the 1st of September this year in accordance with the so-called relief bill that was recently passed. I am glad to say I did all I could to change that bill, for according to its terms it will be required that 700,000 people who have been compelled to depend upon the W. P. A. for a living for the last year and a half must be summarily dismissed on September 1. What are they to do? It is time that was considered here.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 additional minutes to the gentleman from California.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I thank the gentleman. I wish we could be considering that, but I think the gentlemen who are opposing this measure would not give us much help toward getting a chance to consider a thing of that sort. The Republican Members voted solidly, with, maybe, three or four exceptions, for these enforced dismissals, and so I think they would be very much opposed to our reopening a question of that kind, though it is likely to be very serious. I am not one who likes to see protests against Government action take place in the country, but I am one who believes that the Congress should consider the measures it takes in order that they may be just and fair, and I am one who believes that we should look forward to things that may take place in the future. I am also one who believes that we have no responsibility that weighs upon us quite so heavily as the responsibility of seeing to it that the budgets of the modest citizens of this country are balanced at the level of a decent subsistence. Evidently there is not time to go into a discussion of that, but I would remark to you that I made a speech in the House day before yesterday, which consumed 20 precious minutes, in which I discussed the matter of the national debt and what seemed to me necessary to be done in connection with it. I need only say this: It is my thought that the national debt was contracted very largely by the selling of Government bonds to private banks for deposits of bank credit that had been created particularly for that purpose, and I cannot see why the credit of this Nation is not equally good to redeem that debt. I feel we would have no difficulty in doing so; but I must get back to the subject at hand today.

I believe this is a matter properly put forward, that important records of this most stirring time in the history of this country, collected by a man who happened to be President in one of the critical periods in our history, should become national property, housed in a proper place, and available to future generations. I believe that it is a proposition that the Congress with dignity should accept. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. BURDICK].

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Chairman, I am sure that all of the Republican Members of the House do not oppose this resolution. I am also sure that a number of Republicans have not distinguished between the personal papers of the President and the contents of this library which Franklin D. Roosevelt is willing to turn over to the Government. In this library are some 15,000 volumes of some of the rarest books and historical documents to be found anywhere in the United States. There is nothing in these documents and historical books that has anything whatever to do with any activity on the part of Mr. Roosevelt. It is a collection of great value to the people of the United States. So far as his own writings are concerned, it is too early to form any estimate of what the American people will think of them. It is not too early, however, to accept from the hand of the President one of the greatest private libraries in the United States. I do not understand why there should be any opposition to this.

I for one feel that 50 years from now the place that Franklin D. Roosevelt will occupy in United States history will be quite different from today's sentiment upon my side of the House. I as one Republican am willing to confess openly that, considering the condition of affairs when President Roosevelt came into power in this country, he, more than any other man in the United States, is responsible for our having a representative form of government. [Applause.] If he has made any mistakes since, and he has, and I do not always vote with him—if he has made mistakes history will take care of that, but history cannot take away from him the position he occupies in being the source of inspiration for the American people to continue this form of government. I am for this Government. I want to make this Government better. If there is a weak place in it I want to weed it out. For this very reason some people call me an enemy of this Government, but I am a friend of this Government, and I think Franklin D. Roosevelt is; and when history is written 50 years from now I think it will contain nothing of which even the Republicans need be ashamed. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. GREEN].

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Chairman, I regret very much to see this debate this afternoon based on partisan grounds. It reminds me of the occasion a few years ago when a somewhat similar bill was before the House for consideration in connection with the National Gallery of Art and the acceptance of a gift from Mr. Mellon. I did not see partisanship brought into that debate. I believe the gentlemen on this side of the aisle—Democratic—went along and helped to carry out the plan for that great monument to one who was quite a contrast to the present Chief Executive, one who had through his monopolies collected millions and millions from the poor people of the country. I think nothing much was said about that nor about the great tax fraud scandals that came along; yet Members on my side of the aisle overlooked those things, the suits were dismissed, the matter was forgotten, and we let his memory go on for the good things he did. After all, there are more good things in the life of a person than there are bad. I prefer to remember the good things and good works of a man, rather than the bad.

Never in the history of our country have we had a man who has done so much for the American people, the needy, the rank and file, the oppressed, the underprivileged, the meek, and the weak as the man who is now trying to do a little something more for the American people by leaving to them at least the soil which would perpetuate a portion of the memory of his great deeds for the American people. Mr. Chairman, it is most appropriate that this Congress should participate in a plan of this kind for one who has been instrumental, and the leader, in redeeming economic conditions and the economic life of the American people. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 additional minutes to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. GREEN. This man came into office at a time when 15,000 banks were closed, when wheat brought 18 cents, corn 10 cents, and when the annual income of the American people had dropped to about $38,000,000,000.

My colleagues will recall that during the dark days of the Hoover administration just preceding the Roosevelt administration the economic condition of our country was probably the most chaotic it has been since its creation during and after the Revolutionary War. Industries had almost ceased to produce, millions of workers were idle, thousands of these unemployed were walking the highways and actually begging for food. Soup and bread lines had been established in the larger populated centers. These soup and bread lines were rapidly exhausting the ability of the local communities and cities to pay for the food for the needy. It was almost impossible to obtain employment of any kind. There was practically no market for labor. Able-bodied men were forced to work for from 50 cents a day upward, or to beg for existence. Millions of them could not even obtain employment at 50 cents a day. About half of the farmers in the country were under mortgage and foreclosure of these mortgages was going on to an alarming degree. Millions of homes other than farms were under mortgage and the debtors had no hope of ever paying off these mortgages.

So hungry were the people, many of them, and so destitute and desperate, until in some communities they were in groups forcing their way into grocery stores and other business establishments and helping themselves to the necessities of life and carrying adequate food out to feed their families. These men were not stealing and could not be classed as criminals. They were hungry American citizens, starving in a land of plenty. This, my friends, was under Republican administration, and little if anything was being done by the Federal Government to even recognize it, to say nothing of trying to relieve it.

There was practically no market for raw materials, particularly farm materials; neither was there purchasing power in the hands of the farmers or in the hands of the former wage earners of factories. Credit hardly existed because the banks had closed on the savings of the American people, and those who had remaining funds were afraid to make loans. There were, of course, many other deplorable conditions in our country, but time will not permit, nor is this the opportunity, to enumerate them in further detail.

Probably the most tragic and threatening of all conditions at that time was the doubt existing in the minds of millions of our true and patriotic American citizens. They were beginning to doubt whether or not they could even govern themselves and whether or not the country could endure for many more months without actual revolution, bloodshed, and forceful appropriation of property for the relief of want and necessity. My friends, under these conditions we found the American people in 1932.

Now, what is the contrast today? I believe each of you will joyously appreciate the vast difference in the economic life of America today and during that trying period. I doubt that there ever was a period in the history of our country when conditions have changed as favorably in the same length of time. After the American people asserted themselves for redemption of their Government in 1932, they worked rapidly toward this achievement. Practically no banks have closed their doors since the Democrats took over the administration; millions have obtained gainful employment, and I am speaking of those who were unemployed in 1932; the prices of farm commodities have at all times, I believe, during the past 6½ years been higher than they were in 1932; and the general average of farm prices during this 6½-year period is probably twice as high as during 1932; factory outputs have increased from 100 percent to 1,000 percent since 1932; purchasing power has been placed in the hands of the rank and file of our people to such an extent that the total income of our people has almost doubled since 1932.

Some of my alarmist friends speak about the huge Federal funds expended and I grant you that funds have been expended, but the American people have the goods to show for practically every dollar of that which has been expended. School buildings, highways, hospitals, river and harbor improvements, flood control, navigation and power dams, Federal buildings of all kinds, streets, sidewalks, city halls, county court houses, and countless other public improvements stand out as lasting monuments to the wisdom of these Federal expenditures. If you would take stock today of the value of these Federal improvements, you will find that only a small amount of money has been lost through these expenditures. In addition to these physical properties, the human element has largely entered in. The American people have been fed. You do not see them now walking the highways and humbly begging for something to eat. This is a very rare occasion now. Practically all of them are gainfully employed and I do not believe that many people are actually hungry, and none should be. It is the duty of the American civilization and the Government to provide the necessities of life and to make possible the comforts of life for every individual under the American flag.

Vast improvement has occurred during these 6½ years. Credit is now obtainable. Farm produce is salable. Factory outputs are in fairly good demand, and beyond and above and more important than all of this is the fact that the American people are more contented and are happier. Children are now attending school and having warm food given to them during the noon hour—children who previously stayed at home, hungry and without garments to wear to school. Millions of young boys and girls through the C. C. C. camps and N. Y. A. are developing into proud and respected American citizens. Now, some of my colleagues would severely criticize and low-rate these marvelous achievements and culminate their criticisms and objections here today against the founding of an appropriate establishment for the spearhead of these betterments.

This library undertaking, proposed today, is not one to cause a big Federal expenditure and in this connection, I call your attention to the following statement from the committee's report:

Before finally arriving at his decision to offer these collections to the Government, Mr. Roosevelt sought the advice of a representative group of distinguished American scholars and publicists and, with their advice and approval, worked out the plan proposed. There was organized also, under the chairmanship of Hon. Frank C. Walker, a group of businessmen and other public-spirited citizens to help in raising funds for the construction of the library building at private rather than public expense.

Now, you will see from this that all of the extraneous statements brought out here today are far afield from the purpose of this bill. This is one of the small things in which we can help our great Chief Executive to render a service to the future generations of America. It is most appropriate that this be done and done now. It will, in a way, be a small token of service and I predict now that no library in the world will draw the attention, respect, and appreciation of future generations as will this one. The documents therein will be read and appreciated more and more as the years pass on. People for ages have erected monuments and tokens to those whom the world calls great; savage tribes and primitive Americans had their own way of commemorating deeds and achievements. Likewise, civilized man has done it in other ways. The pyramids, cones, towers, and edifices were long ago erected in the valley of the Nile. They stand there today in token of the achievements of man and of generations.

Throughout the ages achievements have been commemorated. Monuments have been erected to emperors whose scepters have been symbols of universal power; to soldiers who have won their way to fame beneath the flashes of the sword; to statesmen whom the world has called great; to poets whose songs have been the mirrors of the passions and the hopes and glories of the age; to philosophers who have sought to penetrate the secrets of the stars; to religious teachers whose flocks follow without question. But to all whose memory should be carried on none stand out greater than he who successfully strives to liberate economic bondage of the weak, the meek, and the underprivileged. In this role I doubt that service and accomplishments have ever exceeded that of Franklin D. Roosevelt. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BENDER].

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Chairman, I have heard statements made by the last two or three gentlemen who spoke regarding an appeal to partisanship. I am sure most of you were here when the chairman of the Rules Committee made his statement in reference to the rule, and I must say that I never heard a more flagrant appeal to partisanship in this House. I refer to the statement that the gentleman made about the minority leader on the floor of the House. The gentleman from Illinois used the expression that the whip was used. I deeply resented the statement of the gentleman from Illinois that the minority leader of this House had used a whip on the Members on the Republican side. Frankly, may I say that we have attended three or four conferences on this side of the House and there never has been an occasion when the minority leader has used the whip or steam rolled any Member to go along with any legislation that he was espousing. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of the time on this side.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, the remarks of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] did not impress me in quite the same way as they did the gentleman from Ohio; but I was interested in the kind advice he was endeavoring to give the Republican side of the House. He said that we ought to be nonpartisan. Really, why should that not apply much more directly at this particular time to his own side of the House rather than involving the Republican side?

Mr. Chairman, we have not brought partisanship into this debate. That has been brought in entirely by the other side of the House. I want in my humble way to make reference also to the remarks of the majority leader. The majority leader indulged in pure surmise when he said that there never would have been any fault found on the Democratic side if a Republican President had asked that a memorial be erected to himself. Mr. Chairman, I came here, I am happy to say, at the same time the majority leader did. I have admired his career. It has been a privilege and an honor to serve with him. But I cannot conceive of any one of the Republican Presidents, and he named them, wanting to express any such intention of erecting a memorial to himself, which the present occupant of the White House is doing by forcing the pending bill through the Congress at the present time.

Mr. FISH. During their lifetime.

Mr. TREADWAY. That goes without saying. The present occupant of the White House, of course, is alive.

He also cast reflection upon our good colleague, the gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish] in that he said that Mr. Fish disliked the present occupant of the White House personally. I do not know as to that fact myself, but I wish to say to my friend from Texas that I am a great personal admirer of the present occupant of the White House. I know of no more genial, friendly, and kindly disposed person in a personal way than Franklin D. Roosevelt. I like him. [Applause.] He is a neighbor of mine, across the Hudson River. I remember at one time calling on him, and he addressed me as "the hillbilly from the Berkshires," saying that he could see my district from his back steps. All that is a pleasantry between men and I admire him for that type of character. However, I cannot agree with any part of his policies nor do I agree with what is before us today, which has to do with aggrandizing the present occupant of the White House while, as the gentleman from New York says, he is still alive.

There is very little that I know to add in the way of argument to what has been said during this debate. I wish, however, to call attention particularly to the fact that the gentleman from Illinois, my distinguished chairman, read in very great detail from the supposed report of the committee. I maintain, Mr. Chairman, in this debate, and I maintained in the debate when this question was up for consideration before, that this is a phony report. I am a member of the Library Committee, and have tried to be fairly active in attendance upon that committee, but to the best of my knowledge and belief no hearing was ever held on the bill before us, and this report is one entirely made up in the chairman's office.

I wish to call attention particularly to the questions and answers that would appear to have been brought out in the committee. Every one of the letters to which the gentleman referred, particularly the letter in question and answer form from Professor Morison, were in answer to a letter the chairman of the committee wrote to these various persons, they not appearing at a hearing. I do not believe it is a very good way to carry on a discussion like this to simply quote from letters that may come in, particularly when it would appear as though they were a part of a hearing of a committee.

It is somewhat surprising that this measure should be brought up today under a rule. One June 5 the Speaker recognized the Chairman of the Library Committee to move to suspend the rules and pass this bill. The motion failed to carry by the necessary two-thirds vote. It would seem that that expression of the House would have convinced the proponents of the measure that Congress was in no way enthusiastic about having the so-called Roosevelt Library become a reality. So, I trust that the House today will again show its lack of sympathy with this effort to aggrandize and memorialize a living man and again vote not to accept the gift this bill suggests.

I want to discuss the question from two angles; first, the background under which this bill is before us, and, second, the merits of the proposition.

This measure passed the Senate without a word of debate, without any consideration, and without even a hearing before a Senate committee. Comment upon this procedure is unnecessary. To the best of my knowledge the bill was never before the House Committee on the Library and no hearing was held upon it. In spite of this fact, we have here a very elaborate report alleged to have been made under authority of the committee. The chairman is a good soldier, and goes along as directed by the administration. He has a very wide imagination to assume the committee authorized the bill to be reported or approved the report prepared at the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue.

Now permit me to make reference to the bill itself. In exchange for 12 acres of land in the village of Hyde Park, N. Y., it pledges the faith of the Federal Government to maintain a building not yet constructed and pay all maintenance costs until the end of time. It conveys the unheard-of authority of Congress to charge an admission of 25 cents to the land area and a further admission charge of 25 cents to the hallowed building itself. I know of no Government property, entirely owned by the people of this country, to which Congress has authorized an admission charge, and we are all aware of the protest which is being raised against the unauthorized charges recently levied by the Secretary of the Interior for admission to Ford's Theater, the Peterson House, to Fort McHenry, and to the Lee Mansion in Arlington. Incidentally, I am informed that these unauthorized admission charges to these national shrines have already resulted in a marked falling off in the number of visitors. Congress never intended that admission should be charged to national shrines, and certainly we should not set such a precedent in this case.

On page 15 of the alleged report of the House Library Committee there appears an article from the New York Herald Tribune of February 5, 1939, headed "Drive Started for Roosevelt Library Fund." The article says that at a dinner in the Carleton Hotel, which the President attended, Mr. Frank C. Walker was named chairman of the committee to raise funds to erect on the President's estate at Hyde Park a repository for his State papers, correspondence, and private libraries. It is interesting to note that Mr. Walker, a former Montana lawyer, was at one time treasurer of the Democratic National Committee. An indication of the reception Mr. Walker's drive is meeting in his own State is contained in a dispatch from the Detroit Free Press' Washington bureau under date of July 3, 1939. It refers to the vigorous protest of Mr. O. S. Warden, of Great Falls, Mont., a member of the Democratic National Committee, whose friends quote him as saying:

This is the last straw. It is bad enough to meet repeated demands for the Democratic National Committee, but when it comes to soliciting money for the Roosevelt memorial I'm ready to quit.

If the State papers, correspondence, and private libraries of Mr. Roosevelt are of such great value and interest to the people, there is only one proper repository for them, and that is the National Capital, where there is ample room for their proper display and preservation, and not in an out-of-the-way village near Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Such portion of these documents as pertain to Mr. Roosevelt's services as Governor of New York could well be donated, should he so desire, to the State of New York. The portion having to do with his two terms as President of the United States could well be cared for in Washington where there is ample room in the new addition to the Library of Congress and in The Archives Building. Here they would be accessible to the public for inspection or to students of history in future years. Washington is the national repository, and one would needs be a most enthusiastic student or research worker to go to the village of Hyde Park to inspect such a relatively small portion of our national history.

Again, the bill practically sets up a branch office of the Archivist, who will be called upon to maintain a staff at Hyde Park, besides imposing upon the Treasury Department the added duty of carrying a new account upon its books.

On page 4 of the alleged report, in its final argument in support of the proposition, it is stated that Hyde Park is located on one of the most heavily traveled post roads in the country. This no doubt is true at this moment, but upon the completion of the new superhighway between New York and Albany, already half finished, the use of the post road will be confined principally to local and truck traffic. I may add that the new highway runs nowhere near Hyde Park.

I am confident that I voice the sentiment of a vast majority of the American people when I say that the public papers of all Presidents, and of all other public servants for that matter, should be filed in Washington, where suitable provision has been made for their exhibition and their preservation.

I have mentioned a few of the objections to this bill. There are many others. There is absolutely no valid argument for it except that of the personal aggrandizement of Franklin D. Roosevelt, and if for no other reason this should be sufficient to defeat it. [Applause.]

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of the time.

I am sorry my colleague on the committee, the gentleman from Massachusetts, was not present when we had the actual hearing on this matter. He is, however, a very important—and I speak seriously—Member of this House, and a member of a number of very important committees. Although he has attended as often as any man could under the circumstances, he has not always been present when we have been compelled to carry on the business of the Library Committee.

We had a hearing for 2 hours one morning, and after we had discussed the matter thoroughly we decided that the best way of getting the information before the House was to proceed in the following way: If you will refer to the printed hearings you will find they are a matter-of-fact presentation of the events as they transpired. At the top of page 17 you will find the following letter, which, with a copy of the resolution, House Joint Resolution 268, was sent to the persons who had attended a luncheon, at which plans for this action were fully discussed. These persons were present because they knew much about the subjects involved. The letter went to other leading authorities in the fields of historical research, economics, and government. This is the letter I wrote:

Your interest in the subject covered by the enclosed bill has come to my attention.

I should very much appreciate any statement you care to make for the record concerning the need, advisability, and desirability of this project. Your reply will be kept as a part of the official record concerning the development of this project.

Very cordially yours,

KENT E. KELLER, Chairman.

On page 14 you will find the list of those at the luncheon, persons high in the scholastic as well as in the economic world.

These authorities answered as shown in the appendix of the hearings. This is my judgment, and the judgment of the members of the committee present at that time, was the best way of getting the information before this body. All of those who have read the report and read the specific questions that Professor Morison put to himself and his answers have a perfectly clear understanding of what we are really driving at. All we are doing here is attempting to accept under such conditions as are acceptable to the President of the United States the first and only complete and entire collection of Presidential papers we have ever had the opportunity of securing.

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KELLER. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. LEAVY. The burden of the objections we have heard today seems to be that this offer comes from a man who is still living, and for that reason we ought not to accept it. May I ask the gentleman if it is not his opinion that if Herbert Hoover, the only living ex-President of the United States, were willing to make an identical offer insofar as it were possible to do so, the Members on this side of the House would support it and vote to accept such an offer?

Mr. KELLER. I wish to answer the gentleman by saying that in my judgment the Library Committee would unquestionably report with exactly the same favor with respect to the Herbert Hoover Presidential papers that we have reported with regard to the Franklin D. Roosevelt Presidential papers, and I believe this House would accept such an offer in the same way. As a challenge, I suggest to the gentlemen on the other side, if they believe we are not sincere in this statement, that they get Mr. Hoover to make a proposal exactly like Franklin D. Roosevelt's offer and see how quickly we accept it. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired. All time has expired. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, etc.—

TITLE I—DEFINITIONS

SECTION 1. As used in this joint resolution—

(a) The term "donor" means Franklin D. Roosevelt.

(b) The term "historical material" includes books, correspondence, papers, pamphlets, works of art, models, pictures, photographs, plats, maps, and other similar material.

(c) The term "Board" means the Trustees of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library.

TITLE II—FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT LIBRARY

SEC. 201. The Archivist of the United States is authorized to accept for and in the name of the United States from the donor, or from such person or persons as shall be empowered to act for the donor, title to a tract of land consisting of an area of 12 acres, more or less, of the Hyde Park estate of the donor and his family, located on the New York-Albany Post Road, in the town of Hyde Park, Dutchess County, State of New York; such area to be selected and carved out of the said estate by the donor and to be utilized as a site for the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library provided for in this title.

SEC. 202. The Archivist is authorized to permit the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, Inc., a New York corporation organized for that purpose, to construct on the area referred to in section 201 of this title a building, or buildings, to be designated as the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, and to landscape the grounds within the said area. Such project shall be carried out in accordance with plans and specifications approved by the Archivist. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to permit the facilities and personnel of the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department to be utilized in the preparation of plans for and in the construction and equipping of the project: Provided, That the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, Inc., shall enter into an arrangement satisfactory to the Secretary of the Treasury to reimburse the said Procurement Division for the costs and expenses incurred for such purposes, as determined by the Secretary of the Treasury.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 2, line 20, strike out "Secretary of the Treasury" and insert in lieu thereof "Federal Works Administration."

Page 2, line 22, strike out "Procurement Division of the Treasury Department" and insert "Public Building Administration."

Page 3, line 3, strike out "Procurement Division" and insert "Public Building Administration."

Page 3, line 5, strike out "Secretary of the Treasury" and insert "Federal Works Administration."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 203. Upon the completion of the project authorized in section 202 of this title, the Archivist shall accept for the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, as a gift from the donor, such collection of historical material as shall be donated by the donor. The Archivist may also acquire for the said library from other sources, by gift, purchase, or loan, historical books related to and other historical material contemporary with and related to the historical material acquired from the donor. The historical material acquired under this section shall be permanently housed in the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library: Provided, That the Archivist may temporarily remove any of such material from the said library when he deems it to be necessary: And provided further, That the Archivist may dispose of any duplicate printed material in the said library by sale or exchange, and, with the approval of The National Archives Council, may dispose of by sale, exchange, or otherwise any material in the said library which appears to have no permanent value or historical interest. The proceeds of any sale made under this section shall be paid into the special account provided for in subsection (d) of section 205 of this title, to be held, administered, and expended in accordance with the provisions of that subsection.

SEC. 204. The faith of the United States is pledged that, upon the construction of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library and the acquisition from the donor of the collection of historical material in accordance with the terms of this title, the United States will provide such funds as may be necessary for the upkeep of the said library and the administrative expenses and costs of operation thereof, including the preservation and care of historical material acquired under this title, so that the said library shall be at all times properly maintained.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. TREADWAY: Page 4, beginning in line 4, strike out all of section 204.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, a great deal has been said about the generosity of the donor of the library. It seems to me that a very uncertain charge is being placed upon the taxpayers of the country in the upkeep of this library and therefore there should be no reference made, as I see it, in the measure to the support of the library and the maintenance thereof by the Government unless there is a very definite statement as to the amount involved. The bill pledges the faith of the United States to eternity in the upkeep of this particular building and the contents thereof, as well as the maintenance of the grounds surrounding it.

If this is to be a generous donation by friends of the President and of the President himself, maintenance should be provided for and the taxpayers of the country should not be asked to support the building and maintain the grounds in as inaccessible a location as Hyde Park will be when the new main thoroughfare from Albany to New York is completed. The gentleman from New York [Mr. ROCKEFELLER], living in that neighborhood, described the inaccessibility of Hyde Park, and this will be accentuated when the new road, which is now half-way finished, is completed.

It seems to me that in view of the great spirit of generosity about which we have heard so much today there should be provision made for maintenance and upkeep.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. SHORT. Of course, the gentleman from Massachusetts is aware of the fact that there are many public memorials to our great men, but that they are not maintained by the Federal Government. Recently I visited the memorial erected to the memory of President McKinley at Canton, Ohio, and although it is a beautiful memorial, it is in a sad state of repair. They cannot get one dime from the Federal Government to keep up a memorial that already exists.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Of course, if you were not going to pass this bill or if you were going to strike the enacting clause out later, it would be all right to adopt the amendment of the gentleman from Massachusetts; but if the bill is going to pass, this property is to become the property of the United States, and there is no fund anywhere in perpetuity that is big enough to raise this much money to maintain it, then certainly this amendment should not be adopted.

The Federal Government, in respect of all of its properties that I know anything about, pledges itself for its maintenance and the section which the gentleman from Massachusetts has moved to strike out simply provides for the maintenance of Federal property.

Mr. LUCE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words in order to inquire of the gentleman from Texas who maintains Mount Vernon, the shrine of George Washington?

Mr. RAYBURN. The 25 cents that the people pay to go in there maintains Mount Vernon, and Mount Vernon is not the property of the United States. It belongs to the Ladies' Association of Mount Vernon.

Mr. LUCE. Then we shall make a distinction between the present occupant of the White House and the first occupant of the White House?

Mr. RAYBURN. Oh, I hope the gentleman from Massachusetts, for whom I have such a deep feeling of respect and regard, will wipe that question out of the RECORD, seeking to make a distinction between the first President of the United States and the present President. The Mount Vernon property does not belong to the Government of the United States at all. It is a private institution.

Mr. LUCE. I will, however, not withdraw my statement, but will add to it, who maintains Monticello?

Mr. RAYBURN. The 50 cents that the people pay to go in to see it, and that property does not belong to the Government of the United States, I will say to my distinguished friend from Massachusetts.

The pro forma amendment was withdrawn.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. FISH: Page 4, line 13, after the word "maintained", strike out the period, insert a colon and the following: Provided, That not more than $12,000 shall be expended annually.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, I hope we can consider this regardless of party views no matter how our votes may be determined on the final passage of the bill. Section 204, page 4 of the bill, which we are discussing, reads as follows:

Sec. 204. The faith of the United States is pledged that, upon the construction of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library and the acquisition from the donor of the collection of historical material in accordance with the terms of this title, the United States will provide such funds as may be necessary for the upkeep of the said library and the administrative expenses and costs of operation thereof, including the preservation and care of historical material acquired under this title, so that the said library shall be at all times properly maintained.

There is absolutely no limitation whatever in this bill as to the cost of maintenance of this library. I have heard it said on what I believe good authority that it may cost over $100,000 a year to maintain this little library at Hyde Park, a library that is to contain the official papers of the President of the United States. I have tried to make it very clear why I am opposed to this on three grounds. First, it is an unholy precedent. It takes away from Washington and from the Congressional Library these papers that ought to be there and we by our approval help to send them to Hyde Park. In the next place, it costs money. The money comes out of the Government of the United States. In the third place, it is a monument to be erected to a living man. Putting aside those fundamental reasons why we are opposing this, we ought not to give carte blanche, we ought not to propose in this bill that they may spend any sum they desire—$100,000, $200,000, $300,000—even more than the cost of the construction of the building, to maintain it. It is not sound or wise or proper legislation for the Congress of the United States to write into a bill—no limitation whatever. So I am offering this amendment limiting the maintenance to $12,000 a year.

Certainly that is an ample sum, if we are simply to maintain that library for President Roosevelt's papers, and he can hire a librarian and a couple of assistants and a guard or two. There are ample funds for that in $12,000; but if you think they are going to buy other papers, and are going to establish another congressional library, then I say pass this bill without any limit whatever. As far as I am concerned, I think this is a very proper and necessary amendment, regardless of partisan or party affiliations. It limits the total appropriation to $12,000. Is not that enough for this library, regardless of our opposition on this side to it upon three different grounds? I am not pleading on those grounds now. I am pleading for a limitation to be written into the bill; and if Members of Congress on the Democratic side want to take the responsibility in the face of a deficit of three and a half billion dollars, then the responsibility is theirs. Put no limit on it at all, and then somebody will come in in some future Congress and instead of having 4 or 5 you will have 40 employees, and instead of spending $12,000, more than likely you will be called upon to appropriate $100,000. There is no limitation here, and knowing how people act when there is no limitation upon spending—whether they be Democrats or Republicans—we should fix a limit, else we will have a white elephant on our hands, with no restriction placed on those in charge, who will come back here and ask for unprecedented sums of money.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. Yes.

Mr. SHORT. Not only in section 204 on page 4 does it say that the United States shall provide such funds as may be necessary for the upkeep of said library and the administrative expenses and cost of operation thereof, including the preservation and care of historical material, but in section 206, on page 7, it provides that the Commissioner of Public Buildings shall be responsible for the care, maintenance, and protection of the buildings and grounds of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, and that except as provided in that sentence I have just read, the immediate custody and control of the library—

And such other buildings, grounds, and equipment as may from time to time become a part thereof, and their contents, shall be vested in the Archivist of the United States.

Mr. FISH. In the name of common sense and the Treasury of the United States I ask that this amendment be adopted.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

I oppose this, Mr. Chairman, primarily on the same ground as I opposed the last amendment. I do not know of any bill that Congress has ever passed acquiring property where a limit on expenditures for upkeep was set. If there has ever been a thing like that done I would like to have some Member of the House call it to my attention.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH] does not say "$12,000." He says "not more than $12,000." And always in the future, as in the past, the Congress will have the power to appropriate $12,000 for maintenance, or nothing. If the parties should change, which I do not think they will judging from the actions that have been taken by the minority in the last few weeks, to say the least, they could refuse, and in all probability would refuse, to appropriate one red cent for this matter. But this is an unusual amendment. I never heard of one being offered before, where the Federal Government acquired title to property, where a limitation upon an appropriation like this was set out.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. FISH) there were—ayes 79, noes 118.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, I ask for tellers.

Tellers were ordered and the Chair appointed Mr. KELLAR and Mr. FISH to act as tellers.

The Committee again divided and the tellers reported there were—ayes 78, noes 118.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 205. (a) A Board to be known as the Trustees of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library is hereby established. The Archivist and the Secretary of the Treasury shall be ex officio members, and the Archivist shall be chairman of the Board. There shall also be five members of the Board appointed by the President for life, but the President may remove any such member for cause. Vacancies on the Board shall be filled by the President. Membership on the Board shall not be deemed to be an office within the meaning of the Constitution and statutes of the United States.

(b) No compensation shall be paid to the members of the Board for their services as such members, but they shall be allowed their necessary expenses incurred in the discharge of their duties under this title. The certificate of the chairman of the Board shall be sufficient evidence that the expenses are properly allowable.

(c) The Board is hereby authorized to accept and receive gifts and bequests of personal property and to hold and administer the same as trust funds for the benefit of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library. The moneys or securities composing trust funds given or bequeathed to the Board shall be receipted for by the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall invest, reinvest, and retain investments as the Board may from time to time determine: Provided, however, That the Board is not authorized to engage in any business nor to exercise any voting privilege which may be incidental to securities in such trust funds, nor shall the Secretary of the Treasury make any investments for the account of the Board which could not lawfully be made by a trust company in the District of Columbia, except that he may make any investment directly authorized by the instrument of gift under which the funds to be invested are derived and may retain any investments accepted by the Board.

(d) The income from any trust funds held by the Board, as and when collected, shall be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States, who shall enter it in a special account to the credit of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library and subject to disbursement by the Archivist, except where otherwise restricted by the instrument of gift, in the purchase of equipment for the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library; in the preparation and publication of guides, inventories, calendars, and textual reproduction of material in the said library; and in the purchase, under section 203 of this title, of historical material for the said library. The Treasurer of the United States is hereby authorized to honor the requisitions of the Archivist made in such manner and in accordance with such regulations as the Treasurer may from time to time prescribe. The Archivist may make sales of any publications authorized by this section at a price which will cover their cost and 10 percent added, and all moneys received from such sales shall be paid into, administered, and expended as a part of the special account herein provided for.

(e) Unless otherwise restricted by the instrument of gift, the Board, by resolution duly adopted, may authorize the Archivist to use the principal of any gift or bequest made to it for any of the purposes mentioned in subsection (d) hereof.

(f) The Board shall have all the usual powers of a trustee in respect to all funds administered by it, but the members of the Board shall not be personally liable, except for misfeasance. In the administration of such trust funds the actions of the Board, including any payments made or authorized to be made by it from such funds, shall not be subject to review or attack except in an action brought in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, which is hereby given jurisdiction of such suits, for the purpose of enforcing the provision of any trust accepted by the Board.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the section on the ground that it contains an appropriation of public funds and that it is reported by a committee not having jurisdiction to bring into the House an appropriation bill.

I call the attention of the Chair to the following language on page 6, in line 7:

The Treasurer of the United States is hereby authorized to honor the requisitions of the Archivist made in such manner and in accordance with such regulations as the Treasurer may from time to time prescribe.

Those words take money directly from the Treasury of the United States without any limitation and are in violation of the provisions of clause 4 of rule XXI of the House, which reads:

No bill or joint resolution carrying appropriations shall be reported by any committee not having jurisdiction to report appropriations, nor shall an amendment proposing an appropriation be in order during the consideration of a bill or joint resolution reported by a committee not having that jurisdiction. A question of order on an appropriation in any such bill, joint resolution, or amendment thereto may be raised at any time.

Now, this is a permanent appropriation which will go on forever of whatever amount the Archivist cares to draw for upon the Treasurer under such rules and regulations as the Treasurer may from time to time prescribe. I make the point of order against the section.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair desires to direct a question to the gentleman from New York. In line 8, on page 6, is the gentleman of the opinion that the authorization there takes money from the United States Treasury or merely honors requisitions?

Mr. TABER. It authorizes the Treasurer of the United States, without any further legislation, to take money right out of the United States Treasury. It is a permanent appropriation.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois wish to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. KELLER. Yes, Mr. Chairman. It seems to me that the point of order is ill taken for this reason: This is not an appropriation. There is no appropriation provided in this at all. It is simply and solely for the purpose of accepting the requisitions of the proper authority in charge of all archives of all kinds and character, because this bill provides that the expense shall be appropriated for as a part of the Archivist's expenses to the Government as a whole.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I call attention to the fact that the language in the section provides for the creation of a trust fund to be deposited in the Treasury of the United States. It provides for the raising of a trust fund to be placed in the Treasury, and the language does not take appropriated money out of the Treasury. It is not out of Government funds, but out of the trust fund. It is not in itself a direct appropriation, but more of an authorization for those in charge to draw on the trust fund.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I call the attention of the Chair to the fact that there is no limitation on the funds that this should be taken out of. The way it reads it would be taken directly out of the Treasury and not out of any trust fund whatever. It does not say that it shall be taken out of a trust fund, nor is it implied in any way.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from New York limit his point of order to the sentence which he read?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I made the point of order against the section.

Mr. KELLER. Have you read what is at the bottom of page 5 as to the method of depositing the money in the Treasury first?

Mr. TABER. Yes; I have read that. There is nothing whatever that limits the amount that can be taken out to the amount that is put in, nor is there anything whatever that limits it to being taken out of that fund. It is direct authority to the Treasurer to pay it.

Mr. KELLER. Well, what is a requisition, then?

Mr. TABER. A requisition is a draft upon the Treasurer. This constitutes a permanent appropriation.

Mr. KELLER. Only where the money is already provided, not where it is not provided.

Mr. TABER. No; there is no such limitation.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule.

The Chair is of the opinion that the point of order made by the gentleman from New York against the section is well taken, and therefore sustains the point of order.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. RAYBURN: On page 4, after line 13, insert the following:

"Sec. 205. (a) A Board to be known as the Trustees of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library is hereby established. The Archivist and the Secretary of the Treasury shall be ex officio members, and the Archivist shall be chairman of the Board. There shall also be five members of the Board appointed by the President for life, but the President may remove any such member for cause. Vacancies on the Board shall be filled by the President. Membership on the Board shall not be deemed to be an office within the meaning of the Constitution and statutes of the United States.

"(b) No compensation shall be paid to the members of the Board for their services as such members, but they shall be allowed their necessary expenses incurred in the discharge of their duties under this title. The certificate of the chairman of the Board shall be sufficient evidence that the expenses are properly allowable.

"(c) The Board is hereby authorized to accept and receive gifts and bequests of personal property and to hold and administer the same as trust funds for the benefit of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library. The moneys or securities composing trust funds given or bequeathed to the Board shall be receipted for by the Secretary of the Treasury who shall invest, reinvest, and retain investments as the Board may from time to time determine: Provided, however, That the Board is not authorized to engage in any business nor to exercise any voting privilege which may be incidental to securities in such trust funds, nor shall the Secretary of the Treasury make any investments for the account of the Board which could not lawfully be made by a trust company in the District of Columbia, except that he may make any investment directly authorized by the instrument of gift under which the funds to be invested are derived, and may retain any investments accepted by the Board.

"(d) The income from any trust funds held by the Board, as and when collected, shall be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States who shall enter it in a special account to the credit of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library and subject to disbursement by the Archivist, except where otherwise restricted by the instrument of gift, in the purchase of equipment for the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library; in the preparation and publication of guides, inventories, calendars, and textual reproduction of material in the said library; and in the purchase, under section 203 of this title, of historical material for the said library. The Archivist may make sales of any publications authorized by this section at a price which will cover their cost and 10 percent added, and all moneys received from such sales shall be paid into, administered, and expended as a part of the special account herein provided for.

"(e) Unless otherwise restricted by the instrument of gift, the Board, by resolution duly adopted, may authorize the Archivist to use the principal of any gift or bequest made to it for any of the purposes mentioned in subsection (d) hereof.

"(f) The Board shall have all the usual powers of a trustee in respect to all funds administered by it, but the members of the Board shall not be personally liable, except for misfeasance. In the administration of such trust funds the actions of the Board, including any payments made or authorized to be made by it from such funds, shall not be subject to review or attack except in an action brought in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, which is hereby given jurisdiction of such suits, for the purpose of enforcing the provision of any trust accepted by the Board."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas is recognized for 5 minutes on his amendment.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. I yield.

Mr. TABER. Will the gentleman tell us briefly what his amendment does?

Mr. RAYBURN. I may say to the gentleman from New York that I conceded that his point of order was good.

The amendment I offer leaves out the language objected to by the gentleman from New York in lines 7, 8, 9, and 10 on page 6, reading:

The Treasurer of the United States is hereby authorized to honor the requisitions of the Archivist made in such manner and in accordance with such regulations as the Treasurer may from time to time prescribe.

This undoubtedly meets the objection raised by the gentleman from New York, and I contend that the amendment is in order.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 206. The Director of the National Park Service shall be responsible for the care, maintenance, and protection of the buildings and grounds of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library in the same manner and to the same extent as he is responsible for the National Archives Building in the District of Columbia. Except as provided in the preceding sentence, the immediate custody and control of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, and such other buildings, grounds, and equipment as may from time to time become a part thereof, and their contents shall be vested in the Archivist of the United States, and he is authorized to appoint and prescribe the duties of such officers and employees, including clerical assistance for the Board, as may be necessary for the execution of the functions vested in him by this title.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 7, line 1, strike out "Director of the National Park Service" and insert in lieu thereof "Commissioner of Public Buildings."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 207. The Archivist shall prescribe regulations governing the arrangement, custody, protection, and use of the historical material acquired under this title; and, subject to such regulations, such material shall be available to the public free of charge: Provided, That the Archivist is authorized to charge and collect, under regulations prescribed by him, a fee not in excess of 25 cents per person for the privilege of visiting and viewing the exhibit rooms or museum portion of the said library; and any funds so derived shall be paid by the Archivist into the special account provided for in subsection (d) of section 205 of this title, to be held, administered, and expended under the provisions of that subsection.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. TREADWAY: Beginning on page 7, in line 24, with the word "Provided," and continuing through line 6, on page 8, strike out the proviso.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, the object of this amendment is very plain.

I am very much opposed to any collection being made of 25 cents per head for the privilege of visiting and viewing the exhibit rooms or museum portion of said library. It seems to me that if this library is to be supported by the taxpayers of the United States they certainly ought to have the privilege of seeing what they are paying taxes for. I cannot for the life of me understand why a charge should be made to go into this building. We have a very good illustration of what comes of trying to charge admission to buildings here in the city of Washington in the case of certain buildings under the supervision of the Secretary of the Interior, but that is done under regulations he has seen fit to make. This, however, amounts to taxation, for it is a charge prescribed in a law. I know of no law wherein an admission is charged to any public property of the United States. It seems to me to be degrading to the people to ask them to contribute 25 cents per capita to enter this particular building, and I trust that the amendment that I have offered will be adopted.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. I yield.

Mr. DOWELL. There is an illustration of that right here in the Capitol, for everyone who enters the Capitol must pay 25 cents to go through the building, and that ought to be abolished.

Mr. TREADWAY. The gentleman has made a very good suggestion. There is just as much sense in charging 25 cents to enter the Capitol Building as there is to enter these other buildings that have been paid for by the people. The provision I would strike out of the pending bill is even worse than that, for the people at this time know nothing about what they are going to be admitted to see. This supports the argument of the gentleman from Iowa that we ought not to charge admission to this Capitol or any public building here in Washington, and certainly we should not by law impose a charge for admission to a building not yet constructed.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield.

Mr. RAYBURN. A moment ago the gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish] offered an amendment which would have limited the Government expenditure on this library to $12,000 and no more, stating that he thought the Government ought not to pay anything on matters of this kind. The gentleman from Massachusetts now comes along and offers an amendment which would strike out the one provision of the bill which would help pay the expenses of this library.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I do not hesitate to say that I thoroughly approve the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York. There should not be a greater charge than $12,000 per year for the maintenance of that library; but the taxpayers of the country, having once made a payment of $12,000, should not be taxed a second time for admission. That is a policy too small to be considered, and I am astonished that the gentleman from Texas, with his great fund of knowledge, information, and ability, should lower himself to the point of advocating a tax of 25 cents for admission to this building.

Mr. RAYBURN. The gentleman is just for any small crippling amendment to this bill.

Mr. TREADWAY. No; I beg the gentleman's pardon. It is just the reverse. If the building is going to be constructed, and I realize it will be, in spite of the strong opposition that has been lodged here today, let us be dignified about this thing. When we get to the building, let us have something we will be proud of and not a dime museum.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, it is very apparent that the Democratic majority intends to accept this so-called gift and begin the erection of a monument to a living President, to be maintained at the expense of the taxpayers. It is the first time in the history of our country, so far as my knowledge goes, that a President thought it necessary, in order to perpetuate the memory of his administration to, during his lifetime, call for the use of Federal funds for the erection of a monument to himself.

Perhaps it is well, if the President must have a monument, that such a course be adopted, for monuments are not erected to perpetuate the memory of all Presidents. This monument is to take the form of a library where the precious private papers of the President and, perhaps, of other members of his family who are prolific writers for profit will be preserved for the coming generations. Inasmuch as the amendment of the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH] providing that the Federal contribution for the upkeep of this memorial be limited to $12,000 per annum was voted down and as it now has been determined that the Federal Government is to take over the burden, whether the taxpayers desire it or not, of maintaining this edifice through the coming generations, the amendment of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] to the effect that we should strike from the bill the charge for admission for the privilege of seeing these historical documents would seem to be in order.

If the writings of this President or of members of his family, or the epistles received by him are of such transcendent value that they require during his lifetime the erection of a special building in which they may be safeguarded, it would be interesting to learn, if we may, from the members of the majority, whether all of the writings of the President and all of the resolutions, petitions, letters, memoranda, and chits received by him from various organizations and individuals during his tenure of office are to be included and preserved for posterity.

Well do I recall my extreme interest, when visiting Mount Vernon, in some of the letters received by Washington and in some of his replies. Especially those of a more intimate nature, for we all are concerned in what might be termed the little things which affect our daily lives. We are all interested in the domestic happenings, the little individual transactions, of the great and of the near great. Especially do I recall the great degree of interest with which I viewed the dental instruments used by Washington. As long as memory is mine I will see the wooden plugs which George Washington, the Father of our Country, was forced by the crudities of his generation to use as teeth.

The thought occurs now, Will this library safeguard and preserve for posterity all of those little intimate happenings which have, perhaps unconsciously, affected the life of our President? Many recall some of the old recipes which we find among the papers of some of our great men who have passed beyond; the descriptions of family dress in intimate letters or of family custom contained in intimate letters from one member of a family to another. Will future generations find in this library erected to the memory of Franklin D. Roosevelt the endorsement of a well-known brand of baking powder; will we find there a record of the sums paid members of the Roosevelt family for addresses, lectures, or writings; will we find there a history of the business transactions of the President's sons with little intimate comments of other members of the family? Will we find complete copies of the letters of the First Lady of the land as set forth in her column My Day? Will we find in this so-called library the evidence which shows that the Workers Alliance is controlled and its policy dictated by Communists, and following that, will there appear the copy of the address of the First Lady to a recent gathering of the Workers Alliance?

Will we find among these precious papers the resolutions of the Joint Committee for the Defense of American Ideals, signed by the leaders of 21 of the 23 organizations which bolted the American Youth Congress because that Congress refused to condemn communism? Attached to those resolutions will we find the address of the First Lady of the Land, delivered to that organization which is charged with fostering, with failing to condemn communism? Will we find in that edifice among the President's state papers his endorsement for a third term as President written by Earl Browder, head of the Communist Party in America? In connection with this document, will we find that communication put out in Michigan supporting Maurice Sugar, one of the leading attorneys for the C. I. O., and supporting Murphy, the President's personal friend, his choice for Governor of Michigan, his choice for Attorney General of these United States? Will that document contain, so that posterity may read and learn, this appeal made in that circular in that election, and which reads:

To all who hate the smug priests of the Catholic Church, and the slimy hypocritical ministers of the Protestant churches; * * * to all who are opposed by this damnable Government, we address this message. Vote for our candidate (Maurice Sugar).

I quote further:

Close the churches and make those buildings into shelters for homeless men and women. Down with religion, which is opium which the ruling class feeds you to keep you satisfied with the miserable existence which you lead. There is no God.

Will that collection of papers contain a repudiation by the President of the support of the Communists? Will there appear among those documents a letter written by the President condemning the teachings of the Communists as set forth in the foregoing quotation? Such condemnation has not yet appeared in the public press, so far as I have been able to learn, nor has there been any intimation anywhere from the President's bosom friend, Attorney General Murphy, showing that he, while Governor, repudiated the political support of the Communists and their allies.

We know today that the United Mine Workers contributed $470,000 toward the election of the President in the 1936 campaign. Will that fact be set forth among these papers? Will there be a copy of the President's reply, if any was made, to that generous gift? Will there be in that vast collection a copy of any letter written to Murphy while he was Governor of Michigan calling attention to the fact that civil liberties were being denied to hundreds of men and women who were willing to work, but who were denied that privilege by the Governor of Michigan, the President's friend? In this great collection, will there be any letter or any statement by the President condemning the use for political purposes of money appropriated to relieve the needy, the starving, those suffering from cold and from lack of food? We, now here on this earth, know how vast sums were diverted from the needy and used to corrupt the voters. Will these papers and writings of the President tell us when and where he condemned that practice? Will there be a record of letters written by him to his intimate, powerful political supporters asking them to repudiate, to prevent that misuse of public funds? Will there be an explanation of why the President wrote his name in the Democratic campaign books which were sold to corporations for as much as $50 each?

Oh, the inquiries might be extended indefinitely, but the foregoing is sufficient to give an idea of how valuable such a collection will be if it contains not a part, but all of the papers showing the record of the President, Roosevelt.

Turning now to another phase of the debate, let me express my great admiration for the ability of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN] who, on one occasion this afternoon, said that he possessed the power of imagination. I think all of us can agree that he possesses that power in an almost unlimited degree. He certainly uses his imagination when he describes the greatness of his President. No doubt he is correct when he complains that we on the Republican side find altogether too much fault with the President and his policies. It may be true that some of us over on this side can see little or no good in most of the things that the President has advocated and brought about. It may be equally true that the gentlemen on the other side, and especially the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN], have gone to the other extreme and now, if I may use the term, almost worship at the feet of the man in the White House. The alacrity with which some on that side do his bidding would indicate that they believe him incapable of error. The meekness with which they turn the other cheek indicates not a lack of spirit but an abiding love for the hand that smites, the foot that boots. This thought rose out of the fact that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN] has on two or three occasions criticized the gentleman from Montana [Mr. THORKELSON] and some others on this side when they ventured to criticize the President, who, it sometimes almost seems, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN] regards as an idol.

Mr. RAYBURN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. RAYBURN. The gentleman from Texas did not criticize the gentleman from Montana. He was criticizing certain material that was being put in the RECORD, which was conducive to racial hatred.

Mr. HOFFMAN. The gentleman is right in one particular. The gentleman from Texas did not criticize the gentleman from Montana. He just criticized what he said; that is all. He wanted to deny to the gentleman the right to express on the floor of the Congress his opinion.

Mr. RAYBURN. Oh, no.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Because those views were in conflict with the views of the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. RAYBURN. The gentleman is entirely wrong.

Mr. HOFFMAN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN], I repeat, was correct in one particular. He did not criticize the gentleman from Montana [Mr. THORKELSON] because of his personal appearance. He did not criticize the gentleman's necktie, his clothes, or the manner in which he combed his hair. Perhaps he did not criticize him because he was finding fault with the President and with some of the President's associates. What the gentleman from Texas did do was to criticize the conduct of the gentleman from Montana [Mr. THORKELSON] in putting into the RECORD some of the things that the gentleman from Montana desired to insert therein. Whether we agree with the views of the gentleman from Texas or with those of the gentleman from Montana is a question for each individual, but ill will be the day when it is the practice of this House to prevent any Member criticizing an Executive, the associates of that Executive, or his administrative acts. We on this side find no fault—at least I know of no one who finds any fault—because the gentleman from Texas and some others on the majority side have reached that apparent state of mind where they think the President can do no wrong.

Where they apparently accept unquestioned, or at least make no audible protest, when the President receives, or at least does not repudiate, the political support of those at the head of an organization which advocates the overthrow of our Government by force. For myself, the right is reserved to think as my intelligence and my judgment, if any, guide me and to exercise, so long as our Constitution endures, the right of free speech on the floor of the House, doing so with charity for the views of all, insisting, however, that each Member of the House may use his constitutional right unhindered, unrestricted, so long as he confines himself to parliamentary language to express his views. If that privilege once be denied to the humblest Member of this House, to the most lowly citizen of our Commonwealth, then, indeed, may the President, by the use of the vast sums granted to him, by the exercise of that unlimited authority which the majority Members of this House have seen fit to vest in him, go on not only to a third term but to that position where he may name his successor. Yes; it is well for history at least that the papers of the President and of those who associate with him be preserved, so that in the future those who follow us in our brief sojourn here on earth may learn of the steps by which Franklin Delano Roosevelt succeeded or failed in his attempt to remake our form of government, to establish himself as a dictator over these free United States of America.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, we are asked to spend some $300,000 for the construction of a library, which may not be a lot of money, but I cannot see why the President would not veto this bill if the House of Representatives and the Senate pass it. I want to refer back to a statement made by the President at Sioux City, Iowa, on September 29, 1932, as follows:

I shall use this position of high responsibility to discuss up and down the country, at all seasons, at all times, the duty of reducing taxes, of increasing the efficiency of government, of cutting out the underbrush around our governmental structure, of getting the most public service for every dollar paid by taxation. This I pledge you and nothing I have said in the campaign transcends in importance this covenant with the taxpayers of this country.

After the President of the United States made that pointed statement on economy, what has transpired since that time? Now, the Members of Congress want to build a library at Hyde Park that will cost $300,000 when we have an Archives Building down here, or a public library, which would be glad to accept these papers. I feel confident that the President of the United States will veto this bill, if he is a man of his word. Why would he want to go ahead and spend this money to build a library when it is not necessary? Why would he permit the Members of this Congress to pass such a bill? I do not think he will do this.

Let me quote again from what the President said in his message to Congress of March 10, 1933, as follows:

For 3 long years the Federal Government has been on the road toward bankruptcy. * * *

With the utmost seriousness I point out to the Congress the profound effect of this fact upon our national economy. * * *

Too often in recent history liberal governments have been wrecked on rocks of loose fiscal policy. We must avoid this danger.

Let us see just what our position is today. We have had 6 long years of the Roosevelt dynasty. Let me refer to the Federal Government financial statement when he took office in 1933, at which time we had a national indebtedness of only about $19,000,000,000.

Let us see where we are today. I have here the statement of July 10, 1939, published by Mr. Morgenthau, the Secretary of the Treasury. This statement shows we are now $40,587,024,737.12 in the red. This is Mr. Morgenthau's statement of the condition of the Treasury, and Mr. Morgenthau is Mr. Roosevelt's Secretary of the Treasury. This shows an increase in the national debt of over $20,000,000,000 in 6 years, or more than $2,750,000,000 annually.

It is a terrible condition in which we find ourselves, after the President promised economy; and now you are going to drive down his throat a further expenditure of $300,000 for a library, when you have built more libraries and public schools in the last 6 years than we ever built before in the history of this Nation. If the President of the United States backs up on the statements he has made, as I have quoted them, and they are his actual words, it will be just too bad.

Our Speaker has had a week's vacation, and we are glad to see him back. I should like to have him take the position here on the floor of this House of trying to get this Congress to stop spending, spending, spending money, the result of which will be that some day either the taxpayers of this country will have to pay these debts out of their hard-earned dollars and by the sweat of their brow or we shall repudiate our debts; and if we do repudiate our debts, we shall lose our present form of government and fall under a dictatorship.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. TREADWAY) there were—ayes 91, noes 140.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 208. The Archivist shall make to the Congress, at the beginning of each regular session, a report for the preceding fiscal year as to the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library. Such report shall include a detailed statement of all accessions, all dispositions of historical material, and all receipts and expenditures on account of the said library.

SEC. 209. The costs incurred by the Archivist in carrying out the duties placed upon him by this title, including the expenses of the members of the Board and the costs of the Board's necessary clerical assistance, shall be paid out of the appropriations for The National Archives Establishment as other costs and expenses of The National Archives Establishment are paid; and such sums as may be necessary for such purposes are hereby authorized to be appropriated.

TITLE III—FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT RESIDENCE

SEC. 301. The head of any executive department, pursuant to agreement between him and the donor, may accept for and in the name of the United States from the donor or from such person or persons as shall be empowered to act for the donor, title to any part or parts of the said Hyde Park estate of the donor and his family which shall be donated to the United States for use in connection with any designated function of the Government administered in such department. The title to any such property may be accepted under this section notwithstanding that it may be subject to the life estate of the donor or of any other person or persons now living: Provided, That during the continuance of any life estate reserved therein no expense to the United States in connection with the ordinary maintenance of the property so acquired shall be incurred: Provided further, That the acceptance hereunder by the United States of the title to property in which any life estate is reserved shall not during the existence of such life estate exempt the property, except to the extent provided in section 304 of this title, from taxation by the town of Hyde Park, Dutchess County, or the State of New York as other real property in the said town, county, or State is taxed under the applicable laws relating to taxation of real property.

SEC. 302. Upon the expiration of all life estates reserved in any property acquired under this title for use in connection with a designated function of the Government, or, if no life estate is reserved, immediately upon the acceptance of title thereto, the head of the department administering the said function shall assume jurisdiction and control over the property so acquired and administer it for the purpose designated, subject to the applicable provisions of law.

SEC. 303. Notwithstanding any other provisions of law, the head of any department exercising jurisdiction and control over any property acquired under this title shall be authorized to charge and collect, under regulations prescribed by him, a fee not in excess of 25 cents per person for the privilege of visiting and viewing the said property, and any funds thus derived shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of a special fund, and shall be available, when appropriated by the Congress, for expenditure in the upkeep, maintenance, protection, and preservation of any property acquired under this title.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. TREADWAY: On page 10, strike out lines 3 to 13, inclusive.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, the object of this amendment to strike out section 303 is to eliminate the admission charge of 25 cents per person "for the privilege of visiting and viewing the said property." You have already passed on the question of charging an admission fee of 25 cents to the building. A visitor paying that charge will also be charged 25 cents to visit and view the property; in other words, by the time the visitor gets into the library itself he will have paid a 50-cent fee for that privilege.

Mr. Chairman, some of the most beautiful estates in the United States are in the district I have the honor to represent. People tour through the Berkshires and western Massachusetts not alone for the purpose of seeing the scenery but to see the magnificent estates that are maintained in that area. Who ever heard of the owner of one of these estates charging a fee for so much as looking over his hedge, for instance, to see the beautiful grounds, the flowers, and the house itself? There is no more reason for an admission fee to be charged to the grounds wherein the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library will be constructed than there is to charge admission to estates throughout the Berkshires and other areas of New England.

I cannot conceive of anything more undignified than to ask a taxpayer of the United States to pay 25 cents to go through the gate of the residence of the President of the United States, even though later on it should become the property of the United States itself. Let us at least be a little dignified in dealing with this proposition and not make it a dime-museum proposition, charging admission not only to the building but to the grounds as well.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Does not the gentleman recall that on entering these grounds one can look across the river and see the kingdom of Father Divine? Perhaps that is why the charge is made.

Mr. TREADWAY. There is enough objection to the proposition itself without crossing the Hudson River to find anything further.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. RAYBURN. I wish to say that as far as I am concerned—

Mr. TREADWAY. You will pay 50 cents.

Mr. RAYBURN. And I do not speak for anybody but myself over here. I should like to see the gentleman's amendment adopted.

Mr. TREADWAY. I thank the gentleman. I believe it ought to be adopted.

Mr. RAYBURN. I say that because this is another section of the bill and imposes an additional charge of 25 cents to get on the premises.

Mr. TREADWAY. In other words, the gentleman is in agreement with the argument I am making, that it would cost 50 cents to get on the property and into the library, too.

Mr. RAYBURN. I am afraid so.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY].

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 304. The right is reserved in the Congress to take such action and to make such changes, modifications, alterations, and improvements in connection with and upon any property acquired under this title, during or after the expiration of any life estate reserved therein, as the Congress shall deem proper and necessary to protect and preserve the same; but neither the improvements so made nor any increase in the value of the property by reason thereof shall be subject to taxation during the existence of any life estate reserved in the property.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly, the Committee rose and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BOEHNE, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that the Committee having had under consideration the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 118) to provide for the establishment and maintenance of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, and for other purposes, pursuant to House Resolution 238, he reported the same back to the House with sundry amendments adopted in Committee.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment; if not, the Chair will put them en gros.

The amendments were agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time and was read the third time.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman opposed to the joint resolution?

Mr. FISH. I am, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. FISH moves to recommit Senate Joint Resolution 118 to the Committee on the Library with instructions to report the same back forthwith with the following amendment: On page 4, line 13, after the word "maintained", strike out the period, insert a colon and the following: "Provided, That not more than $12,000 shall be expended annually."

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion to recommit.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to recommit.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 132, nays 219, not voting 77, as follows:

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Under the special order heretofore entered the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD] is recognized.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF MEETING, SATURDAY, JULY 15, 1939, RE CERTAIN FARM PRODUCTS

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, this morning I had for my breakfast delicious American-prepared bacon, which cost me 15 cents per pound at a retail store here in Washington. We are using in our home American-made lard, which is retailing in Washington at 7½ cents a pound, or 2 pounds for 15 cents. I have just torn from the Evening Star of Thursday, July 13, and hold here in my hand a full-page advertisement showing that these prices will prevail in the retail store of Washington tomorrow.

Mr. Speaker, at the present time there are 257,127,595 bushels of corn under commodity-credit loan in this country on which the Government has advanced loans through the Commodity Credit Corporation. The farmers of this country, according to the Department of Agriculture report of July 10, hold on farms 836,921,000 bushels of corn—old stock. The Department's recent estimate of corn production for the coming crop is 2,570,795,000 bushels. In the feeding pens of this country are millions of pounds of pork and lard wrapped up in hides on the way to market.

Tonight's papers carry the story that wheat prices slumped today on the Liverpool market below 1931 dark-day prices, a drop to about 85 cents per 100 pounds for July delivery options. This is an illustration of what the farmers of this country face in the disposition of their grains and cottonseed oils, their corn, and their corn products in the form of pork and fats.

I am calling the attention of the House to some of these facts today in the hope that Members from the cotton States and the corn-producing States will give serious attention to this price situation which now prevails and lower prices which undoubtedly will prevail during the next few months, all in the hope that the Members of the House will meet in the caucus room of the old House Office Building next Saturday morning at 11 o'clock to confer with reference to steps that may be taken in connection with the use of section 32 blue-stamp money in alleviating the situation during the coming months, say, up to next January 1, 1940.

I have conferred with certain officials and certain leading Members of the House on the Committee on Agriculture, and I think we shall be able to obtain considerable support from Administration circles in connection with using some of the money recently appropriated to meet the situation for the present time.

It appears to me that the corn growers of this country will in due course divert a considerable proportion of the corn crop into loan stocks, instead of feeding it to hogs as heretofore. Certainly if pork and lard are to move into consumption at present or lower prices, this will induce farmers to secure loans and store corn, rather than feed to livestock for market to be sold at such ruinous prices as now prevail. We may find a situation in corn stocks under loan much more aggravating than is cotton at present. It is reasonable to assume that if such low prices are to prevail on pork and lard that the cotton grower will have to suffer proportionately in connection with lower prices for cottonseed oil. We should now give our most serious attention to this problem, and all looking forward to alleviating conditions as best we can during the next several months. I hope you will join with us next Saturday morning at 11 o'clock, so that an intelligent and full discussion may be had covering this problem, which is of such vital interest to the entire South, the West, the North, and the East. All farmers and industrialists should be vitally concerned about these developments, and every Member of the House has an interest in this problem.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend the remarks I made today by printing in the RECORD the statement I spoke about in my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN]?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and to give the names of the members of the executive committee of the Roosevelt Library, Inc.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN]?

There was no objection.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled a bill of the House of the following title, which was thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. R. 1882. An act for the relief of Otis M. Culver, Samuel E. Abbey, Joseph Reger, and August H. Krueger.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 289. An act for the relief of the West Virginia Co.;

S. 1575. An act to provide that the annual registration of motor vehicles and the annual licensing of certain public vehicles in the District of Columbia shall be for the period from April 1 in each year to March 31 in the succeeding year; and

S. 2336. An act to authorize an exchange of lands at the Fort Francis E. Warren Military Reservation, Wyo.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I move the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 40 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Friday, July 14, 1939, at 12 o'clock noon.
